Council Reacts to the Cuts at Parks

Story & Photos
by Dan Davidson

From the outset, Dawson's town council was not happy with the announcement of cuts being made to the Parks Canada operation in Dawson City. The May 9 council package contained a letter from Anne Morin, Park's Yukon Field Unit Superintendent, which, while everyone realized it was federal boilerplate from on high, raised the ire of council members.

The result, after some discussion led by Councillor Wayne Potoroka, was a resolution which read: "Whereas Parks Canada is a key partner in Dawson City's heritage community. Now therefore be it resolved that the Town of the City of Dawson respond to Ms. Morin's letter indicating the town is displeased with the impact recent actions will have on Parks and the local heritage community, the visitor experience of Dawson City, our economy, and those impacted by job loss."

In addition, council invited Klondike National Historic Sites Superintendent David Rohatensky to appear at the next scheduled meeting on May 23 and provide a briefing on the impacts to be expected here.

That meeting featured two presentations, one by Rohatensky and the other by the local union president for Parks, Carrie Docken.

Rohatensky did not sugar coat the impact of the recent announcement, which he said was a result of the budget itself and also increasing financial pressures Parks has been experiencing. The changes here are as the result of a specific government directive to refocus interpretation from live guides to self-guided, beginning with the next year.

Parks has also been instructed to move to a consistent open season in all units across the country. Henceforth it will run from the May long weekend to Labour Day weekend in September.

Even though the Dawson

Klondike National Historic Sites Superintendent David Rohatensky spoke of trying to fulfill the KNHS mandate in spite of reduced capacity.

Historic Complex has been identified by Parks as the "brand leader" for the Yukon, these cuts mean it has lost, along with the rest of the Yukon, the curatorial staff to manage its vast collection of artifacts. The mandate to manage, interpret and promote them has not changed, nor does Rohatensky think it likely that anything will be relocated to a central point in the south, as much of what we have here is just too big to move.

Rohatensky spent some time summarizing the impact Parks has had on Dawson since becoming involved here in the Yukon. Some of this seemed to be aimed at certain Dawson public figures who have downplayed the importance of Parks' presence in the town and to the tourism industry, which is one of Dawson's economic pillars.

Parks has, he said, had a major role in preserving history here, in drawing tourists here and in providing a training ground for local artisans and builders as well as for people who basically interned here and moved to serve Parks in other locations later on.

KNHS will be struggling to carry out its mission in spite of reduced capacity, and may not be as available to assist in community projects, research and other areas as it has been able to in the past.

Simple solutions like privatizing Parks operations or contracting out for workers were far more complex than some of the voices he said he has been hearing since the announcements seem to realize. Few private operators would be prepared to take on the preservation role as well, and hiring contract workers after downsizing union jobs would surely make for an interesting series of court challenges.

Carrie Docken, speaking as a union rep, could say things that her daytime boss could not. Six full time jobs are gone from Dawson, she said, and five more workers have had their hours reduced. When it's all added up, about $450,000 in wages has been pulled from the local economy.

Dredge #4, which will only be interpreted by parking lot signage after this summer, is the most visited site in the KNHS group and is unique among the artifacts in the Yukon. After spending millions on its preservation and restoration (as part of a program that is financed to continue this summer – but which has no certain funding beyond that) it is, she said, folly to fail to interpret it properly.

Union president Carrie Docken urged council to action.

The artifact collection that will now be without a specialist on site is the second largest collection in the Parks world, totaling over 250,000 items.

To have it visited by Outside experts with no experience or familiarity on an irregular basis is not, she said, any kind of reasonable plan.

Councillor Potoroka commented that this approach will soon cause a collection of historically significant material to just become a "bunch of old stuff."

Docken, along with Rohatensky, took the council's resolution of May 9 as a very positive sign, but she wanted them to take the next step.

"Address M.P. Ryan Leef. Support the Parks mandate and the employees here. Show support and fight these cuts," she urged council members.

"I believe you've made your case," said Mayor Jenkins, but he deferred discussion of an actual draft letter until the council's policy meeting the next day.

Councillor Potoroka confirmed that a draft letter of support is being assembled and will be going out to the Member of Parliament and the federal government in due course.

Analysis: Our WWTP Will Need an Additional Court Hearing

by Dan Davidson

"When shall we three meet again?

*In thunder, lightning, or in rain?
When the hurlyburly's done,
When the battle's lost and won."*

- Three Wyrds Sisters, in Macbeth.

While the Dawson Court Registry room was hardly occupied at all for the latest court update on the town's new wastewater treatment plant (WWTP), the telephone lines from Vancouver to Whitehorse to Dawson were packed with a baker's dozen of lawyers, government officials and town councillors.

The topic was the current state of construction of the WWTP, which is behind schedule, and has been plagued with some delays in the delivery of structural steel, as well as a very public dispute with the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in's construction arm, Hän Construction. In addition there was some disagreement between Corix, the contractor, and the town's Historic Advisory Committee (HAC) over the style of metal roofing the company wanted to use, as well as the extent to which the metal clad building would be reclad in wood to adhere to the original building plan.

The HAC won the wood siding argument and lost the roofing when its decision was appealed to City Council.

None of that was discussed at the hearing, nor was the City of Dawson's recent announcement that it will not be able to afford the operations and maintenance bill to run the plant when it is turned over to the town once past the initial trial period of two years after the commissioning in December of this year.

Nor was there any discussion of whether there will even be a need for the plant once the current federal budget has finished removing most of the protections related to fish habitat from the Fisheries Act in favour of pipelines hither and yon across the nation. Not that it would actually have been relevant to the case, since the town was convicted under the law as it was, not the law as it will be.

So the discussion on May 17 mainly circled round the question of whether the plant actually would be ready on time, after it had already had its deadline extended several times, the most recent extension having added another twelve months from last December.

Judge Heino Lilles didn't want to go over all the details in the reports, which he told the Crown's John Cliffe and the town's Tony Crossman to assume he had read. He even pulled Crossman up short in the construction update, saying that the most recent photographs were graphic evidence enough.

By May 17 the metal siding and most of the metal roofing had been installed on the new Wastewater Treatment Plant. The metal shell is to be reclad in wood.

Crossman explained that there were two steps to the commissioning of the plant once it was finished. The first, using potable water, would simply test the mechanical systems. The second would be a full test with biological material included. Both of these should happen between July and September, though it was conceded that this assumed an "aggressive" construction schedule during the next two months.

In attempting to set a date for another update, a process which consumed about half of the 50 minute meeting, Mr. Cliffe took note of the fact that many of the phrases used by the City of Dawson and Corix to predict future progress contained the word "anticipated" and was concerned that this was a little vague.

It had been intended that the last of these meetings would take place in December, when the hurlyburly of construction was complete, but if commissioning should occur after the summer season, both the Crown and Judge Lilles were concerned that WWTP's performance then would not reflect the peak summer activity, which is the actual time frame during which Dawson fails to meet the standards of its water licence. Neither of them was quite content that Corix's proposal to simulate summer conditions would actually tell the tale.

Assuming that the construction finishes in time to catch the latter portion of the summer effluent load, Judge Lilles would like to see a brief update hearing, something along the lines of himself and the two lawyers (with conference lines open as on May 17) during which the basic discussion would be along the lines of "does it work like it's supposed to?"

For that we will have to wait until either the first two weeks or the last two weeks of October.

We want to hear from you!

They Didn't Consult with Us

by Palma Berger (senior reporter)

"They didn't consult with us..." was the refrain heard from a group of seniors who gathered to present their views on the new hospital with the representatives from the auditor-general's office.

From its official description, "The office of the Auditor-General of Canada is an independent and reliable source of objective, fact-based information that the Legislative Assembly can use to hold the Yukon Government to account for its stewardship of public funds."

The two representatives in Dawson were Ronnie Campbell and Maria Pooley.

Some of the view expressed were as follows:

- 'Why did they not do a study of the needs of Dawson first?' and better still, 'Why didn't they do a study of the needs of the whole Yukon, to see if they could correlate those needs in one overall plan?'

For example, why could they not spend their funds on better equipment in Whitehorse Hospital so that the sick senior does not have to travel all the way to Vancouver for treatment or testing.

- Whitehorse cannot get enough staff to handle their care already, so why are we building a facility that will require 40 staff? If we get 40 staff where are they going to be housed? There is a housing shortage in Dawson already.

- The whole plan was poorly thought out. One person discovered that the architects drawing showed windows on the north side of the building. Why north? South facing windows are best. "Well, isn't that the South?" was the response from the architect when questioned. He didn't know the town.

The illustration showed the new hospital to be lower than the museum in height. But in reality it is taller.

- The first big shock was that they had planned to put the seniors and emergencies on the second floor. That was certainly tucking them away out of sight. The group believe that this is no longer the plan. Still they think the present location for the seniors is the best bet. They can view life on Fifth Avenue, as well as being able to sit in the sun. The proposed location at the north end of the building offers them a view of a row of houses.

- Another said, "Why present us with a finished drawing? Couldn't they have had a Plan A, Plan B, or Plan C to choose from? To see what fit our needs?" This was a conscious decision, decided in cabinet, to give us a new hospital. It is as if they are building a monument to themselves.

- The question is are we going to get the care we need? Are they really planning to do away with the nurse-practitioners? These nurses are called on at the nursing station for mainly minor problems, and can deal with them. If you do away with them, all people will have to go to the doctors' offices. This is going to cause such a jam in the waiting room. Besides, Nurse Practitioners can go to the homes of the house-bound sick people and check on their progress. The sick person does not have to make the effort to come into the doctor's office to be checked.

- The proposed location for the ambulance exit is too narrow, as well as being in a high density area. The O&M costs are going to be huge.

- The proposed atrium, although letting in much needed light, is going through two floors and is going to chew up a lot of fuel to heat.

- As this hospital is catering to areas surrounding Dawson, rooms are to be built in the hospital for visiting family members. One questioned that if we go to Whitehorse with a sick person, we stay in a hotel, albeit subsidised by the Government on the second day forward, so why can't these rules apply here also.

- The general feeling was that we must take this hospital or no hospital at all, was what we were presented with.

The visitors from the AG's office said they heard many of the same complaints in Watson Lake.

Meet Carly Lovett, the Klondike Sun's Student Intern!

This summer Carly will be our student reporter at the Klondike Sun. She will be collecting news, writing articles, archiving and keeping up our online presence.

Carly comes to the Dawson from her hometown of Burnaby, British Columbia, to which she has recently returned in order to continue her studies at Simon Fraser University where she is pursuing a bachelors degree in environmental geography with a certificate in spatial information systems (SIS) and an extended minor in French.

Carly's experience with journalism is one born of necessity. To promote events and to help out friends, she has written various articles for student papers, including the Xavieran, (the student paper at St. Francis Xavier University when she studied for one year) and The Peak (the student paper at Simon Fraser University), as well as community newspapers such as the Burnaby Now. Carly has also worked in radio, hosting her own, weekly radio show on St. Francis Xavier's campus radio.

This will be Carly's third summer in Dawson City. Since coming up for Music Fest after a season of tree planting in 2010, Carly has been enchanted with the endless wilderness of the Yukon and the subtle quirks of the Dawson City community.

Carly looks forward to becoming even more acquainted with the ins and outs of Dawson City.

Winging It at the Midnight Sun

Story by Lisa McKenna

The Midnight Sun Hotel was rocking all night. I think it all started with the 60-cent drafts and highballs. That's right... 60-cents! (from 5 to 7)

It was Haine Wing's, the owner of the Midnight Sun, 60th birthday!

There wasn't a seat to be had. The place was packed.

Haine entered the bar to a round of applause just after 5 and personally greeted everyone and thanked them for coming.

The drinks continued to flow (transportation was available for those who drank a wee bit too much). Then at about 7 a feast was put out. There was a huge veggie plate, deep-fried wontons, chicken wings, ribs, etc. etc. It was all good.

So again, Happy Birthday, Haine!!! (and thanks for the party)

George Black Reunites Dawson and West Dawson Again

by Dan Davidson

It was a fine morning for ferry watching in Dawson on May 16. Preparations to get the George Black into the Yukon River have been going on since before the break-up on May 1, but the inclement weather (snow, rain and cold) has slowed things down a bit. Still, the launch was on the same day as last year; it's just that the ice was gone a few days earlier this year and so the wait has seemed longer.

The set-up for launching the ferry from its winter berth atop the dyke seems, to the layperson, to be less complex than that needed for the extraction in the fall. That requires a careful arrangement of cables, block and tackle and heavier equipment.

Stated very simply, the spring operation involves overcoming the inertia that would tend to make the craft stay where it is, on level ground, stuck to the wooden beams on which it has been sitting all winter. Once loose, it's a matter of pushing it towards the incline on the wooden rail system, and then controlling its plunge towards the river as another of Newton's Laws is activated and gravity takes over.

This still requires half a dozen cats and loaders and a sizeable work crew.

Two cats on one side of the boat pull with cables to loosen it, while loaders with heavy wooden beams affixed vertically in place of their buckets, push from the other side. Extra equipment moves in from time to time to balance the load.

When it reaches the tipping point, the cats move around to the other side of the boat and the cables are adjusted so they can take up a new role as anchors to slow the slide. A final big push and then it's on its way, entering the river smoothly.

As with last year, the river is low for the middle of May and an extra shove was required to swing the boat out into the river and off the sand and mud near the shore just below the water. It was downstream in its normal position and taking on passengers within a few hours. A line-up had already formed on the west bank by that time.

West Dawsonites lost the use of the ice bridge earlier than usual this year and have been champing at the bit to be able to stock up on supplies again.

The Highways Dept. advises travellers "the ferry runs twenty-four hours per day from approximately mid May to mid September. Mid September to mid October it runs twelve hours per day. The average ferry crossing is six to seven minutes with variations between morning and night traffic flow."

As a rule it moves back and forth about every 15 minutes.

At the original time of writing West Dawson and Sunndale was the only destination for ferry passengers. The Klondike Visitors Association put out a notice on that same day that the border at Little Gold on the Top of the World Highway would not likely be open before Saturday due to the presence of "six to eight foot" drifts on the highway that will need to be cleared away. As it happened, the border was opened on May 22. Lots of snow up there this year.

Community Led Rental Housing Development

Submitted by the KDO

Residents may recall the Klondike Development Organization household and business surveys back in 2011 when we asked you how the Klondike could be improved as a place to live, work and do business, and you said:

| Household Survey | 1st | 2nd |
|---|---------------|-----------------------|
| Changes to improve the area | Housing (24%) | Recreation (18%) |
| Community viability & resident attraction | Housing (37%) | Recreation (26%) |
| Business Survey | | |
| Strengthen the economy & create more jobs | Housing (15%) | Land Development (9%) |
| Changes to improve the area | Housing (16%) | Recreation (13%) |

The full reports are available at our website, klondikedevelopment.com. We, and others, have now compiled an extensive library of research on housing in the Klondike and it is evident that there can be no significant socio-economic progress here until such time as we see a quantum leap forward in the supply of housing, and all other initiatives flounder upon this rock.

Home ownership will only ever satisfy a proportion of the market, especially in remote locations. The transition period into a new community such as ours is particularly challenging and there will always be a need for people to settle into the town by renting before buying or building. It is serving this transitional market that we see as critical if we are to grow our population, economy, sustainability of services and quality of life. However, repeated feasibility research has determined that there is no business case for building significant private sector rental developments.

At our most recent community stakeholder partnership forum, fruitful discussions were had surrounding the possibility of a community-owned and operated rental housing project in Dawson City, possibly on the now vacant site that formerly held John Korbo Apartments. It was felt that by founding new housing on balanced local values and ownership, integrated community service organizations and the inclusion of all ages, cultural origins and social circumstances, we would maximize community pride and buy-in and long-term sustainability.

The primary objective would be to provide housing for new residents transitioning into the community, for a maximum of two years before they move out and into ownership or private housing. Serving a diverse range of tenants by mixing traditional market renters with key not-for-profit community service organizations, college students and seasonal workers was held to be an important principle. A number of ground floor units could also be configured as live-work spaces to encourage home-based entrepreneurialism.

We feel that local people working together with government on a community-owned and operated rental housing project, utilizing our detailed local knowledge and leadership, can maximize the potential to meet the housing needs of the entire community, develop new and innovative business models for the delivery of rental housing in Yukon and leave a lasting legacy.

We have only just begun to explore this concept. We are very interested in the thoughts and ideas of Klondike residents and businesses and we would like to hear from you. To find out more about this or any of our other programs, please contact Mark Wickham, Project Manager, e-mail: klondikedevopment@gmail.com, or call (867) 993-2306. PET OF THE WEEK with Katie Pearce, Humane Society Dawson

Rose is a one year old, female, black lab cross. She is such a lovable, playful dog, with a great personality.

Like any young dog, Rose has a lot of energy. She loves playing in the yard, and going for walks. She walks great on and off leash, running around but never going too far.

Rose is great around kids, other dogs, and cats. She is very smart, and trainable. Come out to the shelter to see her Tues-Sat, 12 p.m. to 4 p.m.!

We Need Your Help

Humane Society Dawson is involved in the highway clean-up fundraiser, and is looking for volunteers to help. This is a great way to help out the Humane Society Dawson, and the environment.

The clean-up will be happening Saturday, June 2 at 11 a.m. Volunteers are encouraged to call the Humane Society for more information, and to sign up, 993-6900

Dawson City Golf Course Takes Over at the Top of the World

by Dan Davidson

With the opening of the newly renamed Dawson City Golf Course set for Saturday morning (May 26) the board members of the Dawson Golf Association (DCGA) have been busy getting the fledgling business on its feet.

The golf course itself has existed under the name Top of the World Golf Course for some 20 years, but the old name for the business has encumbrances and debts attached to it, which is why the late Bill Hakonson bequeathed the land and the buildings to the City of Dawson and not the business itself.

It has been known for years that there was a massive debt attached to the Top of the World, but the deal reached between the territorial government and the town shortly before the 2011 territorial election was that the town could run a golf course there and would not be responsible to cover that debt. It was effectively written off and YTG was satisfied that Hakonson senior's personal guarantee of $55,000 was all the money they would see from the original loan.

DCGA board member Carrie Docken says that things have moved very swiftly since the announcement of an agreement was made in March. The transfer had appeared to stall just after the election and DCGA members, along with Greg Hakonson, had expressed some concern in public that the whole agreement might fall apart.

MLA Sandy Silver is on record as saying that things were never quite that bad, and that while it was a slow process, it was a steady one. Silver says that YTG officials were actually more helpful behind the scenes than it appeared they were being from outside the process.

Docken expressed appreciation for Silver's support, as well as that of Hakonson and Dawson's town council.

While council and the town's administration were initially caught off guard when Mayor Peter Jenkins announced Hakonson senior's bequest last July, the other council members quickly got on board with the idea of taking over the golf course, and the town's administration put in many hours making sure that it happened without the town having to be responsible for any of the remaining debt, which amounted to almost $400,000.

By December the council had given first reading to a bylaw that would allow it to own a business outside of the municipal boundaries. Various delays and misunderstandings delayed the final passage of this bylaw until March.

The town had always made it clear that it did not want to attempt to run the operation or to have it be part of its recreation department. While Jenkins initially expressed a desire to have the Klondike Visitors Association take over the running of the facility, the KVA made it clear that it could not afford to take on a business which has always been marginal, and usually had not broken even during its lifetime.

A non-profit organization such as the golfers association was the obvious answer to the problem. Docken says the DCGA has existed for a number of years. The current board includes herself, Gary Parker, Irwin Gaw and Coleman Johnson.

"(The association) is made up of volunteers that want to see golf continue, regardless, in this community," she said. "We've been involved for a long time now thinking about junior golf and keep golf going here, and in case there would ever be the need for an organization to step up."

"We wanted to be fully functioning and ready if that eventuality happened."

Bill Hakonson loved the game and the golf course and kept it running in spite of losses for two decades. He put quite a bit of his own money into it as well as the initial government start-up loans.

The DCGA doesn't expect to make a lot of money on the operation. The town has provided $30,000 in seed money to get things going this year, and Docken says the hope is this will be just enough to stay in the black.

"Working with the city was brilliant," she said. "As soon as they had the power to do so, they were efficient and helpful and their part of it took all of two to three weeks from getting actual paperwork to say that they owned it, to writing an agreement with us, to putting a cheque in our hands."

Danielle Chiasson is back for another year as the course manager and Charlie Bond continues to look after the grounds and maintenance, while Coleman Johnson is the golf pro.

Docken says the usual list of tournaments is planned for the year and some additional ones are being planned due to popular requests. The 19th Annual Midnight Sun event is already being advertised for Saturday, June 23.

The newly named course has a new telephone number (867-993-3585) and a new e-mail address dawsonsgolf@hotmail.ca.

A Message from the Recycling Depot

Submitted by CKS

Spring is upon us and the Conservation Klondike Society (CKS) is happy to have been receiving recyclables by the truck load as people clear out their yards for summer.

As the warmer months arrive Dawson's famed thirst is providing plenty of cans and bottles to keep recycling staff busy.

CKS began 20 years ago, and opened the recycling depot that same year. The mandate of CKS is to promote the conservation of our resources, educate the public about the environmental and social costs of excessive consumption, develop and operate a recycling depot and promote cultural, educational, recreational and wilderness values of the region.

The community support and energy we've been receiving has been outstanding. CKS is a small non-profit organization run by a volunteer board and our budget doesn't always allow us to offer the same services you would find in a city recycling center. For this reason we very much appreciate your enthusiasm.

As the busy summer season approaches depot staff are bracing for the extra work load. Here's a few recycling tips to help them get through:

-Sort recycling before bringing it in. We often don't have time to do this for you. To make things really quick you can count refundable items at home for an on the spot refund.

-All caps need to be removed, and doing this at home saves busy staff hours of work. Caps can be brought in too if plastic and metal are kept separate.

-Unfortunately the depot cannot accept glass jars or corrugated box cardboard at this point. These go out with your garbage instead. We do accept beer boxes.

-Please do not bring non-recyclables and hazardous waste in. This includes Styrofoam and motor oil containers. Hazardous materials can be brought to the Hazardous Waste Day at Quigley Landfill on June 2.

-Giving containers a quick rinse makes life much more pleasant for the volunteers and staff handling these items at the depot. Only empty containers can be accepted.

-The bags for non-refundable recycling on the rear dock at the downtown depot can be accessed anytime. Please take the time to sort your recycling into the appropriate bags if you're bringing it in after hours rather than leaving unsorted bags on the dock. Refundable donations are appreciated any time and can be left on the dock in neat piles.

Most importantly, get involved! Come by with any suggestions, or better still, volunteer or join the board. Conservation Klondike is a community run organization and relies on your support.

Thank you for your enthusiasm! We look forward to continuing to work with you to make a real difference!

Conservation Klondike receives recycling at two locations- the downtown depot at 1067 Second Avenue, and at the Quigley Landfill.

Hours of operation for the downtown depot are Sun., Mon., Wed. (starting soon) and Sat. 1-5, and Tues. 3-7. Quigley operates Thurs., Fri., and Sat. 12-7.

For further information and a recycling guide visit the website at www.conservation-klondike.org, or call 867-993-6666.

An Encounter with the Fiddleheads

By Dan Davidson

The Fiddleheads were on the road last week, showcasing their latest work, "Encounter", subtitled 'A Musical Fantasy'. The first part of their tour took them to Eliza Van Bibber School, in Pelly and J.V. Clark School in Mayo on May 10 and saw them at Robert Service School in Dawson City the next afternoon.

"Encounter", developed from an idea that was pitched by the young fiddlers themselves is a combination of shadow puppetry and live action, combined with lots of fiddling and a bit of singing.

Musical director Annie Avery says the kids developed the story. They got some assistance in staging from Moira Sauer. Singer/songwriter Nicole Edwards provided the songs and the fiddle teaching came from Amelia Slobogean, Gordon Stobbe, and Zav RT.

The set design and the costumes are credited on the program to "everyone".

The play begins with fiddling and moves to the shadow box stage, where the sea creatures can be seen swimming about. Hearing the fiddle music, they follow the enchanting sound to the land where they have a startling encounter with the fiddlers. Both groups are scared but the seas creatures follow the fiddlers to the North, where they begin to freeze.

The fiddlers see what is happening and save them with the warming sound of their music.

At Robert Service School this presentation became part of an assembly which also featured some short tunes by the Ukulele Class, some barn dancing by almost the entire student body and a demonstration of Duck Dancing by the primary classes, led by elder Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Elder Victor Henry.

On May 18 the tour continued with performances at Ghuch Tla Community School in Carcross and the Teslin School

When Friends are Abusers

by Lisa McKenna

We all have them, those "friends" of ours that ask you for a smoke or a loonie EVERY time you see them. They prey on our sympathies. I don't think it's all intentional but it is still a form of abuse.

A "friend" may think they can talk to you however they want because you're not their "old lady" or their "man". This can include inappropriate comments, or direct name calling, or even constant teasing.

Some of our "friends" get into situations where they can't go home or they have lost their home. So out of the grace of your heart you offer them a place to crash. The problem that most often arises is that they WON'T LEAVE. Another problem arises when you get home from work and go to have a cold beer and begin supper AND... there is no beer! AND... there is no supper because your "friend" has eaten you out of house and home!

But it is really hard not to help out people you know. You just have to be aware that YOU can make yourself a victim in some situations and not let your 'friends' take advantage of you.

Gold Show a Success

by Dan Davidson

With a record number of booths and excellent weather beaming on the town, the 2012 Gold Show is being judged a real success. There were 59 booths inside the arena and another 19 outside; there was a lot for visitors to see.

The plant vendors did a brisk business in their new location beside the arena, while inside the industry, government and non-profit groups were well attended.

Acting chamber manager Joanne Rice was full of thanks to everyone who participated and made the weekend run so smoothly for her after she had to step into the post just a few weeks before the event.

Dawson Flies the Francophone Flag

by Dan Davidson

Deputy Mayor Stephen Johnson can be seen in a window at Dawson City Hall as the town flew the Yukon's Francophone Flag on May 15 to help the Yukon's French-speaking community celebrate "Journée De La Francophonie Yukonnaise" in the Yukon.

TWENTY YEARS AGO IN THE SUN

DAWSON CITY, YUKON THE KLONDIKE SUN Thursday, June 11, 1992 Vol. 4, No. 2 60 Cents

Dawson Needs a Bridge: Expansion Report Avoids Heavy Population Areas

by Dan Davidson

All the studies over the last five years indicate that Dawson City is growing. The Department of Education is admitting the fact by starting now to plan for a 3 room expansion to the 3 year old new Robert Service School, an expansion school council members say is already overdue.

The report of the Yukon Municipal Board accepts the fact of growth as well, recommending that the municipality should be able to claim for itself about one third of the area it asked for in its December 1991 application for boundary expansion.

While the two city councils that worked on the proposal had asked to take the boundary south down the Klondike Highway to Flat Creek and across the Yukon River to West Dawson, the Board agreed with only part of that proposal.

Expansion to West Dawson was encouraged. Indeed the Board's recommendation identifies this area as being the most suitable one for future residential expansion, and makes a strong plea for the YTG to "consider the construction of a bridge at this site (across the Yukon River at Dawson) in the very near future."

Expansion up the valley on the east side of the Yukon River was not discouraged. The Board's recommendation appears to be equal to the block land transfer which the YTG recently received from the federal government. This would expand the town boundary from its present limits on the north side of the bridge across the Klondike River to a point just north of the settlement of Bear Creek, at a place called Quigley Gulch.

Fred Berger, the local businessman who chaired the Klondike Valley Land Use Plan committee, says that the expansion area recommended by the Municipal Board is the one for which the committee's implementation strategy has already been completed and adopted, and he is not surprised that the Board took this route in responding to the city.

Indeed, this is close to the recommendation that went to the Board from Art Webster, the local M.L.A., when he spoke at the public hearings on March 25.

While the most populated areas of the Klondike Valley (Bear Creek, Rock Creek and Henderson's Corner) are south of the proposed new boundary, Berger predicts some difficulty for the city in dealing with the people who live on untitled land within the proposed area.

Council, and most notably Mayor Peter Jenkins, has taken a hard line in talking and thinking about these people in public, going so far as to photograph many of the dwellings in the area and post them on the wall of the hall where the Municipal Board met. While the city made many pledges to protect the lifestyle and rural ambience of legally titled landowners in the valley, Berger is quick to note that the majority of the residents in this area are dwelling on mining claims, not on legally titled residential land. As such they are, says Berger, in legal limbo.

The KVLUP committee struggled long and hard with the issue of what to do with such people, Berger says, and came to the conclusion that their mining claims could eventually be phased out and withdrawn from staking. His group recommended that those people dwelling on mining claims should have the first right to purchase the land on which they lived provided that they were willing to allow their mining claims to lapse.

Downpour Drenches Denny's

by Joanie Veitch

If you went to buy some milk at the General Store on Friday morning you were probably surprised to find the doorway barred and colourful tarpaulins draped over the shelves as people scurried about cleaning up the mess left after the ceiling caved in the night before.

Massive volumes of hail and rain poured down on Dawson City last Thursday night leaving the General Store awash.

Denny Kobayashi, the general manager, was in a Chamber of Commerce meeting when he received a call from some of his workers at exactly 6:40 pm to tell him there was a leak. Pretty soon everyone realized this was more than just a leak.

The water was falling so fast it couldn't drain fast enough, so it backed up and ran backwards into the store, according to Kobayashi who had done some research the day after the downfall.

Welcome to Dawson City

Brough Treffer of Merritt Island, Florida certainly got his money's worth at the Palace Grand on June 4. He not only enjoyed the two-hour Gaslight Follies variety show, he got a free shave as well. Brough was enticed on to the stage by the singing barber shop quartet where he then became the next client for Deanne May (left) and Pia Wyatt.

Siddon "too busy" to meet with local groups

by Joanie Veitch

Northern Development Minister Tom Siddon said "time wouldn't allow" for him to meet with several local groups regarding their concerns about placer mining at Lousetown.

Siddon was in Dawson the weekend of the Gold Show. On Friday he addressed a meeting of the Yukon Placer Miners Association. He left town on Saturday afternoon after a tour of the show's exhibits.

The Sun obtained funding in late 2009 from the City of Dawson, YTG's Heritage Branch and the Community Development Fund to conserve and archive early issues and make them available once again in the public domain. This is a great resource for students, writers and historians, and also for prospective tourists with an interest in Dawson City's life. Each month, we are re-printing our front pages from 20 years ago (seen above) as a souvenir of our lively history.

What's in a Name, Anyway?

Flam Grub

By Dan Dowhal
Blue Butterfly Books
368 pages
$29.95

"What's in a name? That which we call a rose / By any other name would smell as sweet," says Juliet, after she realizes that the young man who has captured her heart is, in fact, the son of her family's bitter enemies.

It's not true, of course. If it were, Canola would still be called Rapeseed, and ESSO would never have changed its name to EXXON in order to take advantage of the similarity to the name of the then very popular US President, Richard Nixon.

For that matter, if my father had had his way my first name would have been David, and I think that would have been very confusing. My mother thought so too, and put her foot down.

You'd never convince the central character of Dan Dowhal's first novel (second published, but first written) that names do not matter. Nor would you have been able to convince his mother, who was responsible for saddling him with that moniker.

She was Mary Flam, you see, and pretty much the last of the Flam line. She wanted to preserve the family name, but her ill chosen husband, Steve Grub, would not hear of letting her keep her own name after they were married, so she took her last name and christened her son with it.

Flam Grub. The potential for public school hell wrapped up in a name like that is almost beyond belief. The litany of taunts included Grubby, Flam Chop, Grub-a-dub-dub, Flim-Flam Man and many others.

Add to it a home life poisoned by an abusive father and a mother who diverts most of her better urges into the service of the Church and Flam grows up an introverted, insecure child who is at ease only when he is surrounded by, and immersed in, the pages of books.

It helps a lot that the Grubs live in a flat above Turner's Bookstore, owned by a man with the delightfully appropriate name of Page Turner. Though he was once banned from the store by his father, once Grub senior has met his end in an industrial accident, the store becomes Flam's refuge and the site of his first gainful employment.

Bookstore clerk is not his long-term goal however. Flam decides that he wants to become an undertaker and enrolls in a community college

Home seems to resent his presence, and why the number two man there, Bruno Helman, rides him particularly hard.

It is, however, Flam who is able to fix the office computers and while doing so discovers the misdeeds of a couple of lowlife employees of the firm. He also figures out how to treat them to the fate they deserve and salvage the reputation of Charlie, his only ally at the firm.

Along the way, as a sort of therapy, Flam had begun working out some of his frustrations by writing poetry.

He composes verses for two of the women who interest him, and also writes some lyrics for Charlie's jazz band. Most importantly, he writes a long poem for "The Girl on the Bus", and that has a major impact on the turn his life takes near the end of the book.

Around the same time that he meets Angela, the New Age Wiccan/Stripper (though he doesn't know about the last part until later) during his comparative religion studies, he also meets Joe Schneider, an elderly Jewish gentleman with a fascinating life story. When Joe dies his will insists that it is Flam who should handle his funeral arrangements.

That is the first of a number of important connections that help to improve Flam's life.

If I say much more I will give away too much. Readers will, I think, find echoes of Charles Dickens and John Irving in the way that this man's life story is told. The narrator is clearly present in the background of the story, giving us little nudges and comments from time to time, but not in any sort of an annoying way.

Dowhal was at Berton House this last winter and returned in late April to do a community tour for the Public Library Branch as part of the Yukon Writers' Festival.

Dowhal was back in Dawson on April 23 as part of the gaggle of authors assembled for the Yukon Writers' Festival. I believe he's setting a new speed record for Berton House writers making a return trip.

Alan Cumyn Writes for All Ages

by Dan Davidson

Ottawa based writer Alan Cumyn has dipped his literary pen in a lot of different ink wells, producing fiction for young children, young adults and adults. He toured the Yukon in April as part of TD Canadian Children's Book Week.

Dear Sylvia is a series of letters written by young Owen Skye to the girl he loves. The extract Cumyn read had to do with the trials of living with Owen's father, an insurance salesman who decided to become a writer, but whose choice of characters for his first novel is a little too close to reality. Some passages had the audience giggling.

Losing It is the story of a middle aged English professor, whose affair with one of his students unhinges him, his family and most of his life. One of the narrative viewpoints is that of his mother in law, who has Alzheimer's.

"It's a nice piece to read," he said, "and it's also quite disturbing."

Tilt is the story of a 16-year-old boy. It began for him while he was doing a residency at the Vermont College of Fine Arts. One lecturer, Louise Hawes, challenged the others there to write a letter to their younger selves about desire. For Cumyn what came out instead was a vision of playing one on one basketball with himself before he could start that conversation.

Teenaged boys, he said, bottle up a lot of emotion, and he found himself wanting to explore that. In the story Stan has been dealing with being the man in the family after his father abandoned them all when he was younger. Now the father has returned, bringing with him a new, younger son, and all sorts of complications for Stan, his mother and his younger sister.

Cumyn read the section where Stan and his mother have a heart to heart (she being a little bit drunk) about how she and his father met. The story is both touching and tense.

Cumyn didn't have a large audience during his evening reading at the Dawson Community Library, but he made up for that by meeting with several classes during the same day and more the next morning.

Cumyn began writing when he was about 15, but he was trying to write songs at first and it didn't work out all that well. Eventually the lyrics began to turn into stories "and then it was just such a relief not to have to write the poetry."

"I've been writing stories pretty much since then. I've done lots of different work but I've always left room in my life, in my day, for writing.

"It's nice to go around to schools and talk about stuff, just get them to think about making their own stories."

The only writer he met while in school was the late Judith Merrill, an ex-patriot American writer who moved to Canada to protest the Viet Nam War and whose personal library of science fiction is now the Merrill Collection in the Toronto Library system. She edited the World's Best SF annual collections for about a dozen years.

"She was great. She came for four afternoons and met with a group of eight of us for two hours each day. She made the writer's life sound like hell ... but y'know, three people out of that group of eight have published books and two of us have had work short listed for the Governor General's Award."

The Revolution in Digital Technology: Four Steps from the Past to Today

by Dan Davidson

Less than two months after his Berton House residency in the winter, Dan Dowhal was back in Dawson as part of the Yukon Writers' Festival, travelling this time on behalf of the Yukon Public Library system.

Dowhal was part of the kick-off event at the Old Fire Hall in Whitehorse and then began his cross-Yukon travels, with stops at public libraries in Watson Lake, Teslin, Faro, Pelly Crossing and, finally, the Dawson City Community Library, on the evening of April 23.

In most of the towns Dowhal read from his most recent novel, Flam Grub, but Dawsonites had heard this book during his earlier stay, so he came up with something different for his second public outing here.

When he isn't writing novels, Dan is co-founder and partner in The Learning Edge Corp., a producer of interactive digital content, where he works as the company's chief writer, editor, and creative director. Dan studied both engineering and journalism at Ryerson University, and is on the Board of Directors of Interactive Ontario, the trade association representing the province's digital media industries.

So, aside from writing, one of the things he can speak of with some authority is the impact of technology and digital media in today's world.

He began, occasionally checking his notes on his iPad, by saying that Dawson is just a natural place for such a conversation, being something of an arts and media hub.

There have been, he said, four major stages in the development of digital technology as applied to the world of words and pictures.

Step one involved the means of production and data capture, which shifted from typewriters to word processors, and from film to digital imagery. In the case of photography, he said, "you were either on that bus or under it."

Similar changes occurred in the transition from film to video and in audio from disk to tape to CD and, ultimately, the move from analog to digital capture and manipulation.

Step two was the growth of interactivity, which allowed people to control their access to the content. Just being able to select the order of play of the songs on an album was a big step. Role playing and video games have advanced this still further and created a low level sort of artificial intelligence, which allows a program to respond to the user's needs and wishes.

Step three involved the means of storage and distribution, moving from floppy disks of various sizes, though zip-disks, CD and DVD disks and flash drives of various types. For mobility of data, it's hard to beat the World Wide Web and the Internet. Information is available, though not necessarily free. The location where all this material is stored is decentralized, and most recently something called the Cloud may change things still more.

The Web, Dowhal said, has enabled some societies to leapfrog over earlier telecommunications technologies, and has taken communications technology to places where it might not be yet if the Web did not exist.

The fourth stage is something he called the democratization of media, exemplified by file sharing, by Facebook, Twitter, YouTube and a dozen lesser social media platforms. There are claims that social media was the breeze that fanned the flame of the Arab Spring last year.

Sociologists he said, maintain that we are ultimately a race that thrives in groups and communities, and social media are creating all sorts of new communities.

"We're pushing a billion Facebook users and hundreds of millions of Twitter users, with lots of feeds going back and forth."

Media used to be controlled by business because it took so much money to produce a book, recorded music, newspapers, television show or movie.

"Everyone of us now has the ability to publish ourselves."

He noted the existence of Amazon's CreateSpace program, which allows a person to decide to print his or her book through a print-on-demand feature. Other companies exist, Blurb Inc. and Xlibris being a couple of examples.

Dowhal said it was almost pointless to argue over the changes brought on by digital technology were good or bad. The fact is that they have happened, and are continuing to happen and that people are using them in creative ways is mostly a good thing.

Bill (W.D.) Jackson, 1922-2012

It is with sadness we announce the sudden passing of Bill (W.D.) Jackson on May 1, 2012.

Born in Toronto, Ontario on June 3, 1933 to Lillian and George Jackson he was the oldest of four (Gary, Gail and Glenn). Bill is survived by his sons Kevin (Karen), Scott (Linda), Britt (Soula), grandchildren Jenna, Kyle, Shaelyn, Keira, Drew, Troy and predeceased by his daughter Laurelie (2010).

In 1963 Bill and his young family moved to Temagami, Ontario where he worked as salesman for National Mine Services until 1969 when they moved to Jasper, Alberta. He then began a career as a brakeman and later conductor for CNR until he moved to the Yukon in 1981.

He spent most of his remaining career with Yukon Forestry working in the lookout tower on the Fire Dome spotting fires in Dawson City. He was well known for playing his bagpipes on misty mornings on the Fire Dome and annually on Solstice Day at midnight. In his early days he was a prolific artist and continued to write novels and short stories until his death.

He was an instrumental part of the Jasper Highland Pipe Band and taught his four children to play the pipes and as a result was able to play in his own version of the "Jackson 5". His bagpipe music was published and played around the world.

Sadie and Paul's Big Adventure: Pt. 2

by Paul Marcotte

(Last issue Paul and Sadie went for a walk and Paul had a very nasty fall, ending with a bad break on some part of his leg. As we left him, he was trying to get back to the place where he was house-sitting, using some loose timber as makeshift crutches.)

I was slogging through heavy snow which didn't make my task any easier, and with the sun beating down I was rapidly overheating and my mouth had become dry as a bone. Each step was a challenge, and with each step, Sadie would grab the ball and drop it down in front of me hoping I guess that I would pick it up and throw it, or at least kick it ahead. "No Sadie, we can't play ball right now." Ever so slowly and very painfully I made my way back up the hill. I wanted me straight to the Grand Forks Hospital, where after x-rays and some morphine to help ease the pain, I was informed that I had a very serious break. How serious?

Well three breaks of the tibia near the ankle, a break of the same bone up near the knee and finally one break in the fibula for a total of five. Funny, the day before was my birthday, and I could proudly proclaim that I had never broken a bone in my body and then one day later and I've really gone to town.

By the following day I was heading east to Trail to have an operation done, and the journey over was nothing like I've ever experienced as every little bump along the highway, and there are more than you ever notice, caused major pain in my leg. By the time I was admitted at Trail next operation takes place on March 20th, so for all you blog followers, I won't be doing one on March 21st, as I will still be in Trail Hospital. During that operation, plates and pins will be put in place and then I am looking at about two months before I can put any weight on my foot.

In the meantime, I have plenty of great pets to keep me company and a priceless view looking up the valley, so I really can't complain. Things could have been much, much worse, and so I am counting my many blessings every day. One of those blessings is my neighbours, who have cared for the animals during my absence, and I will be forever grateful to them for being here and helping out a total stranger. In fact this past 10 days I have been surrounded by very caring people and it warms to just sit down and wish it was all a bad dream, but I really had no choice at this point. I had to get home and get to a phone and call for help.

It probably took me at least a half hour to get back to the house and as soon as I did I fell over on my bad leg, which certainly didn't help my mood. I managed to get up the stairs on my rear end and into the house and called next door for help.

"Hi, I am your new neighbour, and I wonder if I could bother you to come over and take me to the hospital, as I think I have broken my leg."

"We'll be right over was the response." Another blessing to count.

Greg the neighbour arrived almost immediately and after a quick introduction he drove

I was certainly in the mood for some more morphine.

To make a long story short, I was told not to eat anything after midnight as I was expected to go into the OR the next day, Tuesday. Finally on Friday, I had the operation. But this was only the first of two as it turns out. There was so much swelling in my leg that they had to stabilize the leg first. So as I type these words, my right leg is propped up on a stool in front of me and it has what is called an "External Fixator" attached to it. Basically I have four metal bars through my leg, two near the knee, one in the heel and the other in the arch of my foot. The bars are anchored in various bones in order to keep the broken bones stable and help the swelling subside.

I only found out today that the my heart to know that so many of them exist.

So over the next few months at least, I guess the thoughtful part of my blog will play first string to the wanderer part, but such is life as it throws lessons at us, and no doubt something good will come from this one, even though the price of the lesson was rather high this time.

My leg needs a rest, so I will end this now and write again on March 28th.

P.S. Happy birthday Bill!

And one more final thought. During my last housesit I was nursing poor Felix the cat back to health as he had injured his right leg. Maybe old Felix was trying to tell me about my future.

When Gordie and Fred Rocked the Hall

by Dan Davidson

Sometimes we get too busy here in Dawson and events mount up so fast and furious that important things slip our minds. As I write these words it's been almost a month since Gordie Tentrees, Fred Eaglesmith and their bands (which included some of the same people) blew through town and rocked the ballroom at the Odd Fellows Hall for an evening.

The combination of performers has graced the hall before, though Tentrees' last visit was players that made him louder and less pensive than on his last visit here. One reviewer has described his act as "raucous, slick and gritty" and I guess that works.

Fans will be able to hear him with the same lineup at this year's Dawson City Music Festival. That's a set I'll be sure to take in.

Fred Eaglesmith is perhaps what Gordie hopes to grow up to be. Fred is at home on any stage and if he ever gets asked to leave one he'll just turn the experience into stage patter. I have, however, heard him play in with one sideman instead of three. Perhaps it was the addition of drums and two other

St. Mary's Catholic Church without seriously offending anyone, so some of his bad boy routine is just that.

Clearly Fred would have liked to spend a little more time on his patented comedy delivery that evening, but there was a fan with a particularly distinctive laugh sitting in the front row, and he kept chiming in whenever the band was not performing.

Fred did go so far as to define the term "monologue" for him, but it didn't work.

"I see it's gonna be a musical show tonight," Eaglesmith concluded after the third or fourth interruption of his stage patter during the first 10 minutes of his 90 minute set.

It wasn't quite like that. He did manage to work in a few stories, but the music was the main event. Eaglesmith seems to cross a lot of musical boundaries in his act and in his song writing. He has been described as a combination of "rock'n'roll, country, folk, singer-songwriter, Americana, blues and bluegrass" and that probably doesn't do him justice or hit all the bases.

It was a fine show and it held the audience until the end.

The only excuse I can possibly make for not putting this enjoyable event on my laptop's monitor screen in front of me until now is that the Yukon River chose to break up the next morning and I've been feeling like a one legged man in a three legged race every since.

A Recently Extinct Animal: The Steller's Sea Cow

by Lisa McKenna

The Steller's Sea Cow only became extinct in 1768, just 27 years after its discovery in 1741. There were only an estimated 2,000 when they were discovered but with the sailors, sea hunters, fur traders and their small reproduction (one pup ever year or so) the Sea Cow was doomed.

Their meat was said to be close to veal and it kept longer than other available meats. The fat was said to taste like sweet almond oil.

They hung around Bering and Copper Islands in the Arctic waters and they were BIG! They could reach lengths of 8 meters and could be as much as 7 meters around and weigh over 5,000 kg!

The Sea Cow lived in herds but maintained strong ties between pairs.

They sort of look like a seal but they have real small heads, two stout forelimbs and a tail like a whale. Covered by 3cm of tough black skin and 20cm of fat the Steller's Sea Cow was well prepared for the frigid waters and avoiding being harmed in rough seas by dashing against rocks and ice floes.

They lived continually in the water and fed on kelp and other sea grasses...it had no teeth!

Ron James Packs the Palace Grand

by Dan Davidson

Ron James is a very funny fellow, and very popular one from the size of the audience in the Palace Grand Theatre on May 18. The place hasn't been that packed since Holland-America stopped making the Gaslight Follies a part of their regular tour itinerary. The only time it's been close in recent years is during the Robert Service School's annual commencement exercises.

James had been well briefed on local issues when he hit the stage on Friday night and worked many a Yukon theme into his 90-minute ramble across the country, through politics and down his own personal memory lane. Given the speed with which he delivers his material, you wonder how he ever manages to remember it all.

One way, I suppose, is to anchor it all to a through-line. In this case, James had a lot to say about recent Parks Canada cuts, none of it complimentary to the federal government, and so the framework for all of this inflammatory comedy (which drew lots of laughs and applause from a fairly partisan audience) was family camping trips.

The federal government came in for a drubbing on a number of other topics, as might be expected. Much of the humour from people who grew up in the Atlantic Provinces is salty when it comes to current events.

James is quite a bit more ris-problems that early pacer miners must have had after weeks panning on the creeks, bouncing about as he makes his points and then pausing to flash that mischievous grin that tells the audience the world's a bit of a joke and they're all in on it with him.

Like many comics he attributes his stage persona to his days in school, when he just could not manage to be quiet in a

He comments on this himself, calling it a sure sign of attention deficit disorder.

An odd feature of James's routine is the lengthy, descriptive, quite poetic passages that may go on for extended runs. While they usually end with something to bring out a laugh, the material before the punch line is often quite beautiful, belying the staccato style of the delivery.

Following the 90 minute show at the Palace, those who had purchased the limited number of reception tickets were invited back to the Dawson City Museum, where James chatted freely with the guests in the gift shop area and AV room and posed for numerous photos.

Two fans. Earl Brown and his wife, Sue Hay, had driven all the way from Toad River, BC, to take in this show. They left at the end of Sue's school day the day before and arrived in time for the show. Earl, who used to do the Alaska Highway route for the Milepost for many years before he retired, is used to driving long stretches, and took the 19 hour one-way drive in his stride, but she had to be back for classes on Tuesday morning after the long weekend.

classroom, and jokes that he has managed to make a living acting exactly the way his teachers told him would cause him to come to nothing as an adult. Part of his schtick is to interrupt himself constantly, run off on tangential topics and spout all of it at a mile a minute, while somehow managing to work in spaces for the inevitable laughter.

Sue Hay and Earl Brown travelled from Toad River to attend this concert qué in his live show than the toned down version people are used to seeing on CBC, but he managed to make that variation part of the act, openly taunting anyone who looked the least bit askance at any of his comments.

James seems hardly able to stand still much of the time, pacing the stage, dropping into a crouch to pantomime the back

Facts Science Refuses to Acknowledge: Pt. 2 of 3

So far in part 1, I have shown some evidence that points to the possibility that Humans existed upon this planet at some point long before the period science tells us. It actually implies that man walked during the time of the dinosaurs, especially since science claims that dinosaurs became extinct some 65 million years ago. Further evidence of this will follow; an article written by "William R. Corliss, Ancient Man: A Handbook of Puzzling Artifacts, p. 649, 1885: Reprinted in Mysteries of the Unexplained; Readers Digest, p. 35, 1982" another distinct archeological discovery was made, "On the North slope of a boulder-strewn hill near the mouth of the Little Cheyenne River, South Dakota, lies a flat, dazzlingly white rock of magnesian limestone, which geologists say was laid down and hardened some 100 million years ago. On it are three prints of moccasined feet. In fact they seem to be those of a woman or an adolescent, and to judge from the length of the stride (4 ½ and 5 ½ feet) the person who made them was running. In one of these prints, moreover, the impression made by the heel is deeper than that made by the ball of the foot, again suggesting that whoever made them was running at some speed.

The depth of the prints varies from ½ inch to 1 inch. All three clearly show the instep and faint toe marks, and all show the same degree of weathering as the unmarked surface of the rock. According to an interview obtained in 1882 with a Mr. Le Beau, who had lived in the area for 26 years, local Indians knew nothing of the origin of the prints but viewed the stone as "Medicine Rock".

I will begin my next evidence in my next article as it is somewhat lengthier than these previous quotations. Still, the evidence presented here in both parts 1 and 2 indicates that some form of humanoid existed on this planet during the time of dinosaurs. This evidence strongly opposes the commonly held belief by the scientific community that it was not possible for man to exist alongside any of the dinosaurs. If indeed, humanoid creatures left footprints in stone, 20 million to 300 million years ago, then humans or human-like beings walked side-by-side with the dinosaurs. Is it any wonder that our modern, conventional science does not want us to know about these details? Not at all. If the general population knew these facts and were exposed to these facts early in life, then it would give people the authority to question everything presented as "fact" by the scientific community.

Artist Profile: The Deep Dark Woods

by Mike Chaulk

Some people have described the music of The Deep Dark Woods as, well, dark, but that might be taking the feeling you'll get while listening too far in one direction. It's not quite dark, but rather it feels like that time just before it gets dark, maybe while driving over the few high, gold-lit hills on the Louis Riel Trail out of Regina.

The impulse to describe The Deep Dark Woods' music as one thing is difficult because it balances each quality with its opposition, always bringing two different directions together harmonically. Coming out of the Canadian prairies, it's natural that they involve themes of seclusion, detachment, and frozen winters, but, staying true to their homeland, their tunes are also very intimate and sometimes glow by that special warm and wooden breed of bar lighting. It's lonely but you never quite feel alone. Even the orchestration and songwriting hide complexities in what only seems to be a minimal landscape.

The Louis Riel Trail ends in Saskatoon, where The Deep Dark Woods began. Since then, although always musically anchored in the expanses of Saskatchewan, TDDW has gone places. For their 2009 release, Winter Hours, they won not only the award for Best Roots Group at the 2009 Western Canadian Music Awards, but also Ensemble of the Year at the 2009 Canadian Folk Music Awards.

The Deep Dark Woods also put a quick end to the CBC's Great Canadian Songquest with "Charlie's (Is Coming Down)," a tune about the closure of Good Time Charlie's in Regina.

The Deep Dark Woods and their newest album, The Place I Left Behind, will be making their way up to Dawson after gracing festival stages across the continent. Before we sway in the wheat fields they'll unpack up here, they'll be playing Bonaroo, Bluesfest, and Bunbury. Afterward, they'll give a bit of Canada to the Tønder Festival in Denmark and to England's End of the Road. So get yourself ready for this year's DCMF, where we'll all welcome The Deep Dark Woods and their waltzes, ballads, and gritty roots tunes to the end of our own road.

Another Blast from the Past

by Lisa McKenna

Born in Brooklyn, New York on January 24th, 1941 this American singer-songwriter was voted 3rd as the most successful adult contemporary artist, preceded by Elton John and Barbra Streisand (with whom he sang a duet in 1978).

In 1985 he was inducted into the Songwriters Hall of Fame, in 2011 he entered the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, by 2001 he had sold over 115 million records, and one of his albums spent an incredible 29 weeks at No.1 in Australia!

In his younger years he was a fencer, he even won a fencing scholarship to NYU. Today he still warms up with fencing exercises before a show.

He has written songs that were played by the Monkees, Elvis Presley, Mark Lindsay (of Paul Revere and the Raiders), Deep Purple (!), and Cliff Richard.

He has, on one occasion, opened for The Who. He has sung a duet with Henry Winkler

(the 'Fonz'). In 2008 he sang at the Ohio State University with a case of laryngitis and he felt that he sang so poorly that he offered to refund the ticket cost to anyone who asked.

Though he's been married three times, the last time in April of this year, I am still a believer in Neil Diamond!

Remembering the Piper in the Fire Tower

by Dan Davidson

Bill Jackson, for many years the man in the Fire Tower, left us in early May. On the evening of May 20 a group of Bill's friends met at the tower after the Forestry Crew had cleared the road for us. It was a fine evening to stand on the viewing deck that Bill built and share memories of the man who loved his work so much that he came out of his first retirement and manned his post for another ten years.

The memorial service was conducted by Reverend Laurie Munroe and Lay Minister Shirley Pennell, with readings by Palma Berger and Kathy Webster and memories by many of the dozen or so in attendance.

I led the hymns, including "Be Thou My Vision" and "I Feel the Wind of God Today". Peter Menzies performed the song he once wrote to honour Bill, with its refrain "He Plays the Pipes to Keep the Fires Away" I sang his favorite song, the McCartney and Laine composition "Mull of Kintyre."

What follows is the eulogy that was read by Bill's son, Scott, and his good friend, Shirley Pennell.

Born in Mimico, Ontario. Mimico is an Indian word for "the home of the wild pigeons". He was very proud of the fact he was born in a place that had an Indian name.

From an early age he loved the outdoors, camping on the Forks of the Credit River outside of Toronto, using the book, Wild Wood Wisdom, a book on Indian lore, as his guide. He learned to play the bagpipes at around age 14, partly self-taught, with further instructions from Pipe Major Fraser of the 48th Highlanders of Toronto. He joined the Junior Forest Rangers of Ontario at age 15. Did seasonal work fighting forest fires in north central Ontario. Earned his Scaler's license at age 21, and worked as a salesman for Kingsway Lumber and also at National Mine Service. Moved around 1960, getting a job as Park Superintendent of a park in Temagami. From there went into a fire tower down Lake Temagami for a few summers. Eventually, he moved his family west to Jasper in late 1969. Worked on construction for a couple of years before hiring on with CN rail, where he worked until 1981. While in Jasper, he joined the Jasper Highland Pipe Band, and soon after taught all 4 children to play the pipes. Who in turn joined the band and were all affectionately known as the "Jackson Five." In 1981 he moved to the Yukon, again with the great outdoors being what drew him. He was an aspiring writer and artist with a tremendous natural ability to draw.

His first winter was spent in Klukshu, outside of Haines Junction, Yukon. There he affectionately attended to his family of Irish Wolf hounds, Branigan and Rosie, who produced a litter of puppies during the coldest part of the winter. From this litter he kept one pup, which he named 'Screamer', his constant companion. Moving from Klukshu he took a job at Dezadeash Lodge. In the process he met Boyd Campbell, who like Bill, loved music. They came to become life, long friends, entertaining the guests of the lodge and the patrons of the Lodge bar, Bill on his pipes and penny whistle, Boyd with his singing and guitar playing. Eventually, the Lodge closed and Bill headed to Dawson City taking up a position with Forestry as a tower man in June of 1984.

The cabin on 2nd Dome or Tower Hill had a view that Bill never tired of, either from the porch or the copula of the tower. Of course his job was to spot 'smokes' before they flared into major forest fires. He was extremely dedicated to his job. His cabin he made into a home welcoming all who took the 'interesting' drive up the steep grade to the tower. He entertained with a coffee for all and when asked, the playing of the pipes. Many a tourist stated that he made their stay in Dawson memorable.

When the wind blew in the right direction, the lit of the pipes could be heard drifting on the wind as far out as Callison. Sometimes when approaching the tower after the drive up, you could hear the music of his penny whistle or flute drifting out the open windows of the copula.

Bill prided himself in how quickly he could go up the tower ladder and offered viewing from the copula to any brave person who asked. With permission, he eventually made a viewing deck for visitors that looked out over the vista. The first deck ended up on the Midnight Dome as a viewing platform, but being missed, he built another, which bears his name.

The Solstice parties on the longest day were always very memorable. Good friends, great food and always sudden drop-ins by tourists and even from the air. Tom Burn, who played Robert Service, would read the Spell of the Yukon' with the sun's rays at midnight in the background. Then Bill would break in with his pipes. Not a dry eye in the group.

Later, Bill got permission to live year round in the cabin, which necessitated the purchase of a snow machine. For several winter seasons he was joined by a professor from the University of Tokyo who was studying the Aurora Borealis.

Getting Bill to 'come off the hill' was a struggle. He did so for leading the Canada Day parade with his piping and sometimes to attend the Commissioner's Ball.

He was extremely dedicated to keeping a watchful eye on the Gold Fields, the Taylor Highway, up and down the river and the town of Dawson. We were in good hands.

Although he decided to retire in his mid sixties, he soon realized he made a mistake and returned manning the tower until his 76th year.

He retired to Whitehorse where he resided until his passing.

With the phasing out of some forestry towers due to modern technology, he joins the rank of the rare breed who still 'climb to the sky'. He will be missed by his Dawsonite friends, sons and family members.

The Community Bids Farewell to Willie Danny Gordon

by Lisa McKenna

This is the Willie I will always remember...a Willie full of joy and laughter.

St. Paul's Anglican Church was packed to the rafters; people were lined up against the walls! My tears covered my notes, but I wish to thank the family and the community for showing so much respect to A Legend of the North.

I cannot say it enough. Willie was a gentleman; in the term that he respected all forms, all walks, of life. He had great joy from his son Anthony, as well as from his stepsons Justin and Jason Van Fleet. Anthony sent a message thanking everyone for his or her love and support. It means a lot to him because his Dad had touched so many hearts and always had a smile on his face and we learned that Anthony was beginning fiddle lessons...let the legend live on.

I cannot also write this article without mentioning Willie's eyes. He had such beautiful eyes, when he hit that perfect note it was an honor to see. His eyes expressed his joy in the music and he gave this entire joy back ten fold. Barnacle referred to Willie as Christ-like and so he was. As Bob so justly put it, Willie lived in love, in kindness, and in humility.

We awaited the arrival of Willie and the church was silent ... until Barnacle arrived and slammed the door! Awakening us all from our revelry. The service began with Kristen Poenn playing, on the fiddle, "The Old Rugged Cross", along with Andrew Laviolette on guitar. The choir entered and the Rev. Laurie Munro welcomed us all and read the scriptures of John 11: 25-26, John 14: 1-3, and Romans 8: 38-39.

The friends and family then sang to Willie "How Great Thou Art". Willie has gone to meet his maker, play his fiddle with the saints, hug his beloved Nancy, kiss his parents, say hi to his brother and hold his sisters in his arms.

"Praise the Lord with the harp; make music to him on the ten-stringed lyre. Sing Him a new song; play skillfully and shout for joy" (Psalm 33:2-3).

Then Harmonica George came forward and played, and sang, "You are the wind beneath my wings", and yes we know Willie was our Hero. BUT... do not let your hearts be troubled for he is in the house of our Lord.

Willie "praised the Lord with his fiddle, he sang to him a new song, and he shouted for joy". We were asked to celebrate Willie's joy and then, in time, God would restore our souls to peace.

Anglican Bishop Larry Robinson, who knew Willie in Inuvik, recalled Willie's days on the CBC Mom's Show and said he was aware of several reports on it. Some said it was "good", some said it was really good, and others said it was damn good! Willie was offered to go south to further this career but he refused. "This proves his love for his family and the land."

The service was ended by "Amazing Grace"

"...Into the blessed rest, into the glorious company of Saints"

Goodbye Willie... see you there.

Y is for

Yams, called sweet potatoes in Canada and the U.S.A. are very useful vegetables. They can be barbecued, baked, fried, grilled, roasted, smoked, and even a yam can be grated and used in a dessert!

Yams are a staple crop in Nigeria. (A staple crop is the people's main source of food. In Asia it was rice and in Ireland it was the potato and the First Nations relied on corn.)

In Nigeria they even have a Yam festival called Iri-ji or Iwa-ju, depending on the region you come from. West Africa harvests 95% of the World's Yams. They are well suited to the climate because a Yam can be stored up to 6 months without refrigeration.

But don't think of the Yam as just a potato! Have you ever met a potato that could grow up to 1.5 meters long? And weigh up to 70 kilos? That would make some cool French fries!

Yams have also been used in Medicine. It was quite common to get rid of headaches and its chemicals have formed the basis of the modern day aspirin.

Yellow-bellied sapsuckers - yes, these creatures do exist but guess what they are. They are medium sized Woodpeckers! They are called sapsuckers because the drill small holes in the bark to feed on the sap within, other birds can then get to the sap. So the Sapsucker plays an important part in the life of the forests it lives in.

The Sapsucker lays its eggs, from 2 to 7 in a clutch, in holes in trees or in a dead branch. They do not build nests or line them with feathers or anything! I think they are just lazy birds! But I bet the chicks are pretty tough.

When the eggs hatch the baby yellow-breast is naked (no feathers) and completely helpless. Eventually it grows feathers and learns how to fly...then it is on its own.

A sapsucker spends the summers across Canada, but it likes to winter in Florida or Panama, kind of like us Yukoners! There is a small population that stays in the Middle East of America but that is due to climate and the availability of food. (Sapsuckers, besides sap, eat insects, fruits, and berries.)

The Yukon has a population of 34,667 people, that's not even the size of a small city! Out of these 34,667...26,304 live in the town of Whitehorse. That leaves only 8,393 people to fill up the rest of the Yukon and 1,881 of them live in Dawson, the second biggest town which, by the way, is 535 km away from Whitehorse.

80% of the Yukon is still in a natural, wild state. There are still parts of the Yukon that have never been traveled!

The Yukon's flower is the fireweed, it is a bright pink and can be seen growing along the sides of the roads and rivers. It also grows in the clearings where there had once been a fire.

The Yukon's bird is the raven and you can see these black birds everywhere and in 2001 the Yukon adopted the sub-alpine fir as its official tree. Sub-alpine firs can grow from 6 meters to 20 meters.

The Yukon also has a large animal population, with an estimated 190,000 caribou, 10,000 black bears, 70,000 moose, 7,000 grizzly bears, and there are deer, elk, goats, wood bison, 22,000 sheep, and 4,500 wolves!
