Education Minister Sets Options for the 2013/14 School Calendar

Dawson’s School Council Considered School Board Status to Counter Unwelcome Calendar Proposals

PRESS RELEASE

WHITEHORSE—The government is proposing that Yukon move from 15 individual academic calendars to two common start dates, and that each student attends school for a minimum of 180 days per year, Education Minister Scott Kent announced today.

“In our consultation efforts on school calendars we heard a variety of views that covered a range of topics from cultural considerations, to lifestyle, to student achievement concerns,” Kent said.

“When reviewing consultation results, what was weighted most heavily was student achievement and academic opportunities.

“Better coordination of the Yukon school calendar will improve distance learning options and will ultimately lead to better experiences and results for students,” Kent added.

The move to two common start dates aims to close the disparity that exists between rural and Whitehorse secondary schools related to the number of electives available to students.

Currently, most Whitehorse schools can choose from approximately 40 electives and 10 or more trades courses. Most rural schools have less than 10 elective courses and significantly fewer trades courses on offer.

Moving forward, Whitehorse elementary and Whitehorse secondary schools will continue to have common school calendars. The elementary calendar will begin August 21 and end June 10; the secondary calendar will begin September 4 and end June 23. In 2014 the spring break in Whitehorse will be two weeks.

Rural school councils will have the choice to begin classes on either August 21 or September 4 and could end their school year as early as May 30 depending on the duration of their Spring Break and the timing of professional development days. New calendar options are designed to offer parents and their school council representatives the flexibility they need to balance local considerations with academic performance goals.

Rural councils have until March 22 to determine their calendar details.

“With an 80 per cent graduation rate in Whitehorse and 61 per cent in communities, it is clear that the status quo is not working,” Kent said. “Continued investments in technology and teachers, combined with schedules that make it easier for students to access academic opportunities, we can bring Yukon achievement levels to where they need to be.”

By Dan Davidson

While the Robert Service School Council was waiting for a formal response from Minster of Education Scott Kent regarding proposed changes to the school calendar, the council decided what it might do it the answer was not one that it liked.

It informed the Minister it would request to move from school council to school board status.

“The idea’s been bandied about,” said school council chair Sue Lancaster week before last.

“There was a such a huge outcry from the community regarding the possible calendars they’ve looked at that we’re not sitting down on this issue.”

Briefly, the school council in Dawson moved 21 years ago to change its school calendar to one which, after a year of study following the passage of the Partners in Education school act, more closely aligned itself with the town’s needs.

The school realigned its operational year to take advantage of Dawson’s actual peak summer months, which are June and July. Students return to class the day after Discovery Day, when the season has already begun to turn to fall, and leave classes as close to the end of May as is feasible, sometimes spilling slightly over into June. Part of what makes this work is having a slightly longer school day during the year in order to make up the required total of 950 hours during the year, 935 of those being instructional hours.

Comments at a public meeting here in January saw both parents and students speaking in favour of the longer school day making more sense during the dark winter months here.

All of the options for the common school calendar proposed by Yukon Education would have moved the school year further into June and would shortened the school day in order to increase the actual number of days. In addition, the number of non-instructional days would have been bumped up from three to six.

Yukon Education's line on this proposal is that it was first raised about a year ago at a meeting of all school councils. It was the subject of a PowerPoint presentation called “Beginning the 2013-2014 School Calendars Conversation” at that time, but much of that presentation dealt with graduation rates and how to improve them, and it clearly did not make the impact on that gathering that the department has been suggesting it did. Not one of the six recommendations passed as a result of that meeting had any mention of a common school calendar in it.

That’s how Lancaster recalls the meeting as well, and she has been firm in her conviction that the new proposals, launched at the December 2012 meeting, eight months later, were a surprise to her.

Yukon Teachers Association president Katherine Mackwood says it’s clear they were a surprise to most people, particularly to school administrators and staff, who were not directly informed of the proposed changes unless their school councils chose to share the information with them, as was done in Dawson.

“Dawson is pretty clear that they’re not willing to accept what has been suggested,” Lancaster said. “The long and short means that there’s a really good probability that becoming a school board would probably be the only real option.”

School boards, under the Education Act, have a number of powers that the council here has been reluctant to acquire over the years since that became possible. Among these would be finances, and the hiring of staff, none of which successive school councils here have wished to take on. Setting the school year and hours of instruction in a day is one of those powers.

The issue of acquiring more local autonomy has been discussed since the turn of the century and particularly over the last three years at a series of “hot topic” discussion sessions.

Lancaster finds it odd that the department is moving in the direction of uniformity at the same time that British Columbia is showing signs of moving towards a variety of school calendars, recognizing that what works in Victoria is not necessarily suitable for Atlin.

“If we really want to control what we do in Dawson, that’s the way to go.”

The possibility of a major change to the school calendar here has pushed this idea almost to the tipping point.

The Minster’s statement (at left) is good for this year only, and the school council understands that it is still the intention of Yukon Education to push for the type of change it has announced it needs.

A meeting set for yesterday, March 5, was been called to discuss future actions. More on this next issue.

Uffish Thoughts: We Really Did Pick Father Judge's Name

by Dan Davidson

I can't really argue with the official response sent out to "clarify" the process by which the name Dawson City Community Hospital was chosen.

To quote the letter ("A fact check on Dawson's hospital" - see next page) which appeared in the Star last week:

"In the fall of 2012, the board of trustees of the Yukon Hospital Corp. issued a 'call for submissions' from interested parties regarding the name of the new hospital in Dawson City.

"The members of the board of trustees, including the member from Dawson City, reviewed the names submitted and chose the name 'Dawson City Community Hospital.'"

One cannot really fault the Communications Officer for the Yukon Hospital Corporation for putting out the message as instructed. That is the nature of the job, after all.

In terms of what happened at the board meeting where the final decision was made, I have no doubt that this letter contains the plain, unvarnished truth.

Of course, the "call for submissions" phrasing makes it sound as if it was a very formal process. If that was the case, I ought to be able to find a formal notice about in the local paper. I've leafed through every issue from last July to November in vain but I may have missed something.

Aside from that, if people from places other than Dawson and the Klondike were being asked to submit names for the new facility here, I guess we can chalk that up as another snub for local input on any phase of this project.

Lest my meaning be misconstrued, I am well aware that medical professionals in the community were consulted about the hospital and its functions. I am speaking here of the local citizenry, Dawsonites on the street, so to speak.

When it came to names, apparently we are to believe that there were several options placed before the board at some particular meeting, and that, after careful deliberation, two more or less identical labels were chosen to identify the satellite facilities in Watson Lake and Dawson City.

Since we are not using actual names here, I will simply record the fact that the member from Dawson City, who I believe acted in good faith, struck a hospital naming committee here in Dawson, and organized a community vote on what the choice should be that would be taken to the YHC board after the votes were tabulated.

I'm not sure how many ballot boxes there were, but I used the one at the Canada Post Office on Third Avenue.

Thanks to one of the 200 or so people who have been following a Facebook discussion of this matter since the official response letter appeared last week, I now have the wording of the ballot slip which people were asked to fill in.

It read:

"PLACE YOUR VOTE!

"Write # 1, 2 or 3 on a slip of paper provided and place in the ballot box.

"#1 Father Judge Memorial

"#2 Tl'èdlây Ch'ondey Zho (Two Rivers Medicine House)

"#3 Tr'ondëk Ch'ondey Zho (Klondike Medicine House)"

In writing it down here the only change I have made is to put the translations for the Hän names in parentheses after the Hän words. Numbers 2 and 3 were appropriate names, but it seems that they did not spark a positive response from people.

As I reported in my last comment on this subject,

The completion date and eventual opening of the Dawson City Community Hospital may be up in the air due to the financial problems of Dowland Contracting, but locals know what name they would have preferred it to carry.

Father Judge Memorial was the overwhelming choice of those who voted. It was the choice that people here expected the member who lives in Dawson City to take to the YHC board.

It was the only choice that they expected would be taken to the YHC board.

Father Judge was, after all, the fellow whose stalwart efforts brought hospital care to Dawson City in the first place in 1897, and St. Mary's Hospital loomed large in the history of the town until it was destroyed by fire in 1950. His name originally graced the building, which is now, after several name changes, known as the Dawson City Health Centre, and a memorial plaque with his name and legend can be found outside that building.

As you can easily see, "Dawson City Community Hospital" was not one of the three choices offered, nor was it the winner.

At the last information meeting that the YHC held here, residents were invited to submit their ideas for what the grand opening of the new hospital should be like. Given the outcome of the attempt to give it a name, they have to wonder if any such input would be taken into consideration.

We want to hear from you!

LETTERS

Thanks to My Friends for Their Support

To the Editor,

In regards to the two previous Klondike Sun newspaper articles titled "The Story About the Lost Father, parts 1 and 2" I, Craig Dunham, would like to thank people for their help. I didn't expect such a big story, however I did want to thank the people who helped me make the trip.

First, I'll thank Heidi Bliedung, who literally got me a passport. All I had to do was sign the papers. Heidi and her girlfriend, Krista Schmidt, had already been to Norway, visiting my son Christien, so she knew what a cool time it would be for me and my son to reunite together in Stavanger, Norway, where we could also watch the caliber of hockey I once played.

Heidi also showed some short films I took part in with Troy Suzuki and some other hockey buddies. This raised money and really helped me with walking around loot while I was there. She will always be a great friend and I love her large. Thanks again, Heidi.

Second, I would like to say a special thanks to the whole Mike Fraser family. David Fraser stayed at my place while I was gone and did a great job of looking after my dog, Lucy, as well as keeping the riffraff from my door. My good friend Mike also helped me in that walking around money department. I got great support, and thanks you guys who know who you are.

I should like to thank Jimmie Gattie for also helping with my dog, Lucy, and my place while I was gone. Thanks, Jim.

I would like to give special thanks to the staff and patrons of the Westminster Hotel who attended the short films held at the lounge, Thanks, Paul, and the rest of the gang.

Special thanks to Barry Fargie and Gary Gammie, who both contributed to making this trip of a lifetime real.

I should also like to thank Dr. Parsons and the staff at the nursing station for helping me to get on my merry way.

And last – thanks to Dan Davidson who must have worked very hard translating certain Norwegian phrases into English and doing a great job doing so. (In fairness, the translation was done by Irmelin Nohal, and I just had to tidy it up a bit - DD) Thanks, Dan. You guys are great neighbours as well.

I feel I am a very luck guy to have such great neighbours, friends and family here in Dawson.

Sincerely,
Craig Dunham

P.S. O Ya - I'm going to be a grandfather at the end of April. It's a boy. Will he play hockey? You bet!

A Fact Check on Dawson's Hospital

Ed. Note – This letter appeared in the Whitehorse Star on Feb. 15/13

To the Editor:

The purpose of this letter is to clarify the process used by the Yukon Hospital Corp. (YHC) regarding public input into the naming of the new Dawson City Hospital.

In the fall of 2012, the board of trustees of the Yukon Hospital Corp. issued a "call for submissions" from interested parties regarding the name of the new hospital in Dawson City.

The members of the board of trustees, including the member from Dawson City, reviewed the names submitted and chose the name "Dawson City Community Hospital".

A media release was issued on Jan. 28, 2013, announcing the names of the two new hospitals in the Yukon.

As well, the CBC website and the Star (Feb. 13) have stories that indicate the budget for the construction of the new hospital was listed at $5.2 million, as expressed by Klondike MLA Sandy Silver.

The correct figure for the construction costs of the new Dawson City Community Hospital is $25 million.

Hospital Corporation Should Honour Residents' Wishes

Ed. Note: This letter appeared in the Whitehorse Star on Feb. 20/13

To the Editor:

I am writing to respond to a letter by communications staff from the Yukon Hospital Corp. that appeared in your Feb. 15th edition.

The letter was about the cost of the new hospital in Dawson City and the process for naming that facility.

With regard to the cost, the original budget, as announced in the 2004 budget speech, was $5.2 million.

Since that time, there have been numerous changes and delays to the project that have seen the cost rise to almost $30 million.

A political decision, made mid-project, to turn the facility into a hospital instead of a multi-level care facility is responsible for a good chunk of the cost increase.

With respect to the naming of the facility, Dawson City residents I have spoken with are not happy with the proposed name nor how it was selected.

I understand the mayor of Dawson has heard the same concerns and made the Yukon Hospital Corp. aware of them by letter.

Dawson residents were surveyed, in a process rolled out by one of the rural representatives on the board, about potential names.

This process was sanctioned by the corporation and endorsed by the community, and residents chose Father Judge Memorial Hospital.

Residents then learned, months later, from news reports, that their selection had been turfed. Many other residents who participated have also confirmed this process.

It is not too late for the corporation to reconsider.

I would urge the board to respect the community's wishes and use the name put forward by Dawson City residents.

Sandy Silver
MLA, Klondike, Dawson City

A Second Away from Hell

I am currently trying to figure out the best way to run the cafe that I have been building for the last 3 years. My vision for the cafe is a place where everybody feels welcome and where ideas can flow freely. The question I have been asking myself is whether it is a good idea for me to be the owner and manager of the cafe. Would it not be better if a group of people with a similar vision were owning and running the cafe for it to become that awesome inclusive place that I would like it to be?

I was driving down to Whitehorse to get the prospective of a friend who is quite knowledgeable about cooperatives. A Dawsonite asked if he could come along. The tires on the van were new winter tires. I have my class 5 drivers license, did a course about driving in slippery conditions and I like to be very careful when I drive. When I drive, that is all I do. I remember people getting really mad at me because I am driving too slow.

So we were driving back. The van was in perfect running condition, the road looked just fine. You could see the typical stripes on the road that are left behind an ice scraper. I could see the pavement with a bit of snow on the side. It looked like perfect driving conditions. So, we are driving along, around 85 km/hr. when I suddenly realize that the back is moving towards the left. I couldn't believe it. "Something is wrong!!!" I shouted out. I thought that there was something wrong with the van. So I am correcting the trajectory. It over swings the other way, then the other way, then the other way. At this point the swing is too big for me to catch up. We are sliding sideways towards the opposite side of the road.

I see hell coming. I can't believe it. Somebody is going to die, or loose a limb. All that work to make Dawson a better place, all that care, gone, in one second, all this is gone, only hell will be left. So ironic.

The van flies off road, hits the side of the ditch, rolls and stops, back on it's wheels. We look around. Everybody is fine. A couple of bumps. That's it.

The road was covered with invisible glare ice.

Nobody got hurt. We danced a jig, my friend, his dog and I.

A $10 000 adventure by the time the dust is settled. I'll trade hell for $10 000 any day.

I have spent a full day reflecting and meditating about all that: by the evening I felt strong, inspired and full of a new energy. It seems like this event has torn the curtain of grey that seems to take over when not reminded about the intensity and fragility of our lives.

Thank you Life (I remember telling my friend to put his seat belt on when we left).

Thank you to all the helpful people and thank you to Sally (the van) for protecting us so well.

What I learned: check the road condition website, drive by day, plan for the unexpected, and whatever you do, GO SLOW. Hell is only a second away when you hold that wheel in your hands.

Florian

Jan Couture's Big Win

by Palma Berger

"This is a scam? Right?" was Jan Couture's reaction to the phone call she received a couple of weeks ago,

The phone call was telling her that she had won a travel voucher for $3,500.

So the caller gave her their phone number and invited her to call them back to show that this was legitimate.

Well, it was a Whitehorse number.

So she and husband, Gerry, called back and were told that definitely Jan had won the voucher. The ticket had been entered in a Whitehorse draw for the trip.

Jan had a few health problems and now could not believe good fortune had come her way.

The draw was sponsored by Klondike Travel and Jacklyn Stockstill, a realtor with Caldwell Banker.

As Klondike Travel said, "They wanted to give somebody in the Yukon a trip somewhere as it had been a long cold winter."

Jan has to call in next time she is in Whitehorse to discuss the details, but the travel voucher will take her on different modes of transport anywhere in Canada until the money runs out.

Now Jan Couture has to decide what to do with her winnings.

In the meantime, so many ideas of how to use this travel voucher are tripping over each other as she tries to decide.

Yes, "excited" would best describe her mood at the moment.

Trek Over the Top Number One Enjoys Great Weather and a Fine Trail

by Dan Davidson

An enthusiastic first group of Trek Over the Top sleds began to arrive in Dawson just after 1:30 local time, having taken off from Tok, Alaska, at about 8:30 (their time, 9:30 Yukon time) that morning. Those first three riders were followed by a cluster of four about an hour later. A final number of 60 were expected for this run. This is a rally, not a race, so people take it as fast or as slow as they are comfortable with, and many mention stopping along the way for a little break and some picture taking.

Nick and Melissa Billstrom said the trail was "very nice – sunny most of the way."

Jim Psiones is on his ninth Trek. Glancing at the ladies over at the check-in table he said he keeps coming back for the women.

"Seriously though, I enjoy it. Excellent ride today. Best trail ever. The trail's never been this good and the weather has never been this nice either. It's been an exceptionally good day. Excellent ride, excellent view, excellent company, great place to visit."

It was about -10° C in Dawson when they arrived, and most thought it had been about -20° F. (about -29 C) for most of the ride.

Reggie Everitt from Palmer, Alaska, is on his fifth Trek.

"This is by far the best ride and the best trail – on both sides."

Two years ago he persuaded his friend, Eldon Bell, who he met while they were both on jury duty, to attempt the trip, and Eldon is a convert.

"I think we need another hundred miles," he said. "I'm just getting; warmed up. Like he (Reggie) said, you couldn't have asked for a more spectacular day. Perfect weather. Couple places where it was a little foggy, but that just kinda added to the intrigue of the trail."

"Everybody's been terrific, from the folks up in Tok to the folks here, who really do a nice job. It's nicely organized; the customs folks are nice and friendly."

"I can't imagine why there aren't a thousand people doing this, because it really is a lot of fun."

Sometime back there were close to 600, spread over three weekends, but border issues, international issues and the rising Canadian dollar ("No," says Eldon. "It's the falling American dollar.") have cut into the registration and the Trek has just been a two weekend event for several years now.

Trek Number One will head back to Tok on Sunday and the next contingent, numbering about 117, will arrive this coming Thursday.

20th Trek a Major Boost to Dawson's Winter Tourism

by Dan Davidson

February 28 saw the arrival of the first wave of Trek Over the Top Visitors for 2013. This is the 20th anniversary of the popular tour from Tok to Dawson and back, coming over the 200 mile Taylor/Top of the World Highway route for a long weekend in the Klondike capital.

This is the second year that the Trek has been a part of the Klondike Visitors Associations annual package of events. The KVA helped the original Dawson Trek operators for many years, but took over the operation for last year's runs, working with the Alaska Trailblazers on the Alaska side, and assisted by the Dawson Sled Dawgs here.

The Trek has declined from its glory days when there were three weekends and nearly 600 trekkers. It took a hit from the 9/11 Terrorist attacks and the deployment of many Alaskan service people to battle stations in the Afghanistan and Iraq. In addition, the strong Canadian dollar has made the trip over to Dawson a less attractive proposition for American visitors. Finally, there were a couple of winters where the Trek was a brutally cold experience and that word of mouth has not yet been overcome.

The trail is said to be in good shape this year and KVA marketing manager Rachel Wiegers sends out a big thank you to the Yukon government's highways crew for assisting with some grooming on the Canadian side.

Sixty people had signed up for the first run two weeks prior to the event and five more had joined them in the end. By the next week 117 had registered for the second run (March 7 to 10).

Registration needs to be in advance in order to guarantee clearance at the border between the US and Canada, where there have been some issues since procedures were tightened up after the creation of the US Dept. of Homeland Security.

When trekkers arrive on Thursday they check in at the Visitors Information Centre on Front Street and then head to their hotels, which have been pre-booked through the KVA's online booking website. Diamond Tooth Gerties is open each Trek weekend, as is the site for several of the special events.

On Friday visitors have a choice of a Museum tour, the curling club, and a Texas Hold'em Poker Tournament at Gerties. The Dawson Firefighters put on a BBQ steak dinner and the Snowshoe Shufflers will be on stage.

Mornings are free for shopping, walking or sleeping on both days, but the Saturday is the day Dawson City Sled Dawg host Trekkers on a local Poker Run through historical sites of Dawson. Locals are invited to sign up for this as well.

"We really like working with the Sled Dawgs," said marketing assistant Paul Robitaille, admitting that not everyone in the KVA offices is an expert sledder. "We need to have support from that group and we're glad to have them on board for us again this year."

Robitaille says some of the old Trek events that haven't been used for a while are making a comeback this year. These include the Hawaiian Night and the Snowmobile Olympics, both of which were popular requests noted on last year's surveys.

The latter is a competition in which contestants, who usually seem to be women, are asked to do some basic task, like changing a belt, on different models of snow machines. Robitaille isn't really looking forward to trying to get the machines into Gerties.

Gillian Campbell will be here to perform as Klondike Kate during the second Trek, which she hasn't done before. She will perform on both Friday night and Saturday and those shows will also be open to the general public for a charge at the door.

"Everyone who has seen Gillian knows she does a good job," said Robitaille. "Those who haven't, you've got to come out and see her because (her show) really personifies the Klondike."

Campbell's presence is being sponsored by the General Store and the Downtown Hotel.

Robitaille says he's seeing quite a few new names on this year's lists.

"This is good because you can only grow an event if you get new people."

On the other hand, there are people who have participated in this event 18 or 19 times.

"There's a couple of guys who have done it every year. To do the same event for that length of time, it does show that there's a reason, that's there's value that they see here."

"There's a relationship and camaraderie that they see here," Wiegers said, "and they just love Dawson."

As the first Trek weekend approached, a total of 183 people had registered for the two events.

"That's still good in the middle of the winter," said Robitaille, "getting guys here that spend quite a bit of money. We figure on average, based on the comment cards we get, that these guys are spending between $750 and $1000 per person while they are in town, on top of their registration and their hotel."

"The other thing is that these guys don't only come here for the Trek. A lot of them come here every summer almost."

Registration for the Treks is about CDN$525 per person, depending on where they stay. Since last year, visitors can chose to book at any of the hotels and B&Bs that are open at this time of season, where bookings used to be limited to only a few of the places.

Aside from Campbell's show, the general public is also invited to buy tickets for the steak and prime rib dinners and for some of the other special events.

Both old and new trekkers should find some interest in the 20th anniversary collage of photos and articles that will be posted at Gerties.

Audit Confirms Yukon Party Government's Chronic Mismanagement of Healthcare

PRESS RELEASE

WHITEHORSE (February 26, 2013)—Yukon's NDP Official Opposition is taking the Yukon Party government to task for its poor planning and mismanagement of healthcare services in the territory.

In a damning report issued today on the still unfinished Dawson City and Watson Lake hospitals, the Office of the Auditor General of Canada found that the Yukon government failed to plan properly before starting to build.

"This report confirms that the planning and construction of the Dawson City and Watson Lake hospitals has been irresponsible and reckless," Official Opposition Leader Liz Hanson said. "It's the hallmark of a bull-headed government that chooses to plough ahead with expensive projects without good evidence or justification. Had they bothered to listen to patients and families, healthcare professionals and even their own review of the healthcare system, some of these problems might have been avoided."

The audit found that the communities' health care needs were not fully assessed, options to meet communities' needs were not evaluated, and the hospitals cannot be shown to be the most cost-effective means of meeting health care needs. The audit also showed that risks associated with building the hospitals were not fully mitigated, hospital operating costs were not known before construction started, and both projects are behind schedule and over budget.

"Yukon people, like all Canadians, cherish our universal healthcare system and expect government to manage it responsibly," Hanson added. "The Yukon Party government, and the Hospital Corporation it created and controlled, has failed to meet that expectation. Instead of improving the care provided to patients, the only thing certain about the unfinished hospitals is that they will cost Yukon taxpayers more. They're stumbling forward without a clear plan, making political decisions without good reason, and boondoggles like these are the result."

The audit also found flaws in the Hospital Corporation's contract tendering processes and questioned the decision to secure loans to finance construction from private banks instead of the Yukon government.

"The Yukon Party government has shown once again that it cannot be trusted to manage major capital projects responsibly or get the results that Yukon patients and their families deserve," Hanson added.

The Yukon NDP has consistently said the sustainable delivery of patient-centred healthcare requires a new model of collaborative, team-based care. While adequate healthcare facilities are essential, expensive new buildings alone cannot improve patient care.

Auditor General's Report on the Yukon Hospital Corporation: A Planning Opportunity

WHITEHORSE (February 27, 2013) —Health and Social Services Minister Doug Graham and Yukon Hospital Corporation chief executive officer Jason Bilsky say they accept the report from Auditor General Michael Ferguson about the performance audit on the management of the Yukon Hospital Corporation's capital projects for two community hospitals.

"The report identifies how we can collectively improve our processes and planning," Graham said. "We see implementing these report recommendations as an opportunity to ensure planning is based on assessment, best practices and in consideration of an integrated health and social service delivery model."

"How care and services are delivered, in the area of health and social services, is a continually and rapidly evolving field. We can learn from the experiences and successful innovations being shared by the Council of Health Ministers and other input," Graham added. "I want to look to the future and how we can build and improve on what we have here today."

Bilsky said the report outlines several recommendations that will further enhance the corporation's partnership with the department.

"The Yukon Hospital Corporation will work in partnership with Health and Social Services to address the recommendations. Our facilities are an integral part of the health care delivery model in Yukon and we will make sure we collaborate fully in assessing needs and planning for service delivery," Bilsky said.

By working with the Yukon Hospital Corporation and other stakeholders, the Health and Social Services minister said the department will develop an integrated health facility program and services model. This model will enable the design of health and social programs and services to creatively and effectively meet community-specific needs.

"I want to ensure we have a fully integrated health and social services, territorial-wide community delivery model that is accessible, high quality, cost effective, efficient and sustainable," Graham said. "Combining programs and services is the wave of the future."

"This report, specific to the Dawson City and Watson Lake facilities, provides us with the opportunity to reexamine and integrate community needs with health and social service delivery in those communities. We want to create the vision of a client-centred delivery model so health facilities can design programs to best meet community needs," Graham added.

Extracts from the Auditor General's Report

Editor's Note: The AG's report was in preparation before events occurred to further delay the completion of the projects. March is mentioned here as a completion date. That was revised to May, as has been reported here. Since the financial issues with Dowland Construction have arisen, the Hospital Corporation is no longer certain of that date either.

What we found

The Corporation did not conduct a full assessment of the communities' health care needs in planning and designing the hospitals. It also did not determine the incremental operating costs for the hospitals until construction was well under way. The Corporation cannot demonstrate that the hospitals, as designed, are the most cost-effective option for meeting the communities' health care needs.

Higher operating costs for the two hospitals are expected to significantly increase the overall costs of providing health care in the two communities. Further, the Corporation and the Department face the ongoing challenge of acquiring and retaining staff for both hospitals. In addition, the new Crocus Ridge Residence, like the hospitals, will cost more to operate than the facility it replaced.

In all three projects, most contracts were competitively tendered and most change orders were appropriately justified and managed. The Corporation also regularly monitored the projects, but the hospital projects will be delivered later than expected and will be over budget. Completion of the Watson Lake

Hospital, originally scheduled for spring 2012, is now scheduled for February 2013. Its estimated cost has risen from about $22.2 million (which included a contingency of about $806,000) to around $24.6 million. Completion of the Dawson City Hospital, originally scheduled for fall 2012, is now scheduled for March 2013. Its estimated cost has risen from about $26.5 million (which included a contingency of about $551,000) to about $29.7 million.

The Crocus Ridge Residence also experienced construction delays and cost increases. Originally scheduled for completion in December 2010 at an estimated cost of $17 million (which included a contingency of about $500,000), the facility

Dawsonites Receive Diamond Jubilee Medals at Special Ranger Patrol Gathering

Story & Photos
By Dan Davidson

Twenty members of the Dawson Rangers, along with a couple dozen members of the community, assembled in the newly reopened Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Hall on February 25 for the presentation of several Queen Elizabeth II Diamond Jubilee Medals.

Captain Derek Moss, Deputy Commander, representing Joint Task Force (North) was on hand to review the Rangers, along with honorary Ranger Commissioner Doug Phillips.

Captain Moss presented medals to Sgt. John Mitchell, Corporal Bobby Blanchard, and Corporal Peter Nagano.

Mitchell's citation noted that he is one of the most decorated Rangers in Canada.

"Due to his dedication and successfulness this (is an) outstanding patrol. Every time we get tasked to come here, whether it be for annual training or any other task, we can always count on John to help us out with his organizational skills.

"This medal is given to those in the Canadian Forces and the community across Canada who are being recognized for their efforts over a fairly long span of time," Moss said. "It's not typically for a single event, but in this case it's recognition from the Canadian Forces of John's commitment to excellence and planning - which is certainly something I've noticed from Yellowknife - dedication to the community and dedication to the men and women currently serving behind him, who support his efforts."

Corporal Bobby Blanchard, commander of Charlie Section, joined the Rangers in 1994. Blanchard's section has often been the starting point for new recruits and his unit has served "as the training ground for those who have later moved on to other sections."

Corporal Peter Nagano is the commander of Bravo Section.

Corporal Peter Nagano

He joined the Rangers in 1991. Nagano's section is noted for contributing to the wide-ranging success of the patrol. Nagano himself often breaks trail on Ranger patrols.

In an approved departure from regular protocol, Nagano spoke for a about 15 minutes about his experience as a Ranger, of the importance of being on the land and of the changing technology he has experienced over the last 22 years, from more powerful snow machines to the use of GPS devices. He also related a few short experiences, some quite hair raising, that he has had on patrols over the years.

The final medal presentation

of the day was to Myrna Butterworth, a member of the Dawson Branch of the Royal Canadian Legion.

"She is recognized for her long time volunteer service to the community as well as to the Legion," the citation read.

Butterworth is a mainstay of the local Legion branch and has helped to keep it alive.

Commissioner Doug Phillips presented her medal.

"This is a real pleasure for me to be able to present this to Myrna," Phillips said. "We work together every year on the Commissioner's Tea and various other things. Myrna, thank you so much for your commitment to the community. You are well deserving of this medal."

Blanchard and the Nagano brothers, Simon and Peter, were also acknowledged for their work with the Junior Rangers.

The presentations were followed by a lunch of stew (several varieties) and bannock at the hall.

Great Leaders: Lech Walesa

by Lisa McKenna

He was born on September 29, 1943 in Popowo, Poland. The son of a carpenter, he followed the trades, graduating from vocational school and working as a car mechanic from 1961 to 1965. He then served in the army, promoted to the rank of Corporal.

In 1967 he gained employment as an electrician in the massive Lenin shipyard in Gdansk. He also married Danuta with whom, over the years, he ended up having 8 children.

After a clash between the workers and the government during the shipyard food riots of 1970 he was briefly detained, the first detention in a line of numerous detentions and arrests. By 1976 he was fired from the shipyards due to his activities as Shop Steward and he was forced to pick up temporary or part time jobs in order to care for his growing family.

In 1978 Wałęsa was vital to the formation and organization of non-communist trade unions. He was kept under almost constant surveillance and was frequently detained.

The 80s saw Wałęsa lead the Gdansk shipyard strike which gave rise to general strikes all over Poland. The strikers named Lech as their leader. The authorities were forced to back down and allow the workers the right to strike and to be able to form their own independent union. The Solidarity Free Trade Union was born August 31, 1980.

The Catholic Church showed its support by the receiving of Walesa at the Vatican by Pope John Paul II. It may have helped that the Pope was the Polish Cardinal Karol Józef Wojtyła before he was elevated at the Papal Conclave in October 1978.

After this brief experience with freedom, freedom was lost. In December, 1981, General Jaruzelski imposed martial law, suspended Solidarity, arrested many of its leaders and kept Wałęsa under guard in a remote country house.

Wałęsa was reinstated to his job at the shipyards by November 1982, although Marshall Law did not get lifted till the following July. In 1983 Lech sent his wife, Danuta, to receive his Nobel Peace Prize for fear of not getting back into Poland. The underground rejoiced and spirits were high, the government attacked the validity of the award.

Meanwhile, General Jaruzelski was not faring well. His popularity was waning and the economic conditions worsened. Jaruzelski was forced to negotiate with Wałęsa and other solidarity leaders. Parliamentary non-communist elections were held. Lech Wałęsa was now the head of the Solidarity Labor Party.

Finally, in 1990, Lech Wałęsa became, in a landslide victory, the President of Poland. Wałęsa kept this position until 1995.

He has been awarded Honorary Degrees from several different Universities, including Harvard and the University of Paris. He has also awarded the Medal of Freedom, the Award of Free World, and the European Award of Human Rights. It's amazing how far a carpenter's son can go.

This Book Gives a Misguided Account of the Events of the Klondike Gold Rush

The Klondike Gold Rush

By Sandra Dooling
Weigl Educational Publishers Ltd.
32 pages
$26.95

Weigl Educational Publishers Ltd. has had a really good idea in terms of creating interesting non-fiction books for the grade 5 to 8 crowd. The format is a compact 32 page hardcover comic book style presentation. The illustrations are serviceable, if not up to current genre quality, and their potential for telling a story is strong.

Unfortunately the execution leaves a lot to be desired. This book contains a great many errors. Some (like spelling "Carmacks" as "Carmarks" a couple of times) might be simple typing and proofing errors, but others are just plain sloppy scholarship.

Let's begin with the picture showing the discovery of gold in 1896. It shows Kate (who wasn't there at the time) and George Carmacks panning together on a riverbank, while Skookum Jim and Tagish Charlie cut down a really massive tree (by Yukon standards) in the background. The text reads, "Someone noticed gold in the stream."

Most historians agree that Jim found the gold, but aside from that there's this neat wood-frame cabin in the background with a fenced pasture leading away from it to the left. Sorry, they really weren't homesteading on Bonanza Creek.

As we move on, it appears that the Stampeders trekked over the Chilkoot Pass wearing nothing more than sports coats that they didn't bother to fasten.

At Bennett Lake we find more wooden cabins and no tents, while the boats that head down the river after breakup have no gear and supplies in them, just people.

Both Whitehorse and Dawson appear to have been fully constructed and waiting for the gold seekers to fill their streets; again, there are no tents in sight.

Sam Steel was the Superintendent - not the Commander - of the Northwest Mounted Police, and when he left in 1899 it was to report to Regina, not Montreal, though he was quick to head off to the Boer War after that.

While the Hän people suffered from a great many diseases imported by accident by the new arrivals, Smallpox did not "decimate" the population. There was chicken pox, tuberculosis, several flu epidemics, measles, diphtheria and tonsillitis, and they took their toll, but "decimation" would be too strong a word.

On page 25 we learn that "The government, concerned by the impact of the Gold Rush on the region, began to negotiate treaties with the First Peoples."

This is perhaps the biggest error in the text. We have just passed the 40th anniversary of the Yukon Native delegation's meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau, the meeting that began the slow process of Land Claims, which was concluded here in Dawson in 1998. Why were there ever Land Claims negotiations? Because there never were any treaties, neither here nor in most of British Columbia.

This error is repeated in the small "Brain Teasers" section at the end of the book. This is a nice feature, but not if it has bad information.

Surely there was enough existing photo reference material that the two panels dealing with Robert Service could have placed him in his log cabin - but no, because there aren't any log cabins to be seen in this book at all. Not did the artist seem to realize that most Dawson commercial buildings of that period were single story affairs with false fronts that make them look like they were bigger.

BOOKENDS

by Dan Davidson

Moving on, Dawson City lost its capital status in 1953, not 1950 as stated in this book.

The story ends rather abruptly with a family of tourists visiting a dredge. It's supposed to be Dredge No. 4 from the text, but surely some photo reference could have been used to come up with something like the actual dredge. When the dialogue balloon says it's eight stories high and you can only see four, something is amiss.

Books of this type generally have a short bibliography at the end and, these days, some website references. I can't fault the latter, and two of the books listed are fine. Berton's Klondike is great, though why they didn't list the junior readers versions of his Klondike works is strange. They are illustrated and more age appropriate. Claire Rudolf Murphy's Gold Rush Women is probably a good one for that age level.

The spoiler in the list is Howard Blum's misnamed The Floor of Heaven: A True Tale of the last Frontier and the Yukon Gold Rush. It's misnamed because it's a pulpish adventure novel that plays fast and loose with the actual events and is therefore not a "true tale" at all, however much fun it may be to read.

So what have we here? We have a really good idea rendered fairly useless by bad research. This is part of Weigl's Defining Moments in Canadian History series, which the publisher likes to claim "has it all" by pairing "engaging illustrations with educational text to give readers an inside look into the setting and gain an in-depth understanding of defining events" in our nation's history.

I don't know about the rest of the books in this series, but what this one has is a lot of mistakes.

The Capture of Albert Johnson - Lyrics by Wilf Carter (See page 17)

T'was up in that far North country lived a trapper thought insane.
Two of his redskin neighbours to the police sent a complaint

Mounties,
who are known for their fame,
went north to find the trouble that the trapper was put to blame

he laid another deadly shot, laid another Mountie low.

Still on and on they trailed him;
This trapper he knew his game.
He back tracked on his trailers,
this man they thought insane

Now the chances of his escape for the trapper they were too slim.
They hunted him by day.
They hunted him by night.
This manhunt they must win.

Then just in the evening twilight,
he was climbing up a hill.
This trapper sighted his trailers, aimed another shot to kill.

Down deep in the snow for shelter,
with bullets flying low,
he aimed another deadly shot,
laid another Mountie low

The rest of them heard the shooting and quickly joined the lead, and under a hail of bullets his riddled body lay dead.

Now the greatest of the manhunts are ended
In the history of that Northern land.
But we'll give credit to the Mounties.
They always get their man.

A Friendly Lawsuit will Solve the Question of a Golf Course's Ownership

By Dan Davidson

While the City of Dawson holds title to the land on which the former Top of the World Golf Course was operated, there are still a few steps to be taken in order to free the land title of all debts (encumbrances) which is a major part of the deal negotiated between the former owners of the land and the territorial government, when YTG wrote off the remaining debt of nearly $400,000 and allowed the wishes of the late Bill Hakonson to be carried out.

Before he died, Hakonson had indicated he wanted to give the golf course to the town. This was announced in July 2011, but it took the best part of 8 months to work out the details. YTG accepted that Hakonson's personal guarantee of $55,000 was all the money it was going to see from a loan that had helped to establish the course, and allowed the transfer to take place.

Last summer, beginning in May, the course was operated by the Dawson Golf Association under the name Dawson City Golf Course.

But there were still questions related to the actual land title. Top of the World owed money, in the form of a mortgage, to Hakkon Enterprises. Both companies are owned by the Hakonson family, but there was still a matter of procedure to clear up.

Dawson's city manager, Jeff Renaud, explained that there is a five step process under way that will eliminate that debt and leave the town with clear title to the land. Having Hakkon sue Top of the World over the outstanding mortgage is part two of the legal shuffle that is taking place.

"We transferred title back to Top of the World, temporarily," Renaud explained. "Hakkon will file in the Supreme Court of Yukon against the land for the outstanding mortgage. In payment of the outstanding mortgage, Top of the World will surrender the land title to Hakkon."

If all this sound a little dicey, Renaud added that all the transfer agreements have been signed and are already sitting in the lawyer's offices.

The final step will see the land, now completely free of any debt (encumbrances) passed to Dawson City, which was what Bill Hakonson wanted in the first place.

The details are contained in a slightly more than one page letter on which the five steps are outlined.

"That's basically what all this boils down to," Renaud said. "It was the easiest way to cleanse the title for the city."

The Percy De Wolfe Race is Coming

By Lisa McKenna

March 28 to 30, the 36th annual Percy DeWolfe Memorial Mail Race is to be held.

The race follows Percy's old mail route 210 miles (or 338.1 kilometers) starting from Dawson up to Eagle, where a six-hour rest is mandatory, and then back to Dawson.

It takes approximately 24 hours to complete, plus the six-hour rest in Eagle and another two-hour mandatory rest at 40 Mile - it takes a musher about 30 hours. It is also one of the qualifying races for the Iditarod and the Yukon Quest.

Percy arrived in Dawson with his partner Pete Anderson on June 28, 1898. By this time all the good ground had been staked so they got a fishing net on credit and hit the river, bringing in fresh salmon to feed the masses.

During this time they also constructed the 10 Mile Road House and the Halfway House, both on the Yukon River.

In 1910 they went their separate ways after Percy was awarded the mail contract between Dawson and Eagle, a job he held for 35 years, earning the title Iron Man of the North.

Once, Percy and a passenger broke through the ice with a sled and three horses. The passenger made it to safety and Percy threw 20 bags of mail ashore before leaping to safety.

Unfortunately he was unable to save the horses.

Percy De Wolfe

In 1947, at a balmy -58, a plane was sent to search for DeWolfe for he was then a week late. As the plane flew over Halfway House where Percy was safely cocooned, Percy stepped outside and waved.

When he arrived home, after the temperature had warmed up to -45, he became aware that the plane had been searching for him! Percy was 77 years old at this time.

The race begins at 10 a.m., but this spot is reserved for Percy, the next racer leaves at 10:02 and every two minutes until all the racers have left. There can be five or 15 racers but I would say the average is about a dozen.

YOU can be a part of this race by buying a Percy Letter; his letter will be found in various stores around town, it costs $5 and is sent on the first mailbag. I'm going to send one to my Mom.

Tombstone Territorial Park Management Plan Review Launched

PRESS RELEASE

WHITEHORSE (February 27, 2013) - The Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in and the Government of Yukon are holding a public review of the management plan for Tombstone Territorial Park to ensure that it continues to be responsive to changing conditions that might affect park values and opportunities.

"The park's management plan provides a clear, long-term vision and direction for the management of this spectacular natural landscape," Environment Minister Currie Dixon said. "The Yukon government is committed to maintaining and enhancing the quality of Yukon's natural environment for present and future generations."

The management plan sets out 91 specific actions designed to protect the unique ecological and cultural integrity of the lands within the park while enhancing public appreciation of these resources. A preliminary review by a joint Yukon government/Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in committee invites the public to comment on its six recommendations which include the following:

- Developing the regulations necessary to fully implement the park management plan;

- Building on the effective collaboration between the Yukon government and Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in in implementing the management plan; and

- Making no change to the plan at this time and to schedule the next review for 2017.

- We hope that people with an interest in the park will let us know what they think of how the park management plan has been implemented to date," Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Chief Eddie Taylor said. "This area is an important part of our traditional territory and culture."

Public open house meetings will be held on March 6 in Whitehorse and March 12 in Dawson City. A meeting for Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in citizens will be held in Dawson City on March 13. There is an online survey at www.tombstonepark.ca and the option of submitting written comments directly to the review committee. The deadline for commenting is April 7.

Caribou Hair Tufting

by Alice Thompson

As part of my interest in the Northern Traditional Arts, I signed up for the workshop on Caribou Hair Tufting held at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre on February 17.

The nine participants had a great time making their creations with instructor Faye Chamberlain, who brought a generous amount of caribou and moose hide that she had dyed herself in a variety of bright and earth toned colours.

Faye gave an interesting talk during the workshop on the various techniques involved in Caribou Hair Tufting and on the origins of the craft, so I scheduled some time to talk to her outside of the workshop on this topic and the topic of her own artwork.

"The Ursuline Sisters were Catholic nuns teaching in convents in Montreal in the 1700's and 1800's," Faye told me on the phone.

"They were teaching knitting and embroidery and making do with what they had, would use moose hair when they ran out of embroidery thread.

"The Ursulines used embroidery stitching to tack down the moose or caribou hair to create stem work when creating tufted floral designs and this became incorporated in Caribou Hair Tufting."

Adonika Jayne works on a design with moose and caribou hair.

Julia Farr took a class a few years ago in Mayo with Instructor Nancy Hager, and signed up for Faye's workshop to make a brightly colored floral project.

favoured bright colours, and this was a big influence on caribou tufting.

These artworks done "dans le gout des sauvages" (in the style of the first nations) were wildly popular in France, used extensively as gifts by the Nuns, and sold to raise money for missionary work.

Through the strong Métis trading networks, these new forms of crafts spread throughout Canada and the Northern United States. Caribou Hair Tufting in particular really took off in Northwest Territories, Churchill Manitoba, Fort Simpson and Yellowknife.

I asked Faye how she first got

Encouraged by her, I took some of the information she gave me and did some internet research to find out how the craft evolved. I found many accounts reporting that the Ursuline Sisters showed their young Métis, Huron, and Iroquois students knitting and traditional European embroidery techniques, and it is thought that the making of pompoms for decorating knitted hats created the basis for Caribou Hair Tufting.

Through a gradual incorporation of local materials such as birch bark, moose and caribou hair, bison sinew and leathers combined with European and traditional First Nation craft skills, there gradually evolved new styles in crafting art forms. The Métis culture of Quebec and the West

A Country Blast

By Lisa McKenna

He was born in Hilford, Nova Scotia, Canada, on December 18th, 1904 and he died just short of his 92nd birthday.

Not only was he a country music singer but he also wrote songs, played the guitar, and he YODELED!

Coming from a family of where he was one of nine children, he began taking on odd jobs when he was 8 in Canning, Nova Scotia (which is only a short distance from Wolfville, where the DeWolfe family has roots). It was here that the young man discovered music and began singing (Canning has a Wilf Carter Centre.) His idol was a traveling Swiss performer who went by the name of "The Yodeling Fool". Carter left home at 15.

After 4 years of lumberjacking and singing with Hobos in boxcars he moved to Calgary, Alberta, where he got a job as a cowboy. Cowboys herded cattle and did other ranch chores like fixing fences; they also worked and performed at rodeos. In his spare time he made extra money playing at local dances and for the tourists.

It was here that he perfected his "echo-yodel", also known as the "three-in-one".

In 1930 he had his first radio broadcast and 2 years later he was yodeling his heart out to tourists while working as a trail rider for the Canadian Pacific Railroad.

In 1932 he recorded his first record (a 78) This record became the first Number One hit by a Canadian Country Performer, but in 1935 he was bound for New York City. While in New York he performed on WABC Radio and he had a music program on CBC until 1937. In 1937 he returned to Alberta where he bought a ranch and continued to play for both American and Canadian radio, and live performances.

In 1940 he suffered a serious back injury that left him unable to perform for most of the following decade. In 1949 he sold the ranch and moved to New Jersey only to sell out and move to Orlando, Florida where he started a Motor lodge. It didn't rest well with him so he was only there two years. In 1953 he was on the road touring with his new show "The Family Show and Folks you Know", he also was on the Tommy Hunter Show where he became a frequent guest.

Inducted into the Nashville Songwriters Hall of Fame in 1971, Carter served as Grand Marshall at the 1979 Calgary Stampede, and toured with Hank Snow in 1981. Inducted into both the Canadian Hall of Fame and the Juno Awards Hall of Fame in 1985 made him one active man.

In 1988 he recorded his last album appropriately (he was 84) named "Whatever Happened to All Those Years". His last concert was appropriately named as well. His last concert, in 1991, was called "The Last Round Up". Due a loss in hearing he was forced to step down in 1992. He died in Scottsdale, Arizona in 1995 at the age of 91.

And that, folks, is the story of the Father of Canadian Country Music and Canada's first #1 country star who has inspired (and still does) thousands of young musicians over a span of nearly ten decades, a century. Our thanks go out to the one and only Wilf Carter, who is now teaching the angels how to yodel!

"It ain't gold, but it's close!"

interested in the craft, and she told me she was first introduced to Caribou Hair Tufting in the early 1980's when visiting the Yukon.

"I bought a mail-order kit from a Trading Post in Churchill Manitoba," Faye explained.

"I found the instructions inadequate and developed my own knots and working methods and have been working in this art form ever since, in addition to my interests in beading, fur and leather sewing, and fish gill art."

By the 1990's, Faye had become a well known Caribou Hair Tufting Artist along the upper Yukon River in both the Yukon and Alaska, she takes personal commissions and sells in Yukon galleries and gift stores. Faye has developed framework for applying Caribou Hair Tufting on antlers and other substrates as another of her own innovations.

Faye's current projects involve working with rawhide to do "Parfleche", shaping and painting rawhide to create travelling envelopes and suitcases to carry regalia and personal items. Most First Nations living amongst the buffalo used to do used to do this process, and now Faye uses these same techniques with caribou hides.

Faye likes to work with traditional First Nation techniques and mediums, and borrows from all of North America in her working methods and ideas. As Faye explains:

"I use the traditional techniques of our ancestors, I like to meld ancient motifs and techniques with contemporary style, offering a glimpse into aboriginal cultures. I don't limit myself to traditional designs. Although I use the techniques and skills, I like to put my own touch on it."

Faye has been teaching Caribou Hair Tufting, bead working and fish gill and porcupine quill workshops at the Moosehide gathering, the tombstone interpretive center, the Riverside Art festivals and through Kiac and Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in since the 1990's. As Faye stated:

"I believe traditional arts such as caribou hair tufting keep cultures strong and have remained this way through sharing and teachings passed down through generations.

"I enjoy teaching northern culture to people, and I enjoy seeing people happy to learn a new skills, I enjoy watching people get delight out of learning new skills."

Looking for Signs of Hope in an Environmentally Imperiled World

by Dan Davidson

"This has already been a fantastic experience," Chris Turner told his audience at the Dawson Community Library after his first month in town. "Dawson is an amazing town, but I don't need to tell all of you that."

"This community is so warm and welcoming, and yet will leave you alone to get some work done if you insist. This has been a really, really great balance for me."

Turner provided his audience with a PowerPoint enhanced overview of his career since the 1990s, when he jumped straight into journalism, writing for magazines like Shift and Time, mostly on technological subjects.

He was good at it, but that wasn't what he was most interested in. His particular interest was in climate change and after the success of his first non-fiction book, Planet Simpson: How a Cartoon Masterpiece Documented an Era and Defined a Generation, he began to concentrate on that.

Turner can depress an audience in about ten seconds just talking about the acidification of the oceans and the death of the coral reefs around the world, themes familiar to readers of Gwynne Dyer's Climate Wars (and his lecture here a couple of years back). He can rant a little about coal fired power generation and his recently award nominated essay "Paradigm Shift" (July/August 2011 issue of AlbertaView - available online) was all about moving from the First Industrial Chris Turner will be at Berton House until the end of March.

Revolution's power source to the one needed for the next industrial revolution.

He said he could have sent a career telling horror stories and travelling around the world to document them, and probably have done quite well for himself in so doing.

But then his daughter was born and he basically decided that all that gloom and doom would not be good for her.

He was still a believer in the statement made by Paul Hawken in his commencement address to the University of Portland in 2009: "Basically, civilization needs a new operating system, you are the programmers, and we need it within a few decades."

But he decided to send his time looking for signs of that new system coming into being and, much to his relief, he found quite a few of them in various places around the world.

That led to his book, The Geography of Hope: A Tour of the World We Need and to its follow-up volume, The Leap: How to Survive and Thrive in the Sustainable Economy.

The result is that Turner can stand before an audience and present a talk full of hope and examples of good practices he has found around the world. It's quite uplifting, thought one can easily get annoyed when it becomes clear that our various levels of government are missing this boat.

Indeed, he's finding good signs in Dawson as well, as the three blog postings he has written for the online Mother Nature Network (MNN.com) since arriving here demonstrate. He doesn't like the editors' choice of titles, but "Sustainability tales from the Klondike", "Appropriate technology lessons from the Yukon Quest" and "Yukon outpost brims with chili, social capital" do sort of represent the contents of these essays.

Following the main part of the talk the audience had a number of questions about craft, and a good discussion on aspects of writing both fiction and non-fiction ensued.

Turner is working on two projects while he's here. One is a novel, tentatively titled Canadian Shield, which he describes as a "shadow history of the 20th century that blends elements of fiction and nonfiction."

The other is a non-fiction look at "the Harper government's dismantling of environmental regulations and its attack on scientists and their ability to communicate what they find."

"There's an agenda in plain sight (with the Harper government)," he said, "and it's profoundly anti-science, anti-environmental. Basically, what they are doing is eliminating the ability of the federal government to police itself on matters of resource extraction."

That's a timely topic and one which might provide a community talk all by itself.

Idle No More Takes the Ice Bridge

Story & Photos
by Dan Davidson

A small group of eight or nine people gathered for an Idle No More march from the ice bridge to the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre on Thursday, Feb. 21 around five o'clock.

The Dawson INM events have tended to focus on the question of the Peel Watershed deliberations and the environment in general, plugging into the larger issues related to the environmental impact of the federal omnibus budget bills where the concerns overlap.

The marchers spread out across the ice bridge, but there was very little traffic and what there was had no trouble going around them. They made their way to the cultural centre where they were joined by others for a three hour gathering.

Promoted as an evening to show the "Power of Love from the grassroots", the event included smudging, Hän songs, poems and stories, a talking stick circle, food and drink.

During the march, a good natured counter demonstration was staged by two men in pickup truck carrying a large sign with "Mine the Peel" painted on it. They cruised by the marchers several times during the walk from the ice bridge and up Front Street.

Dawson Firefighters Receive Service and Diamond Jubilee Medals

by Dan Davidson

The Oddfellows Hall ballroom was the scene for another Diamond Jubilee Medal celebration on February 17 as the community gathered to see a number of its firefighters honoured at what will be the last of these ceremonies.

Emcee for the evening was Fire Chief Jim Regimbal, who is also the president of the Association of Yukon Fire Chiefs, an Yukon representative on the Canadian Assoc. of Fire Chiefs, where one of his roles was to chair the CAFC Queen Jubilee Medal Selection Committee.

Among the special guests at this community gathering were MLA Sandy Silver, Mayor Wayne Potoroka, Town Councillor Kyla MacArthur, City Manager Jeff Renaud and School Principal Ann Moore.

Even before that, however, there were a number of strictly firefighter related medals to be presented.

MLA Sandy Silver, Fire Chief Jim Regimbal, Chris Mayes, Barry Hunter, Mike Perry, Paul Derry, Henry Procyk, Gerry Crayford, Torrie Hunter, Mayor Wayne Potoroka.

The Governor General's Fire Services Exemplary Medal was presented to several members. This medal is given out to fire fighters who have completed 20 years of service, ten of which have been served in the performance of duties involving potential risks.

"There were 11 (Diamond Jubilee) medals awarded to members of Yukon's fire service," Regimbal said. "Six of those 11 are going to members of Dawson's fire department, something that we, as a community, can be extremely proud of."

"Let me share with you what the president of the CAFC, Steve Gamble, said: 'To risk your life on behalf of your community, that's a special vocation. To volunteer to risk your life on behalf of your community, that's a special Canadian.'"

"You selflessly dedicate yourselves to your community and through your contributions make a difference in the lives of your peers and fellow citizens."

The 20 year service medals went to Capt. Torrie Hunter and fire fighter Henry Procyk. An additional 10 year bar was presented to Senior Captain Gerry Crayford.

Dawson City's firefighters receiving Diamond Jubilee Medals were: Captains Paul Derry (24 years), Torrie Hunter (21 years), Henry Procyk (27 years) and Chris Mayes (23 years) and firefighters Barry Hunter (25 years) and Mike Perry (10 with Dawson, 18 with Klondike and 12 with EMS).

Following all these awards and congratulatory speeches by both MLA Silver and Mayor Potoroka, came the surprise of the evening, a presentation of a Diamond Jubilee Medal to Mayor Wayne Potoroka. He had known he was receiving one, but didn't know that it had arrived, and had expected to pick it up at the post office.

Joyce Caley was presented with her Queen Elizabeth II Diamond Jubilee Medal at the February 26 town council meeting. Mayor Wayne Potoroka read the following citation:

"The Queen Elizabeth II Diamond Jubilee Medal honours Her Majesty's sixty years serving the commonwealth. Over the past year, Canadians from all walks of life have been recognized for their sense of duty and contributions to community and country. They aren't necessarily high-profile public figures; they are the individuals who, through their labours and commitment, make our communities and country a better place to live."

"What makes this recognition special is that it comes from one's peers and people whose lives they've touched. Nominations for the medals are restricted to 40 words, and in Joyce's case her nomination simply read "Joyce has been a stalwart volunteer in town with groups like the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, the public library and the arts society."

"It sums up her contributions, but does not come close to describing the impact she has had in our town."

"Joyce Caley is a respected Elder, a leader by example, and often one of the first people newcomers meet in town. One Council member, Bill Kendrick, remembers Joyce's hospitable and non-judgemental ways when he first arrived in Dawson City nearly two decades ago. A better welcoming committee I cannot imagine."

"Joyce has been a steady volunteer at the Thrift Store, lives the active, retired life we all aspire to, and helped numerous people and organizations in town through the IODE. In fact, her name appears on behalf of the IODE in an ABC book presented to my first born, Hazel, at a Healthy Families picnic—a thoughtful and appreciated gesture."

"Perhaps the biggest honour is that Joyce received a Golden Jubilee Medal for many of the same reasons. The fact her community still appreciates her efforts enough to recognize her ten years later, says plenty about what we think of her."

"On behalf of the residents of Dawson City and the City of Dawson Council, it is my pleasure to present Joyce Caley with the Queen Elizabeth II Diamond Jubilee Medal."

Caley is also a long standing member of St. Paul's Anglican Church, where she is a member of the Vestry and spent a number of years as the manager of the Thrift Store.

Mammoth Meteors

By Robin Og Bretland

34,000 years ago a meteor several miles up in the atmosphere is thought to have exploded over Beringia. Evidence collected by a team of scientists from Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory of the US showed micro-meteorite damage to mammoth tusks and to the skulls of steppe bison from that period, though it must be said the damage was not associated with their immediate extinction.

In the last issue of the Klondike Sun, I wrote of the fiery meteor that I saw whilst walking home, just days before the tragedy that beset Chelyabinsk in Russia, injuring hundreds of people.

Vladimir Zhirinovskiy the Russian Liberal Party leader fell into denial and was quick to blame the US military, suggesting that it had targeted Chelyabinsk with an experimental weapon. The world's space agencies were eager to offer solutions in dealing with any large near-Earth objects that might share the same trajectory as our planet's.

Skimming in the opposite direction to that of the Russian meteor, 17,000 miles above was 2012 DA14, a meteoroid of large and speculative proportions. No one offered how many soccer fields would fit in but the press thankfully represented it with Hiroshima, making everybody sigh with relief - another close call.

Fortunately for us terrestrials, a group of amateur astronomers from Spain led by a dental surgeon were the ones to first identify DA14 last year. England took the event very personally as a headline read from The Daily Mail, "Asteroid Capable of Destroying London Skims Past".

The concept in averting a cataclysmic collision has inspired extraordinary inventiveness. One option is to paint an asteroid, another is to use lasers, naturally.

Nuclear explosives are out of the question due to an international space non-nuclear proliferation treaty, so Kluane Drilling will not be asked to make the ultimate sacrifice.

Firing photons at such an object for a year or more is thought to work, if only Roscosmos, the Russian Federal Space Agency, had thought of this. They were probably too busy designing costumes to be befitting of their logo, which is uncannily the same as that of the Star Trek's Starfleet Federation. Using a photon cannon the Russian meteorite could have missed the Urals and instead blown-up over Larissa Karlovna's potato field near Zhukovka, in neighboring Kazakhstan. - Robin, on Science

Uffish Thoughts:

The Response From the Minister is Far from the End of the Story

By Dan Davidson

The February 28 announcement by the Minister of Education regarding school calendars across the territory does appear to have injected a modicum of common sense into what was likely to have become an increasingly fractious debate if Yukon Education had insisted in rushing pell-mell down the road it had begun to take in December 2012.

I realize that the department attempted to raise consciousness about its intention to create a common school calendar across the territory last April. I've seen the PowerPoint presentation that was supposed to have run up that flag to see who would salute it. As I have mentioned earlier, the recommendations that came out of that territorial meeting of school councils clearly shows that no one got the point. There was no mention in any of them of school calendars.

December's policy thrust, with a timeline of less than a month to respond (and with part of this time eaten up by the Christmas/New Year Break) came as a surprise to most school councils, according to the Yukon Teachers' Association. And when the announcement of a need to make a decision quickly went out only to school councils, leaving school administrators and staffs out of the conversation completely, this meant that at least one town, Ross River, had no idea what was going on, since it has no council this year.

As I pointed out earlier, when the Robert Service School in Dawson changed its calendar (approximately mid-August to the end of May or very early June), it was for a cluster of economic, social, and climatic reasons that had been discussed here for 14 years previously and, even then, the decision was not made precipitously. It was formally debated and planned for about a year from the time the intention was announced publicly.

It has been very successful here, solving a lot of RSS's fine weather attendance problems and leaving the school where I worked from 1985 to 2008 with a graduation record that ranges between 83% and 90%, depending on how you crunch the numbers and whether you start tracking at Grades 8 or 10, or simply look at each Grade 12 class in isolation.

As Mark Twain noted, statistics can be a problem, depending on how you chose to interpret them.

Yukon Education continues to be reactive to outside observations in its planning. Rather than trying to figure out what will work best for the students in the Yukon it seems determined to do things to please either the Auditor General of Canada or the Fraser Institute.

The latter's annual reports can be dismissed entirely since it is a part of that think tank's mandate to prove that all state run services are bad and only the private sector can do things properly. Don't take my word for it. It's all right there in writing on their website.

The AG's report has some credibility, though there are issues with student tracking that it doesn't seem to understand. The transient nature of our rural student population does not appear to have been taken into account in that report. Nevertheless, we should try to find out just what would improve student results.

It's most unlikely that causing schools like RSS to revert to having school days run well into June would accomplish that goal.

The AG was particularly concerned about First Nation students' results, but you haven't read a lot about that in any of the discussion about common school calendars. It's politically sensitive. Again, RSS has been developing lots of cross cultural programs in cooperation with the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in, and messing with the set up here is likely to make it more difficult for those to be successful.

One thing the recent press release does right is to minimize the changes that will be made this year. Rural schools will still have some options in choosing their calendars. Dawson's will stay with the one its council was already recommending. This is good news for the department since parents here were planning to withdraw their children from the school on a one-day protest action if they had not received the news they wanted to hear. What a public relations disaster that would have been for the government.

What the press release doesn't say is that Yukon Education is determined to implement its new regime at some point and that 2013-14 is the only year for which the announced options will hold true. After that, in spite of Section 113.2.c.i of Partners in Education, where school councils are enjoined to provide the Minister with advice "respecting the establishment of the school year and the school day" all bets are off.

I don't think anyone's much concerned about the department's plans to increase the number of school days in the year, but capping the number of hours in the day is not a popular option if it guarantees June classes in the Land of the Midnight Sun. It is true that many provinces have a greater number of school days than the Yukon, but it is also true that those provinces have "snow days" sometimes 10 or more in a year. Parts of Prince Edward Island recently lost an entire school week due to weather.

That doesn't happen here. Schools only close when there's a problem with the building. In the late 1970s, while principal of the school now called Nelnah Bessie John School in Beaver Creek, I had to close the school several times when the furnaces failed. In all my years since I can't recall more than two other occasions, not even that memorable winter at Del Van Gorder School in Faro when the lights went out all over town for up to an hour several times each week after a squirrel fried the transformer at the Yukon Energy sub-station.

The Minister's statement should not disarm anyone who is concerned about these things. This debate isn't over. It's really just beginning.

Surviving Winter in the North

Persons who reside in or around the Dawson City area have to cope with long, harsh, dark winters. This of course is not restricted solely to Dawson or the Yukon for that matter, but encompasses the various communities strewn about the entire North, comprising of all communities north of the 60th parallel. However; for the sake of this article, I will focus mostly upon the area of Dawson City.

In and around Dawson City, winter commonly begins in mid-October, lasting fully until mid-April, basically about half of the year (occasionally up to eight full months) consists of cold, dark, bleak winter. For persons who reside south of the 60th parallel, this is often difficult to perceive. Many wonder, “How do people there actually survive such long and harsh winters?”. Temperatures which can be colder than minus 50 Celsius, extreme wind chills, 14 to 24 hours of complete darkness—snow which can range from only a few millimetres, to perhaps a full metre (dependent upon where one is located).

It is no wonder that some individuals suffer from a condition often referred to as “Cabin Fever”. This term, refers to those who lock themselves within their own residence, never once venturing outside except to collect firewood or use an out-house (this statement refers to those who live in rural areas and have no indoor plumbing). These individuals begin to seemingly, become somewhat suffering from bouts of “insanity”. They begin to get somewhat anxious, cry often for no apparent reason, some will actually starve to death—in extreme cases.

Is there any possible method by which these can be avoided or at least altered in some way? The answer is quite simply—Yes! The easiest way is for these poor souls to move south, at least for the winter months. A more difficult method of overcoming the effects of “Cabin Fever” is to daily get outside and go for a walk, 20 minutes to an hour, during the daylight hours, even when weather is at the most extreme.

This mental illness can also affect individuals who live right in town, where fellowship with others is not impossible, yet, fellowship with others is not really a cure. It is not uncommon for persons to leave home to go to work or school, while it is yet dark, and returning home it is dark again already. The extreme amount of darkness can affect the mental health of many people. I suggest that during their Lunch break, go outside and walk about for 20 minutes or so. Being out in the frigid air, during daylight hours, will benefit the mind, and vitalize the spirit.

Some of the healthiest people in the area, are those who participate in outdoor activities regardless of the temperatures. Whether that be snow-shoeing, skiing (cross-country and downhill) sledding with a dog team or just having fun on a toboggan. It is more difficult in areas where darkness remains for a full 24 hours a day, but still going outside is most beneficial.

Driving only, is not good enough, go for short walks daily, longer when weather permits such. Going out on trap-lines, snowmobiling, whatever it takes to get one outside during those daylight hours, greatly assists a person's mentality during these long, cold, harsh, extreme winters. It is important to take care of our health all through the year, but to take care of our mental health is of most importance during winter months. Whatever you choose to do, will help you survive winter in the North, but choosing to do nothing at all, can destroy your mental health.

I personally, have two house dogs. They require daily walks, regardless of temperature, wind chills, etc. While I could walk them at any hour of the day, I choose to walk them during the daylight hours locally. I know beyond doubt, that if I only waited and walked my dogs, only during the dark hours, I would feel the effects upon my mind. My first winter here, I started doing just that, walking my dog (only had one dog at that time) only during dark hours, and I noticed my health was becoming poor, my mental health was actually declining. I changed my behaviour, started walking my dog during daylight hours, and before too long, my health was restored, my mentality revived, my wits became sharp again. My personal experience, led me to offer the advise I provide above. You may or may not agree with my opinion, and I respect your choices.

After all... this is just my opinion.

FireSmart Projects Help to Safeguard Yukon Communities

PRESS RELEASE

WHITEHORSE (February 21, 2013) —Twenty-seven FireSmart projects are underway across Yukon to reduce the threat of wildfire in and around communities and neighbourhoods. In 2012/13, the Yukon government is investing $850,000 for projects in 14 communities.

“FireSmart continues to provide an effective way for not-for-profit organizations, community associations and municipal and First Nations governments to access funding and wildland fire management expertise in support of safeguarding our communities,” Community Services Minister Elaine Taylor said.

Over the last 14 years, more than $12 million has been invested in 337 FireSmart projects, helping to reduce the threat of wildfire and providing employment opportunities for Yukoners in the fall and winter.

In Dawson, $31,000 will go to a project managed by the Trondek Hwechin.

FireSmart is a program that is subscribed to nationally, which increases public awareness and the resilience of communities and residents who live with the risk of wildfire. Preparing for the threat of wildfire is a shared responsibility. Home owners, communities and governments have a shared role to play to lessen the potential effects of wildfire.

Rural property owners and residents living along greenbelts are encouraged to use the following FireSmart practices as part of an integrated fire risk reduction program:

- Stack firewood and other combustibles away from your house and buildings.
- Remove lower branches and space out trees on your property while retaining as much of the natural surroundings as possible.
- Remove deadfall, tall grasses and shrubs around your house.
- Keep areas under decks and stairs free of leaves, needles and debris.
- Plant and encourage the growth of fire-resistant vegetation and trees.
- Install fire-resistant roofing and siding as part of any renovations or repairs to your home.

For more information, contact the FireSmart coordinator 867-667-3013 and visit www.community.gov.yk.ca.

COLORS

COLORS

We've done the letters A to Z, the numbers up to 13, and the four basic shapes that help make up our world.

SO, I WANTED TO WRITE A PAGE FOR EVERY COLOR, BUT THEN I REMEMBERED WE DON'T PRINT IN COLOR!

You are really going to have to give them old imagination cells a workout.

First you might wonder what color is. Color is made by different wave lengths entering the eye through light. The eye reacts differently to the different wave lengths, causing it to reflect or give out light.

The big question is: is your red the same color as mine?

Colors can be expressed in other ways then just sight. A color can have a scent, or a feel, or even a shape! So let's see what we can come up with.

The colors of the rainbow can be remembered by one word—ROYGBIV—Red, Orange, Yellow, Green, Blue, Indigo, Violet.

RED... hot, lava, hearts, blood-thick-like-syrup, heavy scent, jalapenos. Red demands attention and gets it.

ORANGE.. round, like the sun on your face, spicy, like cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves, oranges. Orange says, "I might need a little attention over here."

(Did you know there was no color named orange until 1512? Before that it was just called yellow-red)

YELLOW... spiky, sharp, fresh, crisp, brightest color, fried onions. Yellow says, "I would like some attention because I am the brightest color."

GREEN... grass, fresh cut grass, trees, squares, asparagus, lettuce. Green says, "Attention? I have attention everywhere." (Green is kind of conceited.)

BLUE... soft like cotton balls, baby powder, the wind, the rain, cool mint, raspberries. Blue says, "Attention mention. Blue don't need no attention; he's just hanging around."

INDIGO... the ocean, salt, mysteries, eggplants, smooth. Indigo says, "Sorry, my attention drifts."

VIOLET... like thick velvet, smells soft and faint like a violet, the night air, grapes. Violets does need attention it pays attention.

JUST FOR FUN:

See if you can use all the colors of the rainbow to make these butterflies bright and full of color.
P.S. Next issue we go back to the alphabet!

HEY KIDS!
