Mushers Advised to Keep Their Dogs Cool During the Percy

It wasn't standing room only, but the Visitors Information Centre was moderately crowded as forty of so folk turned out to the mushers' meeting the evening before the 2013 running of the Percy DeWolfe Memorial Mail Race. They weren't all mushers, but 14 of them were signed up to run the main race, 8 more than last year; and 10 were signed up for the Percy Junior, an increase of 3.

The main race is a 210-mile (338 km) run, mostly following the Yukon River, to Eagle, Alaska, and back. Running times for the race are between 20 and 30 hours. There's a mandatory 6 hour layover in Eagle and a 2 hour break that must be taken at either Fortymile or Eagle. Last year Gerry Willomitzer took first place in 24 hours and 14 minutes.

It's a timed start from between the Palace Grand Theatre and the Old Post Office on King Street, with teams leaving at three minute intervals, starting at 10 a.m. with the departure of sled No. 1, the spirit of Percy himself. Sled No. 2 gets the honour of carrying a back of memorial mail to Eagle.

The Percy Junior group runs down to Forty Mile, spends the night and then races back to Dawson. It's half the distance of the main race. It's a mass start from a prepared site down on the ice bridge at noon.

Anna Claxton addresses the mushers' meeting. The audience was attentive to the talks about the race, dog care, the rules and the trail.

Both sets of teams generally manage the return trip by late Friday afternoon, and the banquet is held on Saturday.

Atthe mushers' meeting Anna Claxton gave a short talk on Percy DeWolfe and the history of the race. DeWolfe ran the mail back and forth from Dawson to Eagle from 1910 to 1949, when the route was finally cancelled. For his ability to get the mail through in all kinds of weather he was called the Iron Man of the North. In 1935 he received a silver medal from King George in honour of his work.

Veterinarian John Overell spoke about dog care, one of the race's preoccupations. This year there is a concern that it may be a bit warm for the race, and Overell gave advice or how to keep the dogs from overheating and signs to watch out for along the trail.

Dawson race marshall Brent MacDonald spent a few minutes going over some of the rules of the race.

Claxton advised that some of the trail markers might not all be on the same side of the trail due to the fact that it has been marked several times, having been used for the Yukon Quest this year. In addition, while the trail was very clear last weekend the mini-blizzard that blew through the area a few days earlier may have blown some of it in.

The ice bridge was crowded near the starting line for the Percy Junior Race at noon that same day, with ten teams lined up for the mass start, race marshall Brent MacDonald having informed them all that this year there'd actually better be a mass start when the flag dropped or else. MacDonald needn't have worried. The teams were off quickly and there was even a bit of jostling for position right at the beginning.

There were no skijor entries this year.

Junior Percy mushers were Jason Biasetti Nathaniel (Dawson), (Yellowknife), Hamlyn Iacob Heigers (Whitehorse), Marcel Marin (Yellowknife), Nora Vom Endt, Anne-Sophie Strauss, Maren Bradley (Whitehorse), Jonathan Lucas (Whitehorse), Dany lette (Dawson).

The trail was reportedly smooth as far as Fortymile, but the trail makers had trouble remaking the trail after the nightime blizzard early in the week, so the second half was rough, and rougher still near Eagle, where the river froze in the jumble this year.

Main Race winners were Crispin Studer, Michelle Phillips and Hans (I can't belive I forgot my bib!) Gatt.

Junior Percy winners were Maren Bradley, Jonathan Lucas and Marcel Marin.

Uffish Thoughts: A Season to Reflect on the Geology of Snow

The town's bylaw officer dropped by over the weekend a fortnight back to let me know that they 'd be digging up the street on our part of Seventh Avenue starting on that Monday and that I'd need to keep my truck well up in my driveway so it wouldn't end up with large chunks of hardpan snow piled up on its rear bumper.

year when the ploughs and loaders get really serious about scraping most of the winter snow load off our dirt streets and establishing drainage channels so that all our thoroughfares won't simply turn to gumbo and have to be rebuilt as the spring melt moves into its serious phase over the next few weeks.

There was a lot to move this year as evidenced by the fact that the downtown streets were either level with, or higher than, the boardwalks at that point. on the newly exposed

Since the boardwalks are surfaces. usually four to six inches above street level, this is a firm indicator of how much snow got packed down this winter.

It's not only more than usual, but a lot of it came at the same time, after every one of our real cold snaps. so getting it out of the way was almost impossible. The ploughs had a hard time just keeping the streets clear of the fresh stuff, without ever getting Yes, it was that time of down to the hardpan that had formed as early as November this year.

> It would be easier to count the days when there wasn't any snow removal those when there was.

Because it was cold and the streets tended to get slippery, there was a lot of sanding going on as well, with the result that as the chunks of hard pan are piled up along the streets in their great, angular masses, you can easily count the layers marking the different snow events

You can do this all winter on the tops of fences, bird houses and garbage boxes and the effect is still easy to see when you get close even after the snow has hardened and begun to warp under the influence of random breezes and the returning sunshine, but it's really obvious when the top of each fresh snowfall is marked by a thin layer of dirt.

I have counted up to 13 layers on some of the larger blocks that are piled up along Seventh Ave. and Princess Street. These are not small blocks either. They range from 12 to going on than to count 30 centimetres in depth. Indeed, a lot of the ice pans that wash up on the riverbanks around town during breakup aren't a lot bigger than the large ones.

> Downtown the loaders and trucks hauled most of it away, but by the time they process got to my street, it was mostly a matter of widening the street, which has narrowed by about a car's width this winter,

The geology of the snow pack is clearly visible this year. You can count 13 layers of various widths on the big block in the middle.

shoving it to the sides, and letting it melt, trusting that most of it will run to the storm drains and on down to the Yukon River.

The snow goes, leaving most of the dirt behind, to become part of the street. It takes its time and it can linger in shaded spots until early in June, when you wouldn't expect it to.

I wasn't affected much by that Monday's activities, as I had headed off to the city by 9:30 and originally wrote the original version of this essay in my hotel room. I was hoping I wouldn't have to move too much of a wall away from my driveway when I got back home that Tuesday, and I didn't, though I needed to engage four wheel drive to get up over the 6 inch bump between the driveway and the street.

The irony of this season is that in two week's time they had to truck in fresh snow and spread it on King and Front Streets for the running of the annual Percy DeWolfe Mail Race.

Thaw di Gras Proved to be a Very Busy Weekend

Story & Photos by Dan Davidson

A combination of events made last weekend one of the busiest Thaw di Gras weekends in many years.

Things got under way on Friday evening with a Stompin' Tom Tribute and the ever-Festival Adult Lip Sync.

Saturday had both a dog show (at Gerties) and a cat show (at Bombay Peggy's) as well as a variety of indoor events (hat toss, arm wrestling, tricycle race) at the various taverns.

Outside there was snowshoe baseball at the school field, and the beginning of the annual road hockey tournament on Third Avenue outside the Westminster Hotel. Half a dozen snow sculpting teams began working on the snow blocks that had been prepared on Second Avenue. While the morning was chilly, it turned into a fine day for sculpting. Gerties played host to the Kids Lid Sync late in the afternoon and remained open through the weekend.

Across the river there was the Sunnydale Classic Dogsled Race.

This was also the day for the bi-annual Dawson City Fur Show, held at the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Hall, featuring the largest number of furs in some years and the popular Fur Fashion Show. More on this later in the paper.

On the same evening the Oddfellows Hall rang to the musicofKimBeggs,LindaMcRae and MC Hansen, performing as part of their Roots Songwriters International tour.

That night there were popular Dawson City Music fireworks after dark (which is getting a little later every day) and Mother Nature provided a furious Auroral display after midnight, a light show best seen, according to reports, from the west side of the river, down by the golf course.

> Sunday added the 8th Annual Chili Cook-off and St. Patrick's Day celebrations to the mix, along with the One-Dog Pull across the street from the Eldorado Hotel.

> At the Gertie's parking lot there was chainsaw throwing, log throwing, log sawing, the popular Loonie in a Haystack Hunt and a massive egg toss event. The ravens really enjoyed that one and could be seen cleaning up the parking lot after everyone had moved on.

> For music lovers, the evening concluded with another in the annual series of house concerts, this one featuring Dylan Ireland and Melissa Payne, of Express & Company, at Jeff and Dee Hamm's residence.

Are you ready for this one, Peter?

Public Review of Animal Health Legislation Updates

The Government of Yukon is proposing to update the Animal Health Act to give it the means to respond more quickly and effectively to health threats involving wild and domestic animals. The proposed changes would help minimize the economic impacts of disease outbreaks on livestock owners, introduce an appeal process, and expand the scope of the act to cover the full range of animal health risks as well as the protection of food sources.

Percy DeWolfe Memorial Mail Race Off to a Fine Start this year

It was minus 24, with the sun just creeping over the hill and a loader just spreading the last of the fresh snow on King Street when the crowd began to gather for the start of the Percy DeWolfe Memorial Mail Race. The dog trucks were already unloading their canine crews and the sleds were getting ready.

Bib #2. Michelle Phillips, brought her team up to the line beside the Palace Grand and accepted the memorial mail sack from Postmaster Amanda Freeman and Constable Louis Allain.

At 10 a.m. Gaby Sgaga announced that the spirit of the Iron Man was on his way and Phillips' team headed out 3 minutes later.

The remaining 13 teams headed out over the next half hour. Included were Nicholas Mears (Pierceland, Sask.), Gerry Willomitzer (Whitehorse). Marie Royer 9tagish), Christian Eiterer (Whitehorse), Simi Morrison (Carcross), Crispin Studer (Carcross), Dyan Bergen (Yellowknife), Brian Wilmhurst (Dawson), Ed Hopkins (Tagish), Gerry Walker (Pierceland), Jorge Perez, John King (Whitehorse) and Hans Gatt (Whitehorse).

Main Race winners were Crispin Studer, Michelle Phillips and Hans (I forgot my bib?) Gatt. We'll have a full report and photos from the banquet in our next issue.

The Oddfellows Hall featured Roots Songwriters International

Oddfellows The Hall ballroom was a fine venue for the Roots Songwriters International concert March 16, as Kim Beggs, Linda McRae and MC Hansen took to the stage to present an evening of singer/songwriter music and memories to a moderately sized audience.

What was perhaps a bit different about this evening was that the three artists, with their different backgrounds and styles, performed both alone and in combinations of two and three, always complementing each other and creating a unique soundscape.

Each one also talked a bit about their art and explained the origins of some of their songs.

Beggs led off the night with her own material and a moving account of her train trip across Canada, during which she spread her brother's ashes at a number of locations. Amusingly, while she was spreading some of the ashes during a rainy day in Vancouver, a passerby through she was throwing out breadcrumbs and cautioned her that the birds would never get them in that weather.

Linda McRae may be best known for her years with Spirit of the West, and has a Dawson connection in that her daughter, who was then known as Pam Humphries, worked at several of the town's hotels during a five year period. Playing guitar, banjo and accordion during this tour, McRae presented a number of tunes from her recent CD Rough Edges and Ragged Hearts and let the audience know that she was still a force to be reckoned with, even if she had celebrated her sixtieth birthday the day before this appearance.

M(ads) C(hristian) Hansen hails from Denmark but there's not much of that in his voice and his roots blues guitar work was just fine, whether he was accompanying himself or his a grueling touring schedule that sees him doing 120 gigs either solo or with his backing band in the run of a year.

The first part of the evening was a revolving set of solo highlights, sometimes with one or two of the others contributing. After the break it was more of a workshop contributing a couple of songs in rotation.

The audience held them for an encore each, including a rousing chorus of "I've been workin' on the Railroad", "I Heard that Lonesome Whistle Blow" and "Waves".

This tour began on March 8 and took the trio to Haines stage mates. Hansen pursues setting, with each artist Junction, Atlin, Crag Lake Subdivision, Mount Lorne, Robinson Subdivision, Keno City, Mayo, Dawson City, and Whitehorse, before wrapping up with a house concert at Marsh Lake on March 21.

2013 Dawson Fur Show Sees a Big Increase in Participation and Fur Numbers

Story & Photos by Dan Davidson

The biannual Dawson Fur Show was held on March 16 in conjunction with the town's Thaw di Gras spring carnival, a choice which coordinator Debbie Nagano says is likely to continue, as it adds to both events to have them coincide.

It was a great relief to the organizers of the Dawson District Renewable Resources Council that the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Hall was back in service for this event. Roof repairs have had the hall out of service from last summer until just a few weeks ago, but it is a fine venue for this sort of event.

Nagano says there was a good turnout for this year's show, with three of the five categories of furs showing serious increases in numbers from the last show in 2011.

Marten pelts were up from 30 to 92; foxes from 6 to 22; lynx from 6 to 32. Wolverine showed a slight increase from 10 to 16. The number of wolf pelts actually dropped from 6 to 5, but Nagano believes that some of the trappers specializing trapping wolves didn't' make it to the show this year.

"The trapping season was good this year, though it started late," she said while wrapping up her show report nearly two weeks later.

Aside from a record number of furs this year, the show also had trappers register from Teslin, Mayo and Old Crow, whereas past shows have mostly featured trappers from the DDRRC area. Nagano says she thinks that organizers tried harder to promote the event this year and that the effort paid off.

In all, 23 trappers brought in furs for the judging, which featured five categories. The Judges were Alex Van Bibber, Harvey Jessup and Ryan Sealy.

Sable winners were Klaus Schyttrumpf, Sean Huges and Cor Guimond.

Lynx winners were Jonathan Dowdell, Mary Bounenl and Frank Johnstone.

Fox winners were Kyler Mathers, Ben Schoenvillie and Jared Mathers.

Wolverine winners were Jared Mathers, Ben Schoenvillie and Klaus Schyttrumpf.

Wolf winners were Jonathan Dowdell, Frank Johnstone and Harold Frost.

The Junior Trapper Award went to Aron Robertson. Juniors were judged for weasel, squirrel, marten, lynx, fox, coyote, wolf or wolverine.

Robin Burian was named Trapper of the Year. The plaque for Jack Fraser Memorial Trapper Award was designed in the shape of the late pioneer's trap line concession while the trophy features a mounted marten.

The trap-setting contest had nine entries and was won by Darren Kormendy with Ryan Sealy and Klaus Schyttrumpf coming in second and third.

The hall was busy much of the day, with a free stew and bannock available for those who were hungry after 4 p.m., and a games tent for the kids with crafts, colouring and games available.

There was a skinning workshop and demonstration.

In addition to the fur display itself there were displays of apparel crafted from the furs and the evening featured a fur fashion show with forty models on the catwalk (see next page).

Pasloski Tables New Budget

Press Release

WHITEHORSE (March 21, 2013) —Yukon Premier & Finance Minister Darrell Pasloski tabled a $1.2 billion budget today.

"The ten previous budgets tabled by three successive Yukon Party governments have helped make the economy of the territory one of the strongest in Canada and have placed Yukon in an enviable fiscal position," said Pasloski as he delivered the budget speech in the Yukon Legislative Assembly. "This is the fifth Yukon government budget to exceed the $1 billion threshold, more than a doubling of the budget when the Yukon Party government took office in 2002."

The 2013-14 budget has a healthy $72.9 million surplus, which will help government respond to emerging priorities and pressures, meet platform commitments and live within its means.

"We will continue to develop an economy that is less dependent on government spending and that allows the private sector to grow and flourish," added Pasloski. "At the same time, we will continue to deliver on our responsibilities to provide services and infrastructure in ways that prepare us for the future and keep Yukoners working today."

The 2013-14 budget allocates spending toward numerous infrastructure projects, including a new Whitehorse facility to house alcohol and drug services and programs, the replacement of McDonald Lodge in Dawson City, a new campground at Atlin Lake, new seniors' housing facilities in Mayo and Whitehorse, and many improvements to roads, bridges and airfields.

Following a long-standing tradition, Pasloski wore new footwear to table the budget, in this case a pair of mukluks made by well-known Yukon First Nation artist Annie Smith, a citizen of the Kwanlin DŸn First Nation.

"I am proud to wear these mukluks for the tabling of this year's budget," said Pasloski. "They feature beaded floral designs, reminiscent of Annie's many years living on the land, and a dog team, another symbol of Yukon's rich culture. The fur trim is beaver, an animal which represents strength and hard work, which are important qualities for all of

Last summer, Premier Pasloski was proud to present Annie Smith with a Queen Elizabeth the Second Diamond Jubilee Medal. At the start of today's legislative sitting, he delivered a tribute honouring Smith for her many contributions to Yukon and Canada.

The Man from the Creeks goes from Poetry to Prose

The Man from the Creeks

By Robert Kroetsch Vintage Canada 307 pages $16.95

"We were stowaways, my mother and I. We wanted to get to the Klondike. More exactly, we wanted to get rich on gold."

There's so much we don't know from the opening words of Kroetsch's 1998 novel. It won't hurt the story at all, or spoil anything, to tell you that our narrator is named Peek, and while all of the story he's telling us takes place before he hits the age of 17, it's being told to us by a self-confessed geezer who claims to be 114 years old way back on page 305. I think maybe that helps, in a way, since it will stop you from wondering how young Peek ever managed to get that ageold perspective that is so evident through the book.

Of course Peek (supposed to have been named after the top of a mountain, but a victim of bad spelling) lives up to his name by being the observer of everyone's' business along with his own.

Caught out in the act of being stowaways, the pair are saved from simply being thrown off the Delta Queen by the intervention of Benjamin Redd, a cooper whose idea of striking in rich in the Klondike is to transport kegs of whiskey disguised as the proper supplies needed for this trip. He trades several of them in return for having Peek, his mother, and himself set off on an island instead of being forced to walk off the plank.

Peek's mom takes offence to being called "lady" by some members of the crew and this happens.

"'Don't lady me,' my mother said. 'The name is Lou.'

"Just like that. That was the name she gave herself ...

"That's what the poet called her, later, when he wrote his famous poem."

So now you know what this book is about. And if that wasn't enough, the partner that Ben was going to join in Dawson is named Dan McGrew, who we later find out is generally known as "Dangerous" Dan.

Note to would-be authors of historical fiction set in the Klondike: if you're going to make most of it up, why not start with some fictional characters instead of altering the lives of real people?

(If you read my column two weeks ago, you know who I'm talking to.)

Yes, this is the story of THAT Man from the Creeks and how he ended up in a shoot-out with McGrew in the Malamute Saloon, the fabled story that Robert Service fixed up a bit for his famous poem, fudging a few of the details for the sake of rhyme and mystery.

At least, that's how Peek tells it to us in a story that some other reviewers have likened to a head-on collision between The Catcher in the Rye and The Call of the Wild.

Most of the story is driven by the journey. Kroetsch takes us from that island to Skagway, up the Golden Stairs, through the avalanche that killed so many, and on to Lake Bennett, where the trio settle in for a long spell while a cooper (maker of casks and barrels) learns how to build a boat. While they are there Peek experiences an eccentric sexual awakening beneath the skirts of an entrepreneurial lady named Gussie Meadows. who makes her fortune setting up a hardware store originally based on the leavings of Stampeders who gave up while coming over the summit.

Their relationship is so strange that it rates a chapter in Northern Love: An Exploration of Canadian Masculinity, a reference I happened upon while trying to determine if Gussie was totally fictional or not. You can read a lot of it at Google books.ca.

Once in Dawson the trio is broken up somewhat as

BOOKENDS by Dan Davidson

Peek and Ben head off to work on Dan's claim, while Lou stays in town to manage Dan's saloon – yes, THAT saloon. Ben actually does get Gold Fever and even after Peek, who can play piano, ends up being "the rag-time kid" in the poem, staying in town and working for McGrew, Ben stays out at the claim.

Long before any of that we know how this story has to end, but Kroetsch manages to build suspense in spite of how well the poem is embedded in our collective consciousness.

Kroetsch was a Governor General's Award winning (The Studhorse Man) author who actually did spend a bit of time in parts of the North and wrote about it autobiographically in an essay called "Why I went up north and what I found when I got there" which I would like to read sometime. It seems that, like many who have made that journey and sat down to reflect on it later, he came away with a bit of gold.

Express and Company Delighted at this Home Routes Evening Concert

Dylan Ireland and Melissa Payne hail from Peterborough these days, but both grew up outside the urban area in smaller towns. Normally they travel as part of the larger Express and Company group, but for the Home Routes Yukon Tour they were just a duo. This suited them fine, since they have been a couple almost as long as they've been performing together, two of the total two and half years.

Dylan is accomplished on the guitar, and added a kick drum to his instrumentation on this tour. Melissa plays fiddle and guitar. Both are fine vocalists, in either lead or back-up capacity.

"There's five of us normally, and on our record there's 7 or 8 people," Ireland said. He and Payne are a couple as well as a performing duo, and it's much cheaper for the two of them to take to the road as an act.

While his songwriting is the group's focus, he said they wanted to get away from what he called the "barrelful of singer/songwriter" brand names.

He compared the name to Whitehorse, which is the group name used by Luke Doucet and Melissa McClelland.

The pair hit the road for this tour on February 28 and had a full schedule with a number of other gigs in addition to the two-week Yukon tour.

Ireland has a long list of influences that he confesses to, and since the group's first self-titled CD is just on the market, along with Melissa's self-titled solo effort, the two sets for the night were padded out with a few cover tunes showing those influences: the Band, Bruce Springsteen, and an interesting medley that stuck a Supertramp tune into the middle of a traditional bluegrass number.

Ireland's own material has a country/blues flavour, while Payne's solo tunes (live at least) are more on the country side. On their CDs she rocks her country a bit more and the group is more bluegrass, but live acoustic shows often have a different flavour than the studio versions.

There were about 16 people at this edition of the Dawson Home Routes experience and it was a fine evening's entertainment.

Blast from the Past

By Lisa McKenna

Riley was born in Berclair, Mississippi on a cotton plantation Sept 16th, 1925. His first Dad left when he was 4. His Momma and his second Dad could not afford him so he was raised by his Grandma in Kilmicheal, Mississippi, where he grew up singing in the Elk Horn Baptist Church Choir.

Despite this rough start Riley went on to be one of the best American Blues guitarists, singers, and songwriters in America. In fact Rolling Stone magazine rated him third in their Top 100 Guitarists of all time. He is remarked as one of the three kings of blues, the other two being Albert and Freddy King.

Riley developed a unique sound by bending the strings so that they were almost vocal like and using a left-handed vibrato. His style inspired people like Jimi Hendrix, Eric Clapton, Jimmy Page, John Mayor, and Stevie Ray Vaughan.

He is reported to have 15 children and 50(!) grandchildren. He has guest starred on Sesame Street, Married with Children, Sanford and Son, and many, many other shows. His favorite singer was Frank Sinatra because Frank was instrumental in getting the 'black' blues guitarist into the 'white' dominated haunts of Las Vegas in the 1960's.

Riley's awards are too many to mention but it must be noted that he was inducted into the Blues Hall of Fame, the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame He owns the 'keys' to the city of Utica, New York. Time magazine named him as one of the Top 10 Electrical Guitarists, AND...President George W. Bush presented him with the Presidential Medal of Freedom which is the highest civilian award to be given.

Oh, did I mention he was given 15 Grammies, a Grammy Lifetime Achievement award and the Grammy Hall of Fame award.

Last year, at the age of 87, he played over 100 shows! But this is a far cry from his regular 225-300 shows per year. Over a period of 64 years Riley had well over 15,000 performances.

I, personally, had the good fortune of seeing him live at the Commodore in Vancouver. It was a show I will never forget. It started out with an old man in a tuxedo and a mike. He walked unto the stage and said "AND NOW I BRING YOU MR. B. B. KING!!!!" (And, of course, Lucille.)

The ODD Gallery offers a Wide Selection of Videos for Public Approval

If the Easter weekend lineup of videos at the Dawson City International Short Film Festival isn't enough to satisfy your appetite for indie films, the ODD Gallery has just the thing for you.

Under New Management: Video Store is the latest exhibit at the gallery and it's more than a wee bit different that the usual sort of thing found within those four walls.

UNM is the brainchild of Suzanne Carte and Su-Ying Lee, and it is just what the exhibit title suggests it is: a video store. As one of the promotional signs trumpets: "Tons of GREAT Titles to Choose From!"

There are several hundred videos on display on the wall shelves in the gallery, along with a couple of monitors on which you can try some of them out.

You can also take them home and play them there if you wish, and the markers on the shelves indicate that a number of people have already done so.

works procured through an open call for submissions. 'Customers' are asked to pay what they wish, which can be interpreted as cash, a nonmonetary exchange, critique or no remuneration.

"This facet is in place as an experimental form of engagement where artists have the opportunity to receive responses directly from viewers."

The project creators feel that society is "on the cusp of the dematerialization of the video rental business" as more and more of the trade seems to be moving to direct download and television/films on demand.

"The most unfortunate loss is that of the independent operationthatcarriedraretitles, cult favorites, documentaries, entire sections devoted to directors, experimental films and hard to find foreign titles."

Unlike most of the fare available elsewhere, the videos in UNM: Video Store were not produced with blockbuster aspirations. The audience/customer is free to decide for himself or herself if this sort of offering is desired.

Under New Management: Video Store will continue until April 17.

Author's Memoir Recalls the Early Days of Dawson Tourism

By Dan Davidson photos provided by Jim Lotz

Jim Lotz spent quite a bit of time thinking about and visiting the Yukon in the early 1960s, as an employee of what was then the Department of Indian Affairs. At 84 years of age he has finally managed to get his memories of those years into print.

The Gold of the Yukon was published last fall and contains his thoughts about Dawson City, Atlin, and a number of other places in the north as he experienced them while on government fact-finding missions from 1960 to 1965.

Born in Liverpool in 1929, Jim Lotz came to Canada in 1954, after serving in the Royal Air Force and working as a Special Constable in northern Nigeria. Arriving here he upgraded his Manchester University Honours Degree in Geography to a Masters at McGill and then worked for two years as a glacial meteorologist, exploring the icecaps of Northern Ellesmere Island.

He first came to the Yukon in 1960, assigned by the Department of Northern Affairs to examine what was known as the "squatter problem" in Whitehorse.

He recalls it this way.

"They drove the Robert Campbell Bridge across the Yukon River and people started seeing the squatters, which made them a problem. I did a report and sent the report back to the people involved, something you probably couldn't do these days, and they suddenly decided that they'd better work with the squatters to figure out ways of improving their lives rather than just bulldozing them, which had been attempted."

Given recent government edicts related to codes of conduct, a report like that would probably never see the light of day now.

Lotz was called back to the Yukon for a number of projects in 1961, 62, 63, 64 and 65. He's been back from time to time since, most recently in 2002, when he was interviewed for Andrew Connors' film "Shipyards Lament", about the last of the squatters who lived in that area.

"I was interviewed for about an hour and I think I got five seconds on film."

Lotz has a high regard for Pierre Berton and for his mother, Laura, whose memoir about life in Dawson is referenced a fair bit in The Gold of the Yukon. He says he thinks that one of the ideas Pierre was trying to get across was a concept of the North.

"The North is a mysterious place, and Berton was saying that we'd better accept that instead of trying to regulate and rule it, and put our presumptions and ideas on it."

After his initial Yukon visit, Lotz went to work for the Northern Coordination Research Centre ("because I had a boss there who would let me do what I liked") and decided to focus on the Yukon. Later, when he was at the Canadian Research Centre for Anthropology at St. Paul University in Ottawa, a young woman named Julie Cruikshank showed up.

"She wanted to do some research on Indian women and I said, 'You're not going to find out much about them down here.' So we got some money from the Commission on the Status of Women and she went up to the Yukon, and she's just received the Order of Canada, as you probably know. I told her to go up there and learn from the people, and that's what she did. I think she's done a great deal to strengthen the sense of identity among the First Nations people. "The North is a great learning place. There's the Great Outdoors and the Little Indoors. You not only have to come to terms with your physical environment, you have to come to terms with your own sort of being. I think that's being ignored in all this talk about the Northwest Passage and the rich North and all that sort of stuff."

In 1961 he was sent to Dawson City to take the temperature regarding Tom Patterson's proposal to start a summer theatre festival here. Patterson had worked what was considered a miracle in Stratford, Ontario and, inspired by Berton's writing and the NFB production "City of Gold" was convinced the same thing could be done in the Yukon on a smaller scale.

"I was a bit bewildered, you see," said Lotz, "because he just kind of breezed in and they'll grasp at anything that seems to 'solve their problems'. Not necessarily the problems of the people.

"So I said, "We'd better find out what the people in Dawson think about this.' That's when I went up in that winter of 1961. I was treated very, very hospitably. There was no bitterness against me.

"I said 'I'm not here to tell you what to do. I'm just here to make a record of what's happening and get this back to the policy makers and the decision makers in Ottawa.'

"So I went to this meeting and the general feeling was 'Hell, we know it's gonna happen. Let's see what we can do to make the most of it.' One of the things that happened out of this seemed to be a tremendous sense of community in the Yukon, so they decided they were going to do the best for Dawson despite the fact that this was a scheme that had been thought up in Ottawa and had no relationship to reality.

"I remember the tourism guy (in Ottawa) saying that if there were no hotels there then they'd just build them like in the old days. That kind of crap. Wall tents for everyone and put down the sidewalks while the Palace Grand was rebuilt and "Foxy", starring Bert (the Cowardly Lion) Lahr was staged here. It wasn't a success, but it led to decades of successful "Gaslight Follies" shows, which survived until the early decade of the 21st century.

"It was a very open society then, 1960 and on; a time when the territory was moving from the old way of doing things into the modern way of doing things. YCGC was winding down and I met some of the people who had come over the Chilkoot."

Lotz would eventually fall out of favour with the federal department. He feels it's because his approach was to avoid grand schemes imposed from above without any sense of the groundwork and local buy-in needed to make things work.

"My advice was always to go to the people, learn from the people, and when you implement policies and that sort of thing, be aware that you're dealing with human beings, not abstract entities."

After St. Paul's, Lotz taught at St. Francis Xavier University's Coady International Institute in Antigonish for a number of years.

He and his wife, Pat (married since 1959) eventually moved to Halifax and he continued his career as a specialist sustainable community development. Since his time in the Yukon he has written 28 books on a variety of subjects: Arctic history, military history, railway history, community development, three mysteries set in the Dawson, Kluane and in the Mackenzie delta, and a couple of memoirs.

The Best Journey in the World: Adventures in Canada's High Arctic was published in 2006. Canada's Forgotten Arctic Hero came out in 2009. He wrote The Gold of the Yukon while providing home care to his wife during the final years of her decline from Alzheimer's Disease, from 2009 to 2012. Last May he was awarded an Honorary Doctorate of Civil Laws at Saint Mary's University's Spring Convocation.

"I've always wanted to do this book on the Yukon and I kept all my notebooks and photos and stuff like that from way back in the prehistoric, as I refer to it."

Aside from working on more books, Lotz writes a column for the Halifax Chronicle Herald.

The Gold of the Yukon (223 pages, $21.95) is available from Pottersfield Press.

Lead for Gold

By Lizzie Wynn

His dreamlike state became consciousness, in a city called Winnipeg. He spent his days blissfully suckling from his huge mother; dozing and frolicking with his siblings. Satisfying, to be sure, though there was something missing. He felt a longing for a greater purpose and wanted to satisfy more than his instinctive urges for survival. There was something about the humans that drove him to strive for their reassuring tones and interesting expressions. Their attention was like gold to him, his amber nectar. They held a secret to his yearnings.

As he grew from the size of a mouse to the size of a rat, he experimented with looks and noises to create different reactions in the humans, to find what delighted them most. They were easy to please however, so the task was not difficult. He heard the words, Jack Russell, frequently, so presumed that was his name. He began to feel fearless and huge and could never resist chasing a good scent.

He was beginning to expect that his whole life would be lived out there with his family, playing and feeding, when an odd sounding fellow came to his door, this fellow meant business. His name was Seamus and he had come from a faraway place called Ireland, but lived in Canada now. He had a presence that was hard to define. As he studied the pups intensely and picked them up, examining them carefully, a tiny smile appeared at the corner of his mouth. Seamus had waited a long time to find dogs like these and he wasn't about to choose one quickly. He had an ambition. The mother growled menacingly but this only put a gleam in Seamus' eye. He appreciated her animosity.

He soon found himself wrapped in a blanket and shoved into a strange smelling box with a satisfying chewy toy inside. As he was carried about, the smells entering the vents from outside lifted him to a new realm of pleasure, whilst the contrast of the temperature and the noise, left him chilled and nervous. He ached for his familiar world, with the warmth of his family, but also felt thrilled by the change. Changes indeed were ahead as his unsettling journey led to sheer terror. He was lifted into the belly of a metal bird and all the light was extinguished. Deafening noises followed and his stomach lurched.

After an immeasurable, miserable time, he emerged into the blinding light feeling wretched. He was chilled to the bone within moments and feared for his life. Diving under the blanket, he was determined not to come out until he felt brave again. A short time later though after a short ride in a comfy, warm box on wheels, he was picked up by Seamus and carried out with his blanket into a place that felt far more appropriate to his needs.

As the weeks passed by, Mr. Finnegan acquired his name, a collar, more chew toys, a soft bed in a warm wooden house and a deep love for his three new people. Seamus was kind and extremely firm, but his wife and son became his loving playmates. He was in a place called Dawson City and he didn't like the cold of it. It made him shiver in fear, but torn between a warm bed and a beckoning voice, the human always triumphed. With their call came exciting adventures in delicious smelling woods and streets. They dressed him in a smart, stiff jacket that was awful to wear, but it made him feel as if he would not perish whilst out for a stroll. Boots were next as the temperature dropped frightening and the ground turned icy and white and stayed that way.

Feeling that the pleasure he was experiencing, with his humans, could not be equaled or bettered anywhere, he grew into an adult dog feeling deeply contented, yet not he stayed out far longer than knowing what joy still awaited him. He had an enviable gait, the happiest walk in the world, his people said.

It was early morning when he watched, incredulously, as his people left the house one day without him. Feeling desolate, he took solace in his comforting bed, praying they wouldn't leave him for long. The bed was lovely, but laps were so much better. It was a long wait, dark when he heard his people pull into the driveway. Finally. Such a frenzy of delight engulfed him that he couldn't make enough noise or stop jumping high in the air, when all at once a familiar and delicious scent hit his delicate nostrils. It was like the smell of his mother, yet more exciting. He would have been stopped in mid jump if gravity hadn't been around. As he struggled onto his paws again, a box was set on the floor containing that enticing smell. An exhausted looking female, Jack Russell terrier lifted her head and looked back at him curiously She seemed to smile as her head sank back onto her blanket.

Mr. Finnegan and his new friend, Siobhan, got along brilliantly. He introduced her to her new home, showed her the walks and they curled up together to sleep. Life indeed got better, Mr. Finnegan found new feelings he didn't know existed. Mr. Finnegan had found love.

Siobhan One morning, staved home, preferring not to walk out with him. In disbelief, Mr. Finnegan went for the usual romp in the snow and found the scent of a fox. Caught up in the chase, normal and arrived home tired and happy, not knowing the changes that awaited him. He sought out Siobhan, following a strange, but familiar scent that engulfed the whole house. All he could do was stand still and blink when he found Siobhan. She had somehow divided herself into smaller pieces that were wriggling around her limp form. As he realised the truth, a sense of pride overcame him and his little chest swelled. He licked her warm lovely face and surveyed his seven new sons and daughters.

Mr. Finnegan observed his Seamus working on an odd contraption that summer, taking his time with the details, but he didn't see it being used once it seemed to be finished. What he did witness though was his pups thriving, maturing and becoming strong and nimble. Outings were noisy and lively with long chases after squirrels, ravens and anything that moved really. They all felt so good and their tiny muscles hardened on their sleek bodies.

The autumn chill came too soon and the first snow began to fall. More jackets and boots appeared and preparations for outings took forever. The walks seemed to be longer each day however, much to the dogs delight. Seamus lit the fire in his garden workshop and spent long hours out there when he wasn't walking the dogs. Eventually he dragged his offering out into the cold and sat on it. He seemed to think it was enormous fun, sliding it around on the gently sloping driveway. It was long, light and sleek, with space for two humans to sit. Further adjustments were made then Mr. Finnegan was summoned.

His harness was snug, the ropes strong. Urged to walk forward Mr. Finnegan found he could move the sled easily and it felt good indeed to pull. Seamus was utterly delighted and whooped encouragement. Finnegan's heartthudded with excitement. They practiced hard and well.

The next step however was a disaster, with all the terrier family involved. Siobhan could not be heard by the excited pups. All harnessed in together they dragged the sled in every way but forward whilst Seamus cursed them. Mr. Finnegan growled angrily at them and pounced on the loudest. Silence. Siobhan quietly instructed them to follow their father and meekly they obeyed. Poetry in motion; it worked like a dream. Steadily, they worked together, the velocity increased, their forces entwined. Seamus mounted the sled and they careered down the avenue, unstoppable. Seamus yelled out in glee, so proud of his fantastic little dogs and their combined muscle power. Nine lack Russell's hitched to the sled, his crazy dream, at last a reality.

Mr. Finnegan's happiness could not be equalled as he breathed in the freezing air and mustered all his energy. He was bursting with pride, enjoying his new found gold. Mr. Finnegan, the lead dog. Joy, oh joy!

DAWSON CLTY FOOD & SECURE

By Florian Boulais, Dawson City Food Secure Advocacy Group

According to an article from the british paper "The Guardian" it was found that in countries where people had greater access to sugar, there were higher levels of diabetes. Rates of diabetes went up by about 1.1% for every 150 kcal of sugar available for each person each day – about the amount in a can of Coke.

It is not a case of eradicating sugar from the diet, just getting it down to levels that are not toxic, he says. The American Heart Association in 2009 published a statement, of which Lustig was a co-author, saying Americans consumed 22 teaspoons of it a day. That needs to come down to six for women and nine for men

"That's a reduction by two thirds to three quarters. Is that zero? No. But that's a big reduction. That gets us below our toxic threshold. Our livers have a capacity to metabolize some fructose, they just can't metabolize the glut that we've been exposed to by the food industry. And so the goal is to get sugar out of foods that don't need it, like salad dressing, like bread, like barbecue sauce."

The bigger message is that cheap sugar is endangering lives. It has been added to your diet, "kids have access" to it, and it is there in all sorts of foods that don't need it, he says. When high-fat foods were blamed for making us overweight, manufacturers tumbled over each other to produce low-fat products. But to make them palatable, they added sugar, causing much greater problems.

Fruit juice is not so healthy either. All the fibre that allows the natural sugars to be processed without being stored as fat has been removed. Eat the fruit, he says, don't drink the juice.

There is a simple way to do it. "Eat real food."

Dawson City's Uncle Berwyn's Yukon Birch Syrup And Up River Commercial Fishing To Represent The Northern Region In National Artisan Incubator

~ ACE Bakery & Canada's top culinary names announce 20 artisans to participate in June showcase~

(Dawson City, YT) March 25 - Canadian culinary artisans from coast to coast have come out of the kitchen in anticipation of Canada's first Artisan Incubator. With hundreds expressing interest in participating in the culinary showcase, narrowing down the field was a challenge; but today, ACE Bakery, along with a panel of distinguished Tastemakers, revealed the 20 participating artisans. Showing the rest of the country the best of what the Northern Region has to offer will be Uncle Berwyn's Yukon Birch Svrup and Up River Commercial Fishing from Dawson City, YT.

"When we looked at Uncle Berwyn's Yukon Birch Syrup and Up River Commercial Fishing as a companies and tasted their delicious products, it was clear this artisan is driven by a true love of their craft and has all the elements required to excel in today's culinary industry," said Anita Stewart, Canadian culinary activist and chair of the Tastemaker committee for the ACE Bakery Artisan Incubator. "Our hope is that by participating in the Artisan Incubator, both companies will gain national exposure and some business insights that will help them grow as a company and achieve the success they desire."

The Artisan Incubator will be held in Toronto in June, where 20 artisans will be recognized at a showcase, given national exposure and have the opportunity to share in the industry insights ACE Bakery has gained over the last 20 years. ACE hopes to help them achieve success while also drawing attention to the thousands of hard-working artisans who put their heart and soul into everything they make.

"When my husband and I started the journey of creating ACE Bakery 20 years ago, we wereveryluckytohaveamentor who owned his own artisan bakery in New York," explained Linda Haynes, co-founder of ACE Bakery and author of The ACE Bakery Cookbooks. "He believed in what we were trying to do, especially around our community investment, so he went as far as to train some of our bakers, help us find used equipment and he even shared some of his recipes with us. Now it's ACE's turn to pay it forward and help other talented Canadian artisans in a similar way."

During their time in Toronto, Lyndsey Berwyn Larson from Uncle Berwyn's Yukon Birch Syrup and David Curtis and Christine Clarke from Up River Commercial Fishing will attend a seminar covering topics such as branding, marketing and business planning to help them develop their artisan business. This seminar will feature a variety of industry experts including representatives from BMO Financial Group, lead sponsor of the Artisan incubator, who will provide insights into small business financing and management. The artisans will also host public workshops, network amongst themselves and other industry members and have the chance to be one of two artisans selected for further business development.

Dawson Forest Resources Management Plan finalized

Premier Darrell Pasloski and Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Chief Eddie Taylor met on March 20 for the Dawson Forest Resources Management Plan signing ceremony.

WHITEHORSE (March 21, 2013) - The signing ceremony of the Dawson Forest Resources Management Plan by Premier Darrell Pasloski and Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Chief Eddie Taylor yesterday (March 20) marks an important step toward sustainable forest management in the Dawson area and Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Traditional Territory.

"This plan is the result of years of collaborative work between the Yukon government, Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in, the Dawson District Renewable Resources Council and the regional forest industry," Pasloski said. "I want to thank everyone for their participation and hard work in developing this plan. It is another example of diversifying the economy while protecting the environment."

The Dawson Forest Resources Management Plan provides the framework for preservation of the forest land base, sustainable harvest levels and economic opportunities from timber and non-timber forest resources. It also integrates ecological, traditional, heritage and other community values.

"The finalization of this plan comes after many years of work between government and industry representatives and the citizens of Dawson City," Taylor said. "This document delivers the planning framework needed to sustainably manage forests within our traditional territory."

"Extensive consultation during the planning process ensures that this plan has taken into account stakeholder and public opinion," Energy, Mines and Resources Minister Brad Cathers said. "This plan will support sustainable management of our forests and will provide a platform for forest industry development long into the future."

The next steps will include determining the annual allowable cut for the area, detailing a development plan on identified landscape areas, completing a baseline indicators report, and issuing timber tenures.

Visit www.forestry.gov.yk.ca to view the plan.

THIS IS JUST MY OPINION

by Al Side

Asteroids, the Asteriod Belt and the Earth

According to mainstream science, the asteroids within our solar system are simply debris left over from the "formation of our solar system".

I do not know about such things, as I was not present as our solar system was being formed, but similarly, neither was anyone else.

Since I was a boy in grade school, at about the fourth grade, I was taught about the solar system, and the asteroid belt. When I looked at models of our solar system, and diagrams which portrayed the asteroid belt, I was not convinced that the asteroids were in reality, left over debris of the formation of the solar system. Still, I had been convinced that these asteroids were indeed debris of some form or other.

It was about this time that I had read my first comic book and that happened to be a Superman comic. This colourful fantasy had included in its pages, the origin of Superman, and how it happened that his home planet was destroyed. This led me upon a slightly different theory concerning our asteroid belt.

I had observed, according to the diagrams I had viewed, the asteroid belt followed an exact orbit around the sun, similar, if not identical to the orbits of all of the planets in our solar system (which, at that time, included Pluto).

It seemed strange and practically impossible, that the majority of debris which was left over from the formation of our solar system, to settle together in this strip of space, lying between Mars and Jupiter. I had become convinced that perhaps, these asteroids were once a planet, possibly larger in size than mighty Jupiter, but for some reason, had become unstable and suddenly exploded, breaking into the thousands or millions of asteroids which make up the asteroid belt. Some of these chunks would indeed slip into orbits about the Sun which could and possibly have already made contact with our lowly planet.

Still, this theory left me with a worrisome thought, could our own planet become so unstable as to burst apart in pieces? The answer is indeed, yes.

The earth, at its formation and development, had been a specific mass. We impressive creatures, called by the term "humans" could

According to mainstream science, the some day be the very cause of our planet steroids within our solar system are simply becoming a field of asteroids.

Excessive mining, oil drilling, landfills, to name but a few things, places our timid planet ever so slightly, out of balance. This being out of balance, causes the rotation of the earth to wobble

True, the earth has a natural wobble in its rotation, but as it becomes more and more unbalanced, the wobble will increase. If the wobble increases become too great, the earth will quite literally shatter.

Prior to the shattering of the earth, or its breaking apart, earthquakes will increase drastically, weather changes will be extreme, but man will not admit that we are the cause of the demise we would be in. As things become more intense, man will continue to convey his ignorance of the issue.

It will be such, right until the very end, and the great earth blows apart, man too proud to admit fault in the destruction. It is man's lot in life to be one who suffers from greed, and the lusts of this world and all it has to offer. Man will continue to rape and pillage our earth, until nothing remains, including every human on the planet.

Yet, there remains the other potential dangers which could destroy our planet long before man does. A massive asteroid could strike our planet providing us with an extinction level event. A comet, a huge ball of ice could enter our atmosphere, and melting could flood the planet.

There remain millions of possible methods by which our planet could come to its end; there remains only one method to save it. You and I, humans around the world can save our planet. It is not by sending money to this fund or to that fund, this charity or that charity, it is by stopping the greedy, stopping the raping and pillaging of our planet for her natural resources, and only then, might it be possible to rescue all the earth.

Since this is a most unlikely prospect, we all might as well get on our knees and kiss the earth farewell each night, because one day, it will not be here for anyone...including YOU.

But then again... this is just my opinion.

B is for...

B is for Beavers!

Beavers are primarily nocturnal (they are active at night), large (up to 25 kg or 55 lbs), semi-aquatic (they live in the water and on land) rodents! In fact they are the second largest rodent in the world! They have webbed hind feet, for swimming, a large flat broad tail, for sounding alarms on the surface of the water, and although they have bad eyesight they make it up with a keen sense of smell and sharp hearing.

Beavers are herbivores (they only eat plants and are strictly vegetarian) A beaver's favorite food is wood, especially the inner bark of aspens, cottonwoods, willows, alders, birches, and maple and cherry wood. A beaver might eat sedges (these are grasses that grow in wet lands), pond weeds, or even water lilies.

Beavers love to build dams and they will create a small lake and build their lodge in the middle. The lodges have under water access only and as beavers no not hibernate they amass a stock pile of wood under water outside their lodge. Some of the wood sticks through the ice and is covered with snow allowing a spot where the beavers can grab a breathe of fresh air.

Beavers not only build dams but they will also make canals that they use to float supplies closer to their building site.

DID YOU KNOW THAT THE BEAVER IS RELATED TO THE SQUIRREL?

B is for Beets!

Beets are a root crop although the beet greens are delicious. Beets are available year-long.

Beets are an excellent source of iron, they have immune boosting qualities and they also guard against some forms of cancer.

Beets have 0 calories. 0 trans fat, 0 saturated fat and it's got sugar! This makes beets and excellent source of energy for they are high in carbs too. Beets contain a wealth of nutrients, they have sodium, magnesium, calcium, iron, phosphorous, fiber, Vit. A, Vit. C, and niacin. In 1747 Andreas Marggraf, a professor of physics in Berlin, discovered the similarities between the sugar beet and the sugar cane. By 1784 sugar beets were being selectively bred and by 1801 the world's first sugar beet factory arose in Silesia (now a part of Poland, the Czech republic, and Germany). Today over 20% of the worlds sugar comes from the sugar beet, the remainder being processed from sugar cane.

B is for the Baking Soda!

Ancient Egyptians used natural deposits of Natron (a mixture of sodium bicarbonate, sodium carbonate, sodium chloride, and sulfates) that they used as a cleaning agent. When mixed with oil it produced a 'soap', pure or slightly diluted by water it was used as a toothpaste (naturally killing off harmful bacteria and neutralizing acids) and a mouthwash. Baking Soda has also been used to preserve meat or fish, making leather, and bleaching clothes!

Not only that but Baking Soda (or Natron) was used in mummification because of its ability to absorb moisture and kill off the bad bacteria aiding in the painters of the tombs to work preservation of these mummies. It was also mixed with castor oil to provide a smoke-less flame for by, removing the threat of soot.

In 1791 Nicolas Leblanc. A French chemist, produced sodium carbonate, known then as 'soda ash'. By 1846 2 bakers in New York started the worlds first baking soda factory.

Baking soda is now primarily used as a leavening agent in baking, mostly pancakes, cakes, quick breads, soda breads and soda crackers even though its cleaning properties are being rediscovered.

Baking Soda can also be applied, in a paste, to insect bites, bee stings, scalds and burns for relief. You can use it to raise the pH level of your pool, or pond, or soil. It can put out small cooking fires by releasing carbon dioxide. It can even absorb the odors in your fridge or be sprinkled into those 'funky' runners. BUT....the most fun is a baking soda boat!!

JUST FOR FUN:

Make-Your-Own Baking Soda Boat!

You will need:

1 plastic soda bottle

1 thumbtack, or small nail

3 or 4 sheets of toilet paper

6 to 7 spoons of baking soda

1/4 cup vinegar

marbles or rocks

Now you poke a hole in the lid with your tack or nail, you put the baking soda onto the toilet paper, wrap it up, and put it in the bottle. Then you add some rocks or marbles (to hold it down into the water), pour in the vinegar. Screw on the cap immediately, put it in your tub and watch it go!!!

(You might have to adjust the amounts of baking soda, vinegar, and rocks to get it perfect but keep on trying and let me know how it worked for YOU!)

HEY KIDS!

Send ina picture of your Baking Soda Boat you could win a prize!
