Dawson Songwriters launch CD at the Palace Grand

by Dan Davidson

Early last winter, during a stretch when the thermometer dipped into the minus forties, Nathan Tinkham came to town with a portable recording studio, set up at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre, and made about 30 recordings of local Dawson singer/songwriters.

Jazz Yukon applied for and obtained a $10,000 grant for the project, which was also supported by the North Klondike Highway Project and the Klondike Institute of Art and Culture.

During his two week stint he was able to get work by Barnacle Bob Hilliard, Richard Halliday, Connor Matak, Drea Nasager, Ecka Janus, Peter Menzies, the Hän Singers, Josh (JD) McCallen, Noosa Tronic, Whoa Bear (a group), Clive Betts and Nijen Holland.

Tinkham took all of the raw recordings back to his home studio on Gabriola Island and spent part of the winter creating the final master for The Klondike Songwriters Volume One.

The CD was launched as an event in the Live At the Palace Grand season on July 7.

Peter Menzies, the evening's emcee and one of the 14 artists who contributed the 19 tracks to this initial volume, welcomed everyone to the second concert of the 22 events planned at the Palace for the summer as part of a pilot regional economic development plan created by the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in and partnered with the Dawson City Arts Society.

Most of the performers on the CD were able to make it to the launch, which was attended by about 75 people.

Barnacle Bob opened both of the evening's two sets with some piano improvisations, and most of the players performed the tunes that were on the CD, though some chose other work.

"This CD project basically came about just because of a love of music," Menzies said.

"The timing for having this launch in the theatre as part of the summer series, was just good timing, as this series was not a sure thing prior to the winter, and was only firmed up a month or so ago.

"We Knew the CDs would arrive here about July 4 and about the time that we were putting together the whole season, we were short one show on a Sunday, so we made the pitch that the people who are on this CD would have a chance to play the music that Nathan had produced with them.

"This CD has been a real labour of love. For some of us, it was our first time recording. There are industry people who are career musicians on this CD and emerging artists. It's a reflection of some of the culture of the songwriting that's going on in Dawson right now, but really, to be in the Palace Grand Theatre - it's really over the top."

The evening was a great success, and rumour has it that the plans for volume two have already been set in motion.

Downtown Hotel under new ownership

Press release

The Downtown Hotel in Dawson City has changed hands.

Northern Vision Development LP (NVD) and Chief Isaac Inc. announced the formation of the Dawson Downtown Limited Partnership (Dawson Downtown LP) and its acquisition of the hotel.

The Dawson Downtown LP is a 50/50 venture between NVD and Tr'ochek Limited Partnership (part of the Chief Isaac group of companies) set up to acquire the hotel and to allow the parties to explore future investment opportunities in Dawson.

Last summer, NVD announced that the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Trust had become NVD's largest unit holder.

That investment opened the door for NVD, in partnership with Chief Isaac, to explore opportunities in Dawson.

"We are delighted to add a fourth hotel to our portfolio," said Rich Thompson, NVD's CEO.

"Our existing hotel management team will work closely with Chief Isaac in Dawson to ensure that we are able to quickly bring our approach to improving hotels to this asset - our first hospitality property located outside Whitehorse.

"We are delighted to have established a partnership with Chief Isaac and look forward to developing other opportunities in Dawson as they are presented."

Lynn Hutton, the managing director for Chief Isaac Inc., said, "We are excited to have entered into partnership with NVD and look forward to our involvement in making future improvements to the Downtown Hotel which is central to the Dawson hospitality offering.

"We hope that this will lead to future development activities for the Dawson Downtown LP, and we expect our other entities will benefit from these opportunities."

John Robertson, the general manager of the NVD Hotel Division has been in Dawson preparing for the hotel's takeover.

"We have been impressed with the people on the ground and the opportunity represented by this property," said Robertson.

The Downtown Hotel has 35 of its 59 rooms in its main building and 24 in its annex.

The acquisition also involves a vacant piece of land in Dawson for future development.

The Downtown Hotel is famous for its sourtoe cocktail.

Together with the three properties NVD owns in Whitehorse, the company and its partners now offer more than 270 hotel rooms in the Yukon.

"Chief Isaac is committed to the same program that NVD has brought to its other hotel properties - making strategic capital and human resource investments aimed at continually improving the hotel offering," NVD said.

Uffish Thoughts: It was cleaning day at the old CIBC

by Dan Davidson

The cleaning bee at the Old CIBC building on Front Street was advertised to run from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., on July 6, but it didn't really take as long as that. Lots of folks showed up and put in a few hours of volunteer labour, fueled by smokies and hamburgers prepared by the Dawson Firefighters.

A truck and large trailer were on hand to carry loads of junk away as it was shoved out the door. One full load was just metal scrap.

The place has been accumulating garbage since the bank sold it in 1989. Most of the junk was on the ground floor, though there was a period of time when the second floor was used for summer housing. July and August 1989 issues of the Klondike Sun (which everyone seemed to think I should take charge of) show that some literate folks lived there the summer after the paper was launched.

Mattresses, box springs, pillows, a coffee pot and assorted other domestic items speak to people having lived up there until the rear and side stairways were finally removed a few years later, making access difficult, if not impossible.

The level of cheerful participation in this cleaning exercise is a testament to how much satisfaction there is in the town that the building now stands a chance of becoming something other than a wreck. The size of the cleanup crew waxed and waned with the day, and while waiting for the big trailer to return for the next load, but it included a fair mix of Dawson's population: city office folk, business owners, interested citizens, young and old.

The price tag of $170,000 was a bit startling last winter, but this resolution to a problem that has been festering on Front Street since 1989 when the bank moved out and sold it to a private landowner, is most welcome.

Since that time the town has declared the building a Municipal Historic Site. It already has a National Historic Sites and Monuments Board plaque, which was fastened to boulder just south of the bank in 1988. It's a bit the worse for wear, and rumour has it that Parks Canada is looking into fixing it up or replacing it. It would certainly make sense to tie the building more directly to Park's operations at the Robert Service Cabin up on Eighth Avenue.

Given the sad condition it had fallen into, that wouldn't have been nearly as desirable during the last 24 years.

The Bank of Commerce (before the merger with the Imperial Bank of Can. In 1961), arrived in Dawson at the urging of the Dominion Government (as it was often called then) to set up banking in 1898 and the present building came into being in 1901.

As the plaque mounted on the boulder says, "this Renaissance Revival building is one of Canada's finest surviving structures clad in decorative pressed metal." The metal is shaped and painted to look like the stone buildings that the style imitates.

There aren't very many of these buildings left in Canada – and Dawson has two of them, the other one being the Masonic Lodge four blocks up Queen Street. It started out as a Carnegie Library and is in much better shape due to the efforts of the Masons.

The town is still seeking funds to work on the building and bring it back to life. Priorities would be work on the roof, fixing a few holes where the weather gets in, replacing window, and then putting proper shutters on them for the winter. Much of the initial work will simply be about making the place look less like a wreck, but somewhere down the road – it may take a while – there may be some viable business operating out of the this heritage building. A bank would be nice. Are you listening, CIBC?

Dawson City and Watson Lake and sign land development protocols with the Yukon government

Press release

WHITEHORSE (July 11, 2013) —The Town of Watson Lake and the City of Dawson signed land development protocols with the Government of Yukon during a ceremony held in Whitehorse yesterday.

Signatories of the protocols were Community Services Minister Elaine Taylor and Energy, Mines and Resources Minister Brad Cathers, Dawson Mayor Wayne Potoroka and Watson Lake councillor Thomas Slager.

Each protocol is a memorandum of understanding (MOU) with which the municipalities can plan long-term land development. Under the protocol, the municipalities will identify the areas within their boundaries that could be designated for development within their Official Community Plan (OCP) or other area planning studies.

"These land development protocols are an important achievement for Watson Lake, Dawson and the Government of Yukon," Taylor said. "Guided by their community plans, the towns can now take a direct role in determining where and what kind of future development will be required to meet their future needs."

The Yukon government will work cooperatively with the municipalities in identifying and providing available land within their boundaries for potential territorial, municipal and private sector developments. They will also work together on a public process for the release of developed lots, with the Yukon government continuing to manage lot sales until an alternate is jointly agreed upon. Where the Yukon government is the project developer, it will consult with the municipalities on the method of lot pricing under the regulations of the Lands Act.

"Long-term land development planning is an important part of meeting the future needs of our growing communities. We look forward to working in partnership and in collaboration with Watson Lake and Dawson City," Cathers said.

"Last year, after consulting all members of the community, our Watson Lake Economic Revitalization Commission research identified the lack of available lots as a major impediment to economic development," Watson Lake Mayor Richard Durocher said. "So, we are delighted that the commission has worked closely with the Yukon government to develop this MOU that will speed the lot development process by clarifying the responsibilities of each government, and increasing the options for undertaking developments."

"This protocol brings necessary land planning expertise to Dawson City and will help create much needed residential lots in our community," Potoroka said. "This collaborative undertaking builds on our strong territorial-municipal partnership. On behalf of City of Dawson Council, thanks to everyone who played a role in developing this agreement."

The City of Whitehorse signed the first land development protocol with the Yukon government in 2006. Under this protocol, the Ingram and Whistle Bend subdivisions were developed.

YOOPs do their good deeds

Photo submitted by Garry and Sylvie Gammie

By Garry Gammie

Members of the Yukon Order of Pioneers, Lodge #1 (Dawson City) recently purchased a recliner/lift hospital chair for the Health Centre, for patients requiring lengthier treatments at the medical center. This chair allows them to spend their time in a much more comfortable way.

The motion request was originally brought forth by Brother Dave Mierau, who was himself having to spend many hours at the medical center receiving treatments. He mentioned to his fellow Pioneers that no comfortable chairs were available, making his 2- and 3-hour treatments that much more unpleasant.

The Pioneers unanimously supported the motion, and the chair is now on-site at the nursing station, and is available to any patient requiring extended treatments.

In the event the new hospital has its own more comfortable, patient-friendly chairs, the YOOP's chair will make its way to the seniors' lodge, for their use and enjoyment.

Some years ago, the Pioneers donated a Blood Analyzer to the Health center, which greatly reduced the amount of time required to test and diagnose patients through blood work. Most emergency blood samples no longer have to be shipped out to be tested. It is very helpful for diagnosing heart attacks.

The Dawson Lodge of the Pioneers also subsidizes some meals at the seniors' lodge, for those who may need the financial assistance.

Most of these donations, along with many others, are subsidized through their annual Gold Poke draws, held in September. Unfortunately, due to several unforeseen circumstances, this draw will most likely not be held this year, but will hopefully be back bigger and better next year.

The YOOP would like to extend their appreciation to Terry Sweetman and Mid-Arctic Gold, who have been sponsoring this draw for many years, for their tremendous and continuing support!

Moscow biker passes through the Yukon on the way to Argentina

by Dan Davidson

The Yukon River Quest draws quite a few interested visitors to Dawson during the last weekend in June, but Yevgeny Pochaev had to take the prize this year for the visitor who came from the farthest distance.

Riding on his fully loaded highway bicycle, Pochaev hailed from Moscow, though he hadn't ridden all that distance to get here. He has started out from Deadhorse, Alaska, on a trip which will take him from summer in the Yukon to summer at the tip of Argentina, a distance so vast that Google Maps refuses to calculate it, but which various sources (because a lot of people do this trip by pedal and motor cycle) indicate is 15273 km or 9491 miles.

I have met other people making this trip from Prudhoe Bay to almost the Antarctic Ocean, but most of them have chosen to ride the Alaska Highway.

"I'm not looking for the easy way," said Pochaev, who had just finished biking over the Top of the World Highway the day before and was taking a bit of a break before heading on to Whitehorse.

"I like to go cycling in the mountainous areas. It's more spectacular. It's a bit tough, but it's more rewarding."

The former bank employee is between jobs this year and decided to indulge himself, but to do so as cheaply as possible, spending a lot of his nights camping along the route, but checking into a hotel from time to time as a bit of a reward.

"I hope it will take from nine months to one year if I travel fast. I'm not sure that a lot of people will finish that fast. Most guys that I've met before are going to be on the road for one and a half years or two years.

"It's better, I think, to be less than one year. If I was to get to Argentina in June it would be really cold."

He's not sure what the future will hold beyond this trip, but he's disillusioned with the banking business, which he says has more ups and downs than his trip, and will probably find another way of making a living.

Government of Yukon signs landmark education agreement with Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in

Press release

DAWSON CITY (July 11, 2013) - Premier Darrell Pasloski, Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Chief Eddie Taylor and Education Minister Scott Kent are in Dawson City to sign a groundbreaking education agreement that makes them partners in developing school curricula and programs within Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Traditional Territory.

"This agreement between the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in and the Yukon government will support First Nation education initiatives and help improve education outcomes," Pasloski said. "We look forward to working with other First Nations to develop agreements similar to the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in education agreement."

The 17.7 provision of the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Self-Government Agreement states that the Government of Yukon and the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in will negotiate the division and sharing of responsibility for the design, delivery and administration of programs delivered within Traditional Territory, including First Nation student counseling, cross cultural orientation and kindergarten through Grade 12 curricula.

The 17.7 Education Agreement signed today will continue to foster the relationship between the Yukon government and the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in and will provide a greater role for the First Nation in the education of its citizens. It is the first of its kind in Yukon, and can serve as an example of how Yukon's government-to-government relationships make the territory a model for the rest of the country.

"With this Education Agreement we have reached a significant milestone with respect to the implementation of Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Self-Government," Taylor said. "Our people fought very hard for the 17.7 provisions during our land claims negotiations. A separate Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in education system in Dawson was not our first choice. We wanted a single integrated system that reflects both Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in and Yukon government authority as equal partners. This agreement puts us on that road."

The two governments will work in partnership and share responsibility to develop all types of curricula and programs. Initiatives already underway include the accreditation of Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in culture camp, development of curriculum resources relating to residential schools and the Education Outreach Program.

"The signing of this agreement signifies a starting point to provide a culturally inclusive education for Yukon students that sets an example for First Nations and governments across Canada," Kent said. "By including Yukon First Nations culture, language and history in educational curricula we enrich the learning experience of all Yukon students."

With advanced nursing degrees and extra training and experience, nurse practitioners are helping Canadians get more access to quality health care. In community clinics, health-care centres, doctors' offices, nursing homes and emergency departments, nurse practitioners diagnose and manage illnesses like diabetes, order and interpret tests, write prescriptions and a whole lot more.

Go to npnow.ca and tell your government that you want more health-care options, that you want more nurse practitioners in your area.

Focus group discusses employment & disability issues

by Samantha Elmsley

On Wednesday, July 10, the Yukon Disability Employment Strategy (YDES) and affiliated groups hosted a focus group at Yukon College, aimed at getting a sense of employment opportunities available to people with a disability in Dawson City. Marjorie Logue was hosting the discussion, opening the evening with some background information.

Background

"The Yukon Labor Market Development Initiative [looked at]... how the Yukon was bringing people into the labor market, and who was being brought in. And one of the things that became obvious was that there was a shortage of representation of people with disabilities within the workforce," says Marjorie.

In addition, it was found that "people [who were already employed] were not self-disclosing as having a disability," says Marjorie.

The YDES was formed in response to this initiative. Further research done under YDES revealed that often, employers were not comfortable with talking about issues around disability, and did not know how to accommodate those employees. People with a disability were reporting that in addition to feeling uncomfortable disclosing, they were having trouble finding appropriate work.

Focus group response

The intention behind the focus group was to "get a feel for where the baseline is [within] Dawson" when it comes to employing people with a disability, says Marjorie. Participants answered a series of questions aimed at judging the level of support in the community for those with a disability. A similar exercise was also carried out earlier that day at the Chamber of Commerce, addressing the employer side of the issue.

When asked how comfortable

they were informing employers that they had a disability, participant responses were largely practical. The general sense was that there was no point in not sharing that one has a disability, when "the fact of the matter is, I do have a disability" as one participant put it. "It's better for me and the employers" to self-identify, they said.

Though most felt at ease when looking for help in Dawson, participants identified a lack of resources in the community when asked if they were comfortable seeking assistance. "Seeking is one thing. Finding is another," asserted one respondent. Lack of infrastructure and an unwillingness to impose on other people's time were both seen as barriers to getting help. The built environment of Dawson was also seen as a barrier: high sidewalks and inconsistent access to stores were both considered a problem.

"How do you feel about the services available for employees with a disability, and what services do you feel are actually needed in Dawson?" Marjorie asked. A variety of ideas were generated in response to this question: one participant suggested a day program, a space for young people with disabilities to come together for support while they try out different avenues of work. An advocate for people with a disability, with knowledge of the services, funding and equipment available to keep workers on the job, was also a popular suggestion.

Strategies for improvement

In closing, Marjorie took the group on a tour of a new government website, wheredisabilityworks.ca. The new site is a portal for all kinds of aid, from funding for further education to on-the-job support. Users can also email a worker from the Yukon Council on Disability (YCOD) directly from the site, who will match their needs with the appropriate support.

Specific to Dawson is the new YCOD office in the Chief Issac Inc. building. Karolina Rietzler is a point of reference for people who self-identify as having a disability in Dawson, who need assistance with any employment-related issues.

For more information, visit wheredisabilityworks.ca, or stop by the YCOD office.

New partnership will ease staff housing shortage

Press release

WHITEHORSE (July 9, 2013)—The Yukon Housing Corporation and the Dawson Downtown Limited Partnership, a partnership between the Chief Isaac group of companies and Northern Vision Development LP, are coming together to provide Yukon government staff housing in Dawson City.

The partnership is in response to an Expression of Interest issued earlier this year.

The partnership will lead to 10 one-bedroom staff units in the Downtown Hotel, which will help address the staff housing wait list in the community. The units will be ready for occupancy by January 1, 2014.

"The government is always looking at innovative ways to address housing needs," Minister responsible for the Yukon Housing Corporation Scott Kent said. "I am very pleased that, in this instance, a private-sector solution could be identified and we could come to an agreement with Dawson Downtown Limited to provide staff housing quarters."

The Yukon Housing Corporation owns and manages staff housing accommodations for the Yukon government in the rural communities. The staff housing program helps government to recruit and retain workers in rural communities.

"This is a new and exciting direction for our firm," Northern Vision Development CEO Rich Thompson said, "Our recent acquisition of the Downtown Hotel provides us with the opportunity to diversify our hotel operations in Dawson through this initiative".

"Chief Isaac looks forward to handling the property development and management of this project, and this form of temporary staff housing is an area where we believe we can offer value-added solutions in partnership with Northern Vision," Managing Director of Chief Isaac Incorporated Lynn Hutton said.

The Queen of Rockabilly filled the Palace Grand

by Dan Davidson

The line-up went down the block for the Wanda Jackson show at the Palace Grand Theatre on Thursday night. The place was sold out and even the booths on the third floor were full for this kick-start event. The Dawson City Music Festival began holding these pre-festival concerts a few years ago, and they just seem to get more and more popular as time goes on.

Local group Drea and the Naysayers opened for the Queen of Rockabilly with an energetic five-song set that had the audience applauding enthusiastically.

The 75 year old Jackson hit the stage after that and didn't stop for the next 90 minutes, running through a set of material that included her country roots, moved to rockabilly tunes and continued on through rock and roll, gospel and blues.

She was backed by the Trilliums, a group she has worked with before, with the assistance of Derek Downham of the Beauties, filling in for an absent Daniel Romano.

While a number of the songs were cover versions, there was a fair amount of material that she had written herself back in the early days of rock, when there was very little that had been written from the female viewpoint.

While the bulk of Jackson's career after about 1965 can be found on the country music scene where she began as a teenager, she is also touted as the first woman to sing rockabilly, encouraged to do so by Elvis at the time when they were dating. She is a member of the Rockabilly Hall of Fame and the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame.

When the rockabilly revival began in the early 1980s Jackson, who was doing mostly gospel music by then, began to tour extensively in Europe, and returned to recording rock music.

In recent years she has had successes with the 2009 album The Party Ain't Over, produced by Jack White, and again in 2012 with Unfinished Business, produced by Justin Townes Earle.

Jackson's closing numbers had a segment of the audience up and dancing between the chairs and the stage and those who weren't up were clapping along in time.

As Mayor Wayne Potoroka said when he closed the show, it was quite an evening.

Historic standards database project underway

Luke Hunter will be working out of the Dawson City Museum to put a database of historic buildings together for the Heritage Advisory Committee.

by Samantha Elmsley

Dawson City builders, rejoice: the Dawson City Museum and the Heritage Advisory Committee are coming together this summer to build a database of photos that will help builders fulfill the historical building standards.

Luke Hunter, a Dawson resident studying history at the University College London, will be working out of the Dawson City Museum to put the database together. He's hoping to have the database ready for use by mid-September.

"Currently, if someone wants to build in downtown Dawson, they have to find historical precedent for it," said Luke. "The feeling, I suppose, is that that's a bit difficult to do. A lot of individuals find the requirements quite demanding and difficult to satisfy... The database will function almost as an extra-large styleguide."

Anyone wishing to build within the Dawson City Historic Control District, which runs from Crocus Bluff to the slide, must find historical precedent—and providing a photo is often the most helpful means of establishing that proof.

The period of commemoration for Dawson runs from 1898 to 1910, says Trina, Chair of HAC. Builders must then have it approved by the Heritage Advisory Committee prior to hammering the first nail. Although the museum has been in the process of digitizing their photos over the past five years, photos that could be useful to builders are not currently separate from the entire collection. This can make research a long and discouraging process.

"The photographs have been available to the public," said Molly MacDonald, Head Archivist at the Dawson City Museum, "it's just that they're mixed in with photographs of sternwheelers and whatnot."

In addition to isolating photos most useful to builders, the database will also pinpoint the details of historical construction, cropping photos in order to more clearly show things like side panels and gingerbread work.

"There is a sense that people feel the guidelines are quite stringent, and that they are quite limited," said Luke. "So part of this is meant to show what a wide variety of styles and choices there are that can still satisfy the historical guidelines of the town."

At this time, the project will not be online, but it will be widely available throughout the city: the Museum and Heritage Advisory Council will have a copy, with the intention of having distributed at other public institutions for wider use. Eventually, Molly hopes to see the project online.

In closing, Molly emphasized her excitement at the Museum's chance to develop an historical project that is so relevant to Dawsonites today. And with Luke being a local resident, the project is truly rooted in its service to the community. "It's really nice to have someone who knows a bit about the context of the project, why this is important—some of the challenges it represents, and some of the benefits," says Molly.

Funding for the project is coming largely from the town, which is contributing $10 000. Canadian Library Association is contributing another $4000.

What Yann Martel hopes Stephen Harper has read

101 Letters to a Prime Minister: The Complete Letters to Stephen Harper

by Yann Martel
Vintage Canada
448 pages
$24.95

It might seem a little pretentious, to strike up a one-sided correspondence with the Prime Minister of Canada and spend a couple of years sending him a book a week, complete with commentary and the not terribly veiled suggestion that reading these books might help to influence the way he runs the country.

That is what Yann Martel did, back in 2007, shortly after Harper formed his first minority government. He ended the exercise in 2009.

One can forgive Martel a bit of presumption. He was just coming off having been lauded universally for his Life of Pi, which had won him the Man-Booker Prize. £50,000 buys one a lot of presumption and a lot of people were worried (justifiably as it turns out) about what kind of Prime Minister Harper might turn out to be if he ever managed to win a majority government.

So it began, with these words: "I know you're very busy, Mr. Harper. We're all busy. But every person has a space next to where they sleep, whether a patch of pavement or a fine bedside table. In that space, at night, a book can glow. And in those moments of docile wakefulness, when we begin to let go of the day, then is the perfect time to pick up a book and be someone else, somewhere else, for a few minutes, a few pages, before we fall asleep."

Martel picked books that ranged all over the literary map, beginning with Tolstoy's The Death of Ivan Ilych, carrying with Orwell's Animal Farm, Christie's The Murder of Roger Ackroyd and Elizabeth Smart's By Grand Central Station I Sat

Down and Wept.

He provided a rationale for reading the book, some commentary on its importance as a piece of literature, and a biographical essay about each of the writers. This averages seven to ten pages for each of the books.

These are interesting commentaries, and if I were still in the classroom, I would recommend them as model essays for the students that I required to write about four of these independent reviews during each semester that I had them for English in grades 9 through 12. They do not slavishly retell the books (plays, poetry, mysteries, classics, essays, graphic novels, biographies, autobiographies and children's books) but reflect on them and suggest what is revealing or worthwhile about them.

I must admit that I haven't read this entire book yet. I finished the first 20 entries in sequence and then hopped around in the book, reading some 15 more, especially ones that are about books I have read, which seems to account for about one-quarter of the list. In two or three cases, I've been moved to look up some of the older items, which are often available online through Project Gutenberg or some other public domain site.

This book is a good browser, and each chapter is good for 20 minutes or so of thoughtful reading. I picked it up as an e-book and it resides on a couple of my hand-held devices. It's available in several e-book formats as well as in actual paper. I will finish it eventually, but it may take me several more months, and I feel quite comfortable recommending it based on what I have read so far.

The Prime Minister never did respond, though a succession of assistants sent Martel what were essentially form letters on seven occasions, as well as two similar letters to friends of his who filled in with suggestions in a few instances when Martel was unable to meet his commitment.

I think I prefer the present title. It sounds a bit less presumptuous somehow.

Tire smoke blackened the sky at the Quigley Landfill

By Dan Davidson

About 40 tires went up in a great deal of smoke at the Quigley Landfill on July 11, prompting a quick response from both the Dawson and Klondike Valley Fire Departments as well as the RCMP. Wildland Fire personnel were also on standby, ready to call in a tanker if it had been needed. The landfill is right at the southern border of the municipal boundary, more than halfway to the airport. Dawson Fire Chief Kim Regimbal says the cause of the fire is unknown for sure but it is suspected that some burning material floated over from the burn barrel at the site. Regimbal says it takes quite intense heat to ignite tires, but once they have caught they burn enthusiastically. The oily black pillar of smoke was visible from many kilometres away. "Thank goodness for the breathing apparatus we have," Regimbal said. There's no water stored at the site, which is why Regimbal called the Klondike Valley group to bring their water tanker just in case. Gammie Trucking was making some water deliveries at the time, spotted the fire trucks heading for the landfill, and followed them there. Regimbal is still on light duties following an operation a few months ago, and so he stayed at the fire hall in Dawson while senior captain Gerry Crayford took control of the situation. Since water doesn't work well on burning tires in the early stages of a fire, the firefighters used foam to take down the fire and get in under control, before using water to cool it down. "The two thermal imaging cameras we have on the truck came in handy," Regimbal said, "because he (Crayford) was able to determine when the tires had cooled down." The operation used the contents of the Dawson tanker and half of the load from Gammie. There were about 18 firefighters who turned out for this operation, which took around two hours to deal with. The call came from the landfill operator at about 11:40 and the trucks were heading back to the station at about 1:40.

Claim 33: A happy destination

by Josée Bonhomme

The future startled Sylvia Burkhard in 2009, who had a strong focus on preserving the past. Sometimes in life we find ourselves at important turning points, not by our own making. Jerry Bryde made his last ride into town on May 1 that year. This left a deep uncertainty with what would happen next at Claim 33. His historic artifact collection would never be at risk though, because caring friends understood his legacy.

Sylvia was offered the museum and business when there was little interest shown by Jerry's family in a distant and exotic tourist venture. The Burkhard's, by contrast, have been here from the turn of the century, a pioneering and heritage-savvy family. Their own homesteading collection, conserved by Sylvia, needed a home. Many items were already exposed at

on. "This collection is made up of loans, stored pieces, found treasures and donations. It's that much more special because of Jerry's eye for good artifacts." The expanded collection is impressive, well laid out, with special attention to detail and Jerry's memory.

Sylvia explains, "Jerry and I used to brag and fight over our collectibles, over the years, there was a lot of competition between us. Now, when people have nowhere to keep their antiques and artifacts, we store them here for public enjoyment. If they need their collectibles back, we give them back. Every object is inventoried as in a museum, with the promise to return items to owners or their families, but few ever request it."

Sylvia bemoans the loss of artifacts since the closure of the dredges (1966). "A lot of it, YCGC stuff, was hauled away as scrap metal and shipped overna, he's starting now with only one trip a year. What was striking was the true fun these 12 people were having, aged 30-70 perhaps, when watching up to 4-6 flakes appear from the dredges in their pans. They were filming, taking photos, documentarians for the stories back home. Jack's website is www.letsplay.ca, for a glimpse of the future.

Sylvia adds: "Gold finding has universal appeal for sure. It's really an international instinct with no boundaries." Because they are dealing with intent travelers from so far away, they stay open later or do whatever they can to accommodate everyone.

Burkhard says they are careful not to mislead people.

"We don't use the s-word here (salt, seed), however we do 'enhance' our pans with gold from local miners. We've made Jerry's tradition available to everyone, and it's going well. Now book shops offer variety."

Claim 33 welcomes local and exotic tourists, seven days a week, open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"You can bring the kids, it's a great family activity. It's educational. People can rent pans to go try their luck at the Klondike Visitors' Association claim (No. 6 Above Discovery) and stay all day."

"A good mix is to take part in the tours offered at Dredge No. 4, carried out by excellent story tellers and interpreters. They've done their homework," Sylvia says. There are two private tour companies this summer, Gold Bottom Tours and Husky Bus, who offer guided tours. "We were really worried when it wasn't clear what was going to happen with the Dredge, it's an important reason why tourists come up Bonanza Road. We're happy that situation got resolved in time, it was critical for our small business. come, there is lots of room at the troughs. It's an easy skill to learn, "people are pretty good at getting their gold", Burkhard says with a hearty laugh.

People can call ahead to reserve for groups. Claim 33 can be reached at 993-6626, their home page is found here: <http://claim33.vpweb.ca/default.html>. They are located 10 km south on Bonanza Creek Road, access is via Highway 2 to Whitehorse, 2.5 km east of downtown Dawson.

Taking the time to re-discover Claim 33 with its revived attractions is fun. Its ancient steam machinery, boilers, pumps, valves, gauges, old trucks and cars, the Keystone drill, hold the class and genius of a day gone by.

The sense of wonder at it all made me think of our friend Lisa McKenna, how she would have shared gleefully in the happiness of people having a good day, getting their hands

Sylvia Burkhard thinks such old vintage vehicles are best seen than hidden in fields, long forgotten.

Lots of action when Ginny (front) and Robin (back) coach a group of eager panners all the way from China. Sylvia looks on with fun and shared excitement.

Claim 33. Sylvia is now joined by her sister Ginny (Burkhard) Holl, who says decidedly, "when I saw this place, I knew this was what I wanted to do for the rest of my life."

This is generation No. 3 for the Burkhard's in the Yukon, the Dawson area in particular. Carrying on with Jerry Bryde's spirit and vision, his preserving old mining machinery and a way of life, is a shared vocation for the two sisters. Robyn Gillespie who is a mainstay of Claim 33. She worked with Jerry and is also from a mining family.

"People were already sniffing, looking at buying the Claim when Jerry passed away. I had visions of it ALL disappearing, and I said: You know what? No." And that's how Sylvia offered to buy Claim 33 from the estate in late 2009.

"There's little point in keeping antiques in back yards, sheds and fields," Sylvia goes seas. It's a shame really, short-sighted I think. Hundreds of truck loads were taken out."

The experience for tourists from afar makes preserving the objects at Claim 33 worthwhile. The fun that visitors take with them, panning for guaranteed gold, is amazing. We tried to understand what it is that makes people so giddy about gold, but we honestly don't know.

Jack Zhou, an emerging tour operator for Chinese travelers on their way from Edmonton to Tuktoyaktuk, includes one highlight stop at Claim 33. He admits he doesn't know why it's so magic. "We have lots of fun, and it's a good unique experience along an interesting trip. It's really special in the world to be able to pan real gold. Everybody loves this place, so easy to get to and yet so different from most people's reality."

Jack says he hopes to bring many more tourists from China, that the initial purchase price is paid for, the operation almost pays for itself," Burkhard says.

She still needs two "day jobs" to pay all the expenses and the development costs. The buildings need work, new washrooms will be installed, an authentic 1899 laundry operation is planned for next year.

Burkhard briefly describes the business, where the main markets for Claim 33 are "Canadians, lots more since 2009, maybe a third, travelling at home. Families, all ages, from all over. Then Germans, Swiss, quite a few Czechs. Americans are still important, often on bus tours, same for people from New Zealand and Australia. The Japanese and Chinese, not a huge proportion now, although increasing, absolutely love the gold. Sometimes we do 100 pans a day, on a busy day - and maybe 2,500 pans in an average summer now. The gift and ness."

Walk-in guests pay $15 per made-up, guaranteed pan of gravel, "enhanced", as Sylvia calls it. A baggie to take home is $20. Tours and groups are wel-

wet. This story is dedicated to Lisa, who along with Jerry, will always be part of the truly strong and independent Yukon characters of our day.

Berton House provides a nice balance, says departing writer

Story by Dan Davidson

"Dawson was wonderful," said Melanie Siebert, a few days before ending her three-month stint at Berton House. "I was so happy to be here for the snow, just getting out in the snow and the sunshine –getting that shot of energy."

"Dawson's such a friendly community (and it) strikes a really nice balance; being welcoming, but also letting you just kind of burrow down and do your work if that's what you've got to do. It's perfect."

Siebert lives in Victoria and teaches writing when she's not signing on to do river trip guiding on northern rivers in the summers. She grew up in small towns in Saskatchewan and Alberta and says that Dawson as a small town was a pretty comfortable setting for her.

"The boreal forest is one of my highlights of being here in Dawson," said Siebert, who did most of her early canoeing in Alberta.

"I grew up on a farm in northern Alberta so the boreal forest feels like home: its smells, its plants, its birds. If anything made me feel at home it was that, I think."

She found Dawson busy for its size.

"As a community it has a lot going on, and because it's a small community you almost feel like you want to get to everything, whereas in the city, there's so much more going on that most of it's just sort of off your radar. Here, everything's on your radar. It's a very lively place and you run into the regular crowd of people, which is exciting."

It makes for a good audience at a public reading too. By the time Siebert had her evening at the public library, she had an established audience of people she already knew coming out to hear her read from her work.

It happens that her poetry book, Deepwater Vee, is very focussed on northern scenes and rivers, being part poetic journal, part meditation on the travels of Alexander Mackenzie and partly the experiences of a nameless busker inspired by her brother.

In Dawson she became fascinated by the Yukon River, was thrilled to be able to see the annual break-up and spent part of each day in a sort of communion with the river, an experience which expressed itself in a batch of short poems that she had not come here intending to write. They may become part of a book.

"I've walked a ton on the trails here," she said, "and I've enjoyed the fox running across my yard."

One of the limiting factors for writers in residence here is the lack of mobility outside of town. There's no rental agency in Dawson and most writers don't have a vehicle with them. They rely on newly acquired friends to get them to places outside the town core: up Bonanza Road, out on the Dempster Highway.

Siebert was able to use those kinds of connections to send some time at Tombstone and even managed to go dog mushing with Brian Elmhurst before the snow disappeared.

Siebert has had an interesting mix of careers, falling into the business of wilderness tour guiding almost by accident while working as an ambulance attendant in Saskatchewan. The writing came later when she decided to take some university courses in creative writing and the instructor, poet Tim Liburn, inspired her to pursue further studies. Her thesis for her Masters in Fine Arts, from the University of Victoria, was the manuscript for Deepwater Vee.

The main project that she was willing to discuss while at Berton House was research and early work on a book about the caregivers of people with mental health issues.

"The family and friends of someone with mental health issues take on a huge role. Those kinds of situations tend to be heartbreaking and often times, for people, they go on for years and years. There's very little relief and it's also an ongoing grief – it's a grief that doesn't get resolved. There's this sense of ambiguous loss.

"A lot of writing focusses on the person who is mentally ill. We tend to not think as much about the people around that person and how that illness ripples out into their lives. Our health care system is very focussed on the person who is ill and the family gets marginalized."

At her time of departure

she was not quite sure where the work was going to go. After three months of being able to tunnel in on her projects without day-to-day distractions, she thought it was time to back off a bit and let the ideas simmer before looking at them again to see if things were still hanging together.

Berton House was a gift of time, she said, and it was a good time.

Council proclaims John Van Every Day to honour transportation Hall of Fame Award

by Dan Davidson

John Van Every was recently inducted into the Yukon Transportation Hall of Fame. In recognition of this event, Dawson's council has proclaimed July 13 as John Van Every Day. The proclamation was read at the July 9 meeting of council.

"When you live in Dawson City," said Mayor Wayne Potoroka, "you get used to ordinary people doing extraordinary things. John Van Every's recent induction to the Yukon Transportation Hall of Fame is yet another example of a Dawsonite excelling at their work while at the same time writing the territory's history.

"It's my pleasure on behalf of this town and City of Dawson Council to proclaim July 13 John Van Every Day in honour of his induction to the Yukon Transportation Hall of Fame. In recognition of this occasion, at Mr. Van Every's request, entry into the pool will be free."

"Another well-earned accolade for another exceptional Dawsonite."

Van Every was on hand for the mayor's speech and there was some discussion about the operation of the tramline which used to carry asbestos ore across the Yukon River from the Clinton Creek Mine to be loaded on trucks for shipment south from Dawson.

He said the average transit time for a load of 10 tonnes was about 15 to 20 minutes.

Culture of agriculture

Nicholas and Fred Fox tending their garden near Dawson City, ca. 1901. Photo: Dawson City Museum archival collection

By Samantha Elmsley

It may be built on permafrost, but Dawson City has always had a strong agricultural bent.

"One of the most popular places for the Dawson people to go for a Sunday outing is West Dawson. The attractions there are the vegetable gardens, two in number," states a 1902 article from the Yukon Morning News. According to the article, William K. DuBell's garden was the largest, boasting an outdoor garden, a hothouse and a planned underground hothouse for mushrooms. It was common for Sunday strollers to take a trip across the river to check out the huge variety of plants DuBell produced, including potatoes, radishes, carrots, turnips, beets, cabbage, peas, celery, onion and barley oats—to name a few. The steamboat slough garden, "opposite Klondike City", was also a popular visiting spot, boasting "1000 plants in the best of condition".

Agriculture was still going strong in 1909, when W.M. S. Paddock wrote an article about Yukon agriculture for the Dawson Daily News. "The two hundred acres of land under cultivation near Dawson last year, 1908," he wrote, "produced 450 tons of potatoes and 150 tons of other vegetables." An impressive feat for a land many outsiders considered frozen tundra—a perception that articles such as Paddock's sought to correct.

Current Dawson agricultural endeavors will be celebrated at the Horticultural Exhibition at Discovery Days, on August 17. Community members are encouraged to contribute locally grown goods, such as flower arrangements or produce, which can be dropped off at the tent at the dike between 8:30 and 11 am that day.

"Van Every Day" continued from previous page...

There don't seem to have been many pictures taken to document the history of the line and both council members and Van Every expressed regret about that lack.

The mayor reflected that this was "a very neat, but under-represented, part of the territory's transportation history."

Arriving in the North in 1968, Van Every went to work for the Cassiar Asbestos Transport Division and eventually became the supervisor of the Skyline as the tramline was known. The Skyline was the method used to transport the ore across the river, the territorial government of the day having turned down an offer by the company to share the cost of building a bridge across the river for that purpose.

"He later established his own business," Potoroka said, "becoming a pillar of Dawson's business community, and was part of the convoy that transported material into Old Crow for the construction of their school—an epic journey that took 24 hours going in and 18 hours coming out. He's also remained a strong advocate for the transportation industry

"CAO Jeff Renaud and I had the good fortune of showing Mr. Van Every and his relatives around the Firefighters' Museum a few weeks ago. During that time, Mr. Van Every shared incredible stories of his transportation career in the North—a career that was almost cut short on doctor's orders."

This was in 1971 when he was told he had to quit driving.

Asked why he continued to work in spite of that, Van Every chuckled and replied, "You got to eat."

"While Mr. Van Every's career has paralleled the Yukon's transportation history for the past four decades, what stands out most is his contribution to community. He's a mainstay in our parades, he gives generously to non-profit groups, and he has helped our town's kids with donations to the RCMP bike rodeo. He is honoured as much for these things as he is for his career

Time to eat

By Samantha Elmsley

Kraft Dinner takes me 20 minutes to make. After the water has boiled, the noodles cook much faster than normal pasta, and then it's just a matter of stirring in that cheese-like powder with a bit of butter. It's the perfect solution for those who, like me, budget about 24 minutes for meals.

When eating—the consumption of food—is an afterthought, I would bet that not much time is spent thinking about the production of food—where it comes from. This is a problem. In case you missed the memo, issues around food are a big deal these days. From slow food to local food, food sovereignty to modified genetics, food is a hot topic for the 21st century social consciousness.

Clearly, eating and time are interrelated. Recipes make sure to indicate total prep time; the slow food movement bashes its head repeatedly on the walls of fast food restaurants; lunch break is one hour. You get the idea. The division of labor encouraged by a capitalistic society reaches into the everyday, where my Kraft Dinner may be packaged in Montreal but the cheese-like powder and noodles come from somewhere else. This combination makes for a tasty meal—especially when you add black pepper, and corn—but by eliminating my labor time from almost every stage of its production, it also alienates me from a fundamental part of life: my food. When consumers are so far removed from production of the product, it becomes harder to feel invested in where it comes from. This can result in injustices down the line, such as inhumane conditions for factory-farmed animals.

A report published by the New Economics Foundation

(NEF) in 2010 argued that a 21 hour work week would have a direct (positive) effect on food habits in the UK. "Time, like work," the report states, "has become commodified—a recent legacy of industrial capitalism." The authors of the study argue that a 21 hour work week would give people more time to, among other things, self-produce food by growing gardens or keeping chickens. In this way, changing the pace of life could go toward solving issues in food security.

"HA!" I can practically hear you accidentally drooling coffee on this paper as you roll around, gripped by cynical mirth. Granted, a mandatory, government issued 21 hour work week seems unlikely. However, as Anna Coote, head of social policy for the NEF, said in an interview with the **Globe and Mail**, the report also functions as a provocation, designed to make people rethink what many consider to be entrenched, unchangeable rhythms of life.

Besides upheaving the fabric of our society, there are other means of extending food exposure time: namely, potlucks. Potlucks are hotbeds of radical food activity. I find that, when forced to expose their culinary skills to the world, many potluckers put a lot of time into what they bring. By organizing an entire gathering around food, what is being eaten becomes the focus of the evening. Often, people make a whole thing out of it, teaming up with friends to go to the farmer's market, then cooking the dish together. Events like these force diners to think, at least a little bit, about what they are consuming.

Taking time is something Dawson is good at. Try chewing more slowly at dinner tonight.

Mini-Highland Games a reminder of last year's full event

Photos by Sally Derry

By Sally Derry

It was an afternoon of fun for the people who turned out to try their hands at a Highland Games event not featured at our first games last summer. It's called the Sheaf Toss and is basically performed with a sack filled with straw until it weighs 20 lbs. Then the competitors attempt to toss it over a bar with a pitch fork. There are different weights for the different division: Mens - 20 lb, Masters 16 - lb, Women - 12 lb. We also had a Tug-o-War with 2 teams, the Bonanza Market Crew and Zander Mann Crew. It was the best of three pull, with the Bonanza Market winning 2 pulls.

We also had children's games such as the Rubber Boot Toss and the Highland Sheep Toss (not a real sheep) with ice cream prizes donated by Klondike Creamery.

To complement the afternoon activities Simon Crelli and Tiss Clark played some beautiful Celtic tunes which were enjoyed by onlookers. During the activities there was an on going BBQ serving up a delicious locally made Cumberland Sausage and sauted onions on a bun.

This event was held to remind the community that it's only a year until our 2nd Highland Games, planned for June 13 -15, 2014. Our first one was very successful, with all those locals involved and visitors very excited for the next one. We will be very busy over the next year with planning and with on going fundraising. We have our raffle ticket out for sale right now in all the stores and need people to buy. It's a cash raffle with a 1st prize of $2500, 2nd prize $1000, 3rd prize $500. Draw date is August 17. Tickets only $5 each. Only 2000 tickets printed.

We are always looking for volunteers.

Ross River, Faro and Dawson City partner with YRC to map landscape hazards

WHITEHORSE (Thursday July 4, 2013) - The Yukon Research Centre (YRC) is leading the Yukon in climate change hazards planning. Three more Yukon communities have partnered with the YRC to study the effects of climate change on their future planning and development.

The Ross River Dena Council, the Town of Faro, the City of Dawson and Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in are partnering with the Northern Climate ExChange at the Yukon Research Centre, the Yukon Geological Survey and the universities of Ottawa and Montreal, to undertake a two-year landscape hazards mapping project in their communities.

"Climate change has the potential to impact our infrastructure and our economy and with limited information on landscape hazards, we are very keen to work with the YRC and create a tool for future planning," said the Honourable Heather Campbell, Mayor, Town of Faro.

Researchers will work with the communities to create a colour-coded map detailing permafrost, surficial geology and hydrology conditions, identifying areas that are low, medium or high-risk for landscape hazards. Landscape hazards include thawing permafrost, landslides, and flooding. Hazards maps are created through detailed assessment of landscape features and the use of ground-penetrating radar, electrical resistivity tomography, and drilling permafrost cores to characterize permafrost.

Landscape hazards maps have already been created for the communities of Mayo, Pelly Crossing, Destruction Bay and Burwash Landing.

"The Yukon Research Centre has been instrumental in helping us plan and prepare for a changing climate. These hazards maps identified that our community is almost entirely built on permafrost and it is with this knowledge that we can make informed decisions Czehsour community," said

Maintaining Eligibility for Publicly Funded Yukon Health Care

It is important that Yukoners have fair access to publicly-funded health care coverage. And as our health care costs grow, it is essential we spend our collective health care dollars wisely.

The Yukon government is reviewing health care insurance laws and would like to hear what you have to say about the future of our health care.

You need to have lived in Yukon for three months to be eligible for health care coverage. This requirement is standard across Canada and will not change. What we are looking to clarify are the requirements for coverage while Yukoners are away from the territory.

A short survey is being circulated to mail boxes throughout Yukon, but you can also provide your input online at www.hss.gov.yk.ca/hcinsurancesurvey.php. As part of the survey, you will find an overview of how other jurisdictions deal with maintaining eligibility for publicly-funded health care and a list of frequently asked questions to provide you with more information. Please share your thoughts about a subject that is important to all of us.

For more information, or to fill out the survey, please go to www.hss.gov.yk.ca/hcinsurancesurvey.php by August 30.

Maintien de l'admissibilité au régime public d'assurance-santé du Yukon

Il est important que les Yukonnais aient un accès équitable au régime public d'assurance-santé du Yukon. Les frais liés aux soins de santé ne cessent d'augmenter et il est par conséquent essentiel de planifier judicieusement les dépenses publiques en soins de santé.

Le gouvernement du Yukon entreprend un examen des dispositions législatives qui régissent le régime d'assurance-santé et il vous invite à faire part de votre opinion quant à l'avenir de notre système de soins de santé.

Vous devez avoir vécu au moins trois mois dans le territoire avant de devenir admissible au régime d'assurance-santé. Cette condition est la même partout au Canada et nous n'avons pas l'intention de la modifier. Nous désirons toutefois clarifier les exigences auxquelles les Yukonnais qui s'absentent du territoire devront satisfaire pour maintenir leur admissibilité au régime.

Nous avons préparé un court sondage que vous recevrez bientôt par la poste. Vous pourrez aussi remplir le sondage en ligne, à l'adresse www.hss.gov.yk.ca/fr/hcinsurancesurvey.php. À titre d'information, nous vous présentons en annexe au sondage une liste de questions et de réponses et un sommaire des conditions prévues par les autres administrations canadiennes en ce qui concerne le maintien de l'admissibilité au régime public d'assurance-santé.

N'hésitez pas à soumettre votre avis sur un sujet qui nous tient tous à cœur. Pour obtenir de plus amples renseignements ou pour remplir le sondage en ligne, visitez le site www.hss.gov.yk.ca/fr/hcinsurancesurvey.php au plus tard le 30 août 2013.

THIS IS JUST MY OPINION

by Al Sider

A Message for All the World

Human Nature is a commonly used and abused term to describe a person's shortcomings and outstanding achievements. It is "Human Nature" when a person gets into some manner of physical combat, as well as when a community comes together to assist in some calamity. Is this really the truth about what human nature really is? I personally think not, as this essay will attempt to disclose.

To be very clear, "Human Nature at its most basic" is to war, commit genocide, murder, rape, steal, swear, cuss, belittle, abuse, and abide by every area that we consider unlawful. It goes against our "Human Nature" to be compassionate, to care, to assist, to be generally a good person. So why do we behave with compassion? Why do we suddenly care for others in misery? Why do we help others when this goes against our truest "Human Nature"?

Human Nature cannot be both good and bad qualities, for when we look at true nature, we see this to be the case. When you see a lion or a bear, they are gentle in appearance, but fierce in aggression. This is true even in "Human Nature". A person, is by nature, gentle in appearance, but aggressive and violent when facing confrontation. It is only by making specific moral choices, that a person might alter their behaviour, but the choices do not come naturally. "Human Nature" is not moral in any sense of the word. Morality is taught, understood, learned and observed by most—while "Human Nature" is basically instinct, impulse, urges, and action or reaction.

Every human being is capable of undesirable atrocities, to make war, commit genocide, murder, rape, theft, violence of any form, and sadly, far too many act upon these capabilities. It is "Human Nature" to look after one self, and to protect what is possessed. This truth carries all the way back to prehistoric times. It is "Human Nature" to kill or be killed, to take what you desire, to possess all that is possible. It is against "Human Nature" to help others, to care, and have compassion for others, to give freely to others without expecting some form of return on your investment. Yet these qualities are falsely labelled as being "Human Nature" at its best—when in reality it is morality and socialization at its best.

We help others for various reasons, the most obvious is our choice. We make this choice mostly to feel better within ourselves, to prove to ourselves that we are not really that bad. To have "bragging rights" so as to say—"Look at what I just did—Yesterday I beat my wife, today I give a thousand dollars to charity." Of course, this does not apply to everyone, but it does apply to far too many. There are those who make these choices, based upon their religious beliefs, but sadly many make these choices begrudgingly. What I am attempting to state here, is that "Human Nature" even invades those who possess strong spiritual convictions. These spiritual convictions, are supposed to make giving to others a joyful desire rather than a chore, so why give with a grudge in your heart? It is Human Nature—plain and simple.

Human Nature, as it is, has no part in the stability of the human species—as it is designed to destroy rather than build. For the human species to have come as far as we have, it became necessary for us, as a species, to overcome our "animal instincts" hence "Human Nature" by developing sets of moral laws. It is fortunate for us all today, that the vast majority of humans made the decision to strive for morality rather than die out because of our "Human Nature".

It is our morality which allows us to help in times of crisis, to give to others without thought of repayment. It is our morality which causes us to create and abide by the laws designed to punish those who live by their "Human Nature". It is time to tell the truth about what the reality of "Human Nature" truly is. It is not "Human Nature" to live good and moral lives, but rather a choice to go against our "Human Nature" and choose to live a wholesome moral life, in order to ensure the continuation of the human species. Morality is a choice, "Human Nature" leaves no room for choice, only instinct and action. War and acts of aggression and violence are our "Human Nature". Morality is our Choice. Everything evil and ugly about an individual or group of people is "Human Nature". Everything Good and Pure is our Morality. There could be no morality without Laws; therefore, from earliest times, Laws were provided to create a relatively safe community, to protect the citizens from those who have no morality, but rather exist only by their instinct which is our "Human Nature".

I choose to live by Morality, what do you and will you choose?

Of course, as always, this is just my opinion.

Each project will employ surficial geologists and student field assistants from the Yukon Geological Survey and professors and students from the universities of Ottawa and Montreal.

Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Canada has provided $188,000 in funding for the research project through the Climate Change Adaptation Program (CCAP). CCAP supports Aboriginal and northern communities to address the risks and challenges posed by the impacts of climate change.

The Northern Climate ExChange has recently created an eye catching comic (Kluane Region edition) of hazards mapping to illustrate the basics and importance of hazards mapping in Yukon's changing climate. Please read for more information.

The three community landscape hazard maps will be completed in the spring of 2015.

SKYDIGGERS DIG FESTIVAL

by Brent Morrison

The Skydiggers have played numerous venues in their years together, but festivals are still a relatively new experience.

"We've always been a folk/rock band," says drummer Joel Anderson, "but didn't play the folk festivals," he says. "The band hasn't done a lot of festival work and it's been really good for opening up everybody's eyes to the different kinds of music."

"This is a perfect size," He adds, "I like the idea of not worrying about the weather. That's the biggest problem with Canada in the summer, the weather's wacky."

As the headlining act, the Skydiggers had Friday night off and took advantage of their time to see some of Dawson's sights. Diamond Tooth Gerties was one stop for the Toronto natives, "I think we all lost a little bit of money," Anderson admits, "Andy [Maize, the lead singer] got a few hours gambling in; he had a really good time."

"In Ontario it's so conservative, it's Victorian. 'Stop drinking by quarter to one', it's craziness. They have all those people there, they could be making a fortune."

Anderson has been with the band less than a year, but has played many different shows with them, "We play a lot of University venues. At those it's generally some students who have been drinking and they want to party, and we can put on a show for them that's quite up-tempo. Then when we get to the theatres and we'll pull out some of the more subtle stuff."

There was very little of "the subtle stuff" during their two festival performances, "At a show you want to make it entertaining, so we probably tip the balance a little more. If there's people dancing and jumping up and down you want to keep the flow going."

Anderson also enjoyed taking part in Sunday afternoon's percussion workshop, "You don't get to do that in Toronto. Only at festivals do you generally get together 10 drummers that you don't generally hang out with. Usually bands have one drummer, or two. So getting 10 of them together was pretty cool."

The Skydiggers being featured in the Reggae workshop was still a bit of a mystery to him, "That was a weird thing," He admits, "Our manager supposedly said something like 'the Skydiggers are all into reggae.'"

The band played three rocking numbers at the workshop and some back-up instruments.

Lead singer Andy Maize seemed as amused as everyone else with the band's reggae billing. He introduced each song as, "this is the only reggae song we know."

Increasing popularity has meant changes for the band, "We're to the point now where we don't open as much, we probably have bands open for us some of the time."

But whether the headliner or the opening act, the band is still influenced by others, "Whoever you play with you're going to be listening to them."

Anderson enjoyed the enthusiastic crowd, many of whom had never heard of the Skydiggers before.

He says talk of the festival does get around back east, "This isn't like a regular tour stop, it's definitely something that gets talked about because it's such a unique place. It's a nice intimate venue."

If their performance here is any indication, they will follow in the footsteps of several other "unknown" festival headliners whose careers seemed to skyrocket after playing in Dawson.

The Sun obtained funding in late 2009 from the City of Dawson, YTG's Heritage Branch and the Community Development Fund to conserve and archive early issues and make them available once again in the public domain. This is a great resource for students, writers and historians, and also for prospective tourists with an interest in Dawson City's life. Each month, we are re-printing our front pages from 20 years ago (seen above) as a souvenir of our lively history. If you want to see page 2 and beyond, check out our website. Past issues are available there for download. Go to <http://klondikesun.com>. More will be added periodically (heh) when we have time!
