Council Wishes to Hire Corix to Run the Wastewater Treatment Plant for the next 28 Months

Story & Photo
By Dan Davidson

Dawson's council would like to hire Corix Water Systems to continue operation of its new Wastewater Treatment Plant for an extended period of time after the plant is officially turned over to the city on August 22. It is in negotiations with the company, which constructed the plant and has been operating it through its one-year trial period, to continue to operate it for an additional 28 and half months, said Dawson CAO Jeff Renaud at a meeting on July 31.

At this point, council has approved a letter of intent to be sent to Corix for the purpose of establishing the town's intentions.

There are several reasons for wanting to take this move, but the first and most pressing one is that Dawson does not possess the Level 2 certified staff required to run the plant.

When the town signed its memorandum of agreement with the Yukon government it had not yet been established what level of certification would be required to operate the WWTP, but the MOA contained an assumption that Corix would be able to train Dawson staff during that first year.

Responding to questions from council, Renaud indicated that the Level 2 certification was not clearly spelled out at that time. According to him it takes two to three years to train personnel to this level. This needs to happen in an operational facility, and the plant, which only began operating towards the end of last summer, has not been in operation long enough for training to take place.

The town's administration has been expressing concerns about this required training for the better part of the last year.

In addition to this problem, Renaud says that there may be warranty issues on parts and equipment that might be more easily resolved if the contractor continues to run the plant for a couple of years.

Dawson's new Wastewater Treatment Plant will become the town's responsibility on August 22, unless there is some problem with the facility before that date.

Should the town hire some third party to run the plant and something were to break down, the possibility exists that Corix could simply respond that the plant had not been properly run by that third party.

As this plant is new technology as far as bring used this far North is concerned, the town's administration deems it best to stick with the builder until it can hire its own operator.

For instance, the valves that caused the effluent leak back on February 2 have been completely replaced with a different type of valve since that incident saw effluent flowing out the back door of the building.

The city has already approached Corix about this matter, and has received a service proposal from the company. The possible details of this proposal are still under discussion and were only covered during an in camera session which followed the public portion of the meeting.

Uffish Thoughts: A few kind words for our Member of Parliament

By Dan Davidson

Okay, everyone sit down now. I'm about to write something that's sort of in defense of Ryan Leef and I don't want anyone to fall down in shock.

You were warned, all right? If you read on it's your responsibility.

I have lots of issues with Mr. Leef's conduct since his election as our Member of Parliament, but I realize that he answers to a high power and his options are circumscribed.

From the closing of the Canada Revenue Office in Whitehorse to the gutting of Parks Canada, Mr. Leef has been very consistent in his approach to defending the territory.

In every case he has referred to his talking points from the Prime Minister's Office and made a valiant effort to sell us on how much this particular cut-back, or "reform" is really in our best interests, if we had but the wit to understand the bigger picture.

Later on, when it becomes clear that the changes are not working, he has had to scramble to find band-aid solutions to the problems the Harper Government has created.

Thus we have members of his office staff assisting Yukoners with their income tax returns where there used to be people who were trained to do that.

Alternatively, as in the Parks Canada debacle, the government (and therefore Mr. Leef) waited as the voices of dissent grew louder and then jumped out in front of a partial solution to the problem after the private sector and some NGOs had come up with a plan.

The result is that we have tours of the S.S. Klondike and Dredge No. 4 this summer in spite of the federal government's very serious intention to put padlocks on these artifacts and reduce their tourism potential to those who are satisfied by just reading signs.

This, of course, will work as long as the displays hold up and additional work on these sites is not needed.

Dredge No. 4 was in the midst of an ongoing project to arrest the deterioration of its hull, which began to rot after it was freed from the moving permafrost that was threatening to break it just over 20 years ago. There was a lot of repair work still to be done at the end of last summer, and no assurance there would be a budget for it.

Somewhere there was a War of 1812 reenactment that had a greater priority.

Displays all over the territory will begin to deteriorate with the passage of the seasons, and there isn't anyone left to maintain or replace them. Five years or less down the road we're going to be in a mess, but that doesn't matter as long as the government can continue to litter the landscape and our television screens with Canada's Action Plan Notices.

Oh, I said I was going to make a slight defense somewhere in this column, and so far I haven't, have I? Here it comes.

The most recent public foofaraw seems to be about Mr. Leef's latest free mailing brochure, the one called Supporting Jobs for all Canadians, the one about accessibility. There are a couple of pictures on the front of the brochure, No one seems to mind the wheelchair logo, but there's been a lot of fuss about the image of the Braille message underneath the headline. It seems it's offensive because it's not embossed on the paper.

C'mon, folks. It's an advertising image on a mass mailing, one which I hope has been paid for by the Conservative Party of Canada, because it's clearly not simply a government service awareness ad. It even has a survey worked into it, just like all the others. I'd be worried if the government knew enough about each household in Canada that it could target appropriately embossed card stock Braille versions of these firestarters into individual homes.

The least you can say about this latest generation of CPC Leaflet (sorry – can't resist) is that they're miles less offensive than the attack letters (the Bagnell Bombs) we used to get from ReformaTories all across the country.

It's kind of nice that there is an Opportunities Fund for People with Disabilities, even if it probably is just some preexisting program dusted off, renamed and painted blue. There are way more things for us to get upset over out there.

Give the guy a break. I'm sure he's tired after all that running.

Hospital Siding Issues May Further Delay Completion of Dawson New Hospital

By Dan Davidson

Dawson's council is less than pleased with the Yukon Hospital Corporation's latest plan for dealing with the replacement of the faulty siding on the new Dawson City Community Hospital. The YHC currently proposes to clad the entire building in corrugated tin siding material.

Council is not satisfied that every possible way to avoid this solution has been given the most thorough of searches.

The problem began with the nature of the building itself. A hospital must meet a B2 Occupancy standard, so it cannot be covered with wood or anything flammable, which would have been the most acceptable solution in terms of Dawson Historic Code.

Notes from the town's Heritage Advisory Committee Minutes on June 19/13 indicate that the HAC originally, and with some reluctance, approved the use of a simulated wood material called Hardiplank. When Hardiplank dropped their warrantee for the Yukon, the YHC switched to a brand called CertainTeed.

The name is ironic, since the material turned out to be anything but certain. During the winter cracks developed in the siding and chunks actually fell off the building. That the product failed was confirmed officially by a CertainTeed inspector who was flown in to survey the damage.

The HAC requested that every effort be made to find a variety of treated wood that could meet the B2 standard. So far nothing has been found, but council is not convinced that due diligence has been done in this quest.

It granted the YHC the ability to use the proposed tin as a last resort subject (in the words of the Community Development Officer's report on July 18/13) "to receiving a report that there is no wood or wood imitation wood product that could meet the building code requirement and working with the Heritage Advisory Committee to mitigate the non-historic nature of the building.

A similar request to place metal siding on the new Wastewater Treatment Plant on Fifth Avenue was made by the Dept. of Community Services while that was being built and was flatly denied by the council of the day.

The new hospital's location, design and size have been contentious right from the beginning of the project and a succession of councils (three so far) have made it clear that the new hospital must not detract any more than necessary from the prominence of the Old Territorial Administration Building (housing the Dawson City Museum) right in front of it. The OTAB is, after all, a National Historic Site.

"Metal is inappropriate," said councillor Bill Kendrick. "Part of our job is to protect the values of the town."

Mayor Potoroka agreed with this concern.

"Has due diligence been done?" he asked rhetorically. "Has every avenue been exhausted?"

He was prompted to this concern by the fact that neither the Yukon Government's Building Safety Branch nor the code consultant firm Stantec, have been willing to state categorically that no solution other than tin siding exists.

There are buildings in town, several hotels in fact, that have metal siding on more than one side, but the front façade of such buildings is in keeping with the historic bylaw, and the look of the metal is offset by façade and trim features.

City manager Jeff Renaud expressed a concern that the YHC was not living up to the assurances that have been made to the town regarding the hospital.

"There have been certain commitments made (by YHC officials) and now it seems that those commitments are slowly dissolving."

The failed CertainTeed siding has been removed from the building, but an acceptable solution has yet to be found.

Council ended a protracted discussion on July 23 by accepting the CDO's report for informational purposes and standing by its original resolution of July 2/13 that an intensive search for alternatives must be carried out.

Until such time as that has been fulfilled to council's satisfaction, exterior work on the building is at a halt.

Council was expecting further information to be available for a special meeting on July 31, but nothing materialized.

DCMF 2013 Succeeds through all kinds of weather

Story & Photos
By Dan Davidson

One had to wonder if the closing tune chosen for the finale at the Dawson City Music Festival this year wasn't sending the wrong message.

Following the obligatory chants of "ONE! MORE! SONG!" (that never works on Sunday night, by the way) at the end of the Jerry Cans' closing set a minute or so before midnight on Sunday most of the performers assembled on the stage and launched into a spirited rendition of "Hit the Road Jack". It was a little strange. The lyrics were a mixture of the classic tune and the theme song from "Fresh Prince of BelAir" (it works – give it a try).

After years of finales where audiences were exhorted to "never break the chain", "don't stop believin'", "fight for your right to party" and keep the circle unbroken, festival producer Jenna Roebuck felt obliged to tell folks that "we really do want you to come back" just in case they took the "don't you come back no more" line seriously.

Owen Steel and his Dad

The Sojourners

By Sunday evening the crowds had thinned out somewhat as visitors who had to be back at work Monday morning had already hit the road, but they must have done so after the popular Potluck session between 3:15 and 5 that day, when the main stage tent was packed from wall to wall with people waiting to see what tunes the randomly assembled mixed groups would come up with.

From a lot of reactions, including by Khari McClelland of the Sojourners, was the standout performance of that session.

The Sojourners were one of the most popular acts of the weekend, whether at the Palace Grand or St. Paul's Church. They would have helped with the CBC open air concert at the Gazebo on Front Street, but the on and off rain on Friday caused that to be moved to the PG, where Dave White's show got off to a fine start with the ethereal fiddling of Hannah Epperson, followed in various sizes and configurations at events throughout the year, but always turns out in large numbers from kids to seniors for DCMF. They were followed by an eclectic mixture of sound that ran till slightly past 2 on Saturday morning.

Later that day the main stage tent was crowded for kids' fest, with games, a sing-a-long with local musician Susu Robin, a performance by young Jack Amos, and the antics of Al Simmons.

Daytime on both Saturday and Sunday had a variety of venues offering an assortment of sounds. When the drizzle held off (which it did most of the time) there were open-air events at the Gazebo. The Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre hosted mini concerts, as did St. Paul's Anglican Church. The Main Stage Tent was active with workshops on each afternoon, featuring a focus on Rock 'n' Roll, Country, Hip-Hop, Pop Songs and the Potluck event.

Other themed workshops included Women's songs, Favorite songs, Gospel songs and Folk songs, all spread by the bright evenings, even a month past Summer Solstice.

The layout of the festival grounds was flipped this year, with the vendor booths on the east side of the Minto Park ball field and the beer garden on the grassy west area nearer Fifth Avenue. This cut down on the possibility of mudslide competitions in the beer garden after each rainfall.

Once again, due to continuing construction in the area, the tall metal metal fencing was available instead of the old style wood and wire material. This stuff makes it far easier to police and patrol the grounds, and the venue itself was quite peaceful, though the RCMP report indicates that there was a bit of negative action out on the streets. (see p. 20)

One of the most interesting acts in the main stage tent was the Jerry Cans, who hail from Iqaluit, Nunavut. Their music has been described as a mix of country swing, throat singing, reggae and blues. They performed to enthusiastic dancing and applause on both Saturday and Sunday and were chosen to close out the show.

Bonnie "Prince" Billy and Dawn McCarthy put on impressive performances both nights. On Saturday evening they followed bands two bands, Old Cabin and Fanny Bloom, that had the audience up and bouncing around the floor. Suddenly the audience was presented with four musicians clustered around a single mike stand, playing acoustic instruments and singing in a half circle so they could hear each other and gauge their harmonies. Amazingly, the dance floor filled up with people just standing still and listening carefully as the quartet presented everything from Kentucky folk ballads to a cover of the Everly Brothers' 1960 album track "Love Hurts" (perhaps better known as covered by Nazareth in 1975).

While the audience in the main tent was reported as being a little light on Sunday evening, the same could not be said for the earlier concert at the Palace Grand, where Hannah Epperson and the Sojourners packed the house and Fanny Bloom put on a good show as well.

Governor General Award Winner Will Help Host the Authors on Eighth Literary Walking Tour

Press Release

The winner of the 2007 Governor General Literary Award for Drama and current Berton House Writer-in-Residence, Colleen Murphy, will be helping to host this year's "Authors on Eighth" literary walking tour on August 15th in Dawson City.

Colleen Murphy has two new plays premiering in 2013, Armstrong's War and Pig Girl. At Berton House, Murphy is working on a new play O'Brien Road, a short film script entitled Bloodsucker Waltz, as well as new libretti. Her full length opera with Aaron Gervais, The Enslavement and Liberation of Oksana G, will premiere in Toronto in 2015.

Describing her experience in Dawson City, Murphy states: "Being invited to be a Writer in Residence at Berton House is to be given a gift more precious than gold: time and solitude. For novelists, poets, dramatists and writers of all forms, time and solitude are essential to the process of creating."

The event, which will begin at 2 pm at the Jack London Museum, invites you to experience Dawson City through the eyes of literary greats Jack London, Robert Service, Dick North and Pierre Berton. Participants will learn about the colourful and captivating pasts of these authors while visiting their historic homes.

Berton House is open to the public only once a year, during Discovery Days Weekend. Murphy expressed her fortune at being here for the Authors on Eighth event:

"A small town so rich in artists is something I wish to be part of, not just by being tucked away writing in Berton House, but by being out here on the street, on Eighth Avenue, celebrating its Authors."

The Authors on Eighth tour is held in conjunction with an annual writing competition of which the winners will be announced and prizes awarded as the tour concludes. Writers interested in submitting an original poem or short story had to do so by 4 p.m. on Friday August 2nd.

The Authors on Eighth walking tour and writing competition is funded annually by the Writers Trust of Canada and organized and coordinated by the Klondike Visitors Association. Book lovers of all ages are welcome to join us for this inspiring event and admission is FREE. # Tales from the DCMF newbie

by Samantha Elmsley

I was a music festival virgin when the Dawson City Music Festival rolled into town on July 19. Having been deprived of this summer experience for 22 years, I figured the perfect little northern festival would be a good place to start. I wasn't wrong.

I was told Friday night is the party night for DCMF, and this proved to be true. The crowd was out in full force and the beer tent entertained at least as many people as the bands (though the bands were the better option). The Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Singers opened up the night with 'the Welcome song' and others, followed by the foot-stomping, dance-inspiring rhythms of the Brass Knuckle Society. Samantha Martin & the Haggard delivered a soul infusion next as the crowd took a break from dancing, many plopping down on the grass to simply watch. Vision Quest, the new kids from Whitehorse, ushered in the energy levels for Cadence Weapon, whose deft lyrics wound the crowd into a musical frenzy.

The audience wasn't done with Cadence when he walked off the stage; chanting "One more song! One more song!" the crowd was getting increasingly agitated. Luckily, Al Simmons, emcee extraordinaire, had a plan: when (drunk) people get rowdy, blow up a fish.

Waving a plastic fish covered in newspaper, he successfully maneuvered the crowd into chanting "Blow up the fish! Blow up the fish!"

even crowd-surfing with it before returning to the stage. Upon arrival, this charismatic children's performer pulled on the fish, shooting confetti from its plastic mouth over the heads of the crowd. This may or may not have been my favourite moment of the entire weekend. I may or may not have gotten Al Simmons's autograph.

Thanks to Simmons, the crowd was restored to order by the time Zeus took up their guitars for the final act of the night. We had a couple more hours to blow off any remaining steam to their high-energy tunes before the show ended around 3 am. The ferry has never seen so many pedestrians stampeding West Dawson.

Over the rest of the weekend, I venue-hopped from one concert to another.

The Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Singers opened the festival.

Maintaining Eligibility for Publicly Funded Yukon Health Care

It is important that Yukoners have fair access to publicly-funded health care coverage. And as our health care costs grow, it is essential we spend our collective health care dollars wisely.

The Yukon government is reviewing health care insurance laws and would like to hear what you have to say about the future of our health care.

You need to have lived in Yukon for three months to be eligible for health care coverage. This requirement is standard across Canada and will not change. What we are looking to clarify are the requirements for coverage while Yukoners are away from the territory.

A short survey is being circulated to mail boxes throughout Yukon, but you can also provide your input online at www.hss.gov.yk.ca/hcinsurancesurvey.php. As part of the survey, you will find an overview of how other jurisdictions deal with maintaining eligibility for publicly-funded health care and a list of frequently asked questions to provide you with more information. Please share your thoughts about a subject that is important to all of us.

For more information, or to fill out the survey, please go to www.hss.gov.yk.ca/hcinsurancesurvey.php by August 30.

Maintien de l'admissibilité au régime public d'assurance-santé du Yukon

Il est important que les Yukonnais aient un accès équitable au régime public d'assurance-santé du Yukon. Les frais liés aux soins de santé ne cessent d'augmenter et il est par conséquent essentiel de planifier judicieusement les dépenses publiques en soins de santé.

Le gouvernement du Yukon entreprend un examen des dispositions législatives qui régissent le régime d'assurance-santé et il vous invite à faire part de votre opinion quant à l'avenir de notre système de soins de santé.

Vous devez avoir vécu au moins trois mois dans le territoire avant de devenir admissible au régime d'assurance-santé. Cette condition est la même partout au Canada et nous n'avons pas l'intention de la modifier. Nous désirons toutefois clarifier les exigences auxquelles les Yukonnais qui s'absentent du territoire devront satisfaire pour maintenir leur admissibilité au régime.

Nous avons préparé un court sondage que vous recevrez bientôt par la poste. Vous pourrez aussi remplir le sondage en ligne, à l'adresse www.hss.gov.yk.ca/fr/hcinsurancesurvey.php. À titre d'information, nous vous présentons en annexe au sondage une liste de questions et de réponses et un sommaire des conditions prévues par les autres administrations canadiennes en ce qui concerne le maintien de l'admissibilité au régime public d'assurance-santé.

N'hésitez pas à soumettre votre avis sur un sujet qui nous tient tous à cœur. Pour obtenir de plus amples renseignements ou pour remplir le sondage en ligne, visitez le site www.hss.gov.yk.ca/fr/hcinsurancesurvey.php au plus tard le 30 août 2013.

On Saturday, you could find me at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre (where the lawn is actually a grown-in theatre—who knew?), listening to the sweet country blues of Art Johns and Nola, followed by the rollicking hilarity that is the Jerry Cans. On Sunday (my energy fading fast) I slipped into Saint Paul's to hear Rachel Sermanni fill the church with her powerful voice and riddled lyrics—a sermon of sorts.

I dragged myself once more to the main stage that night to hear Bonnie 'Prince' Billy and Dawn McCarthy. The group has arranged themselves semi-circular around a microphone, as if gathered around a campfire to play. The result was a real camaraderie among the musicians, who talked, joked and opinionated between songs—a feeling that extended to the audience.

I ended the weekend exhausted, exhilarant and completely saturated with sound. To all involved in DCMF: thanks for getting me, more or less successfully, through Music Fest 101.

Nunavut Band Challenges Northern Stereotypes: Interview with the Jerry Cans

Story & Photos

by Samantha Elmsley

They don't always live in igloos, but they usually play great music.

Northern musicians were out in full force at the 2013 Dawson City Music Festival. From the Jerry Cans to Vision Quest, Dawson to Iqaluit, each represented the place they call home.

There's a certain awareness of place that seems to come with being a musician from up north. A smaller population, prohibitively expensive airfare and a media culture often criticized for a bias toward negative portrayals of the north, all contribute to misconceptions down south.

Music is one way northerners are fighting back against those stereotypes. I spoke with Nancy Mike and Andrew Morrison from the Jerry Cans on being northern before their show on Saturday night.

"It was never our intention to be ambassadors or representatives of Nunavut, but that's just how it works," says Andrew, lead singer and guitarist. "Because of the newspapers, the media, the stories that are told, they paint a, I would say very negative picture of Nunavut. We hear about the homelessness and suicide and those are kind of the stories that get through the filter of the major media. And we find that very troubling, because that's totally not reflective. It's a part of life, but it's not a picture of everything."

"Growing up... I was always asked if we still live in igloos," says Nancy, the band's throat singer and accordion player. "I don't want to say people are ignorant, but..."

Andrew interjects. "It's a certain kind of benign ignorance" that the band tries to change, he says.

"Also, if they don't know what Nunavut is... they're not going to acknowledge our culture, our traditions," says Nancy. "So some of our songs talk about how delicious seal stew is. [The songs] are a way of informing people that we don't just kill them for fun. It's a way of life. It's part of our lifestyle."

They even encounter misconceptions in fellow northern communities. In Whitehorse, one person "was pretty astounded that we had internet. And I said, just to joke around, that we had just got it a few weeks ago. We were still trying to figure out how to work it. Which is a terrible way to reinforce misconceptions, actually," Andrew says, laughing uproariously.

The Jerry Cans are based out of Iqaluit, Nunavut. Their music is consistent with Scottish whaler's style, with a kick: Nancy throat-sings through some of their songs, an Inuit musical tradition practiced by women. Nancy joined the Jerry Cans about two years ago. She'd been throat singing since 14, but hadn't practiced for a while until she took it up again in 2008.

"[My hometown] had a music festival. There were two ladies giving a workshop. That's when it was introduced to me," says Nancy.

Often, a Jerry Cans' show is the first time southerners have heard throat singing—or even met people from Nunavut, says Andrew. People are typically very receptive to having their misconceptions challenged, he says. "That's why I say it's a benign ignorance."

The Jerry Cans on Saturday night.

While at DCMF, the Jerry Cans participated in The View From Up Here, a workshop meditation on northern music held in the Palace Grand on Sunday. In this performance, northern musicians came together to play their music and talk about their experiences of the north. Andrew related a story about meeting Nancy's family, who come from a small community in Nunavut. When they visited the school, the first three people Andrew met—the office worker, the janitor and the principle—were all cousins of Nancy. "That was a very northern experience for me, trying to figure out who's who" in his fiancé's family, Andrew explained to the audience.

The Jerry Cans hope to tour Ontario and the Maritimes in the near future, bringing a wave of fresh challenges to northern stereotypes down south—by playing some awesome music.

BOOKENDS

by Dan Davidson

An Alphabetic Romp Across the Northern Territories

T is for Territories A Yukon, Northwest Territories and Nunavut Alphabet

By Michael Arvaarluk
Kusugak
Illustrated by Iris
Churcher
Sleeping Bear Press
40 pages
$18.95

Sleeping Bear Press has come up with rather a neat variation on the typical alphabet book. There are 11 books in the series and each focusses on a different region or province of Canada, working their way through an alphabet based on that area. A is for Algonquin is about Ontario; B is for Bluenose is about Nova Scotia; C is for Chinook features Alberta, and so it goes across the land, ending the provinces with S is for Spirit Bear for British Columbia.

T stands for Territories, and it wraps up the set by dealing with all three in one book. The author is Michael Arvaarluk Kusugak, who has produced nine books, mostly for early readers, during his career.

Kusugak was born in Cape Fullerton and lived a nomadic life based out of Repulse Bay as a child. He suffered the scourge of being in a residential school until the family moved to Rankin Inlet so that his father could work at the mine there. After Grade 5 he attended schools in Yellowknife, Churchill and Saskatoon.

Before he became a writer, Kusugak was a pilot, forest fire fighter, potter and photographer. He got his start when Robert Munsch mentored him on his first book (A Promise is a Promise, Annick Press) back in 1988, and was one of our five-dozen or so writers-in-residence at Berton House back in 1998, ten years later. His stay here produced Who Wants Rocks? (Annick Press) in 1999.

Kusugak continued to live in Rankin Inlet for many years, but this book's bio page indicates that he now lives on Vancouver Island.

T is for Territories is a book that comes at the reader from a number of directions, not the least of which can be found in Iris Churcher's marvelous illustrations, rendered in coloured pencil and digital print. The pictures are one and two page spreads that do a great job of covering the topics used in the book, showcasing people, places, buildings, animals, machines and maps.

The layout of the book is effective and attractive. The letters are shown in both upper and lower case. The illustration takes up most of the page (sometimes two). There is a four-line poem (a quatrain) usually composed of two rhyming couplets. About a third of the page above or below the letters is given over to a three-paragraph (about 150 words) write-up about the main subject of the page.

Kusugak has chosen a variety of subjects to cover the alphabet from A to Z. The topics are not necessarily all names of things, as in many such books. A, for instance, is for April 1, 1999, the date when Nunavut became a territory, and is used to cover the territory itself. C is for caribou, which is more the sort of thing you would expect to see. D is for drum. G is for Game, specifically the Arctic Winter Games.

Then there are some pages about specific people. J is for Jack London, but Robert Service and Ted Harrison get mentioned in that write-up. Pierre Berton gets a page of his own, with a poem, short bio and special mention of the Berton House Writers' Retreat, which Kusugak also mentions in his author's note and in the author's bio on the flyleaf.

"Let me honour Mr. Berton
"Journalist, writer, TV person."

"Pierre, I give you many bows
"For giving us the Berton House."

K is for the Klondike Gold Rush. L is for languages, of which there are many in the North. In keeping with that idea, S is for syllabics, the characters used to write many of the native languages. Each of the territories gets a two-page spread.

All said, this is a book that should capture the attention of its target age group, and be of interest to others as well.

Moose Creek Lodge Escapes Unscathed

Press release

Yukon Wildland Fire Management crews were back on site this morning (Aug. 2) dealing with a blaze which broke out Thursday just 2 1/2 kilometres from the Moose Creek Lodge in the Mayo fire district.

Crews responded immediately to the lightning-sparked fire when it was discovered Thursday afternoon, officials said today.

Both airtanker groups and a helicopter were deployed as part of the effort.

"With the Moose Creek Lodge located approximately 2.5 kilometres from the fire, we took immediate action as soon as it was reported," said duty officer Lorne Harris.

"Fortunately, fire personnel were able to keep the fire to 1.5 hectares and prevent it from moving any closer to the lodge."

This morning, crews and a helicopter continued their efforts on the fire, which is about 52 kilometres southwest of Mayo.

A second wildfire discovered Thursday was also lightning-caused.

Firefighters quickly extinguished the small 0.1-hectare fire near Lake Laberge after it was reported at around 9:30 a.m.

Air patrols were also conducted through much of the territory Thursday after Wednesday night's storm saw more than 5,000 lightning strikes recorded.

More lightning is forecast with hot and dry conditions expected over the next few days, and the public is asked to be responsible when having a campfire.

Wildland Fire Management is also reminding people that burning permits are required for any backyard burning or brush burning in the territory. Permits are always suspended when the danger rating is moderate, high or extreme.

So far, there have been 137 wildfires in the territory this season, burning nearly 200,000 hectares of forest.

The public is again asked to report any wildfires to 1-888-798-3473.

Public review of Environment Act changes

The Government of Yukon seeks public comment on seven proposed changes to modernize the Environment Act. These changes meet the needs of and support an effective environmental protection regime for the territory.

The seven changes reduce risk to human health and the environment, advance sustainable development and/or improve consistency with Yukon's current legislative practices. You can provide comments online or by email, fax or mail.

The deadline for comments is October 14, 2013.

"The most beautiful finish line in the world"

by Joanie Veitch

It's a gruelling run that climbs 1,852 feet in just over seven kilometres. It's amazing that anybody even considers it, but they do - and in growing numbers every year.

One hundred and ninety-six people registered at Diamond Tooth Gerties to participate in the 15th annual Midnight Dome race. Twenty-four of those were walkers, another record number.

It's a long, hard push to the top beginning at the Palace Grand Theatre and continuing up behind Dawson to the Midnight Dome that overlooks the town on the old road that used to be called the A.C. road as it was built by the Alaska Commercial Company.

That company probably didn't expect the road would become such a beacon to runners such as Brian Bell of Whitehorse who almost set a course record with his first place win finishing in 32:16.

"I was four seconds off the course record," he said sounding a bit disappointed. "It was a personal best though, and you always have to be pleased with a personal best time."

Dave Brook, also from Whitehorse, took second place with a time of 33:53.

He was followed by Brent Langbakk who came in at 34:09.

In the women's category Dawson's Jane Vincent once again proved her endurance making it to the top in great shape at 40:25. She placed 33rd overall. Vincent was followed closely by Tamara Goepfel with a time of 41:00 and Michelle Toews who took third place at 45:38.

In the Masters Men's Division (39 years of age and over) Don White of Whitehorse captured first with 35:43. Hajo Brumond, also of Whitehorse, came in be-

Discovery Days' focus shifts

by Dan Davidson

The many changes in the organization of Discovery Days Weekend this year are aimed at improving the quality, duration and atmosphere of the event, says committee member Peter Menzies, Dawson's Recreation Director.

Beginning this year, and continuing up until the centennial celebrations, the organizing committee wants the celebration to take on the reputation of being a quality family event, as free as possible of the problems that have plagued some years, and sustained throughout the weekend.

One major shift is a change in the Saturday parade route. This year it will begin at the Fire Hall and end at the Visitor's Reception Centre on Front Street. This moves the event away from

By Dan Davidson

Tomás Kubínek, the self-proclaimed Certified Lunatic and Master of the Impossible, delighted audiences at the Palace Grand Theatre for five evenings in mid-July (10-15) with what were reportedly several variations on his basic stage show. Kubínek is a master of physical comedy and contortions and also keeps up a running stage patter with the audience during his show, so some of the variations depend on the feedback he is getting.

That said, the Davidson family saw one evening's performance from the point of view of being a volunteer usher and another as audience members. The shows were distinctly different.

Kubínek involves the audience by inviting them to play an audience while he himself will play the performer, and has the house practice various audience reactions before he finally emerges from the curtain strumming a heartbroken ballad on his ukulele while reading the lyrics off a paper stuck on the arrow protruding from his heart.

Later on he balances a wine glass on his head and proceeds to do a slow motion backwards somersault while singing a tune with his ukulele. He manages a complete flip and drinks the wine without spilling any or using his hands.

Searching out a strapping young man from the audience, he persuades him to assist in a couple acrobatic feats.

Near the end, he strips of most of his clothes (tastefully, he promises) shrugs into an oversized nightshirt and turns into a chicken.

Okay, the man is nuts, clearly, but he's good clean fun and had the audience working with him all the way.

This show was another part of the Live at the Palace Grand summer series produced by the Dawson City Arts Society as a result of regional economic development planning identified in the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Final Agreement.

While in town Kubínek put on a one day clowning workshop for youngsters, Fun with Improvisation & Creativity, through the Klondike Institute of Art and Culture and remained to assist his old friend, Al

Silver Throws Hat into Liberal Leadership Ring

By Dan Davidson

Klondike MLA Sandy Silver has officially announced his intention to seek the leadership of the Yukon Liberal Party and "to become the next Premier of the Yukon." Silver made his announcement at a heavily attended constituency BBQ held at the town's picnic shelter on Front St.

Silver was elected to represent the Klondike riding in the last territorial election, an election which reduced the Liberals to third party status from their previous standing as the official opposition. With them leader Arthur Mitchell losing his seat, Silver and Old Crow's Darius Elias shared duties in the Legislature.

Elias would go on to quit the Liberal caucus, spend some months as an Independent, and recently sign on with the governing Yukon Party, leaving Silver as the lone Liberal and interim party leader.

During his brief speech Silver reviewed his arrival in the Yukon 15 years ago, employed as a Math specialist teacher at F. H. Collins and ultimately at the Robert Service School in Dawson, where he shortly began building the home he now lives in on the Mary McLeod Road above the town, overlooking the Klondike Valley.

"I came here with a broken down orange truck and a big student loan," Silver said, adding that it didn't take him long to find that this was a place he could call home, a place where he felt he could make a difference, first as a teacher, and later as a political candidate.

"I think a lot of people who are here tonight, whether you're born and raised here or you've come from away and stayed, I think you have a similar story. That you felt like it was a bigger thing than just you as an individual and that's what keeps you here in Dawson.

"I think Dawson City is a model community that way. It's full of people who consistently look past the end of their driveways. They work hard and contribute to their own families and their own lives, but they always seem to have more time left over in the tank for the community feeling."

Silver has discussed this decision of his with the party executive, but wanted to make the announcement here in his riding before the word got back to Whitehorse.

Here, he said, is just about the only place he can think of that "could turn a Math teacher from a backwoods Nova Scotia town into the MLA for the Klondike."

Silver indicated that he did not know, at this point, when a leadership convention might be called, but it can't be too soon for him.

He might need to raise some money first, though. There were easily a few hundred people at the BBQ and it looked as if he and his local supporters hadn't expected to have to feed quite that many people.

The Fabulous Al Simmons and Susu Robin Show Plays the Palace

By Dan Davidson

Al Simmons arrives on stage in a panic, singing "I'm Late", the White Rabbit's song "from Alice in Wonderland, setting a frantic pace for the opening of his night at the Palace Grand. He's not late, well, no more than any show ever is in Dawson, but he is anxious and excited.

"I'm here, and you're here and this is fabulous! This is closing night for the Gala Al Simmons and Susu Show. Let's have a round of applause for this beautiful theatre. It's a fantastic place to perform."

Simmons has always wanted to play the Palace Grand and give his whole vaudeville act a full showing. With the break, the audience is treated to about 90 minutes of sheer nuttiness from the guy who used to bill himself as the Human Jukebox.

He still has a number of crazy instruments to tease with, including an imitation bagpipe solo, a monstrous horn made of several instruments welded together and stuffed with variety of items that exploded out of the horns as he played the "1812 Overture". There were tunes with a banjo and also with a borrowed guitar.

Harkening back to his Human Jukebox days, he also has a gadget that enables him to become one-man marching band, complete with hands-free bugle, drum, snare drum, and cymbal.

A great deal of the music was provided by local ace pianist Susu Robin, who was sometimes left wondering what she should do next when Al, following the inspiration of the moment, pulled out a trick they hadn't necessarily rehearsed. Susu is adept at the keyboard whether it's on a piano or an accordion, and filled in the evening with several offerings of ragtime tunes while Al prepared for his next skit.

There were, of course, some stitches, but I wasn't laughin' so I put my Vest foot forward opened the door and surged in... Listen Sam, it seems to me you done a sew sew job."

Simmons is a gadget clown. There's a routine with a table full of crazy hats, a coat that is stuffed with his feather collection, a bunch of punny fish (Look - it's a smoked salmon), and the eye chart song. (I M4U SIM SIM ...), and a funny sing-a-long bit about the evils of sing-a-longs.

Presenting the "1812 Overture"

"Sam, your reputation is hanging by a thread, sew we're either talkin' alterations or altercations."

longer set pieces, the song of the Gypsy Sock and the delightful film noir rendering of the 1940s classic "Sam, You Made the Pants too long". The Philip Marlowe style opening and narration is packed with dreadful puns.

"To say I was overdressed would not be fabrication. Off the cuff, my tailor had me in Simmons is a Juno Award winner, and he doesn't leave it at home to collect dust on the mantel. He passes it around the audience, telling them he is collecting fingerprints. He doesn't say for which government agency.

The finale is an Edith Piaf inspired bit of mime during which the audience discovers why French bread is really made to look that way.

Simmons loves to meet his audiences and was fairly swamped in the lobby after the show, the second of two that he did in the Palace Grand that week.

Earlier he had hosted at the Dawson City Music Festival and been the star of the Kids Fest, so he had a busy week.

The Palace Grand shows were part of the Live at the Palace Grand summer series produced by the Dawson City Arts Society as a result of regional economic development planning identified in the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Final Agreement, with funding by CanNor and the Yukon Government.

CanNor Invests In Yukon Economic Development

Initiatives in Dawson City will build capacity and stimulate economic activity

Story & Photo

By Dan Davidson

The Honourable Leona Aglukkaq, Minister of Environment, Minister of the Canadian Northern Economic Development Agency (CanNor), and Minister for the Arctic Council announced today (August 1) an investment that will support regional economic development planning in Dawson City.

CanNor's investment of $473,065 will support economic development planning in several key sectors identified as priorities for the region including mining, tourism and small business development. The funding will go towards nine separate initiatives including targeted tourism strategies and activities, enhancing community capacity to support the mining industry, and encouraging revitalization of Dawson City's downtown core.

Partners to the agreement include the Yukon government's Department of Economic Development and the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in First Nation.

"The Government of Canada is proud to support initiatives that help to strengthen and diversify the northern economy," said Minister Aglukkaq. "This investment will build community capacity, generate important economic activity and help the City of Dawson strengthen and diversify its tourism, mining and small business sectors."

This announcement officially confirms the funding for projects that have been under way in Dawson since the late spring.

"This is an important investment that will strengthen economic activity and will allow more Northerners to benefit from local employment opportunities in sectors identified as priorities for the region," said Yukon MP Ryan Leef.

The nine community-based projects were identified during a regional economic development planning exercise conducted over the last year as part of the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Final Agreement, and with the cooperation of the City of Dawson, the Klondike Development Organization, which includes a number of partner groups.

"This is a great example of how the Government of Yukon remains committed to working with all its stakeholder groups to develop a sustainable, diverse and competitive Yukon economy," Yukon's Economic Development Minister Currie Dixon said. "We are building strong relationships and partnerships with Canada, First Nations, municipal governments and communities, and increasing the benefits Yukoners receive from economic projects and activities."

"The Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in are pleased to play a lead role in developing a strong local economy along with our partner organizations," said Chief Eddie Taylor. "The support extended by CanNor will benefit the entire community."

This project supports a long-term, sustainable, community-based approach to economic development that will lead to increased local spending, increased full and part-time employment, growth in existing businesses and the emergence of new businesses in key sectors. Planning will address the following economic development initiatives:

- UNESCO World Heritage Site Feasibility Assessment – develop a strategic plan for advancement of the nomination of the Klondike. TH is spearheading this plan and the research is being coordinated by World Heritage Project Manager Paula Hassard.

- Palace Grand Theatre – study the market potential for the theatre's role in the tourism sector and run a series of pilot shows to test that potential. The summer season, produced by Emily Farrell on behalf of the Dawson City Arts Society, is well under way with all but five of the 22 productions already completed. These have included concerts, vaudeville type theatre productions and local entertainers as well as acts from out of town.

- Arts and Culture Market – feasibility study to assess the potential for a permanent market in Dawson including the operation of a short pilot season. DCAS is also orchestrating this project out of the town's picnic shelter on Front Street and it has been running on Saturdays for the last month.

- Updating and enhancing the Klondike Region Tourism Marketing Strategy and Klondike Visitors Association website. The Klondike Visitors Association has already completed this task and aims to increase the Klondike's visitor share from 30% to 40%, focussing on non-tour travellers.

"Tourism Yukon has identified six areas that visitors are most attracted to in the Yukon," said KVA's Justine Hobbs. These are iconic drives, the Klondike Gold Rush, wilderness, midnight sun, heritage and culture. Dawson has them all."

- Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Heritage Tourism – targeted tourism efforts to meet demonstrated demand for heritage tourism. One of the focuses of future development has been the Tr'ochëk area (often called Klondike City or Lousetown), but quite a bit of the preparatory construction there was damaged by the high water in June. The Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre continues to be a draw, with videos, cultural programs, a creative dance production and numerous special events.

- Regional Labour Market Development strategy. The KDO has been assigned this task, but has refocused its efforts more broadly in light of the recent decline in the mining sector.

- Local Procurement Strategy – development and first phase implementation of a strategy to enhance local business opportunities and meet the needs of the mineral exploration sector and other significant regional projects. This is also a KDO project and, once again, with the bloom off the staking rush and mining suffering another cyclical decline, the focus has been expanded to include other sectors.

- Enterprise Facilitation – delivery in 2013/14 of a regionally-based facilitation and business care service to meet growing demand. TH has hired an economic development consultant, Dan Beaulieu, through Cottongrass Consulting Group, to work with organizations and individuals as a business advisor and to offer cultural tourism support.

- Dawson City Downtown Core Revitalization Plan. The City of Dawson has contracted the Urban Systems group, which last worked here on the latest official community plan, to develop proposals for this project. This was confirmed at the July 23 council meeting.

Federal investment all of these projects is made possible through CanNor's Strategic Investments in Northern Economic Development (SINED) program, which focuses on long-term economic growth, economic diversification and capacity-building across the North. SINED is one of several economic development programs within CanNor. CanNor works to help develop a diversified, sustainable, and dynamic economy across Canada's three territories. CanNor delivers on its northern mandate through funding programs, the Northern Projects Management Office, and undertaking policy and research.

Police stepped up their presence during DCMF

Press Release

Dawson City RCMP were kept busy during the Dawson City Music Festival.

Fourteen tickets were issued under the Liquor Act, police said in a statement Monday.

Officers received 38 calls for service including: assault, search and rescue, disturbing the peace, calls under the Mental Health Act, breach of process offences and traffic accidents.

Eighteen prisoners were held over the weekend. Two people were transported to Whitehorse for further court appearances.

Local RCMP and auxiliary members held four check-stops along with the territory's traffic services unit.

Nine drug seizures were made with the assistance of police service dogs.

Fifteen speeding tickets were issued by police, along with one 24-hour driving suspension. There were other traffic and Liquor Act offences.

"Partner agencies, music festival organizers and the general public were extremely pleased with the enhanced police presence during the weekend," the police said.

"Community members alike felt the enhanced police presence played a large part in maintaining order, reducing crime, property damage and injury."

The detachment was also involved in a rescue on the Yukon River Friday night.

A 28-year-old woman and 26-year-old man were travelling down the river on a homemade raft when it sank. Neither was wearing a life-jacket.

They were rescued by canoeists, who called in the situation on a satellite phone, and the RCMP, who picked them up by helicopter from the riverbank where they had managed to escape the river's pull.

Coming up at The Natural and the Manufactured

by Samantha Elmsley

This year, Sarah Fuller and Paul Griffin are taking over The Natural and the Manufactured. Paul will be working out of the ODD gallery, while Sarah's installation site is on the island in Bear Creek. I met up with each artist to talk about their upcoming projects.

I caught up with Sarah in the Macauley House studio to talk about her work, titled "The Homecoming".

"Last summer, I was here and I photographed a number of houses that were moved from Bear Creek to Dawson," says Sarah. "And I'm putting them back, in the style of gigantic photographs." Each photograph has been blown up to between 10 by 12 and 10 by 20 feet, printed off in sections on a special fabric at the Banff Centre, where she works as Photography Facilitator. Sarah has spent anywhere from 5 to 8 hours per photo sewing the sections together and painting them.

"I painted the back of the photos, but I left the windows open, so that when they're lit from behind they look like the lights are on," says Sarah. There are five houses altogether, which she is hoping to hang in their original spot in Bear Creek—depending on how far the cord for the generator reaches. Buses out to the installation will run later in the evening, between 9 30 p.m. and 11 30 p.m., when the lit windows will give the houses a ghostly feel, says Sarah. In Dawson, a plaque will be erected in front of the displaced house, "sort of playing on the Parks Canada signs."

In previous practice, Sarah has been thinking through place and how it's experienced. She says that this is present in her work in Bear Creek. "One of the things that interested me about the Bear Creek site and Dawson is that there's such a close historical connection between the two places. The fact that Yukon Consolidate Gold was working out of [Bear Creek] and that's kind of what made the town of Dawson survive—that symbiotic relationship—there's something interesting about acknowledging that history, and that sense of place."

Paul Griffin is also working with The Natural and the Manufactured; his work will be featured in the ODD gallery. I caught up with him at the Klondike Sun office.

Paul is using sculpture as his medium for this project, in which he will explore the relationship between Chinese scholar stones and gold nuggets. Using clear fishing twine, Paul is suspending hundreds of bronze screws at varying levels from the ODD gallery ceiling to coalesce in the form of a gold nugget. His sculpture is entitled 'Welcome, Stranger' after the biggest gold nugget ever found, from Australia. "It was about 70 kilograms," says Paul.

Paul's sculpture will be about 20 feet long and 7 feet wide. He's currently in the process of installing the project in the gallery, which he expects will take a full two weeks. "I have a funny feeling it won't be much of a night life for me for a while."

"What I am creating is almost like a ghost nugget. It's trying to work with the whole history of Dawson [from the perspective of gold history]. I've always been interested in how gold affects people, how there's kind of an aesthetic response" to gold, he says.

In addition to touching upon Dawson's gold history, Paul's work will explore similarities between Chinese scholar stones and gold nuggets. "[Scholar stones] are not made of precious stones," says Paul.

In this way, the material is not inherently valuable, "but the form is what makes them very valuable," because they are thought to be similar to the shape of the mountains in which the gods are believed to reside. Inversely, gold is valued as a material. However, "I think there's also an aesthetic element to gold that people—before they see the worth of it—[see that] the beauty of gold is quite unique too," Paul affirms.

"I'm trying to put together the two elements of the beautiful object and the valuable object in history. That's what I'm hoping to weave together."

The Natural and the Manufactured will open over the Riverside Arts Festival weekend, beginning August 15.

What the South Thinks the North is Eating

by Samantha Elmsley

I was in Vancouver for the first time last week, and the first thing I did was head to the market. Having come straight from Dawson, I was overwhelmed by the crowds of people and the amount of food—especially local food, a category that Granville Market fills well.

But Dawson, and the Yukon more generally, is no slouch when it comes to growing locally, either—though we've always had a job convincing the south to believe that. In 1909, W.M.S. Paddock, a self-declared Dawson farmer, wrote a page-long article for the Dawson Daily News, detailing the many agricultural opportunities to be found in the area and including long lists of different vegetables grown in the Yukon. "In the future," he wrote, "there is every reason to look forward to the time when this country (Yukon) will support a large and hardy population attached to the soil and making the utmost of its resources." The thrust of the article, which recounts many Yukon farm success stories, aims to persuade readers of the viability of farming up north.

Interestingly, in his article for the Dawson Daily News, Paddock raises similar issues around growing northern as a more contemporary report on local food. In August 2011, the Conservation Klondike Society (CKS) published a report entitled "Dawson Community Food Survey and Market Expansion Strategy". By surveying Dawson community members, it found the demand for local food greatly outstrips supply. In addition, product consistency and quality is often viewed as a barrier to buying local, especially from the perspective of the restaurants and grocery stores. Similarly, Paddock wrote: "the number of agriculturalists is not sufficient to supply the local demand for farm produce, and the quality of some of the products is not quite equal to the imported article." The picture of the local food market painted by the 2011 report and the 1909 article are eerily similar; perhaps the Yukon is not making as much of its resources as Paddock would have hoped.

Others were involved in the quest to reroute misdirected conceptions of the Yukon's growing potential. A 1903 Polk's Alaska-Yukon gazetteer and business directory complained, "the climate of Yukon Territory is very little understood elsewhere in British North America." It went on to insist, "The growth of vegetables at Dawson and for 200 miles further south is exceptional. All vegetables that grow in Ontario grow in Dawson, except potatoes and onions."

But that was 1903, and this is now, over 100 years later. Surely, in this age of information, southern Canadians are more aware of the Yukon's growing potential?

That's not so clear. In winter 2012, the Ryerson Review of Journalism ran an issue on northern reporting in Canada. In a series of articles, the Review pointed to a lack of northern coverage in southern papers, as well as widespread misconceptions about the north in southern press. In Marta Iwanek's article on reporter Paul Watson, she writes: "many northerners feel that southern Canadians have a skewed perspective of their life and their land" a reality that Watson, in his coverage of the north, works to correct. These misconceptions are also discussed by Andrew Morrison and Nancy Mike of the Jerry Cans, who played this year's DCMF, in an interview in this issue.

I would argue that misconceptions of northern life more generally also include misunderstandings of local food, in the Yukon and beyond. Southerners who ask those from the north if they live in igloos, as Nancy Mike has experienced, are unlikely to know about the many greenhouses, foraging and hunting patterns of this area. They are probably not aware of the Yukon Culinary Festival, held for the first time this summer to showcase local products.

It's clear that Paddock's work isn't finished yet.

Van Bibber Book is 12 Month Phenomenon

By Shannon Van Bibber

It's been one year since the launch of JJ Van Bibber's book I Was Born Under a Spruce Tree. With the support and guidance of many, JJ Van Bibber has left a legacy for all to enjoy. Not only has JJ's legacy transformed our family dynamics and introduced us to many wonderful people, it has shown the importance of Yukon history through the eyes of those who've lived it.

Launched in Dawson City at the Klondike Placer Miners Association Annual BBQ and dance on August 17, 2012, I Was Born Under a Spruce Tree has become one of the biggest phenomena in Yukon publishing history.

Alex and Pat Sr. have enjoyed their time promoting the book on Brother JJ's behalf; they have signed hundreds of copies of the book at the Yukon Geoscience Forum, Mac's Fireweed Books, the Vancouver Exploration Roundup, the Vancouver-Yukoners' Association banquet where they were joined by Lucy Sanders and Kathleen Thorpe, and the Assembly of First Nations General Assembly in Whitehorse.

JJ's book has been presented to Prime Minister Stephen Harper (by Premier Darrell Pasloski), Federal Liberal Party leader Justin Trudeau (by Dawson City MLA Sandy Silver) and to Robert Kennedy Jr. (by Alex Van Bibber).

In December 2012, the Yukon Legislative Assembly voted unanimously to include I Was Born Under a Spruce Tree in the Yukon school curriculum.

On June 28 JJ Van Bibber's legacy project presented $5,000 to the Dawson City Arts Society for the JJ Van Bibber documentary and $5,000 to Peter Menzies North Klondyke Highway Music Society to continue to teach music.

During all the activities surrounding this book many Yukon elders approached us with their unique stories and life experiences. The family hopes that JJ's book inspires other families to document their legacies to both honour them and provide our territory with more rich stories to enjoy.

JJ's family would like to thank all the people who helped make this book what he dreamed it would be: a Yukon legacy shared with thousands of readers in the territory and beyond. JJ would be very pleased.

There are limited editions available, once the books are sold there will be no more printed.

On August 17, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m., Alex and Pat Sr. will be in Dawson City to sign books at Maximilian's bookstore on Front Street.

The interpreters at the Dawson City Museum have been busier than usual over the last few weeks. Besides their usual daily grind of melting down gold and moderating miners meetings, they have been working at finding new ways to share their knowledge of Klondike history.

Under the direction of Alex Somerville, Senior Bilingual Interpreter at the Museum, the university students who make up the interpretive team have been working at populating Wikipedia with accurate pages on Klondike history. Alex was originally struck with the idea when it was pointed out to him that the short-lived Klondike Mines Railway's only Wikipedia page was in German. With this new awareness of the paucity of Klondike history on Wikipedia, it wasn't long before Alex directed the interpreters to start sharing some of the wealth of knowledge that they had learned this summer in a new way. This project also fit very well with the Museum's commitment to accessibility as it helps bring the knowledge housed in the museum to a wider audience. Alex hopes that it will foster in people a connection between the Klondike and their world and hopefully intrigue outsiders to learn more and come visit.

The Museum's first major contribution to the Wikipedia community is an article on the quintessential gold rush entrepreneur, Thomas W. O'Brien. If you peruse this article you will learn of his many and varied business successes and failures. O'Brien's legacy still shapes visitors experience in Dawson today, from seeing three of his train company's locomotives housed at the museum or from walking past his brewery's delivery wagon that now sits behind the Yukon Hotel on Front Street.

This summer project will hopefully continue with next year's interpreters, as much is left to be done. In the meantime the museum's commitment to improving our local histories presence on Wikipedia will be carried on by Archivist Molly MacDonald, who has exciting plans for the fall.

Molly hopes to host a edit-a-thon, which would bring local community members together to populate Wikipedia with accurate pages—not only filling missing gaps in the public's knowledge of the north, but also expressing the local history that the community values. Molly sees Wikipedia as a great tool and one that is becoming increasingly integral to peoples access to knowledge. Her hope is that by learning how to write or edit an article on Wikipedia, participants will learn how to produce and consume the website in a more sophisticated way.

Molly hopes to involve local students in the project and feels that the process of publishing a Wikipedia article or wading into one of the many debates that these pages can be battlegrounds for, will help bring history and scholarship alive for those that participate. Furthermore, the Klondike History Library already supports many individuals' genealogy projects and conducts its own research when preparing Museum exhibits and would like to see this information reach a wider audience. Publishing this material online through Wikipedia will create a wonderful resource both for interested members of the community as well for the wider world.

If this project sounds as exciting to you as it does to me, keep your eyes peeled this fall for a chance to participate. If you are interested in being involved in this project, please contact the Museum.

Minto Park Designated a Municipal Heritage Site

By Dan Davidson

Minto Park has become Dawson City's third Municipal Heritage Site and the second within the last six months. The process began officially with the first reading of the bylaw in March, followed by publication of a notice, a public hearing in late June and two additional readings of the bylaw, the last of which took place on July 9.

Under the 2009 Historic Bylaw, Council "may either, on its own motion, or upon petition by any person or group of persons, designate any site as a Municipal Historic Site when it has determined, in its opinion, that the site is an important illustration of the historic or development of the Klondike valley, of which the Dawson town site is a part, or the natural history of peoples and cultures of the Klondike Valley Cultural Landscape."

This designation protects the place from demolition or significant alteration without the permission of the town.

So far the designated sites include a Gold Rush era cabin in the North End of town, the Old CIBC building (which was already a National Historic Site).

Minto Park is named for the Earl of Minto, who was a fitness buff and Canada's Governor General from 1898-1904, from the Gold Rush until a couple of years after Dawson got its city charter, a period when a number of significant buildings were built to emphasize the importance of the town as a capital city.

The community at large began to worry about the future of Minto Park a couple of councils ago, when the initial discussions about the location of the new hospital began. A lot of people thought that the children's playground, which was actually located on the land reserved for a new health centre (which was the original proposal), was part of Minto Park and were upset that it was being encroached upon.

There was much concern expressed that further construction might eat up more of the park, which includes Victory Gardens, the ball diamond on the other side of the Museum, the swimming pool, tennis courts and a roller park.

Since the hospital construction there is also a much-improved children's playground in behind the pool. This replacement park was part of the agreement made by the Yukon Hospital Corporation in order to gain the town's acceptance of the hospital plan after it grew beyond its original dimensions.

Mayor Wayne Potoroka calls Minto Park a vibrant heritage site, and explained what he meant in a recent Facebook post.

"Vibrant heritage places are those that are still being used, and Minto Park has been a valuable recreation area since just after the Gold Rush. Still today it sees plenty of use as, among other things, a ball field and outdoor hub for cultural events, like Dawson City Music Festival and Discovery Days. This designation is meant to encourage that continued use."

The town will soon also have ownership of the land transferred to it by the Yukon Government and that will secure the land as recreational space for the foreseeable future.

DCMF Kids Fest made for a lively Saturday morning

Story & Photos
By Dan Davidson

Kids Fest does not begin early at the Dawson City Music Festival. After a night of music that began in the Palace Grand at 4 o'clock and picked up again in the Main Stage Tent at Minto Park from 8:45 to just after 2 a.m. (not even mentioning what happened after that) most people don't move too early on Saturday morning.

Kids Fest moved into the tent this year due to uncertain skies, but the venue didn't change the menu. There were kids' games and crafts as well as face painting, dancing and singing – lots of singing.

Sing-along with Susu Robin on her ukulele and accordion. After she had led in a number of sing-along songs a group of kids from the day camps joined her at the front and presented several tunes they had been learning.

Young Jack Amos was next to entertain, telling a few jokes, reciting some poetry and singing a song with his mandolin while balancing on a small teeterboard. Jack loves to perform.

The star of the show was, of course, Al Simmons, who sang, punned, joked and delighted with his props to the packed audience in the tent, most of whom gave him their best attention and lots of applause.

Simmons himself was well aware that there were still people having lots of fun back in the craft corner of the tent and didn't mind at all, telling the audience to simply get used to it because that was how these shows worked and that was fine with him.

Simmons continues to be a one-man variety show and travels with a huge number of props, including his very own Juno Award, which he handed around the audience for people to handle, telling them that he was collecting finger print samples. The award was named for Pierre Juneau, first president of the CRTC, and former head of the CBC, not for the Greek goddess.

Simmons, along with his friend and fellow entertainer Tomás Kubínek, was the main stage emcee on both Friday and Sunday nights and stayed in Dawson to put on two full vaudeville shows at the Palace Grand Theatre on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings as part of this summer's Live at the Palace Grand schedule.

Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in First Fish Feast

Doreen Olson (far right) from Moosehide lines up with friend Patricia Simcox (granddaughter of Chief Isaac) for the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in First Fish Feast. Patricia came up for 2 weeks from Whitehorse: "I love coming to visit family and friends and it's always nice to go to a Gathering like this"

TH's Cultural Education Coordinator Georgette Mcleod organized the event, and treated the diners to a slide show of Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Youth at the Fish Camp catching and trimming the salmon for the Feast.

She said: "The fish that they catch they share with their community. Fish Camp has been done every year in Moosehide since I was a kid, and the Fish Camp and Feast at the TH Hall have been done together since 2003."

THIS IS JUST MY OPINION

Honour Thy Father and Mother

One of the great "Ten Commandments" tells us to "Honour thy father and mother that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord hath given you". This is actually the fourth Commandment, but it is the first with a conditional promise. Now this essay is not going to be a strict Religious commentary, but rather a look at the youth today, and how this Commandment is sadly being violated by those who will one day become our future leaders. Most parents today will undoubtedly state, "My kids are good kids, they listen well, they maintain good grades in school, they are not trouble makers." And to them I would reply, "I agree with you, you do have good kids, but how do they honour you?" Having a good kid is not proof that your child respects you. Yet the really sad point in all of this is that it is you parents who create the environment which provides the circumstances whereby your children no longer need to honour you, a statement to which you will undoubtedly deny responsibility, but a further examination of this essay will clarify my statement.

Firstly, most parents seem to agree that, as long as my child obeys me, maintains good grades in school, and stays out of trouble, my child honours me. In this you are only partly correct. Yet how often must you as a parent, repeat yourself to your child? How often is it necessary that you raise your voice to your child? How often do you feel it is necessary to discipline your child? These are personal and individual questions, to which I cannot reasonably presume to answer. Yet I will ask one pertinent question, how many of you parents have purchased a video game console (Wii, Gameboy, Nintendo, etc) for your child? How many hours each week does your child play these games? How many times must you repeat yourself to your child while he or she is sitting in front of the screen playing their games? How often do your children neglect the chores you establish while playing their games? How many times have you heard your child say, "I'll do it later mom or dad!"? These are examples of children who do not honour their parents.

Still, this is not entirely the fault of the child. Most blame needs to be placed upon the parents. They (the parents) have established these "video games" as effective "babysitters", just as television once was for them. Children today spend more time (in hours) playing video games than children of my generation did in front of the television. Children of bygone years spent many more hours playing with friends outdoors, while today, they sit in solitude in front of a game which may or may not be interactive. Many children today have never spent a few hours a week sitting in the dining room, at their table, playing board games with the family. As parents disassociate themselves from their children, children in turn disassociate themselves from siblings and peers.

So, how does this relate to children honouring or dishonouring their parents? It relates in this manner: children who spend more time playing video games harbour resentment towards their parents when their game is interrupted, when parents attempt to discipline their children by taking away the video games for a period of time, and their disassociative behaviour begins to blossom from the benign to the all-consuming. Children, like adults, require association with peers, quality time with their parents and family, and the human elements that cannot be provided by video games. As children learn to disassociate more and more from others, they learn to dishonour their parents. One cannot honour their parents when they cannot relate well with others. When children become "bullies" there is no honour toward their parents.

Bullying is on the rise in our society, and with social networks, and modern technology, bullying is becoming more and more a faceless crime against the weaker individuals. I fully ascribe video game violence to this rise in bullying, and thus a strong dishonouring of parents. There are also a few parents who see this as a good thing, and these parents seriously have unresolved issues. Still, this does not negate the idea that children dishonour their parents at an alarmingly greater rate of increase today, and it is their own parenting that causes this dishonour.

What a sad state our world is in today, and tomorrow our world will be lost, when it is led by the children of today, those who have no honour for their parents, no respect for others, no compassion towards others, no love or life in their hearts—and only their parents can do anything about it.

So, what is the solution? Parents, get rid of the video game consoles, lose the technology, and spend quality time with your children. Get your children out of the house to socialize with other kids. Dust off the old board games and spend at least one evening a week playing together as a family. You, and only you, can effect change for our future. Instill compassion, love, kindness, and hope in your children, and in so doing you will teach them to honour you.

But, as always...
