Dredge No. 4 will see some repair work done this season

The stacker at the rear of Dredge No. 4. Such stackers created the iconic worm tail tailings piles that mark the Klondike Valley.

Photo & story
by Dan Davidson

While Parks Canada is certainly not spending the money that it has been spending annually on Dredge No. 4, that does not mean that nothing is going to be done by way of repairs and maintenance this season.

David Rohatensky, Superintendent, Klondike National Historic Sites (KNHS), has announced that Parks has just signed a contract with Southpaw Construction of Whitehorse to do work on the stacker (or rear end) of the dredge this season before winter sets in.

The contract, worth approximately $90,000, is a far cry from the hundreds of thousands that will be needed to complete the work that was being done to deal with rot at the bucket line (or front) end of the vessel up to the end of last season, but it is necessary work nonetheless.

"The essential outcome of this work," Rohatensky said, "is to make modifications to current Dredge stern stacker arm support to allow it to carry full weight of stacker gantry in the event of stern gantry and/or cable support failure."

"Although it is a bit later in the year, the scope of the work, and the contractor's timeline will allow the work to be completed within this summer/fall season."

Total capital investment in KNHS this year will run to about $130,000.

A.J. Goddard shipwreck commemorated

Press release

Whitehorse - The A.J. Goddard shipwreck was commemorated as a Yukon Historic Site in a plaque unveiling ceremony at Lake Laberge today. Tourism and Culture Minister Mike Nixon was joined by several members of the team who discovered the wreck in 2008.

"The discovery and protection of the A.J. Goddard shipwreck has been an exceptional collaboration among the Yukon government, the Yukon Transportation Museum and a dedicated team of researchers," Nixon said. "The small sternwheeler is a legacy that reflects the importance of river travel during the Klondike Gold Rush."

The A.J. Goddard sank during a severe storm on Lake Laberge in 1901. Only two of the five crew members survived.

Several attempts were made to find the wreck and in 2008 an international research team comprising the Yukon Transportation Museum and the Institute of Nautical Archaeology (INA) located the submerged vessel.

Nixon unveiled the plaque with Yukon resident Doug Davidge who searched for the A.J. Goddard for many years and was part of the discovery team. Also present were INA researcher John Pollack and others involved in the site's discovery and documentation.

The sternwheeler was designated a Yukon Historic Site in 2010 under the Historic Resources Act. The shipwreck will remain in the depths of Lake Laberge where the cold water has preserved it for over 100 years. Recreational divers wishing to explore the vessel can obtain a site access permit form from the Historic Sites office.

For more information on the A.J. Goddard and other Yukon Historic Sites visit www.tc.gov.yk.ca.

Uffish Thoughts: Trimming the edges off the tourist season

Story & photo
by Dan Davidson

As annoyed as I am about the impact of a variety of federal edicts on the Yukon's tourism industry, most of the recent moves to trim the edges off our season shouldn't be surprising to anyone who has been paying attention.

The latest Parks Canada debacle is the decision to standardize the Parks year across the county, having it start on the May long weekend and terminate right after Labour Day. In Canada, with our wide variation in climates and seasons from south to north and west to east, such a policy is nothing short of moronic. Over the last five years my wife and I have enjoyed a couple of mid-September to mid-October fortnights in Nova Scotia and have enjoyed taking in Parks' sites there, which were still perfectly accessible at that time.

In the Yukon, we've been trying to extend the shoulder seasons for as long as I've been around, and while the middle of October would certainly be pushing the envelope, we get a fair number of European travellers in September. This is just bad news here.

But it's not new news. Parks announced this at the same time that they told us they were padlocking two major attractions in the territory and cutting something like 25 percent (including the entire curatorial staff) out of the work force here last year.

The feds (not so much the local folks) then took the better part of more than half a year to decide to implement a policy that already existed and dangle the shiny opportunity of letting private contracts for tours of both the S.S. Klondike and Dredge No. 4, only after there had been pressure from the tourism industry and other levels of government.

When those "oh look we've saved you" announcements were made it was without any consideration that a couple of months before the season opens is way too late to be able to promote much more than walk-on traffic for this year.

And since those were one-year contacts, is it really going to be safe to promote the tours for next year?

Shortening the year is, as one Facebook poster commented "another nail in the coffin..." of the extended season. To explain what's been happening over the last few federal mandates, it looks like this: from 2003 through 2010 the Parks year in the Yukon ended on September 18. In 2011, it was September 16, and last year it was September 11. This year it's September 3.

The Klondike Visitors Association (KVA) made its concerns public in late July with a letter. While I'm sure the organization has been trying to work on this since a year ago last spring when it was announced, there should probably have been six or seven protest letters by now just to get the public's attention.

This should have been an item on everyone's agenda while Mr. Harper was in the Yukon for the recent Conservative Party Love-in and Rehash of Previous Announcements Tour. I haven't read that it got a mention.

Just today I learned that the Canada Border Services Agency is getting in on the trimming action, and that the Little Gold Border Crossing on the Top of the World/Taylor Highway route will be closing a day earlier than posted, on September 20 this year.

To the credit of MP Ryan Leef, he's sent our local paper a letter bemoaning this change, though he was apparently unaware of it until the KVA sent him a letter of protest.

Leef has to be more than a little annoyed about this, since it was just over a year ago, in April 2012, that he came to Dawson to announce having won a long series of negotiations to restore the daytime operational hours of this post to something that would work for people on both sides of the border.

As he points out in his letter, it's too late this year to do anything about a missing day, but he promises to work on the matter and try to get it resolved before next year's season.

Some mention has been made of the fact that the KVA's correspondence on these matters hasn't received any official response. It must be remembered that civil servants in these government departments are no longer there to serve the public or to carry through the traditional official mandates of their departments. Their role has been redefined as necessarily serving the party in power, finding ways to put the best possible face on any negative consequences that may be the result of party decisions, and saying nothing at all until they have been told what they are

KVA pleads to restore length of the Parks' year in the Yukon

by Dan Davidson

The Klondike Visitors Association (KVA) is hoping that the newly minted Minister of the Environment, the Honourable Leona Aglukkag, may be a bit better informed than her predecessor when it comes to the future of Parks Canada in the Yukon.

Among the many difficult decisions related to the future of Parks that the Harper Government made in 2012 was the decision to standardize the Parks' year all across the country. One-size-fits-all was never a philosophy that would have fit the old Reform Party, but it seems that the Harper Conservatives have bought into exactly the sort of Ottawa-centric thinking that Preston Manning used to complain about, as did Stephen Harper in his days with the National Citizens' Coalition.

As a result of this decision, Parks Canada in the Yukon, and especially Klondike National Historic Sites (KNHS) will wrap up its summer season immediately after Labour Day, having begun it as late as the Victoria Day weekend.

In a letter to the new Minister, the KVA has pointed out that this runs counter to the Yukon's ongoing attempts to increase its shoulder seasons, though it does fit the trend which it notes has been accelerating over the last decade.

From 2003 through 2001 the Parks year in the Yukon ended on September 18. In 2011, it was September 16, and last year it was September 11.

"The Labour Day weekend closing of KNHS visitor programs and services detrimentally shortens by approximately 10 percent what is, naturally, an already fragile and fleeting season," wrote KVA chair Brian

An early morning Parks Canada Tour group learns about the dike, and the history of the waterfront in Dawson.

Stethem in a July 30 letter to the minister.

"We recognize that staffing and other operational considerations may require reduced visitor services at the beginning and end of the season. However we strongly disagree with the unilateral decision by Parks that everything stops at the beginning of September. We do not agree and certainly visitors from all over the world do not agree."

The KVA is concerned that cutting back on the activity options for those late season visitors will cause them to leave the Yukon out of their early fall travel plans.

"In short, the KVA urges immediate reconsideration by Parks Canada of KNHS's early closing dates - this year and in the future. Parks Canada's outstanding presence and ongoing multi-year investment in the preservation and presentation of Klondike Gold rush history and culture is a leading socio-economic driver across our visitor industry. In many ways, Parks Canada is essential to a healthy future for our communities."

Dawson City youth will represent Yukon on world stage

Press release

The Yukon will send a youth ambassador along with its delegation to the Conference of the Parties (COP) meeting in Warsaw, Poland for the first time this fall.

November's COP meeting will be the 19th meeting of the parties to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change.

The Yukon sends representatives as guests of the Canadian delegation.

This year Scott Bradley, a 23-year-old Dawson City resident, will join Yukon government officials in Poland.

He was chosen from eight applicants by Environment Yukon's Climate Change Secretariat to serve as the territory's youth ambassador.

Johanna Smith, the acting director of the climate secretariat, said the organization has always had a focus on youth engagement and youth development where climate change is concerned.

"We feel they're an important audience to engage in this issue. Climate change is a long-term and really encompassing issue," Smith said.

"We see the impacts now and we'll continue to see the impacts in the future, and I think that there's a real opportunity for youth to engage in the issue."

Bradley, she said, exemplified all of the criteria they were looking for in a youth ambassador.

He has a drive to learn more about climate change and the environment, and tact and diplomacy skills.

He also has a commitment to prepare the experience and to share what he learned when he returns, and experience interacting with different cultures.

"We're also excited about Scott because we think he's really interesting being from Dawson and a smaller community, and he hasn't been engaged in these issues before.

"We think that's a great opportunity for him to learn more about the issue and also to approach it from a different perspective and bring something different back," Smith said.

As Bradley embarks on his climate change learning adventure, he'll have to create and update either a Facebook page or a blog and develop a presentation outlining what he gained through the experience when he returns from Poland.

Before he heads over to COP

19, he'll conduct interviews with members of the Dawson community to gather information about climate change impacts locally, stories he'll be able to share with people from around the world in Warsaw.

Last week, Bradley told the Star he applied for the program because of a developing interest in climate change and the environment.

"My interest started visiting my uncle's farm in the summertime," he said.

"They always took weather samples twice a day. It slowly developed over time into an interest in the circumpolar world and how the weather's affecting us, not necessarily in a good way," he said.

"I'm hoping to learn more about what's happening and what our country and other countries are doing to minimize our impact and hopefully bring back that knowledge to the youth of Dawson and the Yukon and Canada, for that matter.

"We should all be involved in climate change because one person can't change it but if everybody tries, we'll make a far larger difference."

"The Yukon government recognizes the importance of youth involvement in climate change issues," Environment Minister Currie Dixon said.

"The youth ambassador will not only have the opportunity to deepen his knowledge of climate change issues but also share his experience with Yukoners of all ages both during and after the event."

Climate change impacts in the Yukon include permafrost thaw, glacial melt, different bird migration patterns and the appearance of new species.

While Canada's average winter temperature has risen by 3.6 C over the past 65 years, the Yukon average has increased by 5.5 C, the minister said.

DISCOVERY DAYS 2013

Discovery Days lived up to its name as people discovered lots to do

Story & photos
by Dan Davidson

Deputy Chief Clara Van Bibber, Elder Percy Henry and Mayor Wayne Potoroka.

"Together today for our children tomorrow" chanted the riders on the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre float.

These trucks were ready for Sunday's Mud Bog.

Kids always enjoy the Bike Rodeo.

Discovery Day, August 16, 1896, has different meanings for different people, depending on how it may have affected them. This was reflected in the speeches by community leaders that followed the parade on August 17 this year, just one day past the actual commemorative date.

Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Deputy Chief Clara Van Bibber presented the First Nation's viewpoint.

"It's a pleasure to be here on behalf of the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in government and Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in citizens. As you might appreciate, our First Nation is sometimes conflicted about celebrating the discovery of gold in our region. The initial find at Bonanza Creek kicked off an influx of newcomers to our home and changed our traditional way of life forever.

"But over time we've found a place in our hearts to take in the mining world. With many of our citizens employed in the industry and our government forming partnerships with responsible gold mining operations, we are there today.

"But more importantly, our First Nation conquered the challenges posed by the Gold Rush and flourished in spite of that event.

"Frankly thriving in the face of adverse conditions is what our nation has done for millennia.

"Our story, as a First Nation, goes back many years, but for the past century it has been interwoven with the Gold Rush story. For good or ill it has helped shape who we are today. The World Heritage Site project we are currently undertaking with several community partners will explore that story and define for us all why that story is important and how it's worth sharing with the world."

Mayor Wayne Potoroka contained more personal reflections.

"I've often thought Discovery Day should be a national holiday. The Klondike Gold Rush changed the course of human history, seized the world's imagination and re-configured the western hemisphere's economy. And it all began with the accidental discovery of gold up Bonanza Creek; at a site we can still visit.

"But over time, our celebration has become less about the discovery of gold and more about the people that event helped gather in the traditional territory of the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in and the rich, one-of-a-kind Klondike culture that's taken root here.

"Whether you're into visual arts, live music, sharing your garden's harvest, or flinging mud with your truck, there's something for everyone during the Discovery Day weekend, and it's no coincidence that's also something you can say about our town.

"Thank you to the organizers, volunteers, presenters and visitors to town that helped make this a fantastic Discovery Day weekend."

The parade began a few minutes after noon and wound its way to Victory Garden and the Museum, where the speeches were made, a hotdog lunch was served, yard and parade awards were presented and kids games were held.

Yard awards went to Margaret Saunders (Most Notable Transformation), Maria Ledergerber (Best Residential), Whitehorse Cabins (Best Business), and the Commissioner's Residence (Best Community Green Space).

Parade awards were in several categories:

Non-Profits - first place ($250): Chicken Dinner; second place ($150): FOOP (Female Order of Producers); third place ($100): Horticultural float – the Gammies.

Business Awards - first place: Beach Day – Gammie Trucking; second place: Juliette's Manor; third place: Grab a Cab.

Government Awards - first place: Visitor Information Centre; second place: Dawson City Museum; third place: Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre.

Other events, related to the Riverside Arts Festival, drew people to other areas of town over the next 48 hours.

The weather for the weekend was variable. Friday was fine. On Saturday and rained and drizzled, but not enough to prevent major daytime events from happening. On Sunday it was fine and sunny, as was the Monday holiday.

The Van Every float contained the usual band.

Former Yukoner blazes new trails within the RCMP

Story & photo by
Whitehorse Star, August 22

A former Yukoner has taken over the top spot at the Saskatchewan RCMP.

Chief Supt. Brenda Butterworth-Carr was named the new commanding officer for Saskatchewan's "F" Division Wednesday.

She now becomes the first aboriginal woman to take the lead of an RCMP division.

Butterworth-Carr is originally from Dawson City. She joined the RCMP in 1987, first as a special constable in her hometown and later training in Saskatchewan.

After that instruction, she was assigned to general duty policing in the Yukon where she served in Whitehorse, Carmacks and Dawson City.

A member of the Tr'ondek Hwech'in First Nation, in 1999, she was promoted to be the Yukon's First Nations policing co-ordinator.

Butterworth-Carr continued climbing the ranks. In 2002, she was transferred to British Columbia to become district co-ordinator for aboriginal policing services.

In 2009, Butterworth-Carr took command of the Prince George, B.C. detachment, becoming the first woman and the first aboriginal person to hold the command post in northern B.C.

She was then promoted to chief superintendent, the fourth-highest rank in the RCMP hierarchy, becoming the Director General of National Aboriginal Policing and Crime Prevention Services at National Headquarters in Ottawa.

Again, Butterworth-Carr

broke barriers with that role, becoming the first Canadian aboriginal woman ever to hold that rank.

When she last spoke to the Star in 2010, the then-44-year-old mother of three said the move to Ottawa would be a change, but something she was looking forward to.

"It's not unusual for me to go out and work on the ground with my officers," she said of life at the Prince George detachment at the time.

"So moving from an operational to an administrative level will be an adjustment.

"But my expectation is to go and look at what has already been established and bring that experience of being at an operational level and being on the ground to my new job. I think that will be a real strength."

Butterworth-Carr is replacing current Saskatchewan RCMP commanding officer, assistant commissioner Russ Mirasty.

Mirasty was the first First Nations person to command an RCMP division when he started the job in Saskatchewan in December 2010.

He is retiring after 36 years with the RCMP.

Touring Artist Fund supports artistic professional development

Press release

Whitehorse - The Government of Yukon is providing more than $28,000 to enable eight Yukon artists to tour their work outside the territory at a variety of public events.

"This funding provides important support to Yukon's professional artists to showcase Yukon around the world," Tourism and Culture Minister Mike Nixon said. "Enabling our artists to gain experiences and new audiences outside Yukon helps strengthen and grow the arts in the territory."

Singer songwriter Alexandra Nasager is receiving $4,000 for her band Drea and the Naysayers to perform in Peterborough, Ontario and at the Mudtown Music and Arts Festival in Owen Sound, Ontario. Following the eastern tour, the group will perform internationally at the Paulusfeesten Festival in Oostende, Belgium.

"We are thrilled to be travelling to eastern Canada and then to Belgium," Nasager said. "One of my band mates, Jonathan Howe, and I are from Dawson City. We're excited to be able to make these tours and to present our work to appreciative audiences, which give us enormous opportunity to showcase the talent we have here in Yukon."

Children's book author Claire Eamer received $1,930 to travel to southern Ontario to take part in a tour of schools, libraries and special events in conjunction with the Ontario Library Association's Forest of Reading competition in May. Eamer also delivered presentations at the Canadian Museum of Nature in Ottawa.

"Usually I work alone in my office, so the chance to meet my audience in person was both enjoyable and valuable, especially when it took place in the biggest English-language market in Canada," Eamer said. "I got to meet and be cheered by hundreds of kids at the Forest of Reading's final event in Toronto. It was very exciting."

The Touring Artist Fund fosters the development of the arts in Yukon by helping professional artists, ensembles and companies that create and produce original work to tour and attend out-of-territory public events.

There are four intakes per year: March 15, June 15, September 15 and December 15. For information on Yukon government funding for the arts, visit www.tc.gov.yk.ca.

Yukon Fire Service Conference a success

Press release

Dawson City - This year's conference in Whitehorse was hosted by the outlying volunteer fire departments and definitely lived up to the theme of "Training Right", says President of the Association of Yukon Fire Chiefs, Jim Regimbal.

"The theme, Training Right, encompasses the rapidly changing world in which we live. The rate of change that our departments are experiencing is becoming more challenging each year and how we train in response to that change will determine our successes and failures," said Regimbal. "In the fire service failure is not an option; the leadership each one of us provides on a daily basis can mean the difference between life and death."

The main discussion on the business side of the meeting revolved around: The implementation of a Yukon-Wide 911 system as per our resolution from last year; Presumptive Legislation for Volunteer Fire Fighters; Remuneration for volunteer Fire Chiefs; and a combination smoke/carbon monoxide detector campaign for Dawson City.

"As an association we are very concerned about the lack of progress on the 911 issue," Regimbal noted. "This is our number one item right now and we don't seem to be making much headway."

Our Keynote speaker (Tim Vandenbrink) talked about the changes in Fire Prevention and our main trainer (Matt Stroud) talked about how to deal with Hybrid vehicles. Both enlightened the membership on how to change our way of thinking when it comes to fire prevention and education when dealing with new technology.

The recent influx of money to the Fire Marshals Office for the purchasing of a Mobile Live Fire Training Unit from Drager Safety Canada and the addition of two new Deputy Fire Marshals shows both a commitment and understanding of the changes in the fire service by the Yukon Government and I do applaud them for that, says Regimbal.

Results of Wildlife Act charges heard in court

Press release

A Dawson City resident was sentenced August 20 to house arrest after pleading guilty in territorial court to counts of failing to comply with a court order made under the Wildlife Act and careless use of a firearm, contrary to the Wildlife Act.

Under the terms of the 90-day conditional jail sentence, this individual is subject to a curfew from 9 p.m. to 8 a.m., is prohibited from leaving Yukon, is prohibited from possessing or consuming alcohol or attending any bar, tavern, off sales or other premises primarily used for the sale of liquor, is required to reside at his/her named residence and to report to his/her conditional sentence supervisor as directed.

The charges arose from an incident July 5, 2012, on the Dempster Highway in which the individual was observed shooting at a moose from inside a vehicle and across the Dempster Highway. The hunting season for moose was not open for licensed hunters.

The individual had asked permission of the Tr'ondëk

Hwëch'in First Nation to allow a friend to hunt in that area and the request had been denied. At the time of the incident, the individual was also under a court order prohibiting him/her from hunting as a result of previous Wildlife Act offences for which he was sentenced in 2009.

In addition to the house arrest, the individual has been prohibited for five years from hunting or obtaining a hunting licence as well as accompanying any person who is hunting.

The individual is also prohibited from possessing firearms in the field for the next five years. The individual must complete the Hunter Education and Ethics Development course prior to being granted any hunting licence.

Amendments to the Corrections Act open for public comment

Press release

Whitehorse - The Department of Justice is asking the public to comment on amendments to the Corrections Act that are aimed at providing legal clarity on a number of issues.

"We consulted extensively with the public, First Nations and stakeholder groups during the development of the Corrections Act and we are ensuring that this tradition of consultation continues with these amendments," Justice Minister Mike Nixon said. "These proposed changes ensure that the Arrest Processing Unit, the Correctional Centre Revolving Fund and use of alcohol and drug testing have a strong legal foundation in the act."

The amendments include:

- A limit on the applicability of the act on persons held in the Arrest Processing Unit. Currently, certain sections of the act, such as the need to develop an inmate case plan, are impractical for short-term prisoners held in the unit.

- Expansion of the types of samples that can be taken from inmates or people on probation. Many probation clients are court ordered to abstain from drugs or alcohol. Currently the act only describes urinalysis testing.

- Establishment of a Correctional Centre Revolving Fund for revenue generated by the canteen, phone system and other sources. The fund would be used for inmates (e.g., repairing damage caused by inmates, paying for television service and indigent inmate phone cards) and victims' emergency needs or medical costs.

A paper detailing the Corrections Act amendments is available on the Department of Justice website at www.justice.gc.ca. The public may submit comments via the website or in writing to the Department of Justice until September 6. A "What We Heard" document will be released in early fall after the consultation has ended.

TELUS arriving in Northern Canada

Press release

Yellowknife - Customers in the Northwest Territories and Yukon will now be able to sign up for TELUS wireless products and services, including SharePlus plans with unlimited nationwide talk and text and shared data - at the same price offered anywhere else in Canada. Local residents can take advantage of blazing fast wireless Internet speeds when surfing the web, reading e-mails or accessing the latest chart-topping music and social media through TELUS' 4G and 4G LTE technology.

"For the very first time, starting September 6, you will be able to purchase a smartphone or other device from TELUS and activate a local Yellowknife or Whitehorse phone number," said Darren Entwistle, president and CEO. "We're on a mission to lead the world in customer service reflecting our passion for excellence in caring for our clients. We are committed to bringing all Canadians, whether urban or rural, in the spectacular north and from coast to coast, our world-class network and broad range of the latest smartphones and devices. We look forward to serving even more communities across Yukon, Northwest Territories and Nunavut as TELUS' 4G and 4G LTE coverage expands."

In celebration of the launch, for every TELUS customer in the Northwest Territories who purchases a new smartphone and activates a Yellowknife phone number, TELUS will contribute $25 to the Stanton Territorial Hospital Foundation in Yellowknife. Funds raised will go toward the purchase of new equipment for the Obstetrics Unit. In the Yukon, $25 from every Whitehorse phone number activation will support new technology to aid in the early detection of developmental disabilities at Yukon Child Development Centre. Both of these TELUS Phones for Good campaigns will run September 6, 2013 to May 6, 2014, contributing up to a maximum of $25,000 for each charity.

Petron Communications, a long-time TELUS authorized dealer serving rural communities in northern B.C., will open stores in Yellowknife and Whitehorse later in 2013. These stores will feature the popular TELUS Learning Centres soon after opening. Customers looking to get the most from their smartphones or tablets can come into the stores and get personalized tutorials so they can learn how to get the most from their devices.

Local customers will be able to take advantage of TELUS' new SharePlus plans. The plans come with unlimited nationwide talk and text, four popular calling features including voicemail and call display, and a data package of their choice that can be shared across multiple devices and people in the same household. With unlimited nationwide talk and text, customers can talk to family and friends all over the country without worrying about overages or long distance charges.

Shareplus builds on a drive to put customers at the core of TELUS' pricing plans that began with Clear and Simple plans launched in 2009 - the first wireless plans in Canada to do away with the system access fee. Since then, TELUS has eliminated activation fees, introduced data notifications and caps to eliminate bill shock when travelling, introduced device unlocking, re-written contracts in plain language, added caller ID and voicemail as standard on all TELUS rate plans, and eliminated contract cancellation charges in favour of a device balance.

Funding to strengthen arts, culture and heritage

Press release

Whitehorse - On behalf of the Honourable Shelly Glover, Minister of Canadian Heritage and Official Languages, the Honourable Kevin Sorenson, Minister of State (Finance) and Member of Parliament (Crowfoot), today announced funding for 14 arts and culture organizations in the Yukon. Minister of State Sorenson made the announcement at the Yukon Arts Centre alongside leaders of Whitehorse's arts community.

"Our Government recognizes the importance of the arts and heritage to enriching quality of life, as well as to creating jobs and wealth in our communities," said Minister of State Sorenson. "That is why we are proud to support organizations that work to enhance the vitality of their communities and strengthen connections between Canadians."

The support announced today will enable organizations throughout the Yukon to deliver programming, organize festivals, strengthen and promote Aboriginal culture, develop official-language minority communities, aid local publications, modernize collections management in local museums and present annual concert series. The organizations receiving support include Liard Aboriginal Women's Society, All-City Band Society, Yukon Arts Centre, Association Franco-Yukonnaise and MacBride Museum Society.

"Our Government is proud to support arts, culture and Aboriginal organizations in the Yukon," said Minister Glover. "Today's announcement demonstrates that we are committed to supporting organizations that contribute to their community's cultural life and also strengthen its economy."

"The Yukon Arts Centre is presenting a stunning season of Canadian work drawn from across this great nation. This season is made possible in part by the continuing multi-year support of the Canadian Arts Presentation Fund," said Al Cushing, CEO of the Yukon Arts Centre. "Since the entire grant is expended on Canadian artists, it is a remarkably wise investment by the Canadian Government in Canada's culture economy."

The Government of Canada has provided total funding of $738,613 through the following programs of the Department of Canadian Heritage: the Aboriginal Peoples' Program, the Building Communities Through Arts and Heritage program, the Canada Arts Presentation Fund, the Canada Periodical Fund, and the Museums Assistance Program.

In Dawson City, Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in recieved $21,455 for their project Northern Yukon Beading Practices.

For more information about the projects, see the attached backgroundner.

Deadline Reminder for Licensed Hunters

Kill reports and compulsory submissions for most species are due no later than 15 days after the end of the month in which you successfully hunted.

Find out more about compulsory submissions, biological samples and kill reports in this year's Hunting Regulations Summary. Pick up a copy wherever hunting licences are sold or visit the Environment Yukon website.

If you were successful in August, your deadline is September 15th.

TWENTY YEARS AGO IN THE SUN

DAWSON CITY, YUKON

The falling into autumn issue

Vol. 5 No. 5

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1993

A Dawson City firefighter hoses down the north end of the Monte Carlo building to keep the fire from spreading to next door Arctic Drugs building.

Historic Monte Carlo burns

by Dan Davidson

Despite difficulties with water pressure and the speed with which the fire grew, firefighters managed to keep the flames from spreading to adjacent buildings when the Monte Carlo burned down on September 11.

A crowd of on-lookers, attracted by the billowing smoke, gathered from all over town as the historic, turn of the century structure flared and crumbled in the late morning, facade work and timbers falling to the ground, trailing sparks as they collapsed.

The tourist and souvenir shop had opened for its last weekend of this business season at 10 that morning. According to Karen MacIntyre, the clerk on duty, there was a darkening of the lights a while later. She called Ken Herrmann, the owner's nephew, to take a look at things, but while he was on the way, the man she was waiting on alerted her to the fire.

She telephoned the fire department and Herrmann, and left the building as it began to fill with smoke. The alarm was registered at 10:50.

By 10:53 some members of the fire department were on the site, trying to battle the advancing smoke and fire. They were hampered by the fact that the Dawson water system is undergoing repair work and was partially shut down. It was hard to maintain pressure in the hoses and they had to resort to something Mayor Peter Jenkins called "back-feeding".

They ran hose lines to the Yukon River to pump more water on the building. They also tackled the fire from the alley in the rear, protecting a couple of fuel tanks and the buildings on either side of the Monte Carlo. Both buildings, the 98 Drive In and Arctic Drugs, survived the fire.

Chief Pat Cayen says they knew the Monte Carlo was gone within five minutes of their arrival, and it then became a matter of containing any related damage.

The Monte Carlo had a varied history going back to just after the gold rush. In 1905 the original two story building became a one story building when the first story was burned out. The upper floor was lowered to the ground to become the main floor and the distinctive ornate front facade design was added.

It was variously a private club, restaurant, saloon, barber shop and grocery store over the years, often with multiple uses overlapping, like a kind of mini-mall. Since the building resembled three shops fastened together with the inner dividing walls removed, that comes as no surprise.

It passed through a succession of owners until it was acquired by Steve Herrmann in the late 1960s. Although Herrmann was first registered as a part owner in 1973, he was already operating a restaurant there in 1969, when the building suffered an earlier fire, one he says was attributed to electrical causes.

In 1979 the Monte Carlo served a brief stint as a grocery store after the DCW Trading Post burned down. Finally it became a seasonal enterprise, selling books, clothing, shoes and knick knacks. Herrmann also owns and operates the Dawson Hardware Store and the Flora Dora, just across the back lane on Second Avenue.

Herrmann says the building was insured, "but it's never enough of course." A storage shed at the back was also saved from the fire, even though much of the material stored inside was removed just in case neighbouring businesses pitched in to lend a hand at this.

Buildings like the Monte Carlo are extremely difficult to save in a fire. They are old and often constructed of several buildings joined together over the years. Interior

The Sun obtained funding in late 2009 from the City of Dawson, YTG's Heritage Branch and the Community Development Fund to conserve and archive early issues and make them available once again in the public domain. This is a great resource for students, writers and historians, and also for prospective tourists with an interest in Dawson City's life. Each month, we are re-printing our front pages from 20 years ago (seen above) as a souvenir of our lively history. If you want to see page 2 and beyond, check out our website. ## The Best Bad Luck

by Erika Rauguth-Treleaven, Port Alberni, B.C.

"Hey, Lucky, give me a hand with this bucket, would ya?" Chase Prow called over the noise of the river. There was no use shouting, so I gave him the sign that I would be there in a second. I pushed my shovel in the pile of gray muck that I'd been feeding into the sluice, and stepped onto the board bridge we'd created to cross the small stream that ran through the middle of our mine. Suddenly, I noticed the landscape shifting and then heard a thunderous crack. Before I knew it, I was up to my waist in muddy creek water. Chase appeared at the water's edge and gave a low whistle. "Should'a known that was gonna happen and when it did, should'a known it was gonna be you. Geez, Lucky, you got no luck at all!"

My mother wanted me to become a doctor so naturally, being the staunch Presbyterian she was, she named me Luke. As it turned out, though, I wasn't quite the doctoring type, not in the role of physician at least. By seven, after two broken legs and nearly drowning in a ditch, my father nicknamed me Lucky, as in "Wow, you're lucky you're still alive." The name and my propensity for calamity stuck.

Chase and I had been mining just south of Dawson City for almost two years. At first we were glad to have a claim at all, but as time went on, what had seemed like my first hint of good luck in years turned into the worst luck I'd had yet. All the freezing nights and mosquito filled days, the sweat and blood has yielded nothing more than frustration and grief.

"It's a bum claim, no doubt about it." Chase said every time we looked at our near empty poke.

"Yeah, but we've got debts." I muttered. "And we don't even have enough for passage home. We've gotta keep keepin' on. What on earth else are we s'posed to do?"

"Flee under the cover of darkness and hide like criminals on board one of the ships south." Chase said, as serious as death.

I shook my head. Call me crazy (and believe me, they do) but I've got just enough hope to keep us going. And under it all, though I didn't mention it to Chase, I always had the strangest inkling that, one day, my luck was going to change.

You see, it was widely acknowledged that I was the unluckiest man in the north. My bad fortune was the stuff of legend, spoken of in hushed tones around smoke-filled bars throughout the Klondike and beyond. My entire career as a prospector had been marked by misfortune and plain old catastrophe.

It started almost right away. I was standing on the Seattle docks the day the Portland landed, bursting at the seams with the newly wealthy, fresh from the gold fields. Within no time, the story was everywhere, but I had heard it firsthand on the docks that day. I raced directly to the ticket office to buy myself a one way ticket to the land of the midnight sun!

I wasn't the only one with that in mind, however. No sooner did I have my ticket in hand when I got caught in a mob headed to the shipping office. When I woke up two days later, I had a broken arm and three cracked ribs and one hell of a headache. And my ticket, well, someone luckier than me found it in the street and was long gone.

When I finally mended and had saved enough for a second attempt, I got all the way to the Chilkoot. That was where I met Chase the first time, although he didn't recognize me when we met again on account of how swollen my face was from my pack horse kicking me in the jaw. Compared to lots of guys, I did well. I only lost half my supplies, and that was after we'd made it all the way to the top. My oil lamp fell over during a particularly windy night and the blaze took my tent and half my supplies. Mildly singed, I was about to head down and restock, but fortunately for me, Jasper Niellson had a heart attack and I managed to glean what I needed from his stash. Niellson, as most know, had previously held the title of "Unluckiest Cheechako in the Klondike". I inherited the title along with his dried beans and red wool longjohns.

By the time I made Bennett Lake, most people were avoiding me. My fame had preceded me, my reputation for trouble only being made worse by the incident involving that Dutch miner near Dead Horse Trail. (It wasn't actually my fault, you see, as neither of us knew the gun was loaded). It became pretty easy to see the religious folk, though, as they were the ones who made the sign of the cross whenever they saw me coming.

Actually arriving at Bennett Lake was a feat for anyone, but for me, it was a miracle. That was when my good fortune ended, though. Not one, not two but THREE rafts full of my supplies broke apart before I finally made it through the rapids to Dawson. I drew a pretty good crowd by the third attempt, though. As Chase recalls, "It was like watching a barn burn. You hated to look but you just couldn't turn your eyes away."

I was so happy to make Dawson City, I knelt right down in the mud and kissed the mucky gray ground. I stood to my feet, pulled my pipe out of my pocket and lit the last smidgen of tobacco I had left. By this point, Chase had agreed to share a claim with me. In most folks' opinion, that made him either the bravest man in the north or the stupidest.

"Chase," I said, "I feel like things are gonna be different for me here! I feel a new life, a new future, a new hope burning in my chest..."

"That's 'cause yer shirt just caught fire, Lucky." he said casually.

"Lucky," Chase's monotone pulled me from my reminiscing, "I think we have some visitors."

He motioned to the wooded area at the edge of our claim. I have slightly better vision than Chase (in my good eye) and I could make out a tall, broad shouldered man I had never seen before. He was wearing a dark suit, and his face was covered by a thick beard and a stern expression. Beside the stranger was someone I knew only too well. Walking towards us at a steady gait, was Walt Simpkins, the sneaky lout that sold us this good-for-nothing piece of land.

Now, I'd blame myself for taking the deal, but it was our first day in town and to be honest, I didn't know anything about how things worked in the Klondike. Dawson City, it turned out, was a town unlike any I had ever seen. It had buildings and stores, a hospital and a church, and even added a theater later that year, but under it all, the population was a strange, eclectic collection of wanderers and fortune seekers. The type of folk that settled there, well they probably would have been dispersed among the normal population anywhere else, but in Dawson, well they were all kind of grouped together, like when fish gather in a back eddy and you can catch them with just a net.

The folks in Dawson, though, they were the strangest fish I'd ever seen. And in every bunch of fish, you can bet there will be a shark. And in Dawson City, it was Simpkins. He was small dark-haired man with a wide, oily black moustache atop an unusually wide mouth. His small, dark eyes never seemed to move off your face when he was talking to you, giving you the feeling that you were not as much his customer as his prey.

I had a bad feeling the minute we entered the office, and I glanced at Chase. He shrugged, as if he were reading my mind. "Let's just hear him out." he whispered.

Simpkins had a fairly straightforward business model. He bought up claims from the desperate and distraught for the price of a ticket home and then resold them to newcomers at ten times their worth. Now you have to understand, by the time the stampede got to Dawson, most of the claims were gone. The only way to get a claim was from some tired miner, or from someone like Simpkins.

Simpkin's offer was simple. He had a small claim that had just come into his possession, and he was willing to sell it to Chase and I for half our supplies, all our savings, and then a regular payment until the debt was settled. It was a terrible deal, and we knew it, but what options did we have?

"I have a good feeling about this fellas." said Simpkins in his raspy voice. "This property is right next to mine. Hell, you can see my sluice from your sluice. Same creek, same dirt. And I've had the biggest yield every year for the past three. You'll be wealthy in no time."

What he didn't tell us was that while he'd been getting good colour on his side, he'd watched three sets of neighbours try and fail for three years straight. He'd known all along that the claim was a bust.

Now, I had a sinking feeling watching Simpkins and the stranger approach us. It was true that Chase and I were behind some on our payments to Simpkins, but hardly enough to necessitate the presence of an official, if that's what this fellow was. What's more, what good would it do for Simpkins to take it now, when he was getting almost every bit of colour we pulled out anyway?

We met the two men half way. "Hello, there gentlemen. Is there something we can do for you?"

Simpkins gave us a wide smile, too wide to mean anything good. "Yes, there is Henderson. Or should I call you "Lucky"?" There was an irritating laugh under his words that got my dander up.

"Doesn't much matter. What's your business, Simpkins?"

"Well, as it stands, I have asked Mr. Ogilvie here to come over and adjust our markers. It seems that since the land has changed hands so many times, there may have been a few...errors."

Chase stepped forward. "What kind of errors?"

Simpkins shrugged and unfolded a piece of paper. On it, we could see a rough outline of both sides of the river, with property lines and claim numbers. He pointed to the square labled 107. "You see boys, this here is you. And Claim 108, that's me. Now, on the map that I had been given, with the best information on hand" he glanced at the stern bearded man for verification, "the property line between our claims was right here" he drew his finger along it on the map "exactly where we have had it for the past two years."

"However," he continued, "it has come to Mr. Ogilvie's attention, as he is the one in charge of these things, that the line is actually supposed to be here." He pointed to a dotted line no more than a nickel width from the original line.

Chase shrugged. "Don't sees how that makes much difference."

"Oh, but it does, it does!" Simpkins eyebrows bobbed up and down vigorously. "You see, these small distances on the map can translate into much larger ones on the ground. This distance is the equivalent to fifty feet."

I felt my stomach lurch. "Fifty feet! That moves the line right between our cabin and the sluice. That puts our sluice, and all the area we've mined, on your property!"

Simpkins began to chuckle. "Well, at least you've still got your cabin. And some" he motioned to the rocky patch of bush beyond "somewhat usable land."

"This is crazy!" I sputtered.

Simpkins reached over and patted me on the shoulder. "Ah, Lucky, it seems that your bad luck just goes on and on and on!"

"There has to be some mistake," said Chase in disbelief.

Simpkins shrugged. "Sorry, Chase, but the official surveys don't lie."

"Not if you aren't looking at them upside down." It was the first time that Ogilvie had spoken since he had arrived. He had a deep, firm voice that seemed to echo through the river valley.

Even Simpkins jumped and then chuckled, more nervously this time. "That's right! That's right."

Ogilvie turned towards the dark haired man. "No, I mean you, Mr. Simpkins. You are looking the map upside down."

Simpkins froze and the surveyor reached out and took the paper from him. He tilted the paper slightly, and then directed us to look. "And once more, you have misinterpreted the lines. If you had listened when I first came to you with this, you would have a clearer understanding," Ogilvie said with authority. "This does not extend your claim by fifty feet. On the contrary. It reduces your property by fifty-five feet!"

Chase immediately began calculating. "That puts our property line directly over fifty-five feet..."

"Just past Simpkin's mine!" I exclaimed.

"That is correct." Ogilvie confirmed. "And therefore making you the rightful owner of all minerals and resources drawn from the property."

Simpkins face almost exploded as he attempted to speak. "But that's not possible."

"As you said, Simpkins, the official survey does not lie."

He turned to Chase and me. "Well, it appears that you fellows have met with some good fortune. If you will excuse me, I have important business to get back to. Best of luck to both of you with your new acquisition"

Chase let out a whoop. "Yes sir! Thank you sir!" He slapped me on the back. "Well, Lucky, I guess this claim wasn't the bust we figured."

"It's the best bad luck I've had yet!" I agreed.

Klondike Luck

*The luck of the Klondike is not just found in the muck and the pays of a creek.
'Cause a lonely heart and some fickle luck can bring tears to a sourdough's cheek.*

Dupuis and I were gettin' high in a place called the Hobo Bar.
It was set off back, down the track in the hulk of a Pullman car.
The excitement was high (like Dupuis and I), 'bout a rumor goin' roun', it seems that a train, out 'n the main was headin' into town.

It wasn't gold so we'd bin told, that made this train so neat, but a load of girls all laces and curls, with slippers on their feet!
This type of lady (somewhat shady), had never once bin here.
It gave me chills, imagine the thrills of having them so near.

Peaches and cream, it sounds like a dream, rouge and lipstick red, frilly skirts, stuffed full shirts, feathers on their head!
Then says Dupuis (he's from Pariee), "There's secrets under them gowns, dainty feet, toes painted neat, and ribbons trailing down".

"Don't tell me more." I said from the floor, where I found it easy to sit.
"My heads a buzz, full of fuzz, just thinking gives me a fit."
Then says Dupuis, "Come Mon ami, we'll sit out by the track".
So he helped me up (I grabbed my cup), and led me out the back.

We settled down near the ground behind that noisy bar,
I couldn't speak my head was weak, we waited for that car.
Then I said through my fuzzy head, "Just tell me one thing more,
I want to hear with them ladies dear, just what we have in store".

Now old Dupuis he says to me, "Mon Dieu, you won't believe!"
"Things they say, their sweet sashay, they'll have you on your knee".
I grabbed my cup and drank it up, my head was filled with awe, to be so near those ladies dear, and things I'd never saw.

I'd bin up here for more'n a year workin' my stingy claim,
I've often thought and truly fought, hard to make my fame.
Each few days I'd clean my pays and hike on into town, buy some grub, soak in a tub, then into the whiskey drown.

It's mighty hard, you die by the yard working a Klondike creek, the ground is rough the weather's tough, it's not for the soft or weak.
The story's old, we come for gold, we slave with a crazy stare, but it's all for naught, the gold could rot without a love to share.

I look at Dupuis, and "Friend" says me, "We got to be there first".
"Thinking of girls, all laces and curls, is making me really thirst".
"Not for the rye, I wouldn't try to drink another down".
"It's for the girls, the laces and curls, what's under that satin gown".

Dupuis comes back with another sack of whiskey oh so neat,
I fill my cup and drink it up and try to find my feet.
We make our way to the rail-way, station down the track.
I want to be the first to see a girl and bring her back.

My excitement's high, I nearly die waiting for that car.
I down a shot of that oily rot we'd taken from the bar.
My pal Dupuis he says to me, "I think I see the train".
I try to look but the whiskey took, the seein' from my brain.

The train pulls in and I try to grin as the ladies all step down.
I curse my eyes for telling lies, I see no lacey gown.
I feel a heave and then believe my luck is surely done.
Not one curl on any girl, they're all dressed like a Nun!

Changing spaces

by Samantha Elmsley

I've always been amazed by the power of art to transform everyday spaces. Whether an installation in a popular park or a painting hung in a public gazebo, art has a way of reimagining the quotidian, forcing us to pay attention all over again.

Such transformations were rampant in Dawson over the Riverside Arts Festival weekend, (August 15 to 19) beginning with the gallery hop Thursday night. Unusual spaces opened their doors to the public and unleashed a host of art installations and presentations, in spaces ranging from the museum gallery to (my favourite) a shed behind Bonanza B&B. Here, artist Andrea Pelletier had set up a video installation, and squeezed two mattresses covered in sheets and pillows on to the floor. Our group crowded in to watch, and the whole effect was that of a slumber party in a favourite hideout. In this case, the space contributed to the experience of the video.

Though the night was called a gallery hop, art was hosted in such unusual places that it felt more like an art- on- the- street event: Dawson's answer to Nuit

Blanche.

Sarah Fuller's installation in Bear Creek for "The Natural and the Manufactured" exhibition drew more directly on questions of place and space. Fuller hung giant photographs, printed on canvas, of houses that had been moved from Bear Creek to Dawson City. In town, she placed signs in front of those moved houses to call attention to their history—not unlike the aim behind the Parks signs, as Fuller attested in her talk on Friday. This project, titled "The Homecoming", played directly on the relationship between places, asking questions about the memories embodied there.

In a similar way, Rebekah Miller's "Seen Unseen" on 9th Avenue called attention to place by turning the lens back on to the viewer, in this way forcing a new awareness of situation. Miller pasted eyes on to birch and poplar trees along the trail, actively demonstrating the way in which the world "looks back" at the human subject, a topic discussed at length by Robert Brighurst in his lecture for "The Natural and the Manufactured".

Even the Discovery Days parade can be seen as challenging and changing the everyday use and perceptions of space. Parades clear the streets, creating a spectacle in the middle of the road for people to view and participate in. All eyes were on the road, watching everything from the Museum staking the motherlode to an unfortunate taxi- hailer being dragged, face down and clinging to the car by its fingertips, behind the cab. As those who worked hard on the floats would attest, I suspect, the float itself—with its decorations and people acting out specific scenarios—is a kind of performance art.

Wherever you were in Dawson over the weekend, art was at work to transform it. Hold on to your illusions until next year, when art will fill the streets again.

Which Dog Might You Be?

As with all people, all dogs have distinct personalities. These personalities in dogs are usually most prevalent, whereas within humans these personalities are often hidden, not easily noticed by others nor oneself. So, this essay is to ask you to take a deep look into yourself, into the secrets of your soul (as it were). It is easy to do when you are able to compare yourself with an outside figure, that is not human, it is for this reason that I ask: which dog might you be?

It has often been stated that dogs will usually take on the personality of their human, and in many instances this is true. No human is born aggressive and in the same manner neither is any dog. Dogs, like humans, learn their behaviours from those that they are around most often in their infancy and youth. Certain so-called aggressive dog breeds is truly an inaccurate statement. Dogs learn their aggression from their humans, just as humans learn their aggression from their parents or guardians. Yet this is not the subject of my essay, it is just a manner by which to associate personality types within humans to the various personalities of dogs, and how those personalities can reflect the similarities between the human owner and their dog, and how even those who do not have dogs might be able to compare themselves with any dog personality. Since domestic dogs learn their personality from their human owner, it is possible to relate or compare one personality with another.

Now, let us examine the various personalities in dogs, which are exactly the same types of personalities as humans share. Are you the type of dog who is lethargic, having almost no energy, and finds it a chore to even get up and eat your dinner? This type of dog is considered to be lazy and would not fight to save its own life, forget anyone else's. This type of personality in a dog will even sometimes mean that it is too lazy to even go outside to do its business, forget trying to get this type of dog to do any type of work. Perhaps this sounds like you. If it does, then you need to get up, exercise, find a job, feel good about yourself and you may possibly alter your personality.

The next dog personality which you might share is a good personality type. The dog is friendly, trusting and loving with everyone, gentle and peaceful within itself and its surroundings. If you share this type of personality, there is basically nothing necessary to alter, but there is a slight danger in this personality. This type of personality may trust too easily, which can place this type of individual in dangerous situations. It can be very dangerous to trust too readily and easily, you can get seriously hurt by others.

The next personality to examine is guard dog syndrome. This type of dog is loving and affectionate with its family, but aggressive towards strangers, and anyone who steps into its territory. Within a human this is deemed as jealousy. This person will be very affectionate towards his/her husband/wife and family, and will jealously and possibly violently protect them from friends or strangers who may venture to closely to what this person believes belongs to him or her. This person considers their family as private property and will fiercely defend family honour—even to the death.

Next we look at the aggressive personality of dogs. These dogs are vicious, violent and dangerous. These dogs will attack anyone and other dogs without provocation. These dogs do not need an excuse to attack, they will even attach defenceless women and children. The only solution to these types of dogs (as deemed by society) is to shoot them dead. Sadly, more and more humans display this personality, and when they train their dogs to be aggressive attackers, I suggest shoot the human, save the dog, and it can be re-trained easier than this type of human. This type of human will attack closest family members without provocation. This personality is a danger and threat to his/her husband/wife, and more importantly a danger to any children in the family unit.

Perhaps this type of dog describes you, the type with an over-active sex drive. This type of dog with mount every leg it sees, regardless of age, gender, or breed. This personality in humans reflects a person who is a danger to everyone. This person is a predator, who will prey on anyone or anything which is alive. This personality type will sexually prey on animals, children, women, men, boys, anyone at all. This person will even carry this type of attitude into business or work life. This person will figuratively “screw” everyone he or she can. Bad business deals, fraudulent dealings, fraudulently increase prices, agree to do a certain job but never fulfill the obligation. This is not a comfortable person to be around, though he or she will appear friendly and outgoing. This person, out of necessity, is able to hide their intentions, and their agenda, otherwise they could not go as long in their hunting as they are able to do. They are able to conceal their intentions without the expenditure of much energy. If you have this type of personality, I suggest that you get help, psychiatric and legal—you will need both.

The final personality I will describe here is the best personality a dog or person can have. It is a perfectly balanced personality. This dog is loyal, playful. protective when necessary, content, trusting but not overly trusting, active and lethargic, and a well balanced sex drive. A person who shares this personality is wise, honest, content with what he/she already has, will protect family and friends from real (not perceived or imagined) danger. This person has the ability to trust, but realizes that trust is earned not freely given to anyone or everyone. When it is time to work, this type of person will work, and do his/her best at any job put before them. They will enjoy their work, and actually be happy in whatever position they hold. When it is time to rest, this person will rest and even become quite lazy on days off. Yet this same person finds time and energy to be playful with family and friends. This person is a pleasure to be around, and the company of this person is enjoyed. This person may get into trouble, but this person always deeply regrets his/her errors and is able to realize that as a human, errors are unavoidable.

Of course, there are numerous other personalities which humans share with dogs, but as this essay is becoming too long already. Should any readers wish that I proceed further on this topic, please write into the Sun with your request that I proceed with this analogy.

Still, as always, this is just my opinion.

Is the Yukon food secure?

By Samantha Elmsley

I should begin this article by saying that I don't know the answer to my own question. The aim of this article is to explore what food security means, and weigh the factors that would determine whether the Yukon has it. In other words, if we were struck by a zombie apocalypse, would Yukoners be able to feed themselves? You decide.

Food security, loosely defined as whether or not a region has stable access to adequate amounts of nutritious food, is measured differently between organizations. The World Health Organization (WHO) bases its evaluation on "three pillars: food availability (sufficient quantities of food available on a consistent basis), food access (having sufficient resources to obtain appropriate foods for a nutritious diet) [and] food use (appropriate use based on knowledge of basic nutrition and care, as well as adequate water and sanitation)". This definition, according to the website, grew out of the World Food Summit in 1996, which helped solidify many commonly held principles of food security.

However, the concept of food security is far from completely fixed. The Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) definition adds stability to the mix. In a 2006 briefing on food security, the FAO states that "to be food secure, a population, household or individual must have access to adequate food at all times. They should not risk losing access to food as a consequence of sudden shocks (e.g. an economic or climatic crisis) or cyclical events (e.g. seasonal food insecurity)".

Between these two organizations alone, the definition of what food security actually is already differs. This makes it pretty hard to state conclusively whether or not a community is food secure, but readers, I invite you to give it the old college try.

According to a 2008 government report "Yukon Agriculture: State of the Industry", "less than two per cent of [land in the Yukon] is suitable for agricultural development because of limitations of geography, climate and soils". Not all of this potential farmland is in use, which means that the Yukon often relies on southern growers to ship their product north. As those who have experienced northern grocery shopping know, not all of this produce arrives fresh. Besides long distances from farm to table, transported foods are also subject to breakdowns or holdups on the road: bread that was expected to arrive Tuesday may not come in until Thursday. If you don't have a loaf, you're baking your own or making do with something else.

Besides eating locally farmed or shipped food, Yukon residents have other means of filling their bellies. Personal gardens and greenhouses are popular in Dawson, yielding small harvests throughout the sun-drenched summer months. Foraging, and hunting and fishing for some, are also options if the participants know what to look for (and have the tools and permits to kill it).

So is the Yukon food secure? It's worth discussing, though tricky to answer. I invite you to let this debate rage around your dinner table tonight—and let me know if you come up with any conclusions.

On sewer and water

To council,

How come I am having to pay for sewer and water on a trailer that was disconnected, which by the way I had to pay for and the senior financial officer won't give me a credit for the bill. Now that does not make sense to me. Please explain it.

Also, why do we not use meters? It costs Whitehorse $1.68 cu meter of water, which is not so bad when you figure that is over 450 gallons. At least that way I could control what I use, instead I have you dictating to me what I have to pay. By the way what formula is used to calculate out these rates? Please explain.

Also, I want to know how long these rates are going to be in effect?

I also want to know if and when the City is taking over the sewer plant? Who is going to work it? If we do not have anyone to work it, what is it going to cost us to hire out to run this operation? Please explain.

I would also like to know what I am paying for in wages and other benefits to the CAO – the whole contract that was agreed by mayor and council of the day, also the chief financial officer and the development officer, who walks his dog off leash all the time. (Those of you who don't know him, he dictates what you can and can't have on your property.) Also, all other benefits that they get, the community should know what they are paying for.

Please let all your high end officials know that I have now paid my extortion money and they can all have more time off, to think up more ways to gouge the working man.

VISITOR OF THE WEEK

at the Klondike Nugget & Ivory Shop

Visitor Names: Erika Janas

Traveling from: Whitehorse

Comments about their visit:

"I love the way this place has managed to keep its authenticity. First visit on Aug 22nd, 1996, fell in love immediately, kept coming back, moved to Whitehorse, about to move to Dawson??

"It would be quick to say what I do NOT love about this place."

Visitor of the Week is brought to you by the Dawson City Chamber of Commerce and the Klondike Sun
