Klondike Development Organization secures City of Dawson funding for another year

Story & photo
by Dan Davidson

The City of Dawson has committed another $20,000 to supporting the efforts of the Klondike Development Organization to investigate and stimulate economic growth and social development in the Klondike region.

The Klondike Development Organization (KDO) is a partnership of the City of Dawson, the Dawson City Chamber of Commerce, the Klondike Visitors Association, the Dawson City Arts Society and Chief Isaac Incorporated (the development corporation of the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in).

The KDO vision is to help create "A resilient Klondike where highly engaged citizens, networks and organizations collaborate to build a sustainable economy."

As such it has embarked on a number of studies and projects growing out of a five-year plan first announced in 2011. There are seven main strands of this plan, including: Enterprise Retention and Development, Research (in a variety of areas), Key Sector Development, Investment Capital Pool, Partnership Forums (quarterly), Community Marketing, Social Enterprise.

So far the KDO has managed to encourage the establishment of a private sector seasonal bus service to and from Whitehorse, based on its research, and is currently working on plans for an entry level apartment building of 12 to 20 units, in collaboration with the Yukon Housing Corporation and CMHC. KDO has done substantial research into the housing market in the Klondike and is aiming the new complex of compact rental units at the target audience of single individuals, couples, or seniors.

The City of Dawson's contribution amounts to 19 percent of the KDO's $103,992 budget. The Government of Canada, through CanNor and CMHC is providing 38 percent, the Yukon government 36 percent and the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in 7 percent. Most of the member groups also donate in-kind services.

Uffish Thoughts: What are we thankful for?

By Dan Davidson

This column is doing double duty. It started out as a short talk in St. Paul's Anglican Church on Thanksgiving Sunday and has been slightly revised for this space. That's all I need to tell you. The essay will explain the rest.

On the last Sunday that he was well enough to join us for coffee in the Richard Martin Memorial Chapel after morning service, Ken Snider beckoned me over and asked, in the increasingly slow and quiet voice that Parkinson's disease had left him with at that point, if I would consider speaking about the newspaper for about five minutes as part of the Thanksgiving service.

Ken planned our Thanksgiving service and asked four of us to speak in place of the usual sermon. Roberta Joseph spoke of the importance of Chinook salmon to the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in people. Shirley Pennell and Michael Mason spoke about their respective art forms.

I've been wondering ever since just exactly what he had in mind when he made that particular request to me, and I'm only hoping that these few words will come close to his wishes.

I know that communication and language were things dear to Ken's heart, and that he has been just as frustrated as my father-in-law was, nearly 30 years ago, by the inexorable erosion of his ability to read aloud and speak over the last several years. So here I go.

When it comes to our local newspaper, what am I thankful for? What should you be thankful for?

We're approaching the 25th anniversary of the time when a group of about 10 of us sat down and began to plan the launching of the Klondike Sun. Some of the folks who sat with me, folks like Sourdough Sue Ward, John and Madeleine Gould, are no longer with us. Others, like Richard Blais, Kathy Gates and Michael, who did so much of our early darkroom work, no longer live here. Still others, like Dawne Mitchell and Chere Wilson, put in many years of service and moved on to other things.

Of that first board of directors, just Palma Berger and I are left, but there have been many others, dozens of others, in the years since then. The last time we had a list typed up, it filled two pages of two-column paper.

Not all the people who have worked at the Sun have served time on the governing board. There's a larger group of people who have contributed to the paper, taking pictures, submitting columns, proof reading, taking care of distribution and subscriptions, drawing cartoons and making decisions about how the paper should look. Its current design came from the intense work of a very active group of board members two years ago, and we're still benefitting from their unpaid efforts.

And that's not even mentioning the people, mostly women, who have staffed the office or have been our summer students, always for less money than their contributions would merit, but as much as we could afford.

Why have we all done it? Well, we believe in the need for the town to communicate with itself. We set out to provide a record of the major events in the community and to reflect ourselves to ourselves, as well as shining our light a little further afield.

I'm thankful for all the people who have seen fit to contribute their time and effort to a community enterprise that I have always felt had some merit. While my name may be the most obvious one on display over the years, I'm just one piece of the puzzle that is the Klondike Sun.

I'm thankful for the support of our advertisers, without which there would be no paper, and the good service that has been given to us by our printers at the Yukon News.

I'm thankful for the words of encouragement that we often hear from people in the community and from our subscribers in the wider world; thankful for the interest that we see reflected in the monthly statistics on our Facebook page. I'm even thankful for our critics, who cause us to think more carefully about what we put into the paper.

Back at the beginning I also asked what you should be thankful for. I hope you won't take this the wrong way, and

I'm certainly not asking you to include me in this thought, but you should be thankful for the people who have volunteered their time and efforts to give you something that they thought would help make the town a better place. Just sticking with the theme of communication, that could be said of us at the Sun, but also of the people who give time to CFYT-FM.

Outside of that theme there are dozens of other volunteer organizations in the community. There were more than 70 of them the last time we at the Sun made a list, and they are all part of the fabric of the community quilt that is Dawson and the Klondike.

Thank you for listening.

Ken was unable to attend the service he had planned, but was able to watch and hear it by one of those miracles of technology. While in church with brother John and mother, Aldene, Paul Snider used his iPhone to Facetime the entire service to an iPad at the Snider home across town, where Ken watched and listened with his daughters, Hope and Grace, and remaining sons, Peter and Richard.

Falling in the River

Story by Charles Dagostin

A long time ago two boys named Charles and John were walking in the woods near a river and the youngest one, John, fell into the water. He couldn't swim well then the current pulled him down into the water! Charles jumped into the water after his brother but the current pulled him down too! He could just barely see John.
The water was cold and it felt like it was freezing his toes. Charles felt something touching him. It was his brother! He pulled John on to a log that was floating in the middle of the river. They tried to paddle to shore but the current was too strong. So the boys let the current push them along. The boys became drowsy and weak. The current was slow now but the boys didn't even notice. When the brothers woke up the current had carried them to Dawson City. They thought it would be hopeless to try to paddle back to the shore. Just then the workers on the ferry saw them. They saved the boys and used the ferry to get back to the shore. Their parents were very happy to see Charles and John and that night the whole family had the best supper ever.

Our son, Charlie, wrote this story when he was 8 years old. Even at this early age he knew how important the people who work on the ferry were in our lives. This summer, ferry workers have saved a life and have safely ferried thousands of people across the river. Mahsi Cho to the kind, caring and smiling individuals who work on the ferry!
Enjoy the winter and we look forward to traveling with you next summer!

This vital issue deserves a national inquiry

Dear Editor:

There has been a lot of discussion around the call for an inquiry into the serious and troubling issue of murdered and missing aboriginal women in Canada.
In the Yukon, this was cemented by Premier Darrell Pasloski passing a unanimous motion in the Yukon legislature calling for a national inquiry.
This decision was born from the premier's meeting on July 24th of this year at Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., where our country's 13 provincial and territorial leaders called on the federal government to have such an inquiry.
At that time, Prime Minister Stephen Harper stated that he remains skeptical of commissions of inquiry generally, not to say they never work, or never produce good recommendations.
However, his experience has been they almost always run over time, over budget, and often the recommendations prove to be of limited utility.
The federal government has taken concrete and measurable actions that deal, head-on, with many of the conditions that contribute to the alarming rates of murdered and missing aboriginal women.
We have been studying several different venues and have provided funding for multi year studies within various branches of our government.
Funding elements within the justice system has been provided to increase the efficacy of both prevention programs as well as investigative techniques (employed) by organizations and police services.
In the House of Commons, we supported a unanimous motion calling for a parliamentary committee on murdered and missing aboriginal women; a report is due in 2014.
This committee is continuing its in-depth study, and parliamentary committees have a much higher impact on legislation necessary to address Canadian issues.
While the opposition has been calling for an inquest, it is important to note that an inquest alone is not the solution in and of itself, and to stop short with merely a call for action is not a genuine effort to address the issue.
The opposition has failed to support our government's very real efforts to improve the lives of aboriginal women.
Our introduction of real matrimonial property rights legislation; budget measures to support groups and organizations that focus on violence prevention; literacy investments; affordable housing funding like the $110 million for Nunavut and $600 million Canada-wide in Budget 2013; education and job-specific training initiatives; all of which are designed to improve social conditions providing opportunities that help reduce the risks currently faced by aboriginal women and girls.
Inquests can provide some challenges, and, in the worst cases, they fail to honour the victims and the families seeking closure, answers, and solutions.
To that end, I believe that a meaningful and complete inquest requires the participation both in human resource and financial terms from the provinces, territories, and the First Nation governments.
Many of the social conditions that enhance the risk and account for the disproportionate percentage of aboriginal women that go missing, are murdered, and suffer desperately low solution rates fall within the jurisdictional control of the provinces.
From social services; to housing; to municipal and provincial police forces; education and health care delivery, an inquest that does not have a solid partnership and participation of the provincial and territorial premiers and First Nation governments will only disappoint and frustrate those we seek to serve – those who deserve answers, solutions and closure.
As a former member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and as an investigator with Yukon's Safer Communities and Neighborhoods Unit, I have seen first-hand the path that leads an individual to increased risk and the impact of violence on individuals, families, communities, and our territory.
I do understand why Yukoners are seeking such an inquest, and it is my job as their representative to carry their message forward. So, I have joined the voice of Yukon citizens asking for a national inquiry on missing and murdered aboriginal women.
I also believe, that done properly, an inquest will serve to complement the already outstanding efforts our government is making to provide opportunity, hope, healing, and prosperity to all First Nation communities in Canada.

RSS Mentorship Program

Robert Service School in partnership with Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Education and School Council has created a mentorship program similar to the Big Brothers Big Sisters model. We are all very excited about this new program!
We will be developing and implementing one-on-one mentoring programs for K-12 students both in school and outside of school. Students will be matched with an adult mentor from the community who is a positive role model, and shares similar interests.
The goal of the program is to work towards improved outcomes with respect to school attendance, academic success and social skills by fostering positive relationships built on friendship, trust and empowerment.
We are now seeking adult mentors to volunteer and be a part of this rewarding and beneficial program! If you, or someone you know is interested in volunteering as a mentor or would like more information about becoming a mentor, please do not hesitate to contact me at Robert Service School (993-5435) or by e-mail at rss.mentorship.coordinator@gmail.com.

Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in celebrate 15 years of self-government

by Dan Davidson

The Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in and other members of the Dawson community came together on the evening Saturday, Sept. 28 to help TH celebrate 15 years of self-government achievements.

The evening began with welcome songs from the Hän Singers and Drummers and an opening prayer from Elder and Anglican Street Deacon Percy Henry. Once the feast was complete the celebration moved into a round of commemorative speeches, introduced by emcee Dave Keenan, former Grand Chief of the Council of Yukon First Nations and presently a member of the Teslin Tlingit Council and the Yukon Territory Water Board.

In his past life, Keenan was an NDP MLA and negotiator for the Teslin Tlingit Council's Final Land Claim and Self Government Agreements, so he was well versed in the subject matter at hand. He kept the evening moving along and, with the assistance of MLA Sandy Silver, punctuated the spaces between the speeches with rounds of trivia questions based on TH history and on the story of Land Claims.

Keenan began his introductions by saying that the community here is one in which all the segments – TH Council, municipal council and many other groups – are working together to achieve great things, which is why the last 15 years have been so successful.

"The wealth that's created (by this cooperation) isn't just monetary wealth. It's cultural wealth; it's keeping your culture; it's sharing the wealth; it's all those things that it takes to be a native person living in the Yukon today. That's what we're celebrating here, ladies and gentlemen."

Chief Eddie Taylor spoke of the beginnings of the process, when Yukon chiefs, some of whom came almost literally off the trap line, went to Ottawa to present Together Today for Our Children Tomorrow to Prime Minister Trudeau in 1973.

"From that day forward not only did that trip open the doors for Yukon First Nations, but I truly believe it opened the door for First Nations right across Canada."

Twenty years ago came the signing of the Umbrella Final Agreement, which established the framework for all the successful negotiations that have led to completed Land Claims and self-government agreements.

"Fifteen years ago we accomplished what many thought couldn't be done," Taylor said, "the establishment of our unique self-governing system and a fresh start for our First Nations within Yukon."

"Nurturing a government has not been without its challenges and there are many hurdles to overcome before we realize the visions laid out for us by our elders, but we are on a trail of our own making, the trail that was blazed by people like Percy Henry, Steve Taylor, Angie Joseph-Rear, Peggy Kormendy."

Assembly of First Nations Vice Chief Mike Smith provided a cautionary note along with his congratulations.

"The Land Claims agreement didn't actually give us anything. All it did was recognize our rights as First Nations people who live on this land."

"It's really important that we recognize and pay tribute today to those who have worked so hard on this land claims, the people who have survived the Gold Rush."

His caution was that in signing off on further intergovernmental agreements in the future, First Nations might, in some fashion, actually end up relinquishing some of the gains they have made.

Klondike MLA Sandy Silver was the next to speak.

"Way back in 1998, while I was learning the ropes at Robert Service School, other people in town were up to something of extreme importance. They were putting their signatures on a groundbreaking document. They were wrapping up many years of very hard work and setting in motion many more."

"On July 16, 1998, Chief Steve Taylor, Percy Henry, Peggy Kormendy, Hilda Titus, Angie Joseph-Rear, Edward Roberts, Robert Rear, Art Christiansen, Duane Taylor, Fred Taylor, Karen Farr, Trudy Lindgren, Ronald Johnson, Tim Gerberding and Ed Kormendy all signed the Final and Self-Government Agreements on behalf of Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in. Some of those signatories are no longer with us and on days such as this, it is important to remember their contribution to our community."

"I want to congratulate the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in people. You made these agreements happen and as a result we are all making history. Together, we are leading the country in implementing a renewed governance arrangement, one that reflects the traditional principles of respect and reciprocity and guides us in working together toward our common goals. There are people across Canada and around the world watching what you have accomplished and what we are building together."

Mayor Wayne Potoroka had donned the chain of office for this event. Potoroka has been employed by the First Nation since shortly after the agreements were signed in 1998, and is currently their Director of Communication & Policy.

He recalled a time when the entire staff could sit around a large circular table, which has since been retired to another building, and how much the organization has grown since that time.

"I'm very proud of the very small role that I've played in that growth, but it pales in comparison to how proud I am to be the mayor of the town where the successes of this First Nation are celebrated, embraced, and possible."

"For the past 15 years every Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in success, no matter how small, has helped make this town feel a little bit better and a little bit more complete," Potoroka said.

"The Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in have accomplished great things in extraordinary circumstances, and those achievements are a big part of what's special about this place; and it's a story I think that's worth sharing ... with the rest of Canada and the world."

Elder Percy Henry, who, true to form, had arrived at the gathering fresh from a hunting trip, gave the last of the evening's speeches.

Henry spoke briefly about his relationships with Elijah Smith and Harry Allen, two of the Land Claims pioneers. He said he loves to speak with young people about these things at the school, the college and other places.

"I am so proud to be here with you to tell some of the story of the early days ... of how far we have come and how far we need to go. I speak from the heart. Thank you for this opportunity to speak and thank you for everyone involved in putting this evening together."

The evening concluded with a demonstration of jigging and dancing put on by elder Victor Henry's students from the Robert Service School. Audience members were drafted to join the kids.

Border to Border Patrol arrives in Dawson

Sgt. John "Mitch" Mitchell greets Warrant Officer Mark St. Pierre.

Dawson's Ranger Patrol pulled up to the banks of the Yukon River just over the dike from the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Admin. Building close to their expected arrival time of 15:30 hours (3:30 p.m.) on Monday, greeted by Ranger Sgt. John Mitchell and a handful of locals.

The Dawson patrol had picked up Warrant Officer Mark St. Pierre from the Pelly Crossing Patrol at Coffee Creek/Kirkman Creek the day before, after which the Pelly group had headed home.

The stated purpose of the Yukon Border to Border Exercise, as devised by Mitchell, is "to determine the feasibility of (having 1st Canadian Ranger Patrol Group) respond to an incident in the Yukon River drainage system by boat along its entire Canadian waterway."

Several patrols were responsible for various legs of the journey, each handing St. Pierre off to the next group and returning to its home base when its part was done.

Atlin Patrol began the exercise, travelling by boat to the Alaska Border near Atlin on September 25 and continuing on to link up with the Carcross Patrol on Tagish Lake.

Carcross Patrol travelled the next day by boat through Tagish Lake and Marsh Lakes to Schwatka Lake, and linked up with Whitehorse Patrol in Whitehorse.

On September 27 Whitehorse Patrol travelled by boat down the Yukon River to link up with Carmacks Patrol at Big Salmon/

Eagle Rock.

On September 28 Carmacks Patrol travelled by boat down Yukon River to linkup with the Pelly Crossing Patrol at Minto Landing.

On September 29 the Pelly Crossing Patrol travelled by boat down the Yukon River to link up with Dawson Patrol at Coffee Creek/Kirkman Creek, where they spent the night.

Dawson Patrol completed the exercise on October 1 and 2, travelling by boat to the Alaska Border and then returning to Dawson.

In all, 24 Canadian Rangers from Atlin, Carcross, Whitehorse, Carmacks, Pelly Crossing and Dawson City Ranger Patrols participated in this exercise.

OBITUARY

William (Bill) Francis Armstrong

May 14, 1956 (Nipawin, SK) to January 18, 2013 (Yukon)

Bill passed away unexpectedly at age 56 in his Yukon home where he was living his dream of mining for gold.

He grew up on the family farm north of Carrot River, SK, the sixth child and fourth son of Jim and Betty Armstrong. He assisted on the home farm, worked for neighbours, and showed an early aptitude for all things mechanical. Bill participated in sports during his school years and graduated from CRHS in 1974.

Most of his adult life was spent in the Yukon. He loved the north with its opportunities for outdoor activities and privacy: camping, canoeing, hiking, snowshoeing, skiing, fishing, observing nature and sharing adventures with family and friends. Bill respected all animals, birds and wildlife; he was deeply attached to dogs, especially Nibs and Sam. He was employed as a heavy equipment operator and heavy duty mechanic prior to mining for gold full-time.

A private family gathering to celebrate his life was held at Dome Creek, Yukon, on July 1.

Bill's memory will remain in the hearts of those who survive him: his ex-wife, Linda Rapp; daughters, Danielle Fendrick (Stuart), Eliza Pahl (Sheldon), and two grand-daughters, Rory and Harper Pahl, Whitehorse, YT; his mother, Betty Armstrong, Carrot River, SK; siblings, Anne (Rich), Jan (Gene), Wray, John (Betty-Jean), Deborah (Michel), Rick (Elaine), Ed (Jacki), Wendy, Dave (Liz); many special nieces and nephews; his cousins, particularly the Roberts' families; and a large extended family; also his friends and neighbours in Dawson City and the gold mining community.

He was predeceased by his father, Jim Armstrong; brother, Allan; and his grandparents.

Thank you to Bill's friend, Peter, for his assistance to the family, and for the design and construction of the uniquely personalized wooden urn; to the friends who shared their individual memories with us, especially other gold miners; and to those who sent messages of condolence to our families.

4G wireless unveiled at community events in Carmacks and Teslin

Press release

On the week of Sept 30, Carmacks and Teslin joined the growing network of Yukon communities which have access to 4G wireless service.

In 2007, Latitude Wireless became the first and only company to launch wireless service in the communities of Carmacks, Teslin and other communities across the Yukon Territory. Now, six years later, the local company continues to be the only wireless provider building the wireless infrastructure that connects Yukon communities.

The new service launched in the communities on October 2 and 3, respectively.

"We are very pleased to follow-up last month's exciting announcement with a new group of 4G launches," said Curtis Shaw, General Manager of Latitude Wireless.

Since last December, the Yukon owned and run company has invested more than $1.2 million to deliver 4G wireless services to Yukon residents in Dawson City, Mayo, Haines Junction, Watson Lake, Carmacks and Teslin.

"We are very proud of our ongoing network improvements and expansions and are here for Yukoners. We live, work and play in the North, so, naturally, we want the best available services in the territory," said Shaw.

Latitude Wireless representatives were equipped with the latest wireless devices in Carmacks and Teslin on the day of the launches and were available to answer questions about the company's exciting new wireless flex plans.

Customer appreciation BBQs were held at the Recreation Centre in Carmacks on October 2 from 10 AM to 5 PM and at the Recreation Complex in Teslin on October 3 from 10 AM to 5 PM.

"Residents had a great time at our BBQ in Mayo last month, so we're going to continue those events and everyone is welcome. Even if you're passing through town, feel free to stop by, have a hamburger and say 'hello'," said Shaw.

New Hospital predicted to be operational by the middle of December

by Dan Davidson

Given the continual changes to the exterior of the Dawson City Community Hospital, Dawsonites might be forgiven for wondering when – or if – the facility, which is getting to be nearly a year late being completed, will ever be opened.

According to Yukon Hospital Corporation chair, Craig Tuton, the YHC will get an occupancy permit about November 30 and the building should be open for business a fortnight later.

Tuton said the inside of the building is complete. It's a matter of moving in all the new equipment and furnishings, plugging everything in, and making sure it all works when the switches are flipped.

As for the exterior, it has been decided that a beige coloured vertical metal siding will be the main feature there.

The exterior has gone through so many changes since last winter that a time lapse series of photos would give the impression that the building was being taken apart. First the CertainTeed siding failed, cracking and falling off in chunks. Then the portions of the building that had never been wrapped (which was discovered after all the siding was removed) were wrapped. Then all of the wrap was removed and workmen started scooping out great chunks of the sprayed on foam insulation, leaving a structure that looked like a giant Swiss cheese.

It turned out to be fortunate that the siding had failed, or the fact that some of the insulation had not been installed properly might not have been discovered until later.

Finally the building was re-foamed and now appears to be ready for the siding, which is under way.

Oddly, issues such as these were not the main topic of debate at this public meeting, which was attended by only 10 locals.

One of the reasons Tuton and YHC's CEO Jason Bilsky came to town, along with Maureen Turner, YHC's Director of Policy and Planning, was to introduce Vivian Painter, who has been hired to be the facilities manager for the new building.

There appears to be considerable confusion among locals as to the exact nature of the new hospital. The hospital portion will be run by the corporation, but that's only part of the building. For the rest, including the doctor's clinic, the pharmacy (Dawson does not have an independent drugstore) and a variety of health related government services, the YHC will simply be the landlord.

Turner indicated that there will be a minimum of two nurses (either Registered Nurses or Licensed Practical Nurses) on duty 24 hours a day, seven days a week. The doctors will be on call, and it was indicated that the problems that have been associated with this status in the past (mainly on-call pay) have been settled.

Vivian Painter, Maureen Turner, Jason Bilsky, Craig Tuton and Vera Holmes.

Initially, there will not be any Primary Care Nurses (or Nurse Practitioners) on site, and this remains a concern for locals who have become accustomed to this level of care here. It was indicated that this may be revisited now that the Yukon has legislation related to this classification of nurses. Residents indicated that it was strange Dawson had them at the existing health care centre when there was no legislation and will not have them now that there is.

Many of the services currently offered by the present health care centre will simply transfer to the new building, but they will be available all the time, which is a big difference. There will be a lab/x-ray technician on site, which there has not been in the past. The building will have its own engineer, though there will probably be some coordination with YTG's local Property Management office.

If the YHC board had never realized that the name of the hospital was an unpopular choice, several residents made it clear that local preference was still to commemorate Father Judge in the name. The back and forth on this was quite acrimonious, and nothing was resolved to anyone's satisfaction, though Tuton committed to finding some way to work the Jesuit priest who built Dawson's first hospital into the present building.

Some time was also spent discussing the word "hospital", which a number of locals felt was misleading, particularly for people outside of the community. Suzanne Saito reported that she had had to spend some time disabusing medical practitioners Outside of their expectations regarding what services were going to be available here once the facility opened.

Betty Davidson reported that Hearing Services has informed her over the summer that they would no longer be offering ear examinations for adults out of the Robert Service School (where their equipment is) because "you have a hospital now". It was hard, she said, to convince them that this was not yet the case and might not be for months to come.

Turner replied that this was something they should have known already, but that there did seem to be communication issues that cropped up from time to time.

Tuton said he would ask the board to look at some modification of the name to deal with some of the possible confusion. "Cottage Hospital", a term that was once in use in a couple of rural communities, was discussed as an option.

There will be a grand opening and tours of the new facility before it actually goes into service. Dates haven't been set as yet.

Touring Artist Fund benefits artist and audience through a shared experience

Press release

Yukon's Touring Artist Fund is providing $24,245 to four artists to grow professionally and reach new audiences through national and international touring opportunities.

"Yukon government is a proud supporter of the arts," Minister of Tourism and Culture Mike Nixon said. "Our ongoing work with touring artists gives these talented individuals the opportunity to experiment with their work, to learn from that experience, to network with others, and to showcase Yukon talent beyond our borders."

Playwright Lulu Keating received $6,300 to present Lucille's Ball, a new features film, in Sydney, Australia and St. John's, Newfoundland, this past September.

Musician Sarah MacDougall and her band members Bob

Hamilton, MJ Dandeneau and Shawn Killaly are receiving $10,000 to tour to Reykjavik, Iceland to take part in the Iceland Airwaves Festival, one of Iceland's major music festivals in October. Prior to the festival, they will tour in Denmark, Sweden and Norway.

"Having the opportunity to play Iceland Airwaves is a once in a lifetime opportunity," MacDougall said. "We feel extremely lucky to have been invited, and it will bring a lot of exposure for us in Scandinavia, as well as in Canada. The funding support made this trip a reality."

Playwright and actor, Brian Fidler received $2,800 to tour his play Broken at the SummerWorks Performance Festival in Toronto, Ontario last August. Broken is a one-man performance—using theatre, puppetry and storytelling—about memory, aging and the bond between grandfather and grandson.

"I am very grateful to have been able to take my work out of the territory and access a larger audience for what I believe to be an important dialogue about aging and dementia," Fidler said. "The excellent press and good critical feedback the show received has given me confidence that opportunities will open up for future touring for Ramshackle Theatre."

The Touring Artist Fund fosters the development of the arts in Yukon by helping professional artists, ensembles and companies that create and produce original work to tour and attend out-of-territory public events.

There are four intakes per year: March 15, June 15, September 15 and December 15. For information on Yukon government funding for the arts, visit www.tc.gov.yk.ca.

Community Development Fund will help create a Dog Park

Press release

The Government of Yukon's Community Development Fund (CDF) is providing more than $137,000 to 10 community organizations for recreation, education and well-being initiatives.

"With support from the Community Development Fund, these organizations are working to improve the standard of living, health and sustainability of Yukon communities," Minister of Economic Development Currie Dixon said. "Many of these projects will provide tangible and long-lasting benefits for residents of all ages."

The Utilities Consumers' Group Society is receiving $6,841 for a replacement transmitter that will improve the signal quality of the CJUC Community Radio Station in Whitehorse.

"CJUC Community Radio has been on the air for 10 years, and the transmitter we've been using for the last seven years was already used equipment when we got it," station manager Bill Polonsky said. "The sound would have started degrading soon, so it's a big move forward for CJUC listeners to benefit from this new equipment."

The Humane Society Dawson is receiving $15,500 to create a fenced-in, off-leash dog park. The park will include a perimeter walking trail and central area for dog socialization and agility training. The society also plans to generate future revenues by offering obedience training.

"In addition to providing opportunities for outdoor exercise, we hope this park will encourage responsible dog ownership," shelter coordinator Katie Pearce said. "We would not have been able to do this without Community Development Fund support and community members' donations and fundraising. We hope to see many community members at our leash-cutting ceremony late next month when the park is complete."

The Community Development Fund offers three funding levels. Tier 1 funding is available for requests up to $20,000. Tier 2 funding is available for applicants requesting $20,001 to $75,000, and Tier 3 funding is available for requests over $75,000. The next intake deadline is October 15 for Tier 1 applications.

Organizations are encouraged to contact Community Development advisors well before the deadlines for assistance with their applications and with developing project ideas.

Diamond Tooth Gertie hangs up her dress

by Dan Davidson

Tracy Nordick charmed the audience as Diamond Tooth Gertie for three shows on the evening of September 19; then she cleaned off the makeup, got into her regular clothing and went home. There she hung up her stage attire and along with it the Gertie persona she's been inhabiting regularly as the relief or "swing" for the last 15 years.

"My first summer here was '98," she said the next week as we sat in the comfortable foyer/common room of the Nordick's Fifth Avenue Bed and Breakfast.

"I was hired primarily as a dancer for five nights a week and then as the swing, or understudy, for one night."

The existing "Gertie" at the time was Lorraine Butler, a seasoned trooper who felt she only needed one night off. She made it her goal to train Tracy, believing that she could develop the stage presence and vocal stamina needed to carry the role.

"I loved the dancing the most. When I came up here I was truly a dancer who could sing," she said. But she was hired because a former instructor thought she could do both.

The only wrinkle at the time was that Tracy, at a slight 24, was physically much smaller than the Rubinesque Butler. The musical director of the day felt that there was a certain stature expected to go with the name Diamond Tooth Gertie, and so Tracy, during her first year, was known as Silver Tooth Gertie.

She says she fought against that image for a long time, but she's recently seen some pictures from that year and "I literally looked like I was 12, playing dress-up in grown-ups' clothing."

No one would say that now of course, not that the wife and mother of one, and operator of a tourist B&B, will ever likely be thought of as stout.

What has happened over the years is that Nordick has carved out her own version of Gertie, and made it every bit as effective as the role played by whoever the main performer happens to be that year.

"It was when I finally realized that I didn't have to be that other person, that other Gertie; I didn't have to be Lorraine or Leslie or Kelly or Amy. When I just knew that I had to be myself in the role, but not THAT person. Then I knew that if it was a new Gertie, or a Gertie coming back, I knew that we were going to be completely separate. I don't think that any two Gerties are the same.

"I think mine was a personable, but a little bit sexier, Gertie. Some Gerties over the years have been more of the giggly Gertie. Lorraine Butler truly epitomized the 'grande dame' Gertie."

She recently met Gillian Campbell, one of the early and quite definitive Gerties, when she played here last August. Butler had introduced the two of them back in '98, but Nordick had actually danced in one of Campbell's can-can lines at a one-day event in Whistler a while earlier.

Aside from playing the role two nights a week during the summer seasons she has donned the dress and makeup, when called on to do so, at a variety of special events during the rest of the year when the summer cast person has not been not available. She has particularly enjoyed the annual Trek Over the Top visitors, for whom she most probably IS Diamond Tooth Gertie.

"They were such a different crowd. I think that that's where I got comfortable, because it was no holds barred then."

It wasn't just the singing that she had to learn.

"I was a good chorus girl, but it's totally different up there when you're out front. It was the banter, the stuff you have to come up with on the fly."

She remembers first being asked to work the names of locals or special guests into her stage patter and wanting desperately to be able to write that down somewhere so she wouldn't forget it. Years later, it's all second nature.

While she has worked with a number of Gerties in her time, she credits the influence of the many music directors over the years, each of them looking for something different from the role, as having had the most influence on her development.

"They were all equally talented – but different – and they all pulled out different aspects from me. They made me a better performer in so many ways."

Why has she decided to pack this persona away for now?

Well, it's not because the Nordicks are having another child, because they're not, not just now anyway. It's a decision that it took her a little while to admit to.

"I think I kind of knew that last season my answer about this season should have been 'no', but I didn't have it in my heart to say the words. This season was fun, but I think I knew going into it that it would be my last."

Her life has changed over 15 years. She and Steve have a business to run. She has a daughter and a home life. At forty she doesn't feel as much a part of the whole 20+ cabaret scene as she did.

"My life and everything in it has changed, I don't feel the connection so much any more. They're awesome people and I love them all ... but I can't put in the time to make that connection. Now, as soon as I'm done that makeup comes off and I'm at home."

Between the business (which has been busier this summer) and her daughter, it's been getting harder every year to get to the casino on time at 7:30 to be in the costume and makeup for the 8:30 show.

She's also feeling that she doesn't see anything else to do creatively with the role and needs some time away from it. There are other possible musical outlets that she'd like to think about. She's not saying she'll never play Gertie again, but not in any immediate future that she can envision.

"I always said that when it started to feel like a job I would be done, and that's what it became more of this summer for sure."

Will there be some other stage life or perhaps a teaching role?

"I've been asked over the years to do different things in town, and if it was in the summer I just had to say 'no'. So who knows, maybe I'll start saying yes to some of those things."

Moose may be in running for world record

By Chuck Tobin

Printed in the Whitehorse Star on October 11, 2013. Used with permission.

Dawson City resident Heinz Naef has to wait 55 days to see if the moose he shot Sept. 25 will be recorded as the largest in the world – at 75 1/4 inches across.

Naef said this morning in Whitehorse he hunts for meat, so if the antlers measure out to be a world record after the mandatory two months of drying, he'd like to see them displayed publicly.

"This would be good for the Yukon to have this in our possession again," Naef said of the record currently held by a moose taken in Alaska, not far across the border where Naef shot his near the confluence of the Stewart and Yukon rivers.

Knock, knock.

That's all Naef heard when he let out his moose call, he told the Star.

His hunting buddies had heard the same thing the previous night, when they were cruising the river and calling.

"There was two knocks," he said as he rapped his knuckles solidly on the table to emphasize the brief but distinct response to a moose call the night before.

The next morning, Naef was dropped off in the same area. He called.

Knock, knock, is all he heard.

Naef waited for a while. Then he began walking into the bush toward a slough he was familiar with, as he and his sons and other hunting buddies have been hunting the area for more than 20 years.

He stopped and called periodically. Nothing.

Naef was about 300 metres in the bush from the Yukon River, when he heard the bull respond.

It sounded like it was a large empty fuel drum.

The leaves were still on the trees, and the veteran hunter couldn't see the moose.

"I started walking toward the empty fuel drum, and I called, and I called."

Naef said the moose began to talk back, and continued to talk while he moved toward Naef.

"I knew I had him, because at that point they are committed," he said of the typical behaviour of a bull moose during rutting season.

Naef said it was a sight to see as he watched the bull approach, swinging his massive rack silently between the trees, not making a sound, except for the grunt with every step.

Armed with his old British .303 with open sights, the 26-year resident of Dawson fired twice into the vital organs, and then fired a third time to finish the kill at 11:30 in the morning.

The knock, knock Naef and his buddies had heard was the bull slamming his antlers against the tree to announce his presence to everybody – would-be mates and any bulls thinking about encroaching on his territory.

Naef said the moose wasn't unusually large, given the size of his rack, and was probably eight to 10 years old.

He estimates it weighed about 1,250 pounds or more.

The eight in the hunting party – Naef and his son Brian, two other father-and-son sets and another couple of guys – gutted and cut up the moose and were back in camp by 5 p.m.

The bull dropped 248 metres in the bush from the river. They measured the distance.

It's in the freezer now, and Naef will know Dec. 2 if his bull will take over the record as the largest in the world.

Whitehorse resident Clint Walker, an official scorer with Boone and Crockett, explained this morning the mandatory 60-day period to allow for drying is meant to create a level playing field for all hunters.

There is some loss in size due to drying, so it would not be fair if some hunters scored their antlers the next day and others who were in the bush for an extended period couldn't score theirs for a month or more, he explained.

Walker said

antlers are essentially scored using four measurements, though there are other technical considerations.

The four measurements include the overall width, which has been measured at 75 1/4 for Naef's bull.

The circumferences of the two main beams where the antlers attach to the head, the widest point of a single palm, and over length of a single palm, Walker explained.

He pointed out as drying occurs, the two palms tend to pull inwards.

Over an extended period, the 75-1/4 inch width of Naef's rack could shrink to 70 or 71 inches, he said.

Walker said Naef's antlers could be a new world record.

"It would be kind of neat for a Yukoner to have the largest moose ever taken," he said.

Yukon outfitter Dan Reynolds established a world record last year for the largest Dall sheep taken with a bow and arrow, Walker said.

"If you ask me what am I going to do with it, my house is too small," Naef said.

"If it happens to be the world record, then I would like to have it somewhere where a lot of people could see it."

No Caribou Hunting on Dempster Highway

The Department of Environment has ordered an emergency conservation closure from Oct. 8, 2013 to July 31, 2014 to protect the Hart River and Fortymile caribou herds.

The closure applies to Game Management Subzones 2-16, 2-23, 2-24, 2-25, 2-27, 2-28, 2-29, 2-39 and 2-51 and includes the highway from Dempster Corner (km 0) to the Ogilvie River Bridge (km 195). As well, all subzones in Game Management Zone 3 remain closed to caribou harvest (e.g., Goldfields, Top of the World Highway).

This emergency closure applies to Yukon resident and non-resident hunters. The Yukon government will consider reopening some or all of these subzones should the caribou move elsewhere.

Caribou in these subzones are not considered Porcupine caribou. Harvesting rights under the Porcupine Caribou Management Agreement do not extend to these subzones at this time.

Bishop's great-grandson celebrates his family's history

by Dan Davidson

Todd Mayhew grew up listening to his mother telling tales of his great-grandfather, the Yukon clergyman who once dined with the Queen and is renowned in Northern lore as having supped on his own footwear when he was starving out in the bush.

That's Bishop Isaac O. Stringer, the "Bishop Who Ate His Boots", who served the Anglican Church in both Dawson City and Whitehorse.

For a long time, Todd thought these stories were just his mother trying to get him and brother Steve to clean up their dinner plates, but when he discovered it was all true he and his brother decided they had to write a song about it. The chorus gives a précis of the story.

"50 below / 51 days deep in snow / Will he make it? / No one knows / Thank God for the Eskimos / Bring him home; feed him soup / Thank God for the sealskin boots / Man of Whitehorse / The Bishop who ate his boots."

"The Bishop Who Ate His Boots" which can be viewed and heard on YouTube, was the song with which the April Maze closed their second set in Stringer House on October 8. Yes, Stringer House, the home in which Isaac and Sadie Stringer lived while serving at St. Paul's in Dawson City.

Earlier that day they had given a private concert in the home of retired Archdeacon Ken Snider, the man responsible for regaining title of the rectory for the parish some forty years ago. Snider, in ill health, would not have been able to attend the evening house concert, so the April Maze duo took their show to him. They played both the Bishop's song and another that they have written about his wife.

The April Maze came to the Yukon quite by accident. Scott and Roslyn Wilson heard them play in Australia and learned that they were already on the Home Routes circuit to do a tour in southern British Columbia. They arranged house concerts for the duo at Stringer House and at the Old Log Church in Whitehorse, where Stringer had been the rector.

Todd and Sivan Agam already had it in mind to pursue the Stringer connection further, spurred on by a production company in the United Kingdom, where they recently played and had a great reception in England and Wales. The filmmakers have it in mind to make a documentary about the Bishop and the song, and Todd says he thinks there's enough material in the Stringer story for an entire album. They hope to return here in 2015 with a crew and funds to take on the project.

How will it be funded? That's hard to say, but April Maze's second CD, "TWO" was crowd funded, so that tells you something about their independent spirit.

Mayhew and Agam look a bit like refugees from the late 1960s, and their easy going acoustic approach to their music has that flavour as well. They have a pair of strong voices that fill a room with ease. Todd has an easy touch on his guitar and Sivan plays melody, bass and harmony on her cello, choosing to stand up with the instrument for ease of movement.

Their two sets were enhanced by their accounts of how the songs came to be written, how they got together (they've been performing together for around five years and recently celebrated their second anniversary as a married couple) how Todd's brother ended up marrying one of Sivan's former roommates, and how their nephew, named Isaac, was born just before they left for this tour.

It seems likely that the Yukon will be hearing more from this pair in the years to come.

we're not missing a moment

With our busy schedules, making time together really counts! That's why we're getting the flu shot — and not missing a moment.

Kids who don't like needles can get the flu mist vaccine this year, available in limited quantities.

Home Routes season is off to a good start

by Dan Davidson

House concert season has begun in Dawson, with a number of evenings planned as part of the annual Home Routes series, and at least one additional session (so far) added in October.

Matt Epp and Brent Warren kept the audience's rapt attention for two sets of energetic "folkified" (Epp's term) versions of original material that probably rocked a little louder and harder on his several albums, if the material available for listening online is any indication.

Epp spins interesting tales in his lyrics and introduced each of his tunes with a bit of a story about where it came from.

He has been performing, first as a solo artist and more recently with his band, the Amorrian Assembly, all over North America and in Europe. The full band is international in make-up and his albums frequently have guest artists on them.

His recent tune "When you Know", a duet with Serena Rider, was in heavy rotation on both CBC 1 and 2 during recent weeks.

Winnipeg raised, Epp has travelled the world and most recently was living in Granada, Spain, with his wife, who he first met as the actress in the video for his song "They Won't Find the Bodies" when it was shot in Mexico.

Warren, who plays both regular six string and dobro style resonator guitar, is Epp's preferred lead player on all his albums and the pair have a long history working together as well as a powerful chemistry.

Epp and Warren played the Yukon from September 19 to October 2, with four dates in Whitehorse, Carcross, Atlin (which should be in the Yukon, right?), Haines Junction, Mayo, Dawson City, Old Crow and Watson Lake.

Brent Warren and Matt Epp liven up an evening at the Hamm apartment.

"Long Overdue Artists Market" Will Be Back Next Year

By Elaine Corden
Used with permission from Këntra Tāy

The pilot season of the Dawson City Artists' Market has come to a close, and we're pleased to announce it will be back next year.

The artists' market had 18 individuals participate over eight Saturdays, with five artists opting to become seasonal members. We expect this to increase next year. Goods sold included jewellery, pottery, paintings, drawings, prints, clothing, hats, natural oils and salves, embroidery, beading, and carvings. Participating artists ranged in background and experience, and included both local artists and those from outside of Dawson.

With the assistance of Elders Percy Henry and Angie Joseph-Rear, a Hän-language name for the market was created that reflected both the role of TH in creating the market and the location of the market in Tr'ondëk Hwëchin Traditional Territory. The Hän-language name, Hän Ghà Chukèt Trëtätsey [Market by the River], will be incorporated into future signage and marketing materials.

Feedback from participating artists, market shoppers, and local business was overwhelmingly positive, with many commenting that the market was "long overdue" and artists pleased that participation was affordable and adaptive to needs.

The structure of the market was determined in consultation with artists, entrepreneurs, artists' co-ops, and markets from the Yukon and across Canada. The pilot season of the market operated each Saturday in July and August, from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Tables, chairs, and tablecloths were available for $15 a week. If artists purchased a season membership for $40, tables were available for $5 a week. Artists were able to register for tables at KIAC.

The market was made possible through the Tr'ondëk Hwëchin Regional Economic Development Plan and received funding from the Canadian Northern Economic Development Agency. The Market was administered by the Klondike Institute of Art and Culture (KIAC), with logistical support and assistance from Across The River Consulting, the City of Dawson, and many Dawson-based artists, small business owners, and patrons of the arts.

Moving forward, the market will have to become more autonomous in structure and interdependent with the community. We invite anyone with suggestions or feedback, as well as artists interested in participating next year, to e-mail market@kiac.ca or call (867) 993-5005.

Are you an artist or crafter? Do you have work you'd like to sell? Use this winter to prepare and be ready for the first market of Hän Ghà Chukèt Trëtätsey next summer! Feel free to contact KIAC at 993-5005 or TH Communications at 993-7136 to share your thoughts and ideas.

Dick North leaves behind a Yukon literary legacy

By Dan Davidson

The Yukon lost one of its literary lights when Dick North passed away on September 23, 2013. North, the author of five major books about Yukon historical events and personalities, as well as one novel, had been in ill health and on the decline for some months, living at Copper Ridge in Whitehorse.

In addition to his writing, North was instrumental in establishing the Jack London Interpretive Centre in Dawson City and for setting up a photo display relating to Albert Johnson, the "Mad Trapper" at the Eagle Plains Lodge.

Born in New Jersey on March 19, 1929, raised in Long Island and West Virginia and educated in New Hampshire, North saw service in World War II and then headed out to California after earning a degree at George Washington University. In 1954 he earned a Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of California at Berkeley, and during that period he came a familiar at the First and last Chance Saloon in Oakland, one of Jack London's favorite watering holes.

He was already familiar with Jack London, and had read and reread his tales of the Yukon.

A variety of jobs over the next few years saw him writing from New York for a paper in Nevada, and being asked if he'd like a job on the Daily Alaska Empire in Juneau.

North has been known to ask people if it was actually possible that, given his surname, he could ever have ended up having a journalism career anywhere else.

He would work for newspapers in Alaska and in Whitehorse over the years, but soon began writing books about people and events that caught his interest. He became fascinated by the mysteries of the North, and his early interests became the subjects of his books.

The strange story of Albert Johnson grabbed his attention and generated two books, The Mad Trapper of Rat River and Trackdown, which were later combined into one volume under the original title. Johnson's story also provided the material for his only novel, The Man Who Didn't Fit In, years later.

Having learned something about the Dempster Highway, he became fascinated by the sad tale of Inspector Francis Fitzgerald's tragic death, along with the three other members of his detachment, an event North recreated in The Lost Patrol.

Watching caribou in Alaska, North was moved to wonder about the logistics of the historic reindeer drive of 1929, and produced Arctic Exodus.

Dick North didn't exactly discover the cabin in which Jack London spent the winter of 1897-98. Lots of people seemed to know about it, and he learned about its existence during a river trip in the early 1960s. What he can be credited with is organizing the expedition to rescue it from its inevitable return to the soil. The expedition of 1965 is the reason why half of the cabin now sits in Jack London Square in Dawson City, where it was erected and recreated in 1969.

It took another 18 years before North's collection of London memorabilia became the inspiration for the Jack London Museum, located next to the cabin. In 1986 the Klondike Visitors Association gave the idea a trial run in Parks Canada's Klondike Thawing Machine building. It was a modest success, enough to spur the building of the large log cabin, which now draws thousands of visitors each summer.

Early on in the centre's history, North produced a small booklet about the finding of the cabin, but the full story of his lifelong obsession with all things Jack London was reserved for his autobiographical masterpiece, Sailor on Snowshoes, which was his last book. Much of it was drafted on a portable typewriter, which he kept at his desk in the centre. He donated that typewriter to the Dawson City Museum when he finally relocated to Whitehorse.

North was the curator and main interpreter of his London collection until his retirement, due to declining health, after the 2008 summer season, by which time he had trained a worthy protégé, Dawne Mitchell, to carry the torch.

She reports that while many of her visitors come to see the London exhibit, there is a significant number who come because they have read one of North's books.

During his years at the centre, North spent many summers in Dawson, and later on lived year round in several different apartments, sometimes along with his wife, Andree. One winter he even got to serve a stint as a writer-in-residence at Berton House.

Though he would often return to the United States for part of the year, he eventually decided to take on Canadian citizenship, and did so during a ceremony with a number of others at the Commissioner's Tea in Dawson City one June.

For an unassuming man, who always cared more for the reputation of his subjects and his work than of himself, North collected a number of honours over the years.

The Klondike Visitors Association presented him with a service award. He was made a member of the Yukon Order of Pioneers.

In 2003 he received a Commissioner's Award for Public Service. The plaque read "In recognition of his contribution to the Yukon's history and the economic life of the City of Dawson' - Dick North."

In Dawson's Dome Subdivision (sometimes called Literary Heights) there is a street named for Dick North, along with those named for London. Service and Berton. That happened in 2004, the same year that there was a Dick North entry in the Discovery Days Parade. The Reverend Ken and Aldine Snider organized the event, called "Honouring the North's by North", in which huge banners bearing he titles of his books were paraded through the streets.

On the same day the Dawson City Museum presented North with a commemorative coin and held a luncheon in his honour. The entertainment was a reenactment of part of the story of the Mad Trapper.

In 2008 North was made a Member of the Order of Canada, an honour that took him completely by surprise.

"Jeez, I never really thought I'd get an award like that," the 78-year-old said at the time. "It's a great compliment, and I thank all the people who had something to do with it."

In June of that same year it was decided that more recognition was due the man who had done so much to raise the territory's profile, and North found himself in a tuxedo at the Commissioner's Ball, receiving a gold pen and a special framed certificate from Commissioner Van Bibber in recognition of his years of work and his Order of Canada award.

Funeral services for the late Dick North were held at Sacred Heart Cathedral. He was in the YOOP portion of the Whitehorse cemetery.

A Tribute to Dick North evening will be held in Dawson at the YOOP Hall on Oct. 18 at 7 p.m.

Sleeman, Ontario

Cotton ball clouds blotted at the pale blue sky. It was mid-spring when nostrils flared at the fecund scent of newly turned soil. It was a day filled with optimism, promise and light hearts.

Pulling into the parking lot of the local store, Sandra shut the van off and was climbing out when someone shouted "Hey!" Figuring it wasn't directed at her, Sandra kept heading to the entrance. "Hey Sandra!" the voice came again. This time she turned and saw Derek half-jogging across the potholed parking lot.

"How's it going?" asked Derek, slowing to a halt beside her.

"OK," Sandra replied, smiling. "You and Dee going out on the lake again this summer?"

"Yeah, end of May," Derek said, shifting from foot to foot. "The tourists are a pain but the money's good." Derek continued, unwilling to meet her eyes, "Look, I know you've got two dogs already, but..."

Knowing what was coming, Sandra began shaking her head. "No. No way Derek. I don't..."

Derek cut her off. "I know, just listen for a second. Somebody dumped this dog off at the store a few weeks ago. Nobody's feeding it. It's getting into old man McLeod's garbage and he's going to shoot it. Please," he pleaded finally turning his eyes to hers, "just go check it out?"

The words "dumped" and "shoot it" raised Sandra's ire, her face tightening. "Where is it?"

Derek's relief was evident in his next rush of words, "Over behind McLeod's trailer. He's pissed, and no one else wants to get involved."

For getting about the store, Sandra strode across the road full of indignation.

She jerked her head towards the trailer and said "C'mon, let's go."

Old man McLeod must have been peering between the slats of his door blind, for the minute Sandra and Derek stepped on his property he yanked open the inside door, slapped the screen door outwards and stuck his head out. He looked like a nervous rabbit poking its head out of its warren.

"You better get that damn dog out of here!" he fairly screeched at them. "Got into my garbage SIX times! I'm gonna shoot the damn thing!" he exclaimed, working up to a proper sermon.

Sandra noted a half-crazed look in McLeod's eyes, the smile that didn't reach them, and nodded. "OK Jim, no trouble. Just going to check it out," she replied.

She caught sight of a beige mutt to her right. "Six times? In a week? Must be pretty strong to take the lid off your garbage can, huh?" asked Sandra, unable to help herself to a little dig.

Old man McLeod's eyes almost popped out of his head, and his lips formed a little "O". His fury enabled him to actually snake an arm out from behind the security of his doors, jabbing a finger at the dog. "It's over there and you get it GONE or I'll SHOOT the damn t'ing!" he screamed.

Sandra and Derek exchanged looks, biting the insides of their cheeks to keep straight faces. They turned and began walking towards the stray, their departure punctuated by a muttered oath and the double slam of trailer doors. The dog was lying on its belly watching them, unsure, hesitant, tail slowly sweeping side to side.

Derek stopped, letting her go ahead. Sandra slowed her pace and began talking softly to the bedraggled creature. "C'mon pup, it's OK. I'm not going to hurt you. C'mon baby," she encouraged.

Although its tail still wagged, Sandra could see its eyes dart furtively, checking escape routes. Sandra stopped and knelt, still speaking softly to it. "It's OK," she said, patting the ground beside her. "Come."

The mutt's ears perked up a bit and it began to pant, tongue lolling out.

"You can do it. Come on, let's go for a car ride," Sandra encouraged. She knew if it was going to work, the dog needed to come to her.

The mutt wagged its tail harder, then, to Sandra and Derek's amazement, began crawling towards Sandra on its belly, vacuuming up burrs and dead grass into its wiry coat.

Sandra continued to coax it, and as it belly-crawled closer, they locked eyes.

Grateful Lucky Dog

Sandra held her hand out, palm down, towards the dog. When it finished crawling across the distance to her, it sniffed. Then it smiled.

Except it didn't just smile. It pulled its lips back, snorted and began a full body wriggle. Sandra grinned as it rolled onto its back totally submitting. At that precise moment, Sandra knew she was sunk.

Three days later, after going through and passing the inspection process from her other two dogs, the now clean and groomed terrier-lab cross sat in front of Sandra looking up at her with adoration and joy in her eyes. "I suppose we'd better find a name for you," commented Sandra. The dog smiled in her strange dog way and thumped her tail. "Blonde and daft and full of laughter," smiled Sandra, stroking the dog's head.

"You remind me of Goldie Hawn. Can't call you Goldie, it's way too common. How about Hawn?" asked Sandra. In response, the dog smiled, snorted and sneezed all at once. "Hawn it is, then," said Sandra, chuckling.

Three months later Hawn showed her gratitude by chasing off a young, curious black bear. Her "sisters", Faern and Majik, sat shaking on the doorstep, providing vocal support only.

A year or so after that, Hawn courageously took on the neighbourhood porcupine, earning a quilled shield of pride on her face and a trip to the vet. Somehow, Faern and Majik escaped confrontational consequences with Mr. Quill.

Eighteen months after Mr. Quill, Pepe Le Pew came calling. Again, Hawn alone successfully took on the task of relocating a potential threat to her pack. Unfortunately for Hawn, it was not before Pepe left a noxiously redolent calling card. Faern and Majik watched with cocked heads when Hawn was repeatedly baptised in a gravel pit pond. Sandra swore they were smiling.

When Majik was killed on the highway, Faern took herself away from Sandra to grieve on her own. It was Hawn who curled up beside Sandra on the bed, resting her head on Sandra's arm, tenderly licking away Sandra's tears of devastation.

Over ten years had passed since that day at McLeod's trailer when Hawn stole Sandra's heart; ten years filled with Hawn always at Sandra's side, protecting and supporting with unconditional love, smiles, snorts and full body wriggles. Sandra booked two weeks from work to take Faern and Hawn camping at her favourite spot. It was a secluded spit of Crown land that jutted into a small lake, four hours away from home and civilization.

It was after a belly-filling supper of hearty pork stew on a resplendent August evening that all hell broke loose.

Sandra was half dozing in her camp chair when Faern and Hawn exploded from their resting spots and headed towards the lakeshore, barking furiously. At that same instant, Sandra caught sight of two small black furry things zipping up a tree ten feet behind her tent. A coppery shot of adrenaline immediately filled her mouth; she knew Faern and Hawn were after a mother black bear. "Shit!" she exclaimed.

"Faern! Hawn! Come NOW!" Sandra prayed both dogs would obey. They did. No hesitation at all.

Sandra flung open the van door, both dogs scrambled in the back. She ran around the van, scooted into the drivers seat and cranked the key. The van fired up and Sandra sped out of the campsite, making an instant decision to go home. She'd go back later for what was left of her gear, after the bears were done with it.

She drove a few miles away then stopped to let the dogs out for a drink. After doing a quick visual on the dogs and finding no obvious injuries, Sandra piled them into the van and continued home, arriving after midnight.

It was a few hours before the three of them finally settled down and unwound. Sandra headed to bed, Faern was ready to go, but Hawn resisted. Hawn smiled, gave a half snort, then laid down. She began licking her belly.

Sandra was confused: Hawn was usually the first to jump into bed. Instead, she continued to lick, looking up once with apologetic eyes. Sandra frowned. A small coil of fear began to twist slowly in her gut. Walking towards her, Sandra got down and rubbed Hawn's head. She was just about to ask what was wrong when Hawn provided her with an answer. She rolled onto her back, exposing her belly. Sandra stared blankly for a minute, not comprehending the gaping six-inch slit in Hawn's skin.

That smiling, snorting, daft, grateful rescue dog had taken a hit from Mother bear, travelled three hundred kilometres in the back of a jostling van, not uttering a single whimper of complaint.

Another after-hours emergency vet visit. Seventy stitches inside and out. Hawn remains. Loyal. Lucky. Joyful. Grateful.

Positive feedback from the pilot season of Palace Grand shows

By Karen Dubois

Used with permission from Këntra Tāy

If you were in Dawson City this summer, you might have taken in a show at the Palace Grand Theatre. Maybe it was Bonnie Kilroe's Country Queens, or Thomas Baxter's Thought Control, or the showcase of local singer-songwriter talent. The 16 shows forming the Live at the Place Grand series were brought to Dawson's landmark theatre by the Dawson City Arts Society (DCAS) Board as part of the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Regional Economic Development plan (THREDP).

The aim of the concert series was to provide quality evening entertainment for locals and visitors alike. New business and employment opportunities associated with the theatre are envisioned.

In March, researchers prepared a feasibility study that included business planning, market research, and potential programming options for the pilot season of Live at the Palace Grand. Funding was available through the THREDP to hire a producer, a front of house manager, and sound and lighting expertise, but ticket sales had to cover the cost of performers' fees, accommodation, and travel. The DCAS Board decided to take a chance and run a series of 16 performances. (An additional three were offered as part of regular KIAC programming). Parks Canada contributed the theatre at no charge, many local businesses came on board as event sponsors, and the first show opened on July 4.

The most popular shows in the Live at the Palace Grand series were Bonnie Kilroe's Country Queens and Thomas Baxter's Thought Control. Other shows included the well-loved Tomáš Kubínek, Gillian Campbell as Klondike Kate, and a showcase of Dawson films. We're currently analyzing data collected during the season. Comment cards that were filled in after each show will give us a good idea of whether our audience was primarily local or tourist, audience demographic, and indication of satisfaction with the quality of the shows.

The question of day: will we do it again next year? The jury is still out. While we were encouraged with the positive feedback from visitors and the investment by locals, the pilot season was not a money-making venture. We realize it was a first year, and that the season was not finalized until three weeks before the first show, so marketing was very limited, but it seems clear patient financing of some type will be required to develop programming in the Palace Grand. The researchers are back at work, with a final report due at the end of October. At that time, a decision will be made on how to proceed.

Your feedback is welcome!
Did you get out to see a show? What did you think? What kind of shows would you like to see at the Palace Grand? Feel free to contact TH Communications at 993-7136 or KIAC at 993-5005 to share your thoughts.

TH Regional Economic Development Plan

Used with permission from Këntra Tāy

Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in has partnered with several community groups to deliver nine projects resulting from regional economic development planning identified in TH's Final Agreement.

This community-based economic development aims to benefit the entire community with a focus on the "big picture," including all industries, businesses, and community residents. The goals are to promote the following:

- sustainable, well-paying jobs
- local benefits from major development projects
- a year-round business and employment base
- quality infrastructure
- available and affordable housing
- sustainable population growth
- a high quality of life

This summer saw the debut of the Dawson City Artists' Market and the pilot season of the Live at the Palace Grand theatre series, as well as the launch of a business advisory service. More recently, research has been underway into ways of improving the downtown core and the World Heritage feasibility project is progressing.

Review: Kevin Kennedy's Long Walk in the Woods

by Dan Davidson

It's quiet in the theatre at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre. On stage there is simply a spotlight and a chair. Those are all the props Kevin Kennedy requires for the story he is about to tell us.

The evening is called "Wolf Trek: Alone in the Woods", but it could as easily have been called Buffalo Trek, Bear Trek or even Bug Trek. Kennedy encounters all these things during his solitary two-week walk on a nearly non-existent trail in Wood Buffalo National Park.

The students in his English as a Second Language Class were aghast when he shared his plans with them. Who else was going? Surely he was taking a gun? Was he insane?

The folks at Parks Canada were quite serious when they had him sign that waiver.

Kennedy candidly admits that going on a lone hike through the wilderness, carrying a 70-pound backpack while coping with a broken wrist, was probably not one of the brightest things he had ever done. It might even have been on a par with his initial move North, from Edmonton to Yellowknife. He's pretty clear that decisions of this impetuous nature might have had something to do with the eventual disintegration of his marriage, but that's probably another story.

This is an hour of old fashioned storytelling, complete with some hair-raising anecdotes and some moments of sheer slapstick.

Surrounded by unseen wolves one night he reflects, "I'm not afraid, but the hairs on the back of my neck are afraid."

Waking up in his small tent to find a bear staring at him through the plastic above his head, he decides that he might as well take a picture of the encounter so that people will be able to know that happened to him. The click/flash of the camera scares the bear away - not a recommended bear encounter technique.

Forced to drink water from stagnant ponds swimming with who knew what sort of bugs and gunk he imagines the contents doing strange things in his stomach and guts.

As for bugs, well, somehow he forgot to bring along any insect repellent. 'Nuff said.

Then there are the actual buffalo. When he meets his first bull, shaggy, crusted with dirt and plagued by flies, he realizes that "there is nothing in his dark and glossy eye that I recognize, no glimmer of wisdom or recognition, just an ancient glint of watchful suspicion. I am in awe of this majestic organism, so huge and commanding."

In spite of all the poor planning, pain (from the wrist and the pack), discomfort and moments of sheer terror, Kennedy seems to come out at the other end of the trail more balanced, more at ease with himself than when he began the walk.

This presentation was organized by the cultural centre, the Klondike Institute of Art and Culture and the Dawson campus of Yukon College. Kennedy teaches at the Whitehorse campus and was in Dawson to do some work here, so all three institutions decided he should be drafted to put on his show.

THIS IS JUST MY OPINION

by Al Sider

Murder Vs. Manslaughter

This is a topic that has intrigued my thoughts for a very long time, so I write this after much consideration and deliberation. I understand the varying degrees of punishment for a person who intentionally, and willfully takes the life of another human being.

What I fail to understand, is the justice in punishing an individual for a truly accidental incident that causes the death of another person. The first description is the purest definition of murder; the second is the definition of manslaughter. A person who intentionally, and willfully, plans and follows through with the causing of the death of another human being, is a murderer, and rightfully deserves punishment, to the fullest extent of the law. This individual would be considered a blight on the human race, deserving nothing less than the ultimate punishment, death. Since our society seems to think it is better to allow this individual a resemblance of liberty, this destructive individual is permitted to live a life of leisure, viewing television, playing pool, playing cards, and even outdoor time—while the family of the victim suffers daily, the severity of their loss.

True, families of those who die by means of manslaughter suffer severity of loss in the same manner as those families of murder victims, but there is a difference here. True manslaughter means that death was purely accidental; there were no thoughts of malice or intentional harm. Those who cause death accidentally do not deserve any form of correctional punishment.

Now, please allow me to fully clarify this idea. Not all actions that are today labelled as “manslaughter” are true manslaughter; some are, in fact, murder. One such action, is a driver of a vehicle, who under the influence of drugs or alcohol, or a combination of both, deliberately and intentionally gets into their vehicle, intending to drive it, and is involved in an accident (in this case a preventable accident) and kills a person or people, maybe a child and its parents, this is without doubt, murder which is labelled as manslaughter. Any death caused by a driver who was driving under the influence of drugs, alcohol, or any combination of both, is by this definition a murderer. Why is this different? The driver chose to drive their vehicle after consuming their intoxication, knowing full well they are too intoxicated to drive, they deliberately set out driving, with the subconscious intention of causing harm to others. The weapon of choice—their vehicle. There is no sound or sane mind on earth which can say (with a truly honest heart) that this is really manslaughter. This is murder.

What then, might be considered real manslaughter? Suppose, if you will, that you and a friend of yours, are having a heated disagreement about anything. The topic is not important; the result of this disagreement is important. The disagreement at some point turns into a shoving match. You push him, he pushes you back. The pushing become slightly more forceful, and your friend stumbles, falls, and hits his head on a table or a rock—the trauma causes the death of your friend, and you are in a deep state of regret. Should you be punished as a criminal for this act? Our society actually says you should be, but I say emphatically, NO! You should not be punished for an accident which causes death. In this example, there is no intent, there is nothing deliberate, and there is absolutely no malice involved. This is manslaughter in the truest, purest form.

The ancient Jews, had a law, concerning a person who commits manslaughter, and I believe this to be a most just law. The Jews had to dedicate certain cities within their country, as “Cities of Sanctuary”. These cities were designed to harbour an individual in safety, while they prepared to prove the death was an accident. In these cities, no retribution can be made against the supposed killer. Families of the deceased were forbidden to seek retaliation, and no one had the authority to forcefully remove such a person to seek revenge. If charges, or accusations of murder, were brought against the individual, a hearing would be arranged. The family of the deceased would present their arguments, and their evidence, before a council of judges. After which, the accused would be allowed the right to present his testimony. If it was found that the death was a result of manslaughter, the accused would be free, and no person could seek revenge against him. If he was found to be guilty of murder, then he would be put to death! There would not be the community's expense of housing, feeding, clothing, and treating medically a murderer, he (or she) would simply be executed; quickly, expeditiously, without regrets, and justice would be served.

Murder deserves to be fully punished; manslaughter does not deserve punishment. Consider it perhaps in this way—a person who kills someone fully by accident, (not including deaths caused by drivers who were under the influence of drugs or alcohol) must, for the remainder of their natural life, live with the knowledge that their friend, or someone's child, or anyone at all, has died at their hand, even though it was not intentional. This is a punishment inflicted upon oneself, that, a punishment no murderer will ever really experience. But, as always, this is just my opinion.
