Mold issues prompt remediation order at the Wastewater Treatment Plant

Story & photos by Dan Davidson

Mold issues at Dawson's Wastewater Treatment Plant caused the Yukon's Occupational Health and Safety branch to issue a remediation order, which has been carried out as of this week.

"Our safety officers discovered significant mold issues in Dawson's Wastewater Treatment Plant during an occupational health and safety inspection in August," said Richard Mostyn, Public Affairs Liaison at Yukon Workers' Compensation Health and Safety Board.

"We issued orders to Corix to clean up the mold using acceptable remediation methods and to take measures to eliminate the growth of mold in the future. We are currently monitoring the situation to ensure the cleanup orders are properly followed and moisture problems in the plant are fixed to prevent future mold outbreaks."

"We haven't issued a stop work order or anything," he clarified. "We just told them to clean it up."

Catherine Harwood, Senior Advisor at Yukon Government with the Dept. of Highways and Public Works, confirms that there was a problem and that it has been dealt with as of this week.

"It was cleaned up on Monday, and I went into the plant yesterday (Tuesday) and saw that it was cleaned up. WCB will do some follow-up and make their determination and will keep working with Corix as reguired."

Corix is continuing to operate the plant past the original handover date of August 22 as a result of testing failures in the levels of 'fecal coliform', 'biological oxygen demand', and 'total suspended solids' parameters that occurred during the summer months.

The original MOU had Corix operating the plant at cost for one year during which normal operational standards could be established, 0&M costs verified, and training of local personnel undertaken. The town maintains that these processes are far from complete and the summer failures triggered a clause in the memorandum of understanding that delayed the handover.

While no one was prevented from working in the plant since the OHS order, Harwood says some precautions were taken.

"I think we did say to not go into the area where the mold was unless people were appropriately outfitted with whatever gear that was needed – protective equipment – but it was just the area where the mold was. Now that's cleaned up so we can go anywhere."

The mold was located in the lower part of the gallery area in the clarifier room. The clarifiers are large, liquid filled tanks that are a final step in the sewage treatment process.

"It was on the concrete that is on the bottom of those big tanks," she explained.

This has no connection to the sewage spill back in February, she said. That was completely cleaned up.

In the clarifier room it was slightly cooler than elsewhere in the plant during what was a hot summer in Dawson.

"It was about 7°C down in the bottom and the air wasn't moving around as much as it should have been, so between the humidity, the cool temperature and the fairly still air there was a lot of condensation and then it was warm enough for the mold to start growing later in the summer.

"There was some indication of it in late July and early August, but later it kind of took off and that's when the inspector was here and took some samples."

Indications are that raising the temperature and improving the air circulation should go a long way towards dealing with the problem.

Harwood says the mold that was found was normal growth that is found in the Dawson area and definitely not the dangerous black mold that has been the subject of much news reporting over the last few years.

Uffish Thoughts: Looking for a Good View

There were reports of snow from Henderson's Corner and Sunnydale on Facebook this morning, and there were a few flurries on 7th Avenue around 10:30 but I frowned at them with menace and they obligingly turned back into raindrops. It appears that we returned from our trip just in time, before the weather began to turn seriously autumnal.

I'm not complaining. We feel we have been quite blessed with decent weather during the three and a half weeks of our late summer sea and road trip. I had worried that setting out after Discovery Days would be a little risky and that we might finding ourselves facing an early winter storm in the high country along the Alaska Highway, as has been known to happen. We have not forgotten the Labour Day weekend snowstorm that caught us on the way back to Beaver Creek in 1976. Not have we forgotten the year that the snow came and stayed in Dawson during the first week of September, and the leaves didn't fall off the trees until they were pushed off by new growth the next spring.

Checking in advance I was advised by RV parks in Whitehorse that they tend to close around September 15, depending on the weather, so we planned our homeward stretch with that in mind.

As it happened, the parks were thinly occupied, but still running when we hit town on the 13th. One of the advantages of shoulder season travel is that you no longer need to make reservations at a lot of places. Once past Edmonton on the way north there was no longer a need to phone ahead.

As for weather it was only in Prince George that we got soaked while hooking up the trailer one morning. Any other rain we experienced was in the form of nighttime showers that were over by morning. There was some rain during our two days on the Matanuska between Juneau and Prince Rupert, but who really needs to walk around on the deck on a rainy day while cruising the Inside Passage? Either the forward viewing lounge or the solarium provide shelter and lots of scenery. In Calgary we actually spent a couple of days wearing shorts.

Besides the opportunity to visit some old friends and relatives along our big circle route from Dawson to Prince Rupert to Calgary and back again through Grande Prairie, Fort Nelson and Toad River, scenery was a big part of the trip. There had just been the merest touch of yellow in the high places on the roads to Whitehorse and Skagway on our way south in late August, but the trip back up the Alaska Highway during the last 9 days was like watching the approach of autumn in stop motion.

Summit Lake, BC - The park campground was closed but the view was open.

As we moved north fall colours became more and more prominent with yellows, oranges and reds (further south) of the hardwoods contrasting brightly against the late summer darker shades of the evergreens.

Some of that viewing was hindered by a practice that seems to have migrated from British Columbia to the Yukon. Both highways departments provide lots of places to pull off the road and take a lunch break, along with numerous spots marked with camera signs that indicate opportunities for picture taking.

When these vista pullouts were created that was no doubt the case. I remember some of them fondly from previous trips up the highway. In the six years since we last drove the route, the trees and shrubs have not been pruned in most places, and the views they were created to show off are completely obscured.

There are spots where you might push through the foliage to see what is to be seen, but in many of the places along the Alcan the pullout is located on the outer edge of a cliffhugging road and pushing through the branches on the other side of the sensibly placed concrete barrier wall would take you over the cliff.

There are now a number of Yukon camera spots where something similar has happened. Both the Fox Lake Burn and the Tintina Trench views are pretty much obscured at this time. One hopes that something might be done to correct the problem before the next tourist season. When we're selling the magic and the mystery it helps if people can actually see our true north larger than life.

We want to hear from you!

A Love Letter to Dawson City

"...There's so much beauty in the world. Sometimes I feel like I'm seeing it all at once, and it's too much, my heart fills up like a balloon that's about to burst... and then I remember to relax, and stop trying to hold on to it, and then it flows through me like rain and I can't feel anything but gratitude for every single moment of my stupid little life... You have no idea what I'm talking about, I'm sure. But don't worry... you will someday." - Kevin Spacey as Lester Burnham, American Beauty.

As I end my summer in Dawson City, Yukon I believe this quotation sums up how I felt about the friendships I made and all the places I travelled to while I was living in a tiny town in Northern Canada.

I can say without a doubt that I've never smiled so much in my life and felt such freedom, acceptance, contentment and love for myself, for others, for the Earth, every creature that lives among it and the Universe. I am closing this chapter of my time in Dawson with a quote that is perfectly in tuned with my feelings. It took a little over a month for the realization to finally settle in. There were times where I was so happy and overwhelmed with excitement, gratefulness and awe to finally be in place I've always wanted to see that I started to tear up and my chest would almost... hurt (at this point I was on the verge of the heart/balloon bursting line in the quote).

Once the chest pain subsided and the tears dried up, I simply accepted my moments in Dawson for its raw beauty. Certain stunning moments stood out more then others and I'd like to share some with you:

Every time I stood on the Dome and looked over Dawson, or when I hiked in Tombstone for the first time; when I would dance with my girlfriends and laugh hysterically in the pit; when we laid on the Klondike and I watched (with influenced, dilated pupils) the moon gleam on one of the most beautiful girls I know; when a group of us picked blueberries along the top of the world highway; when I kissed someone in the pouring rain on our roof and never wanted it to end; when we would all be sharing laughs at work and helping each other get our jobs finished faster so we could have a pint at Peggy's; when we would bike through the streets and stop to lie in the grass to watch shooting stars and the Northern Lights; when I listened to rain drops on a tin roof while holding her and lying in her bed; when I stared up at the Milky Way and watched the seven sisters twinkle over Moosehide Slide hugging a close friend; and most importantly, when I was surrounded by silence.

I've never realized how important silence is and how much more I enjoyed it when I found someone I was comfortable with in a mute environment. After experiencing a comforting silence with him and within my own self, every worry, every drama, every bad feeling or superficial relationships I had back in Ontario just melted away.

Because of this town, I decided I was going to come back home as a more enlightened person and make time for quiet moments as often as I could. I told myself I will do what I believe is right for me, grow more as a individual and help others when I could as long as they didn't drain me of my new found feelings from Dawson.

It is very humbling to find yourself in such a beautiful place and I am forever grateful for it. And if you are reading this in Dawson and you know me, I will see you in short 8 months. Stay warm this winter and take care of yourself. I love you. And thank you.

Marina Osmond

Just Add Water

Recently I returned home from working in the forest to discover the people of Dawson to be wearing unclean apparel; aah, a new trend, Crusty is in, I pondered? No, apparently the city council thought it wise to force the Monte Carlo Laundromat to close by increasing sewage and water costs to a drainage rate (get it?) . Thus hundreds of people have lost a new and key facility during the winter.

Perhaps the next initiative will be the hotels; imagine the patrons' delight as they lie in a bed of soiled sheets.

Alternatively the council could just clean their act up.

Bill Bowie

In the days to come, I imagine many fond memories of Bill will be shared. On August 27 the town ensured his municipal contributions were noted, and it was my pleasure to read the following into the permanent public record on behalf of Council.

But before that, here's a link to a story I wrote about Bill five years ago (http://www.woodbusiness.ca/sawmilling/yukontimber-rush).

His new mill was just getting running and he was looking ahead to a possible new energy source for Dawson. Bill was an incredible interview and—no surprise to those that know him—a quote machine.

He also told a story about the historic tools mounted on his store's walls. If memory serves, he said he found the tools out in the woods and figured they might have been abandoned several decades ago by Russian loggers who, for whatever reason (he speculated it might have been news of the Bolshevik Revolution back home), left the area in haste and their equipment behind. It might have been a tall one, or maybe not. Either way, it was a great tale and appropriate that a logger would be the one to come across those artifacts out in the woods.

"Dawson City has lost a good friend, and the municipality has lost a cherished leader.

"Bill Bowie served on Dawson City Council for several years and, not being one to shy away from hard work, sat on the advisory committee during the trustee years of the mid-2000s—a difficult task he took on with the tact and decency required of the position.

"Later on, Bill assisted his town as a proponent of chip-boiler technology—the result of his efforts is currently in place behind the new wastewater treatment plant—and was a strong voice for renewable energy, the need for growing a local labour force, and made-in-Dawson solutions. He moved this municipality forward.

"Bill always had an articulate opinion worth listening to, and there isn't anyone on this Council that hasn't benefited from Bill's perspective. Speaking personally, I always found Bill to be a reliable source of common sense and fairness.

"Bill was a generous, active member of the community, and his contributions proved he understood the importance of civic duty and pride.

"On behalf of the citizens of Dawson City and this town Council, I would like to extend our condolences to Helen, Bill's family and all of Bill's many, many friends."

Elizabeth May wants to "save democracy from politics"

"There's no such thing as the Harper Government," said Green Party Leader Elizabeth May as she began her analysis of what she believes is wrong with the way the government of Canada is currently run and reported on.

"We need to dismantle the power of the political parties and reestablish the fundamental link between constituents and their Member of Parliament."

She claims to think a lot like Preston Manning in this regard and is quick to note the irony that the mutated Reform Party has now become the Conservative Party that has such a stranglehold on its caucus members and is so controlling in so many ways.

May presented herself as a champion of the Westminster Parliamentary System and spent much of her presentation, which ran to about 90 minutes including a O&A session, decrying the erosion of what she feels are the classic values of that system.

While much of the change she chronicles since the days of Pierre Trudeau seems to have been the result of the fabled Law of Unintended Consequences, she contends that the process has accelerated under the present government to the point where the Prime Minister's Office (PMO) has grown from being a few secretaries and some administrative assistants to where it has a budget of $10 million and it's hard to find out exactly who works there or what they do.

May worked for department government as a civil servant under the Mulroney administration in the late 1980s, and she contends that in those days there was a clear demarcation between the political wing and the civil service wing. These days, she says, those lines are blurred if not missing entirely. Civil servants used to be charged with carrying out the mandates of their departments according to the legislation under which they were established. These days civil servants seem to be required to support the platform of the party in power, even when the governing legislation has not been altered, she said.

Some of the most publicly prominent features of the present government don't even exist in our Canadian Constitution, she said. The Prime Minister is simply the first among equals in Westminster parlance. Now the office has evolved into something that looks more and more like the American Presidency, but without the checks and balances of that Canada, she said, is supposed to be governed by Parliament, which includes every elected member of every party. Those individual members are what we actually vote for, but the campaigns are increasingly run as if the populace were actually voting for the PM.

She expounded on a number of reforms that she thought would improve the situation.

The "first past the post" electoral system is a hindrance to true democracy, she said. Some form of proportional representation or some sort of system that makes it impossible for a party without an actual majority of the vote to form a majority government needs to be put in place.

In theory, she said, it ought to be possible for a caucus to remove its leader if things aren't going well, even if that to voter suppression. People leader is the sitting Prime Minister. Margaret Thatcher was replaced by just such a revolt, and we have recently seen it happen twice in just a few years in Australia.

Whipped votes, where the MP is told how he or she must vote and punishments are exacted if they don't, should be abolished. It was just such a vote that caused former Yukon MP Larry Bagnell to have to vote in favour of keeping the Long Gun Registry when he knew that most of his constituents wanted it abolished.

It should be possible for a candidate to be selected by his or her riding association members without requirement for the party leader to sign the nomination

The size and power of the PMO must be reduced so that Parliament can reclaim the power and authority that has been leached away from it.

Things like the timing of elections, robo-calls, attack ads and the changing of the ID rules at the polls May said were all tactics that amounted should realize that they are being deliberately discouraged from voting and get out there anyway.

Asked whether the Green Party is simply splitting the vote on the political left, she responded that voter turnout was actually higher in areas where Greens ran.

favours She minority governments, where there is a possibility that the party in power can be defeated and replaced, triggering either an election or a coalition Coalitions government. are common in so many democracies, she said, and the present government had no business treating its potential defeat after the election of 2008 as if it would have been an antidemocratic act.

While she had no issue with the current prorogation, which had allowed her the time to make this "Save Democracy from Politics" tour of the Yukon, she had nothing but scorn for Harper's December 2008 prorogation, she said was done merely to avoid having his government defeated, something which she said had never been done before.

Matthew Webster Scholarship Fund Winners

Submitted by the Webster family

One or two $500 scholarships are awarded annually from this fund, administered by the Yukon Foundation, to Yukon residents pursuing post secondary school education in trades and industrial design.

The recipients of this scholarship for this year (2013-2014) are Jeremy Johnson and Chase Wolsynuk.

Jeremy Johnson, a graduate of F.H. Collins High School, is entering his third year in pursuit of a Bachelor of Science degree in Aviation Technology at the University of Alaska, Anchorage. Jeremy is "passionate about my career choice" and is dedicated to "fulfill(ing) my dream of serving the North as a professional pilot."

Chase Wolsynuk, who attended Vanier Catholic High School, is starting his third semester in the Aircraft Maintenance Engineer Program at Red Deer College in Portage La Prairie, Manitoba. Working the past two summers as an apprentice at Air North, Chase's goal is "to get my helicopter endorsement and pilot's licence."

The parents of Matthew Webster wish the recipients and all applicants every success with their studies. We thank all friends and family for the generous donations in establishing this fund in memory of our son, Matthew.

Kellylee Evans Trio (plus one) lit up the Odd Fellows Hall

Would it be just a little too cute to say that Kellylee Evans' performance at the Oddfellows Hall on September 21 was electrifying? It might be, if the singer hadn't introduced her cover of Kanye West's "Amazing" by explaining that she is still recovering from having been struck by lightning in her kitchen back in June.

She was touching a wet sink when lightning hit the house just after she had explained to her kids that they were perfectly safe and not in any danger. She spent three months in a wheelchair and has only really gotten back to standing and moving about on stage for this Yukon tour.

"This is only my second week of concerts where I'm not sitting for the whole concert," she said. Without a doubt part of the joy in her evening's performance, communicated to her sidemen David Thompson (guitar), Wesley Allen (standup bass) and guest artist Lonnie Powell (drums), was her ability to move in appreciation of her band's solo moments, to dance round the small stage, to climb up on a chair in the audience and demand that everyone move with her.

The Juno Award winning (for Nina in 2011) 38 year old was boisterous and energetic, engaging the audience in sing-a-longs for Nina Simone standards "Don't Let Me Be Misunderstood" and "Feelin' Good".

She was certainly not a stage hog, standing aside for extensive contributions from the two regular members of her trio, Thompson and Allen, whose efforts called forth applause each time they ended a solo.

Special guest for this concert was well known Yukon drummer Lonnie Powell, who approached her after the first concert at the Yukon Arts Centre in Whitehorse and volunteered his services for free.

Kormendy house fire probably caused by electrical failure

Another Dawson heritage building surrendered to fire on the morning of September 20. The former Bear Creek residence belonging to Peggy Kormendy and her late husband, Steve, went up in flames in the wee hours of the morning.

Deputy Fire Chief David "Buffalo" Taylor reports that the fire department got the call at 4:27 a.m. and arrived at the building, located at the corner of Third Avenue and York Street, to find it "fully engaged".

Seventeen members of the department responded to the call and the fire was fought from the time they arrived at the scene until 9:30 the next morning. There was no hope of saving the building, which was an old structure containing both sawdust and fiberglass insulation.

There was a continuous drizzle going on during the battle, which was a bit of help as there was also a stiff breeze blowing sparks south onto the next block. Taylor says some fire fighters were detailed to keep an eye on that block for any possible ignitions.

The building was empty and has not been in use as a residence since not long after the 1979 flood according to Peggy Kormendy. The basement was flooded at that time and the other water damage made the family decide to relocate. Power was kept on at the building in order to run the army style freezers in the outbuilding next to York Street. That was also badly burned.

Taylor says the investigation of the fire went on all day until about 7 that night and the preliminary analysis is that the cause was electrical. The point of origin seems to have been near the electrical panel. A definitive decision will be reached after the Yukon Fire Marshall's office has run its own investigation.

There was no one in the house.

By the end of the weekend the unsafe charred shell of the building had been leveled to address possible safety concerns.

Contractor Jim Williams, who is also a member of the town's Historic Advisory Committee, notes that it is a shame to lose the building. It was one of the ones that he was used to directing people to look at if they wanted to use shingles instead of cove siding on the exterior of their homes. He's hoping there are enough photographs of the building to act as references.

Latitude Wireless launches 4G wireless network in Mayo

Press release

Mayo joined the growing network of Yukon communities which have access to 4G wireless service when Latitude Wireless Inc. launched Fourth Generation (4G) wireless service on September 20 in Mayo. The new service is designed to deliver wireless broadband Internet and cellular calling access to residents of the community.

4G, also known as HSPA+, is a further evolution of HSPA that offers data speeds of up to 21Mbps.

"Latitude Wireless is very excited to launch 4G wireless in Mayo," said Curtis Shaw, General Manager of Latitude Wireless. "We held a community BBQ earlier this month to introduce the service and the response was terrific. Hundreds of people attended the event and are thrilled to have this new technology in their community."

This new service means residents will have access to the latest wireless devices, handsets, tablets and smartphones, including the Apple iPhone 5, Samsung Galaxy S4, Blackberry Q10, Blackberry Q5 and the HTC One.

"Dakwakada Development Corporation is proud to be in a partnership that appreciates the importance of providing the latest cell phone technology to Yukon communities," said Dakwakada Development Corporation General Manager Paul Gruner. "We have high expectations for 4G expansion in the territory and are confident that it will improve day to day interactions and activities."

Latitude Wireless representatives held a community BBQ on September 6 to introduce the service and were at the Mayo Curling Club on September 20 from 10 A.M. to 5 P.M. to demonstrate the latest 4G devices and to activate service.

As part of the launch, Latitude Wireless is offering a 50 dollar hardware credit, 50 percent off handset accessories, and the company will wave the activation fee. Customers can get information about 4G availability and the latest handsets and wireless devices online at www.latitudewireless.ca, or by calling 1-866-803-2365, or by visiting their local retailer.

The company launched 4G services in Dawson City and Watson Lake late last year.

A fundraising auction

By Martine Dube

"Have you ever been to one?" That's what I asked my friend when she came from Whitehorse for support.

"Well you are in for a good one," I said.

As she watched the organizers started with the introduction of preferred procedures, list of items, auctioneers James, Frederic and Heidi, and the whirlwind began. The incredibly huge list of items for auction is as diverse and varied as the people who donated them.

"Do you know all these people?" my friend asked.

Fasten your seatbelt and work really hard on containing yourself, because it was probably by far the hardest thing to do that night.

As the ever expanding list of items was purchased, the emotions that had recently stricken our community turned into a mix of joy, laughter, a lot of teasing (which one couch potato did get the one-way bus ticket out of town?) and the frenzy that auctions cause in all of us. Caught up in the excitement, more than one person's paycheck was salvaged by some conscientious bidders (you know who you are, Gammies.) An overwhelming sense of kindness and generosity poured from people's hearts (and wallets) without any hesitation.

The hurried event was organized in record time and was an extraordinary success. Anyone involved must be commended for their efforts. I cannot name everyone in fear of forgetting someone, but I can affirm that what was done for us is most amazing and is heartfelt. As the event developed, notes were taken to help remember it all, trying to grab it all and appreciate.

I would like to thank businesses, local and from Whitehorse, organizations, individuals (yes a few auctioned themselves), artwork and many products of all sorts (this town gets so well-groomed, as do their pets). I shiver thinking of the amount of telephone calls and e-mails that made this possible and assembled this eclectic collection. Thank you, Halin, for the painting you contributed. This event would make any community proud.

I would like to offer my deepest gratitude and thank everyone again. Also whether you donated, bought (hopefully peacefully, there were a few long-winded transactions), traded, made side deals, jumped around or just watched and enjoyed, your participation is noticed and greatly appreciated.

Now, if you missed out some funnies, there was Cleopatra modeling a handmade bench, Ben yelling after buying a beautiful quilt: "I like my wife to be comfortable!", a couple bidding against each other for the labour of three gentlemen (labour for a whole day's worth, no less), and Seamus bidding on (and winning) a piece of ivory thinking it is a submarine sandwich.

A few arms must have been sore afterword, especially my belly muscle after giggling so much. I had to tell my son Randy to put his bottom jaw back into his face a few times as we watched in awe. The town really comes together in these parts. As Trina says on her Facebook comment: "that is what we do here".

Thank you to the Westminster Hotel management and staff for giving us the place to do it. I just hope this thank you note shows my appreciation of your compassion and generosity to its just value.

Again, my deepest gratitude to all involved. And no, my lady friend from Whitehorse is not over it yet.

Recycling at a halt in Dawson as the bags pile up

Activity at the Recycling Depot in downtown Dawson has come to a plugged up halt as the depot is too filled up with material to take any more and short of staff to handle what they have.

The depot has been in operation for about two decades but it was only recently discovered that the space it occupies on Third Avenue and in the lane behind it, were not actually zoned to allow that sort of activity.

The Conservation Klondike Society (CKS) and the city administration were both surprised by this development when it cropped up during a routine business licence renewal application late in the spring.

No one has been able to track down exactly how the depot was allowed to set up there in the first place, but the town's administration has been acting with some speed to remedy the situation, drafting a bylaw amendment to Zoning Bylaw #12-27 which would add the classification of "recycling handling centre" to the permitted uses in the C1 zone.

CKS member Byrun Shandler summed up the advantages of the location at the September 17 committee of the whole meeting when the zoning amendment, which requires a public hearing, was on the agenda.

"It's centrally located. People can walk there; they can bicycle in, carry their recyclables in from all over town. It's low on energy and we think we do remarkably well. Very seldom do we have a problem."

The service is stalled at the moment because the hauling contracts for recycling backhaul that the territorial government has with the various trucking firms are all in the process of being renegotiated, and so hauling services are suspended until this has been sorted out.

"They went to tender," Shandler said, "and the tender closed on the ninth of September, so we have massive buildup recyclables right now. We don't like it and I know that you guys don't like it either.

"People are quite upset. We Bags and bags of recyclables are waiting to be trucked away.

is for individuals to truck the material out to the Quigley Landfill, out by the town can merely be discussed boundary.

Other than Shandler, there were no other persons wanting to speak to the zoning amendment, which was passed The only recycling option at the next regular council meeting on September 24.

Community Development Fund provides $1 million boost for Yukon community projects

Press release

Nineteen community organizations are receiving more than $1 million in support from the Government of Yukon's Community Development Fund for projects promoting recreation, health education across the territory.

"These projects contribute to the health and vitality of Yukon communities," Premier Darrell Pasloski said. "The Community Development Fund continues to demonstrate the government's commitment to improving the social and economic well-being of Yukoners."

The Community Development Fund offers three levels of support. Tier 1 funding is available for requests up to $20,000. Tier 2 funding is available for applicants requesting $20,001 to $75,000 and Tier 3 funding is for requests over $75,000. The funding announced today is in the Tier 2 category.

"One of the virtues of the 3,200 hours of employment Community Development Fund is the diversity of projects it can accommodate," Economic Development Minister Currie Dixon said. "We are pleased to be able to support these projects and the community organizations that are working to provide social and economic opportunities throughout Yukon."

Kwanlin Dün First Nation is receiving $75,000 towards upgrading the skating rink and softball field in the McIntyre subdivision.

Council "Our actively community-based supports recreation," Kwanlin Dün Chief Rick O'Brien said. "The funding assistance toward facility improvements will help to enhance our recreation programming in the community in addition to making our facilities more accessible and user-friendly for all to enjoy."

The Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in First Nation is receiving $74,310 to develop a network of single-track mountain bike trails on the Midnight Dome above Dawson City for use by local bike enthusiasts as well as to expand the adventure recreation and adventure tourism potential in the region. The project will create for between five and seven people. For information, contact Jennifer Nunan at 867-993-7165.

The Yukon Hospital Foundation will receive $42,503 for their Community Connectivity Initiative to create a public wireless internet network at Whitehorse General Hospital.

"We so often talk about specific pieces of equipment and their impacts on healthcare but there are real benefits to healing when patients can connect to families, friends and even their jobs," Yukon Hospital Foundation president Krista Prochazka said. "We are just ecstatic to work with the Community Development Fund and our partner Northwestel to bring public wifi to Whitehorse General for patients and their families."

Organizations are encouraged to contact the community development advisors well before the deadlines for help with their applications and developing project ideas. The next deadline for Community Development Fund applications is October 15 for Tier 1 support.

Berton House is a large nugget of writer's gold, says departing playwright

"In Dawson City there are three kinds of gold," dramatist Colleen Murphy told the audience at her public reading on September 18.

"There's fools gold, there's real gold and there's writer's gold. And the writer's gold is a large nugget in the shape of Berton House. It is priceless.

"I came here - I was very lucky and I came – and I didn't really have an idea of what bound Pathfinder girl who has volunteered to read to a convalescing soldier. Corporal Michael Armstrong doesn't want to be read to, wants to be left alone to hide under his bed. She is persistent, and really, really wants that merit badge. The scene was both touching and hilarious. The play will open in Vancouver in October.

In The December Man we meet Jean and his mother, two people whose lives were tragically impacted by the in Edmonton this coming November.

The last selection of the evening was from the play she has been working on while at Berton House. Set in 1939, just before the war breaks out, it involves the lives of a family living on Prince Edward Island. The scene she read was a very funny one in which two girls compare their understanding of where babies come from, while the groans of a woman in labour are heard from off stage.

Colleen Murphy takes questions at the end of her reading.

I was coming to. But when I leave, I understand what it one of the men that Marc means - priceless."

About 30 residents and students from the Yukon School of Visual Arts filled up the Dawson City Library to hear the Governor General's Award winning playwright read from her work and talk she concluded. a bit about writing in general.

Murphy began the evening by saying that this sort of event was probably easier for novelists and fiction writers because it was hard to portray different people in plays while reading aloud and make it work. She went on to prove that this disclaimer their balcony window. was entirely unnecessary, as her carefully selected scenes generally involved just two voices and she did them very well.

She alternated from lighter to darker material, noting as she did so that it was a matter of degree and most themes seemed to turn dark under her hands.

In Armstrong's War we meet Haley, a wheelchair

Montreal Massacre. Jean was Lépine shooed out of that classroom before he shot those women in 1989. This story does not end well.

"That is always hard to read," said Murphy, blotting a tear of two from her eyes as

The Goodnight Bird was clearly lighter fare, but it involved the relationship between an elderly couple and a homeless man. Lilly and Morgan have a lot of things to work out after Parker falls off the roof of their high-rise condo and wanders in through Pig Girl went very dark, Vancouver murder spree of Robert Pickton. Murphy said she wrote the play to bring out something about the women, rather than just focussing on the killer and the families.

She said she imagined a spirited woman who tried, as much as was possible, to fight back against her fate. This play will be premiering

Writing is just hard work, Murphy told her audience. Her original goal in life was to be an Olympic downhill skier. An accident ended that dream, but she says the lessons about discipline and perseverance that she learned on the hill have served her well in writing.

She doesn't believe in writer's block.

"My father was a miner ... and I often think that I ended up being a miner. It's hard physical labour. When you have a block, when you get stuck, it's your job as a writer to find out why. It's like peeling an onion. What's stopping you there's something stopping based as it was on the you. We are our own worst enemies - we stop ourselves. That's what I think, but that's just me.

> "If you want to write, if you feel you have something to say, even if you don't know what the hell it is - and you don't have to know what it is - but (you have) that impulse. Just go with it. Don't think about it, just go. It is hard."

Anna Maria covers the waterfront

Like a mariner pursued by a neverending curse, the MV Anna Maria now sits quite literally at the center of yet another controversy.

The consistently ill fated cruise ship is currently perched on top of an enormous new gravel pad just over the dyke at the foot of Duke Street, in a location which detractors say effectively blocks the the Yukon River from easy access by the fishing, recreational and tourist communities of small boat users.

Gerry Couture, president of the Fishermen's Association, is most distressed at the way in which the platform appeared. The association hasn't taken an official position yet, but the small boat owners Couture has talked to are angry.

The YTG's resident land use planner, Anne MacDonald, isn't any happier than Couture about the affair, and she doesn't know any more than he does about how the pad actually got approved.

She was not consulted when the arrangements were made or she would have advised against it.

As it stands now the pad interferes with most of the area which has been used by local boat owners as a launching, docking and pull-out area since the installation of the dyke in the late 1980s

Couture calls it the only area with enough firm ground and a gentle enough slope to allow reasonable assurance to a boat owner that he or she could get in and out without getting a vehicle stuck.

MacDonald agrees that the Anna Maria's pad basically destroys the use of the area by local residents.

It takes up the pull-out area in the spring and summer when its needed and would block any other use by small boats during the summer, when the cruise ship doesn't even need the pad.

Prior to the construction of the dyke, small boat users docked anywhere along the riverfront, but since then there have basically been two areas in use.

The shoreline in front of the Keno has become the normal spot for commercial users such as the Yukon Lou and they have docks there for that purpose.

Others, who simply beach their Duke Street and the ferry slipway, about three blocks in width.

ing, but Couture says this isn't much help, as it will soon silt over. He calls it a band-aid solution.

"What this is, is an admission by whoever put that (gravel) pad there that they've taken up the only area that was available and have attempted to rehabilitate, in a very perfunctory way, the existing concrete pad had become silted in and was unapproachable.

"This particular incident highlights the lack of any rational plan-

"We have a growing number of small boat users and a growing number of larger commercial us-Couture continues, "The Dawson First Nation has landed its boats there since the dyke was built and that was their marshalling area.

(There are) small freighters and miners who carry their equipment by river, people who live down river, tourists who come down river from Whitehorse and haul out right there.

"This incident should be used as a 15 complaints. starting point to develop ... and use a

"The thing that concerns us immediately is this pad.

"It's in the way. It will impede development. It needs to be moved.

"It was done without consultation or proper planning, and that may be the fault of the bureaucracy which allowed it to happen.

'We have a land use officer staning for the use of the waterfront tioned here in Dawson who was not consulted. This is a big concern."

The pad went in quickly.

Couture, whose rural base is up river from Dawson, says he saw the beginning of the project and that it was complete four days later when he returned.

Anne MacDonald says that she began receiving complaints about the pad early the week after it was completed.

Between her office and that of the federal Department of Fisheries and Oceans they very quickly amassed

1993 Museum Auction A Big Success

Submitted

This year's annual museum auction went off without a hitch.

Due in large part to the organizing efforts of Daintry and Selena, this annual social event and fund raiser attracted over 70 people from all over town.

Businesses and individuals from both Dawson and Whitehorse gave generously to support the effort of the museum society to continue preserving and presenting Klondike regional history.

In all, over 110 items were put on the auction block, ranging from original works of art, to jewelry, travel vouchers, helicopter rides, gold nuggets, and the finest cheesecakes were served north of '60.

In total, over $6,400 was raised, thanks to you, the residents of Dawson City.

The museum continues to collect artifacts, photographs and papers which relate to the regional history; new exhibits are being generated, including the block - buster goldrush travelling exhibit which is currently being prepared by Sally Robinson.

As well, the able staff have continued to gather a detailed record of the vanishing heritage features found scattered all over the region.

The Sun obtained funding in late 2009 from the City of Dawson, YTG's Heritage Branch and the Community Development Fund to conserve and archive early issues and make them available once again in the public domain. This is a great resource for students, writers and historians, and also for prospective tourists with an interest in Dawson City's life. Each month, we are re-printing our front pages from 20 years ago (seen above) as a souvenir of our lively history. If you want to see page 2 and beyond, check out our website. The real gold is in the garden

The 2013 Horticultural Exhibition was a success! We were thrilled to have over 60 participants in a variety of categories. Jack Fraser's contribution to Dawson's gardening scene was celebrated. (Thank you to the Fraser family for providing Jack's biography and photo.) In keeping with the spirit of the north, Jack prospected, mined, trapped, and gardened.

Molly MacDonald and staff members at the Dawson City Museum created the displays show-casing the history of gardening, complete with historical photos of the Klondike. Locals and visitors alike were wowed by the variety of produce grown in the land of the midnight sun.

Thank you to the market gardeners: Karen Digby & Grant Dowdell, Jack & Lucy Vogt, and Maryanne Davis for donating the high quality produce for the silent auction. The inspiration for this showcase came from their imagination. Sylvie Gammie was the highest bidder. Money raised from the silent auction was donated to the Food Bank. We would like to acknowledge the local restaurants for participating in the silent auction.

Special thanks to our judges: Shirley Pennell, Sharon Edmunds, Betty Castellarin, Joyce Caley, Lydia Oleson, Palma Berger, Lenore Calnan, Rod Dewell & Garry Gammie.

The following is an impressive list of the individuals and organizations, who made this YOOP sponsored event possible: Visitors Information Centre, KPMA, Borealis Painting, KVA, CBC, KIAC, Summit Awards, community gardeners, the local food security group, and the set-up/takedown crew.

first place: Otto & Connie Muhlbach second place: Helen Bowie third place: Penrose Family

We are proud to report that the Horticultural Exhibition was able to link the historic and current food scene in Dawson together. The bounty generated by local gardeners was impressive!

This year's classes were based on the 1946 program. According to a 1904 article from the Dawson Daily News, market & amateur gardeners participated in four days of horticultural events.

Here is our inspiration for the 2013 exhibition.

"In 1898, when the great rush took place in Dawson from the older portions of creation, one man had the nerve to plant a few seeds in the sandy bank of the slough where St. Paul's Cathedral of Dawson now stands. He was ridiculed for thinking he might raise anything in ground which only a foot beneath the surface was charged with eternal frosts."

Dawson Daily News, Article by William S. Paddock, Dawson Farmer.

For the record, here are the class winners of the 2013 Horticultural Exhibition! Congrats & see you next year under the tent!

Yes, we are cutting WILD GAME.

EX Call of the WILD

by Isobel Coles Bristol, England

The Yukon's muddied waters sidled up alongside the clear blue waters of the Klondike. Like a long brown finger it urged the unpolluted innocence to join with its wide, knowing flow. All too soon the two rivers join as one and continue their relentless flow through the Yukon, Alaska and into the Bering Sea.

Mikey Martin had arrived in Dawson City as unpolluted as the Klondike, not the only thing he had in common with that name so linked with luck and fortune. Just as the Klondike was not the real name of that infamous river (some fool had mapped it as Klondike instead of Tr'ondëk); Mikey was not his real name, it was Mighty.

I mean, c'mon, Mighty? He had taken some stick for that name! Maybe that was why he could no longer bear to look at his folks, let alone talk to them! They had screwed him up right from the start – but no more! He had finally broken away from their 1970s hippy bullshit, renamed himself Mikey and had finally ended up in Dawson City.

Dawson City, the Klondike, Gold! He had heard the old stories so he thought; why not give it a go? He had left Hudson, Michigan and arrived in Dawson a week later after bumming lifts and sleeping rough.

His folks had always told him that money meant nothing. It seemed clear to him that the only time money means nothing is when you have so much of it you don't have to think about it. You can be dang sure that it means a lot to folk who are up to their eyeballs in debt; and he meant to make sure he was with the former not the latter!

No more for him the quiet life – what was the point of living life easy when it should be lived hard and fast? What was the point of merely existing when life is there to be lived to the full? Yeah it might hurt more at times, but the highs always outweigh the lows – don't they? Well that was what Mikey Martin was just about to discover!

His first night in Dawson City was certainly one to remember! He had arrived in town and had really wanted to live that first night, but how? Then he had seen Diamond Tooth Gerties; a casino!

Now maybe that don't seem much to you and me, but when you have lived in small town USA; a casino is a big thing to a sheltered 20 year old guy who had been brought up to despise wealth as 'a capitalist ploy to trap the unsuspecting little guy into a life of subservience'.

God, he hated his parents' bullshit; they had lived the hippy lifestyle from the late 60s through the 70s and 80s. Then at their disgustingly late ages of 40 and 45 had decided to have a child - him! As if having parents old enough to be grandparents wasn't enough; he had been brought up in orange and green knitted clothes! No wonder he had been on the end of such crap at school!

Mikey was determined to get rich and stay rich; he was going to have the life-style he had envied of his few friends at school. A casino, he had thought, was the best place to start. So with his 50 bucks he had walked up to Gerties' full of the confidence of youth. Of course he had to show two forms of ID; he wasn't stupid, he knew he was a puny guy who looked closer to 13 than 20, but after a very close inspection by the guy at the door, he had been let in. He paid his $10 for the season pass, bought himself a beer and looked around.

Wide-eyed, Mikey took everything in. The dancing girls, all frilled skirts, high kicking and painful looking splitting. The fat-arsed housewives; mechanically feeding quarters and loonies into the slots; all hope of more excitement long gone from their lives. The tourists all shiny clean and over excited. Then there were the gamers; the every night, hooked like a red in a July run, sad faced gamblers always placing that 'one more bet' which kept them floundering in the net of debt. Finally there were the poker players and Mikey watched them play for a while. A fat, red-faced, sweating tourist in a puke green shirt, a couple of older, unhurried guys and some younger guys who acted like they knew each other; probably locals, Mikey thought.

The minimum bet in the game he was watching had a minimum $10 bet with a maximum $100. The sweaty tourist wore a worried look on his face; probably scared to death that he was losing all the vacation money and was desperate to win it back before his equally fat, sweaty wife with stiff permed hair lacquered to an inch of its life, (nothing like the shining locks which had whipped tantalizingly over his face when they had first screwed many years before) returned from the slots and gave him hell for ruining the vacation. He twitched and jumped like a fish desperately trying to spit out the hook before it could be reeled in.

'Can I play?' Mikey asked the vest wearing supervisor.

'Not good enough for these guys,' he grunted. The players at the table sniggered at the thought of the kid getting in on their game.

'Hell, we don't mind whose money we take; it's all the same to us,' laughed one of the young guys, and his buddies joined in with derisive laughter:

'Does your mommy know you're here?'

'Run along kid, mommy needs to get you to bed. Its way past your bedtime!'

Mikey blushed deep red, hung his head and slunk away from the cat-calls and laughter ringing in his ears. He was used to doing that! He walked over to the Blackjack tables and leaned casually against a pillar, desperately trying to look cool. The stakes were $3 minimum $10 maximum, and after watching for a while he bought $30 worth of chips and sat down between a good-natured, good-looking guy who everyone seemed to know, and a clean-cut chubby guy not much older than him.

The pretty dealer dealt the cards – a king for Mikey, a nine for nice guy, a ten for chunk and a seven for the dealer. Mikey put three chips on the table and tapped it like he had seen the others do, he was dealt an ace and immediately the dealer doubled his money, tens were dealt to the others and a five then a ten for the dealer. The dealer paid them out.

'Good start kid,' said nice guy, and Mikey beamed. There was nothing to it!

Mikey played a few more hands and had built a nice pile of chips in front of him when two girls in their twenties came and sat next to him. He shifted uncomfortably; he had never been good with girls. One was dark haired, with a hard, unhappy face, the other was blond with big breasts barely staying in the small tee shirt she wore.

The blond, to Mikey's surprise, ignored nice guy and turned to him, 'Can I place your bets?' she asked in a sweet sexy voice. 'S-s-sure' Mikey stammered and handed his poker chips to the girl.

The girl laughed with delight when he won, put her arm around him when he lost and, much to Mikey's surprise, planted a big kiss on his lips when he got twenty-one! He just couldn't believe it; he was winning at cards and was with a girl who clearly saw something in him that the girls at home had missed for years. Man, was he glad he had left Hudson and all those losers far behind!

When she whispered to him to cash in his chips and come outside with her he nearly fell off his chair. He cashed those chips in so fast even Blondie was surprised.

He felt a million dollars as he sauntered out of Gerties with her on his arm. She took him around the corner to a small condo in one of the back streets;

'Let me see you,' she whispered and tugged at his zipper. 'Wow, you're all ready for me!' she cooed and placed her cool hand on him.

Poor Mikey, he just couldn't take it, and to his eternal shame it was over then and there before she could do anything else with him. He nearly cried he was so embarrassed and pulled away; as red faced and twitchy as the tourist guy at the poker table. He hurriedly pulled up his zipper and was on his way out when he heard a different tone of voice than the one he had heard in Gerties.

'That's a hundred bucks,' said Blondie, harshly.

For a second time that evening he was so surprised he nearly choked. 'Y-you're a p-p-prostitute?' He gawped.

'What? Did you think I was after your boyish good looks honey?' she laughed. 'God, you really are green aren't you! Yeah, I'm a prostitute, now give me my hundred bucks!'

'But I don't have 100 bucks! You saw me cash in my chips I only have 60!' blurted Mikey.

'Buddy!' Blondie shouted; and the door opened to reveal a big, mean looking guy with muscles on his muscles. 'This kid ain't paying up. He says he only has 60 bucks. Sort him out for me Bud.' And with that she pushed past him and went out the door.

Mikey got beat up real bad that day and was thrown out in the street without a dime to his name. It was while he was trying to crawl away that nice guy from the Blackjack table found him. He picked him up like a modern day 'good samaritan' and helped him back to a cabin two blocks away and patched Mikey up the best he could. During the next two weeks as he nursed him back to health he told Mikey his name; Paul, and listened to him. For some reason Mikey found it easy to talk to this stranger who he barely knew.

When Paul heard that Mikey had come up to Dawson to make his fortune he loaned him a steel pan and some other stuff and took him out to a creek.

'You won't get your fortune in Gerties' kid, you'll get it through hard work with these, and a whole lot of luck,' said Paul and showed Mikey how to swirl the pan at an angle in the water. Then he showed him the tiny fleck of gold dust in the pan that was so small you couldn't even pick it up; you had to use a sniffer bottle to pick it up and put it in a vial.

'That's gold Mikey, and you need to find a lot of those flecks of dust to make a troy ounce. Every ounce of gold you find is worth $1300; work hard and you'll get your money, probably not a fortune but at least enough to live on. But don't go straying anywhere else; there are some big placer units around here who don't like you straying into their claims. This claim is my father's and I know there is gold here to find - if you work it right. You can bunk at my place if you want. I'm heading off to Whitehorse today so make yourself at home!' And with that Paul was gone.

Even though Mikey was still feeling the kicking he had received, he got straight to work. At first he was real clumsy; with the contents of the pan flying out with the water, but he soon got the hang of it and was pleased to find that he had quite a few flecks in the vial before he finished that first day.

He worked every day, rain or shine, back bent in half; cold, aching, but nothing stopped him. Some nights he went back to Gerties though he didn't play, he just watched; especially the Poker games. He watched the faces and movement of the players when they won, when they lost, when they had a good hand, when they had a bad hand. He noticed that most of the guys playing were regulars with the occasional visitor joining in. He just watched.

After eight weeks of back breaking work he took his vial into town and cashed it in. He was pleased to receive just over $1000; not a fortune, Paul was right about that, but enough for him. He had a plan! It involved Gerties and it involved poker; he had

by Monique Sweetapple Edmonton

After a long hard day of panning for gold Became another day of nothing to be sold

The last of Master's stores was stewing in a pot At least he would soon be eating something piping hot Toopy sniffs the air When Master is ready to declare...

"Dis ghetti is not for you! You already ate yer doggy stew!"

Toopy patiently hides Waiting for Master to go outside

> "Finally he is gone!" Toopy sings in a song

Immersed in a trance
She jumps up and begins the spaghetti dance!

In the pot with her paw
The ghetti wraps round her claw

That pot of spaghetti was filled to the top You would not believe she ate every last drop!

Her Paw! What an awful sight It glowed a tell-a-tale orange bright!

Toopy licked her paw to no avail She tried hiding her paw with her tail

In come Master all in his glee ready for a feed of spaghetti

He peered in the pot There was none! Not even a drop!

"Toopy!" He shouted angrily
"What have you done with my spaghetti?"

"Not me! Not me!" Cried little Toopy

This lie began to unfold As her orange paw glowed

"Man's best friend indeed" Sneered the hungry displeased

...and there you have it! The tale of Toopy Orange Paw

Writer's note: This above amateur poem was conjured up last week while playing cards with my husband on our first camping trip to the Yukon. Inspiration was drawn from my beloved Norwegian elkhound, Toopy, and her mischievous ways. Earlier in the evening my husband thought it would be cute to cover he paw in spaghetti sauce and she quickly received the nick name Toopy Orange Paw! I have little knowledge on how to compose a poem but thought it would be fun to pass this along.

watched enough, now was the time to play.

Mikey walked into Gerties at 1.30pm after registering his name there an hour earlier for a no limit, Texas hold 'em poker game. The supervisor, who Mikey knew by now, tried to talk him out of wasting the money he had worked so hard to get but Mikey was determined.

'I figure I know what I'm doing,' was all he would say.

The game started at 2pm and Mikey was pleased to see that the table was full of regulars; Tiny, Red, Joey, Charlie, Cody, Larry, Ricky and Jim. The first hour he just about held his money; losing a few hands, winning a few hands. Then the cards were dealt that he was waiting for. Mikey smiled to himself when he saw them and he played that hand like the true poker player he was.

At the end of the hand Red turned over his cards slowly and deliberately, but Mikey knew he had him; he had seen the twitch of his left eye when Red had placed his first bet. Red was bluffing and Mikey had the cards to beat him. Sure enough Red had a good hand, but Mikey had him beat fair and square.

That wasn't the only hand Mikey won, it was just the start; by the end of that afternoon he had $35,000 dollars. Maybe not a fortune; not yet anyhow, but Mikey was on his way.

Just like the 160 mile long, clear sparkling waters of the Klondike picks up driftwood on its long trek to the Yukon. Mikey Martin wasn't as young and innocent as he first appeared. His hippy parents may have only played poker for match sticks, but they had taught him real good and he had picked up every trick they knew in his short life. Luck, like life, is not about winning or losing. It's about how you play the cards you're dealt with.

The Authors on Eighth annual writing contest asks contestants submit to work in the style of one of four writers: Jack London, Robert Service, Pierre Berton or Dick North. It can be prose, fiction, non-fiction or poetry. This year the subject was luck.

There were 18 entries from all over Canada, the United States, England and Italy. All entries will be published in coming issues of the Sun.

The Authors on Eighth writing contest is held in cooperation by the KVA, Parks Canada and the Klondike Sun. Judges included the current Berton House writer-in-residence and local writers.

Murder on the Mean Streets of Mars

Red Planet BluesBy Robert J. Sawyer
Viking

356 pages $30.00

By the time Robert Sawyer came to spend the summer at Berton House in 2007, he had already written a story set in New Klondike on the planet Mars and was toying with the idea of expanding the adventures of private detective Alex Lomax to book length. Sawyer has always had a fondness for mysteries and one of his earlier books, The Terminal Experiment, actually won him an Arthur Ellis Award for mystery

Ellis Award for mystery writing. His working title for the Lomax book was "The Great Martian Fossil Rush", because it was the search for those rare proofs of long since extinct life on Mars that had spurred the creation of the domed town.

That story, "Identity Theft", had been written in the tradition all the great noir detective stories. There was a somewhat shady first person narrator and even an opening scene where a beautiful woman walks into his office looking for help.

"The door to my office slid open.

"'Hello,' I said, rising from my chair. 'You must be my nine o'clock." I said it as if I had a ten o'clock and an eleven o'clock, but I didn't. The whole Martian economy was in a slump, and even though I was the only private detective on Mars this was the first new case I'd had in weeks.

"'Yes,' said a high, feminine voice. "I'm Cassandra Wilkins."

"I let my eyes rove up and down her body. It was very good work; I wondered if she'd had quite so perfect a figure before transferring."

That opening scene is reproduced in this novel, the first ten chapters of which (out of 47) are an expanded version of that story, with quite a bit more back-story and atmosphere built in.

The history of the Rush is that two explorers found what came to be called the Alpha Deposit years ago. They made a killing on their high quality find, but they died and no one ever managed to figure out where that deposit was hiding, kind of like the century old search for the Klondike motherlode. Later fossil hunters found enough traces to make some people rich and keep the fossil fever alive, but New Klondike is a boomtown on the downslide, and there's a shabbiness to this future that isn't characteristic of Sawyer's generally more optimistic tone.

The new title is the result of Sawyer's publisher deciding the book needed something more noirish on the cover. Rob put out a call for suggestions, but my two didn't make the cut. One was "In the Boneyard with the Martian Dead", reflecting my fondness for the work of James Lee Burke, and the other was the Agatha Christie influenced "Murder in the Martian Boneyard".

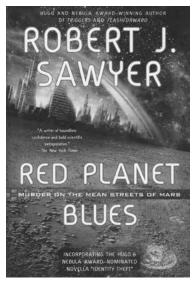

This book is different from Sawyer's more recent work in a number of other ways. For instance, it isn't set on Earth, unlike his last several. Then again, it's set farther in the future than he has been going lately. Third, noir narrators are far less likeable people than the usual Sawyer point of view character.

Finally, there's a great deal more action and violence in this novel (and way more sex, come to think of it) than you find in most of Sawyer's work. I'm not complaining, mind you. It suits the type of story than he set out to tell, and it suits Alex Lomax.

There are, however, a number of themes that he's been playing with since the short story "Shed Skin" and the novel Mindscan. Transfer technology plays a major role in this novel. The beautiful woman in question has had her brain shifted to an artificial body so she can be faster, stronger and live longer. Several other characters in the book have made the same choice and some of the story involves the possible death of one of these transfers.

Then there is the possibility that mind transfer technology could inspire a whole new type of crime. Why worry about using electronic bugs and monitoring computer traffic to steal someone's information when you can simply copy their entire memory and personality without their knowledge and find out what you want to know by torturing the duplicate?

The final three quarters of the book picks up on the Alpha Deposit plot thread that was a secondary note during the murder mystery in the first section of the book, and turns the novel into a different type of detective story, more of an adventure thriller style of story with chases, break-ins, shooting and explosions.

There are a lot of nods to the Klondike in this novel. One of the spaceships from the early days is called the Skookum Jim. One of the major characters in the book is a writer-inresidence, a nod to Sawyer's time at Berton House.

The last nod is to the cabin across 8th Ave. from Berton House, where Sawyer heard the rhymes of Robert Service recited twice daily for three months. It prompted him to begin the book with a bit of ersatz Service, which he told me was the hardest part of the book to write.

There are strange things done 'neath the Martian sun

By those who seek the mother lode;

The ruddy trails have their secret tales

That would make your blood run cold;

The twin moonlights have seen queer sights,

But the queerest they ever did see

Was that night on the shore of a lake of yore

I terminated a transferee.
