Hydraulic fracking cannot be properly and safely regulated, says safe water crusader

Story & photos by Dan Davidson

Hydraulic Fracturing, better known as fracking, is not a safe method of extracting oil and gas from the earth, says Will Koop. While it has been done for decades, it has only been for the last ten years or so that it has been done at the level and with the volumes of water that are being used in current operations.

Koop, one of the founders of the B.C. Tapwater Alliance, was in Dawson City on Monday night, speaking to a crowd about some 40 citizens at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre.

Koop spent the first portion of his presentation establishing his qualifications for speaking on this subject. The B.C. Tapwater Alliance was an important part of the movement that led to the protection of the Vancouver watershed area from the damage that might have been caused by the logging industry.

Will Koop, water warrior from the B.C. Tapwater Alliance.

Having accomplished that feat, Koop looked to see what other types of industry might be putting water under threat. Tapwater's motto is "It's All About Water: Water First!!" and it was really no surprise that he began to focus on the oil and gas industry.

Koop's slide show and lecture focussed most strongly on the areas in Canada where fracking has been done so far, largely in British Columbia and Alberta. Because his focus is on the use and misuse of water, he piled up impressive lists of statistics about the amounts being used.

The industry, he claims, is vastly under reporting the volumes of water being used, to say nothing off the proprietary mixtures of chemicals that are combined with the water to force the oil and gas to the

He maintains that hundreds of millions of US Gallons have been used so far, equal to one billion litres. Just a million cubic metres of water would > translate to the amount needed to fill 400 Olympic swimming pools.

If there is a flaw in Koop's presentation it is that it is so heavy on numbers and spread sheets that it leaves the swimming head in numbers after a while.

admitted Не to being new to the practices in the Yukon, which he had not visited much since 1976/77, when he signed on to work for an exploration company here after a vacation trip with some friends dazzled him with Yukon fever.

Subsequently pursued he education his and then became a foot soldier in the environmental movement, focussing water quality. He published a book about in 2006 and has been the author of a number of reports on related subjects over the years.

This visit, which he called his Full Circle Tour, has brought him back to the Yukon after all those decades, full of evangelical fervor for his cause. He told his audience to "say yes to no" and resist the efforts of the industry to "crack the minds of the People."

"Each well is a liability," he told his audience. "They will all fail over time."

One of the things he finds particularly bad about fracking is that the return for the investment is so poor. The process uses many times the amount of water and chemicals used in standard oil wells, and the return on each injection is lower than on the previous one.

Koop was in Dawson at the behest of the Yukon Conservation Society Don Roberts, a spokesman for his struggles The receptive crowd at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre.

Yukoners Concerned about Oil and Gas Development/ Exploration, a group vocal about the risks associated with Roberts referred to his own organization as a rag-tag group of concerned citizens who are trying to make public the sort of information that he feels the government is ignoring and that the oil and gas industry would like to keep hidden.

He has criticized the Yukon government's select committee regarding the risks and benefits of hydraulic fracturing for not taking its deliberations to the people in the territory's towns to find out what they want.

Roberts listed off the First Nations groups that have already banned fracking in their traditional territories as part of an indication as to how he thought such a public debate would lean.

Klondike MLA Sandy Silver

(Liberal), who is a member of the select committee, assured Roberts that the situation is not quite so dire as he thinks, and that the committee will be making the rounds once it has completed its initial phase. He was critical of the committee chair, Patti McLeod, the Yukon Party MLA for Watson Lake, for not a doing a very good public relations job in getting that kind of information out to the public, but maintained that the process itself has been fair and balanced as far as he can tell so

TH citizen Terrance Shäda spoke movingly about the way such practices as fracking are damaging the ecosystem and accelerating the imbalance between human kind and the natural world. His comments were greeted with spontaneous applause.

Uffish Thoughts: What was in all those libraries that we didn't need to know?

By Dan Davidson

"You had to go there, didn't you?"

That was Klondike MLA Sandy Silver directing a friendly aside at me during this evening's lecture by Will Koop on the dangers of fracking. (See page 3)

During the discussion at the end of the presentation it had been suggested that what was needed was a massive data base of information related to fracking - worst and best practices - stored somewhere that people could access it and learn from it.

"But if we had the data," I said, "it would be put into some sort of library which the federal government would then close down..."

I was going to add "and shred or burn the contents" but the room exploded into laughter and I had made my point.

This business of closing scientific libraries was a footnote to the very scary Fifth Estate documentary "The Silence of the Labs," which dealt mainly with the closure and dismantling of two scientific research projects by the Harper Conservatives during the last year.

One of these was historical and would have added to our knowledge of exactly how long the Vikings were prowling around the North before the big waves of fishermen arrived from Europe. We've known about Newfoundland but the work being done of Baffin Island was expanding that knowledge base.

The suggestion on the program was that it didn't fit in with the current government's preoccupation with British North American history, as evidenced by the concentration on the British-American War of 1812 and the flounderings of Britain's Franklin Expedition, both of which predate the establishment of our nation.

The second was the shutting down of oceanographic studies related to tracing and identifying pollutants in the Pacific Ocean. There was more than a slight suggestion that this is something the government might not want to pursue if it ultimately plans to have many more tankers plying those waters.

This is all of a piece with the long list of government initiatives that seems to have begun most recently with the cancellation of the mandatory long form census, but has continued on into using omnibus budget and budget implementation bills to gut the Fisheries Act, reduce the number and quality of monitoring being done on navigable and fish bearing waters, labeling environmental groups as enemies of the state and generally dumbing down the reach of data gathering in all manner of fields from social and Labrador for a long time, science and crime statistics to and consolidations: climate change in the Arctic.

> The numbers of scientists and experts who have been downsized and silenced over the last seven years is another indicator, in areas from pure science at the National Research Council (which is now to be the handmaid of industry only) to curators and conservators at Parks Canada.

> That reduction, may recall our Member of Parliament saying, was a good thing, because experts really shouldn't have all that knowledge locked up in their heads. It should be down on paper where anyone can read and interpret it.

> Well, in some cases it was, but in an act which websites across the country were terming "libraricide," many of these storehouses of technical and scientific data have been closed down. And while it is claimed that the documents are being and have been digitized in order to save time, money and space and improve access, yet the media this week have been crammed with accounts of truckloads of documents being shredded, burned, trucked off to landfills and made available to anyone with a truck on a first comefirst grab basis.

> This was the footnote at the end of "Silence of the Labs", and it could easily have inspired a program by itself.

Just a bit of web searching reveals the following closures

- Parks Canada will consolidate five libraries into one. Regional libraries located in Calgary, Winnipeg, Quebec City, and Halifax will be consolidated into the Cornwall, Ontario location.
- * The Department of Fisheries and Oceans will close seven of its libraries, leaving two principal and two subsidiary locations. Consolidation completed September 2012.
- * Natural Resources Canada is set to close six of fourteen libraries in 2012-2013: two in Ottawa, one in Varennes, Quebec; one in Edmonton, Alberta; and another in western Canada. In 2014, another Ottawa library will be closed.
- * As of April 2013, the Public Service Commission (PSC) was in the process of closing. Plans know now.

regarding the disposition of PSC's Library collection had not been finalized.

- * The National Roundtable on the Environment and the Economy was eliminated. Its library was closed on March 31, 2013.
- * Human Resources and Skills Development closed its libraries in Gatineau, Quebec, and Montreal on March 31, 2013.
- * Transport Canada closed its library in 2012.
- I don't know how useful some of these libraries were and no one has really said how it all worked out, but the lack of debate and public discussion is deplorable, as is so much about the way the ReformaTories attempt to manipulate public discourse.

Mines are leaders in creating healthy communities

To the Editor:

The recent needs assessment report for the Watson Lake and Dawson City hospitals and subsequent reporting in the media have suggested that there is a substance abuse issue in Yukon's mining industry.

Yukon mines are leaders in addressing substance abuse, and are working hard to make Yukon mines a clean and safe workplace for their employees.

The needs assessment report contains the statement on p. 41 in the qualitative assessment section that 25 per cent of the mining workforce turns over because of substance abuse.

The fact is that less than one per cent of the turnover at Yukon's three operating hard rock mines is due to alcohol or drug abuse.

Approximately seven per cent of pre-employment drug and alcohol screenings result in failures with a large majority of failures coming from Yukon applicants.

Unfortunately, no one from the mining industry was contacted or included in the needs assessment survey to provide accurate information.

Even these more realistic numbers are unacceptable to the mining industry, and efforts continue to eliminate all substance abuse.

All Yukon mines have a zero tolerance policy for drug and alcohol use at their operations.

In addition to pre-employment screening and on site testing due to accidents and incidents, the mines also have in place modern impact benefits agreements that have specific sections on drug and alcohol policies.

They also have in place employee assistance programs as part of benefits programs to assist employees with drug and alcoholismus

The exploration industry shares many of these same policies.

Several instances have occurred where an employee was not terminated for a failed post-incident test by going through rehabilitation available through their medical insurance and returning to work clean.

This acknowledges the potential disability of addiction and offers employees a chance to recover and move forward.

The modern, responsible health and safety programs and policies in place at Yukon mines and modern impact benefits agreements have been developed to improve the well-being of employees both on the work site and at home in their communities.

These policies and agreements obviously provide substantial incentives for those seeking employment within the progressive, socially responsible, well-paid mining industry to not indulge in activities that threaten the health and safety of co-workers, family and friends.

This is not unique to Yukon mines.

Anyone contemplating a future in the mining industry should be aware that stringent but fair policies exist within the industry to prevent substance abuse both on and away from the worksite.

Those who wish to participate in a modern industry that integrates a spectrum of careers through the trades, sciences, engineering and numerous other employment opportunities in a clean, safe work environment, please apply.

Potential employees, especially our young people, should explore training and education through the Yukon Mine Training Association, Yukon College or other educational institutions.

The leadership the mining industry provides is helping create healthier Yukon communities.

In memory of Madeleine

It has been several years since Madeleine has passed away and we have been unsuccessful in having the chairlift installed in the Catholic Church due to unforeseen problems.

We are therefore asking the community of Dawson to input their ideas of what we could do in memory of Madeleine.

To date we have had a few mentioned to us, but we would like to have the input from all the people that have donated or have an idea that would honour Madeleine.

We look forward to receiving your input.

Long time employee returns to Canada Post in Dawson

Monna Sprokkreeff is back at the post office in Dawson after winning a two year battle to regain her job.

"I'm back at the post office," says Monna Sprokkreeff. "I'm a new face for some people."

That will seem odd to long time residents here, but Sprokkreeff has recently returned to work at the Dawson outlet of Canada Post, a position from which she was dismissed about two and half years ago.

Sprokkreeff has worked at Dawson's Canada Post outlet for 25 years, including the two years she was fighting to regain the position she had been fired from on May 25, 2011.

Her reinstatement came almost two years to the day after that, after a long battle during which she says she learned a lot about herself and about the process.

"I got reinstated by the arbitrator on May 24, 2013," she says.

"It was a victory, but the real important part was taking a stand. The process was very interesting for me. I learned so much about access to information, ATEP – and a lot of self-discovery."

"It's been a journey – a good one –in many ways."

Monna Sprokkreeff was dismissed from her position after having been accused of tampering with the mail. Though what she did might seem to many people as good service, Canada Post management did not view it that way.

As she explains it, a young woman came into the office with her fiancé and asked for their mail to be put into one boy

"So we closed her box, put her mail in his box, did all the information correctly, and then I put a note on her box, saying that now she was in this other box."

"That (note) was the foundation of the dismissal."

This was common practice at the Dawson CP office, but this time it was considered to be tampering with the mail, "because mail is supposed to be delivered as addressed."

This was one of a number of changes that crept into the system after the events of September 11, 2001. At one point, even in this small town where everyone is known to almost everyone else, CP employees were required to ask for picture ID every time someone picked up mail at the counter, no matter how long they had known them.

"Back in the day when mail would come in with the wrong box number on it," Sprokkreeff says, "we would put it where it belonged, but now that's not to be done. It has to go where it's addressed."

Be that as it may, it is still common practice at the Dawson office to reroute mail that bears the right name, but the wrong box, or the street address instead of the box address. (There is no street delivery here.) There will be a sticker on the envelope instructing the recipient to inform the sender of the correct address in the future.

Also, when people leave Dawson, it has been and still is the practice of the office to redirect their mail. In Sprokkreeff's case, however, this was added to the complaint against her as a reason to fire her.

"This was dismissed by the arbitrator," she says.

Outside of her work day, when off duty, Monna also collected the mail of several families who travelled in the winter, and kept it for them until they returned, because they tended to move around a lot when not here. This also was considered tampering, although she did this outside of work hours and with their permission to enter their boxes.

This action was added to the complaint against her.

"This was also dismissed by the arbitrator," she says. In the end, the note on the box was the only thing left of the list of complaints and, at the end of the appeal, it was ruled that the dismissal was an extreme response to the situation, even though she was in violation of current company policies.

Reinstated, she will receive two year's back pay, but the money she managed to earn through other employment will be deducted from this amount, and she will have to contribute her portion of the two year's worth of pension savings. At this point it's been seven months and she has yet to see any of that money.

When the general population learned of her dismissal a petition and distribution of protest fliers was launched by supporters almost immediately after the word reached the street.

"I want to thank the community," she says. "There were letters of support and a petition. I didn't agree with that and asked the person not to do it, but that person is stubborn and chose to do it. There were fliers passed out that were not okay with me, but the feeling of support did help me get through it, especially at the beginning."

While she doesn't want to go into a lot of detail about the situation at the post office when she was fired, she did want to say that bullying can be very hurtful in the workplace and create a poisonous atmosphere.

"False accusations and assumptions, in the workplace or the community, at school or wherever, can be very harmful, not only to the person, but with the whole family."

"I'm not talking about things that get said by accident; I'm talking about deliberate, premeditated actions that are done with intent to cause harm."

Personnel at the office have changed and Sprokkreeff is full of praise for the people she is now working with, some of whom were also colleagues in the past.

She was not long off work. For much of the two year period she worked at data entry and various other things for the Dawson office of AFD Petroleum Ltd, as well as doing some work for the Discovery Channel and helping to work the polls during elections. These were jobs she really enjoyed, but when the possibility of returning to Canada Post came up, she felt she had to take it.

"I am grateful that we have Canada Post Corp here. It provides a vital service to the north and is an asset to the community," she says.

Part of her time away from the post office was spent learning more about herself. She says she realizes that she has not always been the easiest person to work with, but discovering that she has a form of Attention Deficit Disorder and some dyslexia has helped her to make changes in her life that have opened up possibilities for her.

"This has made sense of my life in a whole new way."

"It's been a beautiful road to self-discovery. I think you have to take what is handed to you and make the best of it. I feel very blessed. I ended up with a good job. I got to work with amazing people. I learned and grew and met beautiful people that I will be friends with for years."

Dawson City golf course aims to go solar powered

By Dan Davidson Photos by Carrie Docken

It's been a challenge, but the Dawson Golf Association (DGA) has managed to keep the town's golf course running in the black since the town acquired the facility from the family of the late Bill Hakonson and concluded a deal with the non-profit association to run the place.

The town allocates a portion of its budget to help cover costs at the golf course, but that doesn't mean that the DGA doesn't need other funding, In November of last year the association discovered that it needed a bit more help after some money that had been promised in corporate sponsorships fell through due to what president Carrie Docken politely describes as the result of "recent developments in the exploration industry (changing) the landscape."

The amount in question was between $10,000 and $20,000 and was needed in order to match the funds required to obtain two Community Development Fund (CDF) grants for new equipment.

"This application," Docken explained in a letter to council," is for the purchase and installation of a solar-power battery system, with generator backup for a total of $59,891.75. The single biggest operating cost of the golf course and clubhouse currently is the diesel generator the facilities are powered by. In 2013 the diesel costs were $19,088 for the four-month season. The CDF grant will significantly reduce the ongoing operating costs and increase the viability and sustainability of the golf course."

The DGA has already had good fortune with CDF grants, using just over $90,000 to replace a variety of aging equipment needed to operate the course, including "a greens mower, a deck mower, a fairway mower, a tee-box mower, a green surround mower and an all purpose tractor."

With the default of the corporate donations, the club was left short some of the money it needed to provide to qualify for the two grants. In each case the amount was approximately one half of the total of $21, 573.

As the town has committed itself to maintaining the existence of the golf course, both for local recreation and as a visitor attraction, there was really no question as to whether the request would be granted, but there were some questions about the details.

City Manager Jeff Renaud explained to Councillor Johnson that the extra money was available due to "the unfortunate circumstance of several of our staff being on disability this year." The payroll savings meant "the money's there in the current year's budget, available and that's where (the senior financial officer and I) recommend that it would come from."

Councillor Kendrick did not object to the resolution (in fact he seconded it) but hoped that the matter of more reliable sponsorship pledges might be pursued in the future.

"It's our golf course and it's a great asset, and lots of people use it, but there are lots of people that don't use it, and have less access to it than other rec facilities that are closer to us in the core."

Referencing the annual grant to the golf course, which falls in the budget under "green space and park maintenance", Mayor Potoroka (who moved the resolution) added his thoughts.

"I've said it before and I'll say it again; I'll say it tonight. A $30,000 subsidy for... our golf course really is small spuds when you look at the hundreds of thousands of dollars that we spend on some of our other recreation facilities. I would like to think that we could always see more sponsorships, not only for the golf course but for other places, but I think it really behooves us all to get informed as to what the situation is on the ground over there before we make that sort of request of them."

The final resolution gave the DGA the relief it needed.

"That the City of Dawson provides financial assistance to the Dawson City Golf Association in the amount of $21,573 in order to satisfy a funding shortfall related to the CDF funding agreement for upgrades of equipment at the municipal golf course."

Museum Receives $20,8000 from Gebb book sales

Press release

efforts to which Sheldon and Barbara Gebb have gone to in support of the Museum have set a whole new standard for donors."

At the 2013 annual general

Barbara and Sheldon Gebb with Ralph Nordling and Debbie Winston step forward with the receipt of $20,800.

The fund, established by Sheldon and Barbara Gebb in 2010, was created in memory of J.W. Gebb who travelled to Dawson City in the early 20th century. The title of the fund is taken from the book authored by Sheldon Gebb based on his father's diaries. Sheldon Gebb researched his father's time in both the Klondike and Alaska and revisited most if not all the locations noted in his father's diary. J.W. Gebb did not meet with success in the Klondike and, as has been known to happen from time to time, the citizens of Dawson, made sure he was cared for. Sheldon believes that his family owes a debt to Dawson and he and his wife Barbara have chosen the Dawson City Museum as the way to retire the debt. The book is dedicated to the Dawson City Museum and 100 % of the proceeds from the sale of the book are being donated to the Museum. At the request of the Gebb family, these monies have been devoted to the library and archival collections. To date, they have been used to upgrade the furniture and equipment and to increase access to these collections on the Museum's website.

This most recent donation is in honour of the late LaVona Gebb Drankhan, daughter of J.W. Gebb and was made "When one hears of major gifts being made to museums and art galleries, it almost goes without saying that it will be a gift to a large institution. This level of donation is not normally associated with a regional museum. When you consider that this generosity been dedicated to has enhancing everyone's access to the Museum's collection, then you can understand why we consider ourselves to be extraordinarily fortunate." To date, she points out this fund has provided the Museum with over $32,000. Debbie Winston, Chair of the Board of Trustees added that "the meeting, the Board of Trustees of the Museum awarded a life membership to Sheldon and Barbara in recognition of their ongoing commitment and dedication to the Museum.

Intensive French

Robert Service School has just completed its third class of intensive french and School Council is taking a close look at the results.

Over the next few weeks, we will be looking for input from parents, teachers, students and community members.

We will be asking questions such as:

- Do you speak more French in class than you did before?
- Did taking Intensive French affect your other classes?
- Do you notice a difference between students that took Intensive French or those that didn't? Academically? Speaking in class?
- Did taking Intensive French increase the level of expectation in French Class in higher grades?

Stay tuned for community consultation dates.

If you have comments or questions please contact any of your School Council members: Sue Lancaster, Francis Aitkin, Janice Cliff, Donna Michon, Jen Osborne, Lisa Favron, Lisa Anderson and Tish Lindgren.

The key to a successful School Council is community involvement. We appreciate any and all comments.

Clem Martini

Dawson's newest Writer in Residence, Clem Martini, has arrived to take up his post at Berton House. A Past President of the Playwrights Guild of Canada, he currently heads the Department of Drama at the University of Calgary, and has received numerous awards and accolades for his playwriting. Clem also writes for younger audiences, and "The Crow Chronicles", his trilogy of novels for young adults has been translated into French, German, Dutch, Swedish, and Japanese. Several of his books are available from our special Berton House section, and stay tuned for news of Clem's future author reading at the Library.

Winter Olympics and Alice Munro

Throughout the year the Dawson Library puts up featured displays of books around a selected theme. Fiction lovers should not miss our tribute to award-winning female authors, including a special nod to Alice Munro, Canada's first-ever recipient of the Nobel Prize in Literature. Munro has been called "the greatest living short-story writer in the world", so if you've never read any of her works this is your chance to have your eyes opened. We have also put up a homage to the upcoming Winter Olympic Games in Sochi, Russia, with works on hockey, skiing, snowboarding, and curling, as well as books covering the Olympics themselves.

Soccer kids pick up bronze in Whitehorse

Submitted by Stephanie Cleland and Johnny Nunan

The U7 soccer team won bronze at the Toonie tourney in Whitehorse over the Jan 10-11 weekend.

Exceptional public servants receive Premier's Award of Excellence

WHITEHORSE (January 17, 2014)—Premier Darrell Pasloski presented three teams and four individuals with the 2013 Premier's Award of Excellence today in Whitehorse.

"I am honoured today to present the award to these public servants in recognition of their outstanding achievement, leadership and public service," Premier Darrell Pasloski said. "The award winners are some of our best and brightest and exemplify the spirit of a public service that works every day to make Yukon a better place for all."

The individual recipients are Aimee Ellis, Janet Mann, John Russell and Bill Stanley. The team recipients are employees from the Children's Assessment and Treatment Services branch, the George Black Ferry crew and the Operation Nanook team.

George Black Ferry Crew

Three employees on the George Black Ferry crew with the Highways and Public Works department in Dawson City were recognized for their exemplary actions during an emergency situation last June. The Yukon River was running high and fast when a canoeist overturned near the ferry. They immediately launched a lifeboat and responded with a man overboard situation. Their emergency training and quick action saved a life. Through leadership, a commitment to safety and years of emergency training, these employees were prepared to act when faced with an emergency situation in challenging conditions.

Members of this team include: William Christiansen, Derrick Hastings and Roger Mendelsohn.

The Premier's Award of Excellence was established in 2005 to recognize exceptional accomplishments of Yukon government employees and celebrates their talent and teamwork.

The recipients are chosen by the Premier's Award of Excellence Selection Committee, which includes Yukon government employees from several departments and one community representative.

Community projects create new opportunities to explore, learn and grow

WHITEHORSE (January 14, 2014)—Eighteen community organizations, inclusing three in Dawson, will be able to upgrade equipment, facilities and programs using nearly $540,000 from the Government of Yukon's Community Development Fund (CDF).

"The Community Development Fund's flexibility means that it can be used to assist with a wide range of projects," Minister of Economic Development Currie Dixon said. "Communities are able to access funds for their specific priorities and that's why we see so many worthwhile initiatives benefitting from the fund.'

Among the recipients is the Teslin Historical & Museum Society, which will use the funds to add a large house-front facade, painted with a Keith Wolfe Smarch Inland-Tlingit design, to the George Johnston Museum. After several years of improving the building's physical structure, the society turned its attention to increasing the museum's visibility and appeal to highway travelers.

"As a traditional Tlingit design, the facade will invite more visitors to explore Teslin's heritage and emphasizes the museum's connection to the community," society president Tip Evans said. "We appreciate the generous support from the Community Development Fund and we look forward to unveiling the cabin's new look next summer."

Local residents and travellers in Yukon will benefit from improvements planned at the Copperbelt Railway & Mining Museum. An investment from the Community Development Fund will provide for new property and nature trail signage and improvements to trails and guest amenities. Museum executive director Joelle Hodgins looks forward to bringing more visitors to the 10-acre property to enjoy mountain biking, hiking and dog walking during its summer operations and snowshoeing and skiing during the museum's winter closure.

"The museum has been updating individual signs over time as our finances allowed, but this funding means that we will be able to dramatically improve the property and its trails in time for activities next year," Hodgins said. "Visitors will be better able to enjoy the museum and its grounds, especially as we expand the amount of information available in both French and English."

Locally, the City of Dawson received $15,536 for a winter light display for the outdoor skating rink along the waterfront. The project will create 30 hours of employment for two people. Contact: Marta Selassie at 867-993-2350

The Dawson City Museum received $50,930 for a needs assessment considering various options that will maximize the use of the building, taking into consideration visitors, traffic flow, accessibility and room for expansion. Contact: Laura Mann at 867-993-5291

The Dawson Golf Association - $59,891 to purchase a hybrid photovoltaic power system and ancillary equipment, replacing the outdated diesel generator currently in use at the facility. Contact: Patrick Habiluk at 867-993-6988. Details elsewhere in this edition.

The Community Development Fund offers three funding levels. Tier I funding is available for requests up to $20,000. Tier II funding is available for applicants requesting $20,001 to $75,000, and Tier III funding is available for requests over $75,000. The next intake deadline is May 15 for Tier I and Tier II applications.

Organizations are encouraged to contact the Community Development advisors well before the deadlines for assistance with their applications and developing project ideas.

Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in and CFYT Partner on Residential School Documentary

DAWSON (January 17, 2014)

- The Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in (TH) Health and Social Department is partnering with CFYT Radio to produce a documentary on the legacy of Indian Residential Schools.

CFYT is one of 40 community radio stations across Canada to produce a 30-minute documentary as part of the "Resonating Reconciliation" project - an initiative of the National Campus and Community Radio Association, funded through the Truth and Reconciliation Commission.

In Dawson City. TH citizen and producer-in-training Tish

Lindgren is working with CFYT and with TH Elder Roy Johnson, who will be sharing his experience at Chooutla Residential School. Their production will be one in a series of eight to air on CFYT this winter.

The first documentary in the series - entitled "Why Can't the Past be the Past?" and produced by CiTR, a Vancouver community radio station will be broadcast on Monday, January 27, at 7:00 p.m., from the Dänojà Zho Cultural The documentary Centre. will be followed by a live, moderated "Listen and Learn" forum at Dänojà Zho to discuss the production. People are encouraged to attend the event in person, or tune in to 106.9 FM in Dawson City or online at www.cfyt.wordpress.com.

TH Community Counsellor Jennifer Nunan will be assisting at the Monday broadcasts.

"Reconciliation is about improving the relationships between Aboriginal non-Aboriginal peoples and developing an understanding of how history has shaped Aboriginal people," said Jennifer. "It's based on a commitment mutual understanding. respect and trust.'

Jennifer and another counsellor to offer counselling support will be present and available during and following the event.

What's Your Story?

Interview by Jania, Grade 4

Name: Jess van den Broek

When did you arrive in the Klondike? I arrived in 2009.

Why did you come?

I came for new adventure for a new experience.

How did you get here?

I drove with my best friend Teely.

Where were you born?

I was born in Mount Forest, Ontario.

What do you think makes Dawson so special? I think the beautiful atmosphere and all the awesome people.

What is something you cannot live without in Dawson? My friends.

Where's your favourite place to take an out-of-town guest? My favourite place to take an out of town guest would be canoeing down the Klondike.

If you could go back in Klondike history, who would you like to meet and why?

I would like to meet Chief Isaac - he seemed like an intelligent man who cared a lot about his land and people.

What is your favourite time of year in Dawson? Why?

Fall is my favourite because everything in town starts to mellow out and the colours are amazing.

What are some of the jobs you've had? Do you have a favourite one?

I have worked at the Eldorado, Gerties as a Blackjack dealer, The Drunken Goat, shoveled snow for the Happy Marmot and Trinkhe Zho Daycare. My favourite was being a day camp worker last summer.

What do you love to do in your free time?

I love to play guitar and listen to music.

Have you ever spent a whole day in your pajamas? If yes, why and what were you doing?

Yes I have! Because it was cold and I was eating junk food and watching movies!

If you had a chance to do anything, what would it be? Play guitar with Neil Young.

What do you love about living here?

I love all the musicians, artists and endless outdoor adventures!

Do you have any nicknames?

Jessie Wessie from the kids at daycare, and Blondie.

What books have you read lately?

Jitterbug Perfume and Klondike.

How often do you doodle? What do your doodles look like? I doodle whenever I am holding a pencil and there is paper

I doodle whenever I am holding a pencil and there is paper nearby. My doodles are usually pictures of dead trees and mountains.

As part of an enrichment project at Robert Service School led by Tarie Castellarin, Grade 3/4 students are interviewing locals about their stories. The Klondike Sun will be publishing one of these interviews in each of our upcoming issues!

First Nations accept Peel Planning Commission's Final Recommended Plan

DAWSON (January 17, 2014) - The Na-Cho Nyak Dun, Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in, Vuntut Gwitchin, and Gwich'in Tribal Council are pleased to announce that they have approved the Peel Planning Commission's Final Recommended Peel Watershed Regional Land Use Plan as it applies to Settlement Land in the region (approximately 3% of the Peel watershed region). The First Nations also want to express their support of the Final Recommended Plan as it relates to the remaining 97% of the Peel watershed region, which is Non- Settlement Land.

This announcement comes after the conclusion of final consultations between the Yukon Government and First Nations.

"Ideally, we would have preferred to see 100% of the Peel protected from industrial development," stated Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Chief Eddie Taylor, "although we are prepared to compromise in order to accommodate the interests of the Yukon Government and the Yukon mining community."

Vuntut Gwitchin Chief, Joe Linklater, praised the work done by the Peel Watershed Planning Commission. "We believe that the Peel Planning Commission understood the incredible values in the Peel," said Chief Linklater. "They had a tough job in trying to consider the thousands of public comments received, and to reconcile the positions of the First Nation and Yukon Governments as the parties to the Peel planning process. In the end the Commission came up with a balanced Plan. We thank the Commission for their excellent work."

The Peel Planning Commission recommended that:

- 55% of the Peel watershed be permanently protected through the Special Management Area designation;
- 25% of the watershed be given interim protection through the Wilderness Area designation, which would be subject to review at least every 10 years; and
- 20% of the Peel watershed region be designated as Integrated Management Areas, which would allow industrial development.

The Peel planning process comes from Chapter 11 of the Yukon First Nation Final Agreements. The Gwich'in Tribal Council was formally brought into the Peel planning process through a specific clause in the Na-Cho Nyak Dun Final Agreement, which provides that the Tetlit Gwich'in "shall" have a seat on the Peel Planning Commission.

The Peel Planning Commission worked for 7 years before releasing their Final Recommended Plan to the Parties in July of 2011. The First Nations and Yukon Government have now completed their intergovernmental consultation. As per Chapter 11, the final step in the Peel planning process is for the First Nations to decide how the Plan applies to their Settlement Land, and for the Yukon Government to decide how the Plan applies to Non-Settlement Land, assuming that all of the Parties have complied with the process set out in Chapter 11. The First Nations say that the Yukon Government cannot legally roll out a new Plan for the Peel at this point in the process, after having had seven years to provide input while the Peel Planning Commission was active.

"We are eagerly awaiting the Yukon Government's announcement regarding the application of the Peel Plan to Crown land within the Peel planning region," said Gwich'in Tribal Council Vice President, Norman Snowshoe. "We continue to hope that they will do the right thing and accept the Peel Planning Commission's Final Recommended Plan, in spite of the signals we have been receiving for the past year."

"We are either going to have a big celebration or a big fight," said Na-Cho Nyak Dun Chief Ed Champion. "As we have stated, we will do whatever is necessary to defend the integrity of our Final Agreements."

What is the Tr'ondëk-Klondike project?

In two pervious columns I have given some of the background behind Dawson City's interest in applying for UNESCO's World Heritage Status designation. The Klondike region was placed on the national short list for this status in 2004, and I have outlined some of the earlier investigations that have taken place towards making it a reality.

The latest project is called Tr'ondëk -Klondike: Future World Heritage Status? and is being led by the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in as what is described as "the flagship of nine projects that are underway, with potential benefits for the whole community. Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in is managing the process of exploring the cultural, social and economic impacts of possible World Heritage status on behalf of community partners.

"An Advisory Committee consists of representatives from the Klondike Visitors Association, the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in, Parks Canada, and the Government of the Yukon, as well as four residents."

In the interests of full disclosure, I am one of the chamber reps on this committee and, as a journalist, I have been writing about this subject on and off since Pierre Berton first brought the possibility to my attention in 1997.

Since much of the Dawson City area is already comprised of several overlapping National Historic Sites, and the town already has a Historic Management Bylaw (several versions dating back some 30 years), adding World Heritage Status to the local mix would make very minor changes to how people live here now.

No hunting, fishing, mining or trapping rights would be affected, nor would local taxes and utility rates. Construction guidelines in the downtown core area have been in place for decades, so no change related to World Heritage Status would occur there.

The potential benefits include economic, social and cultural factors.

There is a tourism draw associated with World Heritage Status, so we could expect to see visitors who have an interest in indigenous, cultural and industrial as well as natural sites. There would likely be more international visitors.

There would be a greater

Tourists already come to Dawson by the thousands. Would World Heritage Status bring more of them? This group of Europeans viewed the vista from the Midnight Dome in mid September.

local and regional interest in learning and celebrating more about what makes this area so special, and a commensurate increase in community pride connected with living in, hosting and safeguarding one of the world's most precious places.

We could expect to find a greater ability to leverage funds and attract partnerships for research, protection, and interpretation of heritage, and perhaps turn back the clock on some of the Parks Canada cutbacks that have had such a negative impact here.

The nomination process, which would take a number of years to complete, would promote better relations between governments, businesses and community groups.

The project is being managed by former Parks employee Paula Hassard, with the title of World Heritage Project Manager. Specialists have been recruited to work on various aspects of the study, which is beginning by attempting to define the "outstanding universal value" statement that is an essential part of any nomination.

This is an exploratory study at present, seeking to determine the degree of local and regional support for this designation and discover if is it indeed possible to assemble the elements of a successful submission to the International Council on Monuments and Sites (ICOMOS), the body which would make the final decision.

Fuller details, and a survey for anyone wishing to comment on this topic, can be found at the project's website (http://tkwhstatus.ca/) and also on its Facebook site.

I'll return to this topic sometime in the next few months, once that OUV statement has been drafted. So far there have been two sets of local and specialists' workshops aimed at developing this key part of the study, the most recent having taken place in early December.

The advisory committee meets monthly to review the progress of the study so far.

The Vault

by Bernell Peterson Moose Lake, Minnesota

"Nasty, brutish, and short." That's what Thomas Hobbes said life was back in the 17th century. It was a different time. It was a time when the Crown and the Church crushed the lower class with taxes and then more taxes. The unlucky tenant farmer grew enough food to live on, but they took it away. Life was taken away. Hobbes wrote about one's "natural right to life", but that right never really existed. The people starved, moved to the city slums, or immigrated to the Americas.

I am sitting at a campground fifty miles from Dawson, Yukon and fifty miles from Chicken, Alaska. It's a harsh environment of black spruce, bogs, and mosquitoes. It looks like tundra, but is probably two hundred miles south of that part of the planet. It's 65 degrees N latitude and the sun hangs in the sky long past the time I think it should set. It's July 20th, a month past solstice, but only just a month, and it never really gets dark at all. I know that's true because I see definition in the tent every time I roll over in my sleeping bag. It feels like it is time to get up, but it isn't. I finally see the suns light on the tent wall at 0430. I still have a few hours of sleep and time enough to roll over and continue the dreams, the bits and pieces of reality that I won't remember when I wake up later. They feel good, these bits and pieces, and they beckon me back to a world that isn't real, but is calls me, and I return.

I finally wake up and I know I am in a place that exists. I am able to travel here by dream or reality because I am among the fortunate few on this planet whose life is not nasty or brutish.

In this part of the planet, in the far north, life has been harsh.

The native people who inhabited this land, before the Europeans, probably never thought of life as harsh or brutish, and are not likely to have thought of their existence in terms of luck. Life is life. Didn't catch and dry enough fish for the winter? Too bad, and when you realize that's true, it is too late. Euthanasia during lean times; Is that harsh, or is that reality? Death in midwinter when the temperature is sixty below; who will ever know how that felt? Their history was oral, not written, and starvation stories in the winter were probably not passed on to the next generation. Life wasn't about luck. It's life, or death, and that is part of life.

The Europeans came feeling lucky, as they tried to extract gold from gravel. Only a few actually did, and they were lucky, because most of them made the effort and went bust. Nineteenth century technology made it possible to go to places like Skagway, carry a ton of supplies over the Chilkut pass into the Yukon, and take a steamboat paddle wheeler north, way north, to places like Dawson or Eagle where the miner might, just might, make a big claim. The gold brought a civilization, a copy of the life in warmer climates where life had luxury and luxury could be purchased with money or gold.

The boom only lasted as long as the gold lasted and then that boom went bust, and most of the white people left. But the natives remained and their old way of life went bust in the new economy. In a cash economy goods are purchased with cash; cast iron fry pans or gasoline. If you are lucky you can sell something to buy something but you have to find a way to make cash. It is the European way.

Today it is tourism gold that pays the the way in the north where few settlements meet the road. Lucky people with money come in their trucks or RV's. They bring their money to spend on the luxury or frivolity of this century. Wants or needs? We buy what we want. We will spend our money on souvenirs made in China or by natives in Canada. The cash comes into an economy that has seen boom, bust, and then boom again.

So here I sit. It's a nondescript campground half way between Dawson and Chicken. A truck drove by in the last hour. This boom, such as it is, has made it possible for the likes of me to buy the tanks of gasoline I need to get my van to Alaska and back again. The campground that I am sitting in has two wooden gazeboes, a dozen picnic tables, and a cabin sized concrete vault for the waste of lucky humans who make this pilgrimage. It's a beautiful campground, especially in the rain, because the rain has led me to wonder these things. What will remain in a hundred years, after this boom has passed? The gazebos will fall and rot and the trees will cover the place where I parked my van. But the concrete vault will remain. It is, after all cast from material that has shown that it can pass the test of time. The walls and roof are cast to appear as lap siding and cedar shakes. I think the natives who live here at the time, whatever their race, will continue to exist and this concrete shelter will be a place of some envy for other nomadic peoples who will travel this river, seasonally, hunting and fishing for the food they need to survive another winter. Will their lives be nasty and brutish? Will they think themselves lucky for their concrete cabin or is that just the way life is?

Dawson gets five blooms from Communities in Bloom

Front Street Park, with town clock and gazebo.

Story & photos by Dan Davidson

It's a little hard to tell in the middle of the winter, but Dawson City has a long history of greening and blooming during its short summer season and has received a number of good reviews during the last decade.

This year was no exception, with the town receiving a Five Bloom annual Communities in rating (82 points and Bloom judgings over the higher) and coming in third place in its category of towns having between 1001 and 2000 residents.

Following their evaluation, volunteer judges Lorna McIlroy and Ted Zarudny recorded the following comments.

Yukon Luck

by Al Sider Dawson City, Yukon

You travel far and wide, maybe looking for a place to hide. You have no money and have no luck As far as you are concerned, you are worse than stuck.

Looking for a place where you can grow, or a place where clean waters flow. You wander and wander, until you arrive, at a place where you feel alive.

You reach the Yukon, a magical place, a land that is only filled by space. You heard of wealth and riches gained, while all about you, despair and gloom had rained.

Perhaps you seek the love of life, a friend or lover, perhaps a wife. A claim for gold, has caught your eye, you lay your stake by and by.

You dig all day, and your muscles ache, the sweat just flows, you begin to shake. A gleam of yellow, shimmered and shone, and this is how the unnatural fever begins to

You thirst for more of this thing you cannot drink, nor eat, nor wear, but you cannot think. The yellow pieces, they inspire the mind, how could anyone miss such a wondrous find?

You work long into the night, fighting off sleep with all of your might. The long hours of light keep you working a rock suddenly falls, and now you are scarred.

You found what you sought, and it was never for nought. Though unable to continue the spirit is at rest within you.

The search has been tedious and long, and through it all it made you strong. No longer the wimp, the whiner, the whelp and that inside you, never before felt.

You continue your journey, in the Great White a search for those things you long to bring forth. Confidence, and love, a home to belong, a feeling in your heart, to give you a song.

You endure the coming winter, though long and hard,

You think you'll go crazy, but all you have is a card. The Queen of Hearts, you hold close to your breast, is the last of the longs, before you can simply rest.

In this land of the midnight sun, you wonder how far you need to run. To find the desire of your heart, when you can make a brand new start.

Till one day into Gerties you walk, searching for someone with whom you might talk. You decide to have a drink or two, when you look up and spy someone new.

Is this your "Queen of Hearts", is this your day for brand new starts? You swallow your beer, then gulp a shot, you fasten your eyes, your heart beats a lot.

She comes off the stage, and sits on your lap, you want to talk, but hold your tongue back. She completes her show, and wouldn't you know,

She comes back down and sits with you. You find it hard to speak, the words you can't utter, the words get stuck, you start and stutter. Your face it blushes, until at last, she speaks in calming tones, and your heart beats

The things you desire, are about to begin, you find your words, this is no sin. You hit it off, you and she, no longer shall it remain, only me.

Wherever you began, the Yukon is your home, as luck would have it, your home is no longer just foam.

Floating and spilling, going with the flow, is not what you wanted, 'tis clear that you know.

Only the Yukon luck, could fill all your dreams, your shattered hopes, no longer it seems. May Yukon luck remain all of your days, Filling your hopes, your dreams, and all of your ways.

The years now pass, slowly it seems, fulfilling my desires, my hopes, my dreams. Twenty years, and five kids later, in all this time, I never could hate her.

I now lay my life, at death's dreary door, and have no regrets, not any more. I lived my life, searching and having fun, as the sun finally sets, in this Land of the midnight sun.

TWENTY YEARS AGO IN THE SUN

Transition team to deal with boundary expansion

While the majority of Dawson's municipal council was not willing to open up a new seat on the council for the 75 or so voters who have just joined the community through boundary expansion, all of them were clearly willing to extend new residents everything but that when they sat in at the January 6 meeting.

After much discussion resolutions were passed to enact promises that had been made back in the winter of 1992, when the debate on this issue was at its height.

Dawson council voted unanimously to use the Klondike Valley Land Use Plan as the interim guideline for governance in the new area until such time as the Official Community Plan can be revised to deal with it.

A transition team will be set up to guide the process of coming to terms with Dawson's new boundaries.

It will include one person from the valley south to Quigley Gulch, one person from West Dawson, one person from the town, one of the council members and someone from the present city administration.

In addition a bylaw will be drafted to prevent the application of any existing city bylaws to the new residents until they have been reviewed by the transition team for suitabil-

Councillor Shirley Pennell was of the new rural area will fall under the same sort of bylaws that govern the lots in the Dome expansion area.

There is a separate country residential zoning for this area, and many of the downtown bylaws do

Rural residents at the meeting indicated that, while they would like to have elected representation, none of the assurances that were given were unwelcome.

Everything was moving in the right direction, just not far enough for their liking.

Councillor Tim Gerberding argued eloquently for the need to establish a temporary rural ward and have an elected representative from that area to show good faith.

Sub-division business owner John it from West Dawson. Van Every, who opposed the notion of wards from the word go, calling it a "can of worms" that should not be opened.

Councillor Glenn Everitt noted that, while such a possibility had been discussed at one point, two years ago, that was when the affected population (going down to Bear Creek, Rock Creek and Henderson's Corner) would have been over 300 people.

Two thirds of those people got what they wanted when the Municipal Board excluded them from this expansion Everitt wasn't convinced that 75 voters needed their own council voice. He felt there were other ways to ensure their participation.

Mayor Jenkins took this line as well, reminding the rural residents present that some people from outside Dawson already sit on committees like the recreation board, that rural residents had had major input into the Klondike Valley Land Use Plan, and that committees would allow more than one person from the area to be involved.

He was also reluctant to simply take on a councillor from the tics. The situation in Dawson has Klondike Rural Residents Association since that group had no one in Shirley Pennell, though adamant that she should not be linked to the mayor in terms of her motives and affiliations, also opposed holding a by-election or having the YTG appoint a councillor at this time.

Aside from the time it would take to elect and train a new councillor. she agreed with Everitt that a six member council could lead to dead-

Pennell also reiterated council's position that very little could or should be done in terms of development in the new area without the participation of both the new residents and the Dawson First Nation, which has Land Claim rights on some of the territory.

She predicted that not much of substance would be accomplished before the next municipal elections, which will be held in October.

Asked by the audience of nine or 10 if this expansion, with its overlapping federal, territorial, Han and municipal jurisdictions wasn't going to be a nightmare to work with, Jenkins responded that this has nearly always been the case during his more than a decade in city polialways been complicated, he said.

Pennell noted that this simply increases the need to forge ahead in of the discussion. Pennell joked that she had half expected rotten fruit.

All the players at this meeting expressed their relief at the harmony

Dave Hendrie half-jokingly expressed his concerns about city bylaws when he said that the day before the expansion was proclaimed he had felt like a law abiding citi-

Berton House was a mind-expanding experience for Fitzgerald

As James FitzGerald moves further towards the actual writing of his next book, Dreaming Sally, a tale of young love and tragedy, he realizes that his chosen style, that of writing non-fiction using the techniques of fiction, leave him wondering how to deal with the dialogue in events that took place nearly 40 years ago.

FitzGerald has been fascinated with creative nonfiction since he was exposed to the early pioneering work of writers like Truman Capote, Norman Mailer and Tom Wolfe, all of whom blended the techniques of the journalism and fiction in their work.

While his first book, Old Boys: The Powerful Legacy of Upper Canada College, is best described as an oral history, for his second book, What Disturbs Our Blood: A Son's Quest to Redeem the Past, he blended a number of different genres into one powerful narrative.

Part memoir, part biography, part mystery, part personal therapy and part history, the book not only deals with FitzGerald's inner demons, and those of his father and grandfather, but also reveals an almost forgotten chapter in the history of Canadian public

"These worlds (and styles) meeting is a fascinating thing," he said as we chatted during the last few days of his residence at Berton House.

He says that what he's been seeking in this style is emotional truth.

"That's ultimately what you're looking for - something that rings true and affects people in a universal way. You know when it's working because people are all going (he nodded). They're all identifying - right? If it didn't interest them they would be bored and nod non-fiction is that the writer may be dealing with people who are still alive. In What Disturbs Our Blood, FitzGerald worried about alienating his sister, who had had to deal with his father's attempted suicide as a young woman. Fortunately, she responded well, and he says they are closer now than they had been for years.

He hasn't found many people doing that during his readings from What Disturbs Our Blood.

Working on Dreaming Sally, he has had to consider the feelings and experiences of a group of his peers, those were on the bus when Sally was killed, particularly the young man who was the driver that day.

"I've interviewed all of the (people who were on the bus) that day, except (the driver)."

When he did finally call him to talk about the accident, the man didn't want to be interviewed about it.

"I have six versions of what happened that day and they're all different. I told him I would write a version and that I would send him a draft. He agreed to that."

FitzGerald credits Berton House and Dawson with opening his mind, letting him delve more deeply into himself and getting a better sense of the country. But he wasn't sure about any of that when his application was accepted.

"Going in one of my concerns -one of my standard jokes to people - was that I was going to turn into Jack Nicholson in The Shining (the movie version) and be metaphorically frozen in the snow bank."

He spent his childhood waking up in the dark in an emotionally and physically cold house and he really didn't want that to happen here.

"What I didn't get in the original experience was all these warm people around me. The arc of my experience here has been that I'm so glad I did it. This place just seems to be built for it (a positive experience). I can see why it is the way it is especially in the winter.

He was amazed by the depth

The other big risk in creative of the artistic community in the town, and also by the number of first rate performances he was able to attend, in places as varied as peoples' living rooms, the offices of a landscaper, and the Oddfellows Hall.

> "Getting to see Martha Wainwright here was probably a better experience that I would have had in Toronto, being that close to the stage and that personal.

> "You can't invent that, and you can't transplant that anywhere else."

> "Berton House has worked brilliantly for me. I was told I could write 2 words or a book or nothing. Berton's strategy, which has worked great on me, was to Canadianize the writer consciousness expanding through experience. All that stuff like the spell of the Yukon - it's kind of mythologized - but I actually experienced it."

That Random House accepted his Dreaming Sally proposal while he was here was just some Yukon frosting on the cake of his experience.

"Mid-stream here I get the 'Yes', so now I can really hit the ground running. Here you can be a workaholic recluse or not - but it's set up so you can make the choice."

He holds fond memories of going to the Arctic Circle, paddlewheel visiting the graveyard, Dredge No. 4 and Discovery Claim, and even what turned out to be a very dangerous drive on an icy hill up to the Midnight Dome and down again.

"The only thing I've missed is the Aurora."

Writing, he says, can be very hard work, something a lot of people don't realize. There's almost an expectation that you have to suffer for your art.

"The pleasurable aspects of it were coming to me here much more readily and it has much more of a flow. I'm conscious of carrying the good vibe back with me on the plane and working with it."

A trio of tales unfolds more about Roland the Gunslinger and his world

The Wind Through storm is another symptom the Keyhole

(A Dark Tower Novel) by Stephen King Pocket Books 386 pages $12.99

You might think that King's Dark Tower series, Roland starring the Gunslinger, had ended. After all the seventh and final volume came out in 2004, concluding a story line he'd been working on every few years since 1982 (the very earliest chapters going back to his university days). The last three volumes came out in a rush, the author spurred to finish the saga by almost losing his life when he was run off the road by a drunk driver during one of his evening walks.

Adding it all up, a story that runs for 3914 pages might be thought to be finished, but King warned us some time ago that these books were just the story in broad strokes and there might be details yet to be told.

The Wind Through the Keyhole contains some of the details. It's an odd book for King in that it's only 386 pages long. It's odder still in that it's a Russian doll of a novel, three narratives nested and, paradoxically, the biggest part of the book is the one on the inside. (Good grief it's a TARDIS.)

The outer story, or the first frame, if you like, takes up 46 pages, and would fit into the saga between book four (Wizard and Glass) and book five (Wolves of the Calla). Roland and his little band (or ka-tet) are travelling between major adventures when they are trapped in an abandoned stone building during a major storm called a starkblast. This freakish of the way that Mid-World is winding down. With his mates unable to sleep, Roland tells them a tale from his younger days.

This story would have fit in right after the events related in book six (The Song of Susannah). Roland tells it in the first person, and the tone is different than the opening frame. It's still a good tale, because gunslingers have to be able to do more than shoot and be tough to fulfill their role in the world. "The Skin Man" is divided into two sections and runs over 136 pages in total. Roland and a fellow junior gunslinger have been sent to a town called Debaria, not far from Serenity, where his mother retreated after the first stage of her affair with Marten Broadcloak, the affair that would eventually cause her death at Roland's hands and hasten the collapse of Gilead.

There has been a series of brutal murders, each somewhat different than the last, each seemingly by a different sort of unnatural beast, a beast that seems to have some characteristics human in addition to its animal ways. Roland and Jamie, his partner, divine that they are dealing with a Skin-man, a deduction based partly on the tracks they find and partly on the evidence of young Bill, the only survivor of one of the attacks.

They devise a plan to use Bill to smoke out the Skinman. That night, while some final clues, Roland guards the terrified Bill and to calm him, tells him the story of another young boy, Tim Ross, who was forced to rise above his capabilities and undertake a quest to save the sight of his mother after she was attacked and blinded by her second husband.

This is a legend of Mid-World, the coming of age story of a young man who would later become a heroic gunslinger, told in an omniscient storyteller's voice. Stylistically, it would fit in right next to King's earlier young adult fantasy, The Eyes of the Dragon and was, for me the best part of this book. At 200 pages, it was also the longest part, told with no interruptions.

It's not at all certain why the Covenant Man, who is known locally as the rent collecting agent of the local lord, decides to interfere in Tim's life, providing him with the clues that help him unmask his father's killer, but at the same time causing the chaos that sets him on his quest for his mother's salvation. Does he do these things simply because he can? As Marten and as Randall Flagg, he appears in many of the Dark Tower books, as well as in The Stand, Hearts in Atlantis and Eyes of the Dragon.

Tim's quest sends him through treacherous lands seldom travelled by anyone, and sees him menaced by malevolent fairies, savage beasts and a starkblast like the one in the outer frame story. He overcomes all of these obstacles through wit and determination. It's a fine fantasy in the classic style and could well be the tale that leads to more legends of Mid-World.

After this we come back to the conclusion of the horror/murder mystery Jamie is away checking on of the Skin-Man and then out again to the conclusion of the struggle with the environment.

> As you can see, this book has dealt with almost all the types of conflict that can occur in a story and has added some satisfactory details and flourishes to a bit of world creation that most of us thought was concluded. It is often said of Mid-World that it has "moved on" a phrase meant to describe its unraveling and decay. King was thought to have moved on from Mid-World, but it wouldn't surprise me now to see more of it turn up in later books.

New Year's greetings?

By Robin Millar

We are not alone...

I am sure we all enjoyed the 2013 festive season, but here are the New Year greetings from a few of the international space

First we blast off with JAXA, the Japan Aeronautical Exploration Agency, which posted an e-card.

"We appreciate your priceless contribution to our success this year. We wish you peace, joy, and fulfilment in 2014. Happy New

Then with the Olympic host country, Russia's ROSCOSMOS, another card: "Thank you for staying with us! We wish you a beautiful new year filled with peace and gladness. We look forward to seeing you again in 2014."

JAXA greeting card

ROSCOSMOS greeting card

Unfortunately, the CNSA China National Space Administration, have not yet released an annum epitaph as the New Year is not until January 31. They are busy building a space station and planning a manned Moon mission.

NASA have out done everybody by actually beaming a live message from space; a card would have done!

Editor's note: The Klondike Sun did not receive such greeting cards. However, we thank everyone that did send us a greeting card over the holidays for the cheer!
