Lawsuit added to wastewater treatment plant's troubles

Litigation story by Christopher Reynolds with background files & photo from Dan Davidson as published in the Whitehorse Star on December 31/13

Problems keep adding up for the operators of Dawson City's wastewater treatment plant.

Corix Water Systems is being sued for nearly $3 million by Han Construction, subcontracted in 2009 to build the facility.

The lawsuit comes on the heels of multiple public scoldings against Corix the general contractor and site runner — by municipal officials this year.

The chastisements note the secondary treatment facility allowed mould buildup in the plant, toxicity issues in its sewage discharge and a major malfunction "with the potential to threaten the safety of our drinking wells," according to Department of Public Works reports.

Hän, a Dawson-based contractor, alleges the B.C.based Corix made changes to the subcontract which created further costs for the builder.

After completing work on the facility, Hä says, Corix then "wrongfully terminated" the subcontract.

It says Corix evicted $workers\,from\,the\,site\,and\,left$ the company with roughly $2.8 million owing on an agreement worth nearly $5.5 million, according to a statement of claim filed Dec. 20 in Yukon Supreme Court.

"Han promptly, diligently and reasonably performed subcontract work in accordance with the change directives ... but Han and Corix failed to reach agreement on the corresponding adjustment to the subcontract price and subcontract time," the lawsuit states.

It also claims Corix received full payment from the territorial government to cover all building costs, including the changes, but did not pass along the amount due.

Han is seeking "damages profits" lost for alternately, "compensation from Corix on a quantum meruit basis" — a legal term denoting reasonable payment for labour and materials furnished.

A representative for Corix said the company could not offer comment.

This is not Corix's first plant-related difficulty.

Mould issues at the wastewater facility, which opened in August 2012, caused territory's the occupational health and safety branch to issue a remediation order in September.

"Our safety officers discovered significant mould issues in Dawson's wastewater treatment plant during an occupational health and safety inspection in August," Richard Mostyn, the public affairs liaison at the Yukon Workers' Compensation Health and Safety Board, told the Star three months ago.

Also, effluent samples from last June and July passed their toxicity tests, but "testing results have indicated failures in the 'fecal coliform', 'biological oxygen demand', 'total suspended solids' parameters," a Public Works report stated.

"In my view, the above failures are attributed to the sewage strength changed from dilute winter strength and the plant's inability to adapt," said Norm Carlson, the town's superintendent of Public Works.

The degree of noncompliance with water standards did not pass muster with Dawson's mayor.

"Clearly, this plant's not quite ready for prime time," Mayor Wayne Potoroka said.

As far back as February, a major incident at the plant left officials concerned it wasn't working properly.

Carlson reported that sanitary system malfunctioned Feb. 2.

"The entire process train plugged up with sludge, causing a significant amount of wastewater to flood the degritting room and pour out the doors into the adjacent parking lot," he wrote in a report to council that month.

"This blockage caused the entire sanitary system in Dawson to back up. Public Works responded to the Corix operator's call for help and together we managed to bring the situation under control.

"While such an incident has the potential to threaten the safety of our drinking wells, the prompt response — consistently failing water of our staff maintained the quality assessments. wells' safety," he stated.

Beginning in 2012, Carlson's reports have stressed he feels his staff have not been sufficiently trained on the workings of the plant.

Under the memorandum of understanding, the plant was to be in operation for a year while Corix trained locals to run it and determined the actual operating costs, which have risen substantially since this project was first announced.

The City of Dawson did not take over its operations and costs last August, as initially planned.

The plant had not been able to achieve three steady months of trouble-free operation — the litmus test

Carlson's concern, outlined in a Dec. 5 report and echoed in council members' discussion on it, was that success in January would not be a true test of the plant's operational readiness.

Previous discussions at the council table have expressed the opinion that the real test of the plant would be to have it operate trouble-free for a year, particularly during the more intense summer period.

That's when the population and number of businesses creating effluent is at its highest — with toilets flushing, hotel linens dirtying and RV holding tanks dumping — and when bleeding is not in effect.

OPINIONS

Uffish Thoughts: Stephen Harper's Advice to Rob Ford (a fantasy)

By Dan Davidson Dear Rob:

I think you'll have to agree that a lot has happened since that memorable day when, at your barbecue, I congratulated you on taking the mayor's job in Toronto and said that with us in control in Ottawa, two of the three great triumphs Ontario had been accomplished. Sadly our forces in Ontario were not able to wrest control from the provincial Liberals. There are some who suggest that this, given how badly they have mismanaged things, is some sort of reflection on our performance levels, but I can't see how that could be.

Certainly, events at your city hall and my Parliament have dominated the news for months now, though perhaps some of the coverage is not what either of us would have had in mind.

In your case, it is unfortunate that municipal politics is not run along party lines and that slates of candidates do not become the cadre of easily controlled caucus members such as I have to work with.

That said, I have a few comments to make about your present situation that a bit of this, but you need being supportive of your cause. After all, your core constituency is much the same as that of my own Harper Conservatives, and it behooves us both to keep our base happy.

I note that some of current troubles your stem from an inability to control yourself in front of a microphone. You will observe that I have mastered the art of simply ignoring annoying reporters when it suits me. Most of my appearances in public are mere photo opportunities and the majority of the media have been so cowed that they actually accept the photo op only instructions.

Speaking of photographs videos, these opportunities need to be kept under the strictest of controls so that nothing gets to the public except what you want them to see.

If you must respond to questions (as I sometimes must during Question Period) it is best to do so with a comment that avoids a connection to the actual query and restates some basic tenant of your political philosophy. You do

I hope you will receive as to work hard at not letting must not hesitate to do as I yourself and discard some your temper get the better of you. My parliamentary secretary, Mr. Calandra, is a master at this sort of thing and provides comments that leave those quizzing him gasping.

> However annoying that Dale fellow may have been on the other side of your property fence, it was not wise to raise the spectre of pedophilia in recounting this event. My former cabinet colleague Vic Toews learned that this tactic did not work well when he was attempting to defend our proposed Internet surveillance legislation last year. Unless your case is iron clad, all you do is create sympathy for the accused, and that's the last thing you want to have happen.

> It is most important that you do not trap yourself in the corner of having to refute something you have said earlier. I note that you had to do that just this week in the Dale matter, and must admit that I was less than careful in my initial responses to some of the issues raised in the Senate spending affair.

> In the event that a friend or political ally becomes an embarrassment to you, you have done and throw him or her under the nearest bus. Some years ago I did this to Brian Mulroney, and while he has since been rehabilitated enough to join me on my recent trip to South Africa, this was done partly so that some of the gloss from his Progressive Conservative approach to the problem of apartheid would rub off on my own Conservative Party. We even had to have Joe Clark along on that trip, in spite of the comments about us in his recent book, for much the same reasons.

As you will have seen with my handling of Senators Wallin and Duffy, it is sometimes necessary completely reverse dead weight. In dealing with these former media persons I had to take care to deprive these individuals of the safe harbour provided by parliamentary privilege while retaining it for myself.

Regarding your efforts to keep in touch with the common voter, I believe you must exercise some caution there. It is one thing to get together with a number of sound individuals and churn out a few pop tunes from time to time, but quite another to be photographed or captured on video with persons of questionable character.

Yours conservatively, Stephen Harper

Dawson's new wastewater treatment plant continues to fail tests

By Dan Davidson

Dawson's new secondary plant treatment for wastewater is continuing fail to meet the conditions of the town's water license, at a time of year when the old primary treatment screening was generally sufficient to the task.

Despite continued warnings by regulatory bodies that "dilution is not the solution" it remains true that Dawson City rarelyfailstomeetitswater license requirements in the off season, once the population has shrunk to winter size, most of the hotels have closed, and several thousand visitors are neither flushing toilets, dirtying hotel linens and towels or dumping holding tanks on their recreational vehicles.

that Dawsonites must turn on their bleeders in the winter to prevent the sewer and water lines from freezing up. The system installed here by the Yukon government decades ago, and turned over to the town to run, depends on a certain volume of water flow to work properly.

So the December 5 report from Norm Carlson, the town's Superintendent of Public Works, is no surprise to anyone familiar with the system.

"Wastewater is getting weaker in strength now with winter bleeding in effect. Our untreated wastewater is almost meeting the parameter of the water licence so I am expecting the treated, plant discharge to start complying shortly."

Council is concerned that this compliance will not be an accurate reflection of the plant's success or (so far) failure to perform as advertised. The reason is that the plant has so far not been tested with the other source of effluent that is normal for the Klondike region, that being the waste from the eduction of the many holding tanks that exist outside the area served by the town's piped sewer and water system.

At present this material is being disposed of at a site on the Dempster Highway, a practice which greatly increases the cost per household.

Residential holding tanks are a different matter than the holding tanks of the many RV units that visit Dawson in the summer time. Those dump their effluent at one of the three RV parks in the community where it mixes with the regular waste stream before it gets to the plant and is thereby diluted. It was intended Added to that is the fact that educted sewage from residential tanks would be dumped at the plant itself, but that has yet to happen.

The town was supposed to have the ownership and operating responsibility of the plant downloaded to it last August, but the plant had failed to meet the test of three steady months of trouble free operation, failing water quality tests with monotonous regularity, so that did not happen, and has yet to happen.

Analysis of the reports from November, discussed briefly during question period at the end of the December 30 council meeting, indicated that the plant had still failed to meet some of the licence requirements. Based on that report, the earliest that the town would face taking ownership of the plant would be February 4, 2014.

Carlson's concern. echoed in the council members' discussion on his report, was that success in January would not be a true test of the plant's operational readiness.

Carlson was quite blunt about his thoughts regarding the eduction issue.

"I am of the opinion that Corix does not want to accept eduction at the plant now because the higher strength of educted wastewater may upset the treatment process and cause failures which would reset the required 'consecutive, 3 month successful acceptance testing period'."

Each time the plant fails to meet water licence standards another three months are added to the time that Corix has to continue running the plant before it becomes Dawson's property.

Previous discussions at the council table have expressed the opinion that the true test of the plant would be to have it operate trouble free for a year, and especially during the more intense summer period when the population and number of businesses creating effluent is at its highest, and when bleeding is not in effect. This is the period when the town has traditionally failed to meet some of its licence requirements.

City manager Jeff Renaud assured council that he has been in discussions with his counterparts in the Yukon government, and that a policy is being developed to take into account the shortcomings so far experienced at the plant, as well as the fact that Dawson does not possess (and will not for some time, until after the plant has truly succeeded) the trained staff necessary to run the facility. The onsite training depended on having the plant in good operating order. That has yet to happen.

Molry Heligge Project Update

by Paula Hassard

We're on a roll! The World Heritage working group made great progress at their second workshop, Dec. 9-11. Together with community members, we looked at themes that could qualify the region as a UNESCO site under four different criteria. These celebrate Tr'ondëk/ Klondike as an extraordinary place through time. One theme focuses on the exchange of values between cultures—and how these continue today. Another recognizes the physical things that relate to an important stage in history. A third theme relates to land use, and a fourth, the spirit shown in stories, arts and literature. It made for very lively discussions, and I had several people come up afterwards to say how excited they were to be part of it.

We also talked about where and how big the site might be and started mapping draft boundaries.

Dawson's new hospital opens to the public

Story & Photos By Dan Davidson

The project has been beset with problems from its inception four years ago to its completion over the last week. The planning process, the tendering, the site, the mode of operation, the name and the siding have all been issues. The original contractor, Dowland's defaulted on the project, and it had to be completed by TSL Contractors.

It is many months late opening and it is not yet known exactly what the final bill for the building will be, but most of those issues were set aside on Saturday morning when at least 100 people gathered in the new Dawson hospital to celebrate its opening and tour the facility before it opened for its first full day of operations on December 11.

Officially named the rather unwieldy Dawson City Community Hospital and Health Services Facility, it's hard to say just what locals will end up calling it. After all the center that it is replacing has generally been known as the Nursing Station, although it had a couple of different names when it was run by the federal government and two additional names are still visible on the sign out front of the building.

The annual Christmas open house there was turned into a farewell party on the day before the new building was launched.

Premier Pasloski and Health Minster Doug Graham, along with a number of officials, arrived shortly after 9 o'clock on Saturday and were taken on a private tour of the building before the crowd and the media arrived. By 10 o'clock the foyer outside the new medical clinic pharmacy was crowded; the chairs were full and people were lining up at the back of the room by the big windows and around the walls.

On the north wall of the fover was a mockup of the display that will be mounted to they need a hospital.' For our honour the memory of Father government there was only Judge, the Jesuit priest who one guiding principle: to give created Dawson's first hospital the people of Dawson City back in the Gold Rush days. His portrait, which has been in the old Dawson Health Centre for years, had already been relocated for the event.

The building has been constructed by and will be under the management of the Yukon Hospital Corporation, joining Whitehorse General the Watson Lake and Community Hospital under the YHC umbrella. Veteran Registered Nurse Vivian Painter, who spent several summers working as a nurse here some years ago, is delighted to be back now as the Facility Administrator.

The formal part of the event began with greetings from the YHC's CEO Jason Bilsky, who introduced the dignitaries and guided the program for the morning.

Premier Pasloski began the speeches by summarizing some of the facilities that are new to this building.

The hospital, located on the main floor, consists of six inpatient rooms, a fully equipped emergency room, and state of the art diagnostics including x-ray and a laboratory. It will be open seven days a week and staffed 24 hours around the clock.

Services continuing from the old building include the Medical Clinic and Pharmacy on the ground floor, and Dawson Community Health programs Centre (home care and public health) on the second floor, along with rooms to house visiting mental health and hearing service professionals and the eventual relocation of the visiting dentist.

The Premier spent a good deal of his speech defending the decision to build this facility and extended thanks to two former MLAs - Peter Jenkins and Steve Nordick - for championing this project.

"I feel tremendous pride looking at this building and I know that Dawson people will also feel a great pride in this building. This hospital is good for Dawson City and it's also good for Yukon.

'We've had to continue to defend the construction of this building time and again in the media and also on the floor of the legislature. What I say to those people is "Come to Dawson. Ask the people if access to high quality health care close to home, now and for the future."

Just because people in rural Yukon live in some degree of isolation from the Canadian main stream is no reason, he said, why they should not have first-rate facilities.

Doug Graham, Minister of Health Services, took a different tack in his speech, preferring to pay tribute to Father William Judge, the founder of health care services in Dawson City. Graham presented the Jesuit priest's history and accomplishments, including the building of St. Mary's Hospital.

"Today is a day of celebration and I think Father Judge would be really astonished at the tremendous facility that's been built here. I appreciate the fact that the Yukon Hospital Corporation will be establishing a memorial on the wall there to Father Judge, who was really the Saint of Dawson

Craig Tuton, Chair of the hospital corporation's board of trustees, was effusive in his thanks to Don Smith of TSL for stepping in to finish the project after Dowland's defaulted. He also had high praise for YHC's Maureen Turner, whom he described as "the driving force behind this project."

"It took a little longer than we originally expected," he said, with reference to two previously announced opening dates, "but we're here today, a testament that all things are possible."

"Once you have opportunity to walk through this facility you'll be as equally proud as we are at the corporation."

"Having acute care in Yukon for Yukoners means a lot. As the Premier mentioned, it's the goal of the hospital corporation to continue to work to bring more and more care to Yukon so we don't have to fly our parents and our youth and our spouses to the south to receive services."

Following the speeches, blessings were offered by Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in elder Doris Roberts, Anglican priest Reverend Laurie Munro and Roman Catholic priest Father Ernest Emeodie. The Hän Singers offered "The Welcome Song".

Oddly, neither Sandy Silver nor any of the members of Dawson's town council were invited to make public comments during the ceremony.

Refreshments were provided for those in attendance, and complete tours of the facility were conducted for the next hour or so.

On December the 12th, Robert Service School hosted the annual Christmas Concert. All performances were done by the school's students, from K-Grade 6, and included a performance from Dawson's Theatre Group.

The Christmas Concert was a lot of fun and always a fantastic way to end the year! Each performance was great and fun to watch.

The Theatre Group did their first performance at the Christmas Concert and they did a super good job.

In the Concert we saw things from miners, to Santa in a sleigh! The Concert was based around the Gold Rush way back in 1898.

Robert Service School added a bit of video to the mix for this year's edition of its annual Christmas Concert.

Titled "1898 Klondike Christmas" the evening's presentations attempted to cast a look back at how things might have looked in 1898, beginning with "Santa Claus" a one-minute silent film (with piano accompaniment by Principal Ann Moore) that was made in that year.

Grade 1 went Caroling in the Klondike, a multi-media production that began with them live on stage and then had them exit the gymnasium to reappear on the screen on a visit to Macdonald Lodge seniors' home and then back to the school with their outdoor gear on after their field trip.

Grade 2 presented a pantomimed reading of "A Visit from St. Nicholas".

Kindergarten sang "Jingle Bells"

Grade 4 performed a ribbon dance to simulate the Aurora before a Dawson street backdrop.

The Grade 5/6 Intensive French class performed the bilingual "La Magie de Nöel".

Grade 3 sang "Santa, Santa" to the tune of "A Bicycle Built for Two."

The Grade 5/6 English class presented a skit called "Chief Isaac's Gift to his People" and then the Jigging Club did a Circle Dance and a Red River Jig.

The High School Theatre Club presented a timeslip play in which one of the members fell asleep in class and dreamed herself back to 1898, waking up later to find that she had brought a few things back with her.

The evening concluded with "Jingle Bells", sung by all the students in English, French and Hän and, of course, "We Wish you a Merry Christmas".

CFYT-fm met its goals with the aid of a part time station manager

CFYT-fm enjoyed a year with a station manager, Jonathan Howe, his 20-hour a week position financed by a two grants from the Canadian Radio Fund (CRF).

"This has been a goal of ours," said treasurer Peter Menzies at the AGM in late November, "and we've been very lucky."

With Howe in the station, the volunteer run operation has been able to run some programming every Monday to Wednesday there has been a manager's mix show from 1 to 5. Beginning on Thursday evening and running to Sunday night, there are about two dozen shows staffed by a variety of DJs, including one youth broadcast and some interviews with locals, such as the mayor.

Menzies noted that the Dawson City Community Radio Society's basic financing, provided by fund-raising events (and operating the bar concessions for a number of other local events) and running the cable TV rolling ads, is enough to keep the books in the black, but without the $20,000 grant from the CRF, the part time manager's position would not have been attainable.

"If the salary support weren't there, we'd be pretty much break even," he said.

At the time of the annual general meeting, it was not certain that they would obtain a third grant and so members were asked to consider other ways of raising money.

The group did manage to raise $8900 this last year, and Menzies credits a good deal of that increased number with the fact that there was a staff person to push the effort. At this point the society has funding for an additional six months or manager time.

Society president Georgia Hammond was pleased to report that the group had achieved many of the goals it set itself last year, including increased remote and live coverage of events around town, increased special broadcasts, increased fund raising, and enhancing CFYT's profile in the community.

"Of course we're still working on all four of those things but, thanks to Jonathan, I feel pretty good that all of those goals have been met in the past year."

Howe has provided more solid organization at the station and has given people a voice and face to interact with regularly.

The board has created a youth policy, which allows for young people under 16 to be DJs as long as they have an adult chaperone, and a new training manual is under development.

The society has partnerships with the Robert Service School, the Dawson City Music Festival, and the TH Youth Centre. The society also provides the capacity for the town council to have live broadcasts of both its regular and committee of the whole meetings nearly every week.

The station's physical location remains the small building on Queen Street next to the Nugget and Ivory Shop. It's a small space, but Hammond said it continued to serve their needs at a reasonable cost.

Menzies reminded the meeting that it will soon be time for the station to apply for its broadcast license to be renewed and that it's a serious issue for the society, which tries to do something live and remote at least once monthly.

Howe said that he felt that increasing the station's presence and community engagement was important, which is why he started the Monday to Wednesday broadcasts.

"It's important for us to be on-air as much as possible ... so people would realize that the radio was a functioning entity and try to engage with us. I think that has happened."

Howe said it was time to begin working on types of broadcasts beyond simply playing music or reporting sports, and has been encouraging interview shows as well as the occasional radio drama and live musicians. During the summer Radio Zho at the Cultural Centre was broadcast with CFYT's assistance.

Howe raised the possibility of board. Some members were having advertising on the radio. The board has been discussing some way to do it in folksy good taste without seeming to be too commercial (CBC Radio 2 was mentioned by someone in the room at this point), but hasn't reached a decision yet.

After reports came the elections, and there was no shortage of people willing to become involved with the serving the remainder of a two-year term, while some of the other positions were oneyear terms. The new Dawson City Community Radio Society board consists of: Georgia Hammond (President), Peter Menzies (treasurer), Hepburn (VP), Alicia Newman, Jen Laliberte (secretary), Jonathan Ostrander and Ben Rudis.

What's Your Story?

Interview by Eric, Grade 4

Name: Dick Van Nostrand

When did you arrive in the Klondike?

1995

Why did you come? Bought the Downtown Hotel.

How did you get here?

U-Haul truck.

Where were you born? Maple Creek, Saskatchewan

What do you think makes Dawson so special? The climate and the people.

What is something you cannot live without in Dawson? 24-hour daylight.

Where's your favourite place to take an out-of-town guest? Chicken, Alaska and Tombstone

If you could go back in Klondike history, who would you like to meet and why?

Jack London because he was a sailor and a traveler.

What is your favourite time of year in Dawson? Why? June 21 - the Dust 2 Dawson Motorcycle event.

What are some of the jobs you've had? Do you have a favourite one?

Carpenter, hotel manager, turkey farmer, business owner, and my favourite was being a turkey farmer!

Something we may not know about you? I am a great pilot.

What do you love to do in your free time?

I do not have enough free time but if I did I would go flying, motorcycling and camping.

What is your favourite thing to do in Dawson? I love to hang out at home in my garage.

Do you have any hobbies?

Flying, motorcycling, skiing, diving, photography, fishing, golfing and woodworking.

As part of an enrichment project at Robert Service School led by Tarie Castellarin, Grade 3/4 students are interviewing locals about their stories. The Klondike Sun will be publishing one of these interviews in each of our upcoming issues!

DisABILITY Awareness Week

Submitted by Yukon Council on disABILITY

Dawson's Yukon Council on disABILITY (YCoD) office, which has provided services to our community since May 2013, organized an event meant to inform and connect Dawson residents who have a disABILITY with one another and their local service providers on Dec. 5th, 2013. This event was a part of the Yukon's DisABILITY Awareness Week, which was celebrated throughout Yukon from Dec. 2nd to 6th, 2013. In addition to Karolina Rietzler from YCoD, organizations represented included the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Health and Social Services (Emma Tius and Jack Swieboda), Dawson's Mental Health Services (Lorraine Emmonds), and the Learning Disabilities Association of Yukon (Colm Cairns).

These service providers were at the event to inform those interested in the services they provide to the community. Held at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre, the event took place in a comfortable atmosphere and it was possible to browse the informational material and engage in conversation with others attending while enjoying a snack and a hot beverage.

You may not know it, but if you need assistance with any of the following, there was someone at this event with information and services for you!

- writing up a professional resume and cover letter applying for funding to go back to school
- ing to go back to school receiving assistance in searching for a job
- dealing with addictions and getting the support you need
- speaking with someone about a possible mental health concern, or
- finding ways to assess and succeed with a learning disability.

Highlights of the event included speeches and performances by Dawsonites who told of their journey through life, the role their disability has played in this, and inspired and motivated the audience through sharing their personal successes and how these were achieved. The demonstrations included an impressive juggling show from an individual with a visual disability, which was very much enjoyed by all, and the story of one woman's life with both physical and learning disabilities, and how she succeeded in getting the help she needed to become an author. These presentations were supplemented by some inspiring video footage, which left those watching refreshed and ready to believe in their abilities.

If you missed this event, keep an eye out for the Yukon Council on DisABILITY's open house coming up this spring. If you would like more information about the event, the service providers present, or the type of services offered by the Yukon Council on DisABILITY, feel free to contact Karolina at 993 2372, email her at dec@ycod.net or visit her office located on 2nd Ave in the Chief Isaac building.

Lead and asbestos contamination are delaying the CIBC restoration project

Contaminants in the building are the cause of delays in the revival of a Dawson landmark, plans are being developed to deal with the issue.

To outward appearances little has been accomplished in the restoration of the Old CIBC building since it was purchased by the City of Dawson for $170,000 last winter. The remaining debris and garbage was cleaned out of both floors for proposals went out regarding some of the other work.

Some things, such as new windows, that could be built off site and installed produced, but there's been nothing done to the building

City manager Jeff Renaud and Mayor Wayne Potoroka let it be known at the 10 December council meeting that promises of grant money for the project have been received from both the federal and territorial governments, those came with but but the requirement that a hazardous material study be carried out, and that study turned up traces of asbestos and lead in a number of places.

"The results of the study indicated there was lead paint on the building, asbestos inside the building and asbestos contained July and requests in the paint that was used on the roofing," Renaud explained.

He said that the federal commitment had been kept quiet because it was supposed to be announced later, have already been by the federal minister, but it hasn't been yet and questions about the progress on the building caused him to decide to reveal it now, because it was part of the answer those questions.

The town has two options, the most expensive of which is to remove all traces of the offending material. That cost is beyond the resources the town pull can together.

The other option is to somehow encapsulate and seal off the toxic material from exposure to the rest of the world. The restoration architect specialist that has been consulting on the project is aware of other sites where this procedure been carried has successfully.

There is a bit of ticking clock on this situation, since the federal fusing comes from a program that was renewed for one year last year, and will expire (unless it is renewed again) at the end of the federal fiscal year on March 31. So the town is working to find and implement a solution to deal with the contaminants and access the money to do other work before that deadline.

History Hunter: Early Klondike Christmases were rough affairs

by Michael Gates, first appeared in the Yukon

Friday December 13, 2013

Early yuletide celebrations the Klondike characterized by isolation. scarcity, extreme weather, and improvisation.

The first Klondike Christmas was celebrated in December of 1896. Amid the cluster of hastily built tiny log cabins, only one building, a saloon, was large enough to accommodate a Christmas crowd. The dozen or so women in town arranged with the saloon keeper to close down his establishment on Christmas Eve, and through Christmas Day so that these determined ladies could provide some Christmas cheer and a nice meal. For two weeks these women worked night and day making preparations.

Tables were improvised by laying boards across barrels, and the diners sat upon boxes, kegs and benches. Evergreen were the branches only ornamentation to be found that year. The women and their husbands served the meal to the rough and unwashed miners who had come in for the event, armed with their own plates, cups and cutlery.

The meal consisted of baked beans, followed by stewed codfish. Next came cakes of baked salmon, then stewed prunes and tarts of dried apples sweetened with condensed milk, washed down with coffee and tea. According to one witness, "No meal prepared by the most famous chef or in the most epicurean establishment, was ever more eagerly devoured".

Christmas the following year could have been grim, but everybody made the best of it. Thousands of people flooded into Dawson during the summer of 1897, but most of them came ill-equipped for the Yukon, and lacked sufficient supplies. By September, the spectre of famine hung over the rapidly expanding gold rush town like a gloomy cloak. The Mounted Police posted bulletins advising those with insufficient food to leave town, and hundreds did, some going downriver, others going upstream and out over the Dalton trail. There were miners running around town looking for food, but food was more valuable than gold that winter.

Among those who escaped famine in Dawson that winter were Mr. and Mrs. James Clements. A former brakeman the Southern Pacific railroad, James Clement had struck it rich on Claim Number 4, Eldorado Creek. To their comfortable hotel room in New York City, the Clements' brought a Christmas tree, which they decorated with 95 kilograms of gold nuggets from their claim. They sprinkled the largest nuggets, one weighing more than a kilogram, around the base of the tree, amid small piles of $20 gold pieces. Totaling $70,000, the gold weighed in at 165 kilograms. At today's gold prices, that tree would be worth over five million dollars!

Mrs. Huson, who, with her husband had come into Dawson early in the spring of 1897 with the first piano, decided to boost morale during the darkest month of winter by having a party in her cabin, located on Second Avenue. She planned a modest affair and invited a few friends, each of whom brought food or beverage to add to the supply. There was no turkey, and the fruit was limited to the canned variety.

Captain Hansen, the manager of the Alaska Commercial Company sent a half dozen cans of plum pudding, candy, and some candles, while John J. Healey of the NAT&T Company contributed a couple of hams, some dried potato, sugar and 25 litres of claret.

Word of the little party spread like a Dawson fire and so many people showed up that neighbours opened their homes to accommodate the overflow. They mixed the claret with canned fruit juice, citric acid and a little hootch in a 20 litre coal oil can that had been cut open to form a crude punch bowl. The single lemon was deemed too valuable for such a use and was taken instead to the hospital, along with ham sandwiches, candy and a supply of the punch.

Prominent miners who were visiting Dawson from the creeks showed up with more provisions and gold nuggets for the ladies in attendance. Several neighbours showed up with pots of beans.

Within a couple of years, the rough edges had been smoothed off the Klondike Christmas celebrations. In 1900, everyone was able to celebrate a more amply provisioned and traditional holiday. The Church Catholic planned for an elaborate Midnight mass. William Sheridan, the choirmaster, was scheduled to sing Prevost's Mass in A, while Mrs. Boyes was to sing the solo in Adeste Fidelis at the second mass.

The Presbyterian Church was offering a Christmas Cantata at 7:30 in the evening while the Anglican Church celebrated holy Eucharist in the evening and a morning prayer service on Christmas day. The Salvation Army dispensed with the formalities in favour of a large dinner for 150 people. There were to be two sittings; one at noon, and another at 1 p.m. Included with the roast turkey (and cranberry sauce, of course) were caribou, roast beef, chicken, and boiled ham. "No one need go without a taste of Christmas cheer," they stated,

Cartoonist and illustrator Arthur Buel created this unique and evocative Christmas cartoon for an early edition of the Klondike Nugget newspaper. Klondike Nugget, December 27, 1899

"as the price is within the reach of the poorest, absolutely free."

Turkey, which was not to be had in 1896, was abundant by 1900; a supply had been brought in before freeze-up. Even so, the demand outstripped the supply and the price climbed by 30 per cent in the days before Christmas. The big trading stores and the Mounted Police also put on big celebrations, with the latter holding an open house the afternoon of Christmas day. "Nearly everyone in official life visited them ... and none came who were not royally welcomed and entertained."

Even First Nations people got in on the action. The Klondike Nugget for 1901 notes that in addition to the regular offering of supplies to the widows and orphans, the North West Mounted Police took five dog sleds laden with beef, mutton, tea, apples, flour and baking powder to Moosehide. A couple of years later, Chief Isaac invited Dawsonites to join him at Moosehide for a big "pow wow," but asked that they refrain from bringing whiskey with them.

Within a few years, citizens were enjoying indoor skating at the Dawson Amateur Athletic Association, the early day equivalent of today's Canada Games Centre. One holiday evening the skaters were even entertained with music provided by a local brass band.

In less than a decade, Dawson had overcome the challenges of distance, isolation, severe weather and a multitude of other problems to celebrate Christmas in as high fashion as anywhere in the civilized world.

Writing this book purged him of his childhood fears

James FitzGerald, the most recent Berton House writer-inresidence spent his early career working in the book publishing field and as a journalist, writing for a variety of Canadian newspapers and magazines.

There were always demons lurking in his personal background, and he began to explore them in the 1990s, leading to the publication of his first book, an oral history entitled Old Boys: The Powerful Legacy of Upper Canada College (1994). This was a controversial inside look at the attitudes and values of English Canada's ruling class families, among which James had grown up. Revelations of sexual abuse of boys at the school, first published in the book, led to the conviction of three former teachers and a successful multimillion dollar class action suit against UCC.

With his second book. What Disturbs Our Blood: A Son's Quest to Redeem the Past (2010), FitzGerald moved into the realm of creative nonfiction, producing a memoir dealing with the lives of his father and grandfather, both of whom were physicians whose successful careers ended in ways that made them taboo subjects within the medical community.

His grandfather, Gerald, in particular, was a pioneer in the study and practice of hygiene and had as associates such luminaries as Banting and Best. The Connaught Antitoxin Laboratories and University Farm, which he helped to found, did groundbreaking work in the cure of diphtheria and the production of tetanus antitoxin during World War I, and other vaccines later on.

In spite of this, Dr. John Gerald FitzGerald's life fell apart, his mind broke and he tried to take his own life with an overdose of Nembutal tablets. A year later, while still in hospital after a second similar attempt, he slashed his femoral artery with himself, bleeding out and dying at the age of 57.

His name was never spoken in the FitzGerald household, in the home he had built, when FitzGerald was a boy, and the first he knew that there was a problem was when, at the age of 6, he told his mother he would like to change his name to Gerry. a name that simply was not mentioned in the family except as part of the surname. Who was this invisible grandfather?

Later, he would watch his father, Jack, an unhappy though successful doctor who he thinks would have been happier managing a jazz club, descend into depression, attempt to take his own life, and live out the rest of it with what was left of his mind ruined by repeated electro shock "treatments".

When he learned that one great uncle had also committed suicide, and another had been given electro shock treatments for depression, he began to worry about his own possible link to what he called "Irish madness" in an essay called "Sins of the Father", which is still available on a number of websites, including the one connected to the firm that now owns Connaught Labs.

FitzGerald, who had avoided the family curse of pursuing the career that was expected of him, found himself obsessed with the story neither he nor his siblings had ever been told, and certain that there was to be found in that mystery some sort of answer to the problems that had plagued two generations.

To his audience of about two dozen at the Dawson Community Library, James read some of the more dramatic passages of his memoir, and spoke about the risks inherent in digging into family history the way he was determined to do. Some of his progress at this was simple hard work, but the key to unlocking the narrative came when in 1995, he chanced upon a cache of letters his grandfather had written during his last year in the hospital. There were 60 letters, filled with despair and guilt, repetitive and yet informative.

Then there was a dream FitzGerald had, a haunting dream that seemed to him to symbolize his quest. He described it to the audience and in the essay.

"Not long before I began to plumb my grandfather's life, I dreamt that a doctor in a white lab coat took a scalpel and made a deep, vertical incision down the knife provided with his the middle of my face, releasing meal, repeatedly stabbing at a violent torrent of water. Was it an uncanny, pre-cognitive allusion to my grandfather's lethal, self-inflicted wound? A symbol of the accumulated generations of untapped grief of which I was the contemporary carrier?"

> FitzGerald doesn't have much use for traditional psychotherapies, and spoke with some intensity of the benefits of a simple but earnest talking cure, which is a process he has undergone. It did him more good than all the drugs and shock treatments that were administered to his ancestors.

It may seem a rather dated philosophy now, but he believes that finding your bliss, making the most of a life that you find fulfilling, is the best therapy of all. Both of his parents were trapped in lives they did not really want and the result was unhappiness for both them and their children.

For him, writing that book was a purging, almost an exorcism, of the negative detritus from his childhood.

James worried about the repercussions of writing this book, given that it caused him to dig so deeply into the secret history of his own family. He was especially concerned about how his sister, who once barged in on his father while he was attempting to kill himself, would react to the book. As it turned out, her response was very positive, and they are closer now than they ever were.

The book was the winner of the Hilary Weston Writers' Trust Prize for Nonfiction in

A good deal of the postreading discussion with the inadequacy of the "medical model" when it comes to dealing with peoples' emotional problems. FitzGerald has spent a good deal of time over the last several years speaking to groups of medical and psychiatric specialists and he reported that what he has to tell them about how badly he feels they are failing their patients has many of them squirming in their seats.

His project while at Berton House has been an even more personal memoir called Dreaming Sally. During his stay in Dawson he learned that the project proposal had been accepted by his publisher.

Council proceeds with inquiry

by Brent Morrison

A public inquiry into events surrounding the sewer and water installation at Dawson First Nation's commercial properties on Front Street will not include an investigation into conflict of interest allegations.

By a vote of three to one council passed a resolution at a special meeting on November 29 instructing Municipal Services Inspector John Cormie to proceed with the inquiry on the basis of an outline he sent for their approval.

Cormie's letter to council was written after he had met with them and outlined the major issues council wanted dealt with.

Those issues are:

1) the Mayor's involvement and authority to have the sewer services disconnected, then reconnected:

2) the extra costs incurred:

3) the extent to which Council was involved in the decision making process; and

4) the effect the action taken may have on the integrity of the new

Mayor Peter Jenkins voted against the resolution because Cormie's outline did not include an investigation into conflict of interest allegations against councillors Glen Everitt and Tim Ger-

Councillors Shirley Pennell, Everitt and Gerberding agreed that including such an investigation would distract from the main investigation.

Jenkins argued that, "I want to see the air cleared."

"I would not suggest conflict of interest get mixed up with the original resolution," Gerberding stated, "I think it tends to deflect the issue and tends to open up opportunities for personal attacks."

Gerberding also stated, "In my opinion, that resolution stands alone and of itself ... I think that this resolution of October twenty-first is more than a month old, it's been spinning wheels, and the concern that particular resolution addressed is still out there. That's the concern that this inquiry should

by Dan Davidson

'We're on a collision course," said Mayor Peter Jenkins. "Sooner or later we're going to have a bad accident.'

The topic under discussion was the behavior of motorists in the block surrounding the Robert Service School, located in the middle of town, on the corner the intersection of two major streets, Fifth Avenue and Queen Street.

Speaking on behalf of the school council, Bruce Campbell was addressing council about the need for better traffic control around the school. His specific suggestion was for more signs warning of pedestrians, but councillors felt that this probably wouldn't do the trick.

Fifth Avenue in front of the sch is already labeled a school zone with the year, and that the street crossa 30 km limit, but Jenkins says the ing habits of Dawsonites of all ages RCMP have ticketed drivers doing were probably too ingrained to

Could stop signs be put at all intersections around the school? It break. didn't seem practical in terms of traffic flow through this major area. That the school is badly located is a recognized problem, but the territorial government was unwilling to relocate the site when the new school was being built.

Jenkins noted that the new four way stop sign intersection in the downtown area just a few blocks away has been the sight of more accidents since it went in than it was viable solution. Everyone agreed place where a great many parents that they would be covered most of are seen to stop and drop off their

The Post Office being directly across the street from the school means that people cross in the middle of the block, and it also means that there are a lot of cars parked on Fifth right a noon at least three days every week. In fact, most of the near accidents and scares have been caused by people backing away from the Post Office rather than from those coming along the street. Queen Street, which is supposed to be a no stopping, no parking area Crosswalks don't seem to be a near the school, is nevertheless the kids on a regular basis.

Yes, this is the December 1993 front page we didn't have room for last issue. We'll catch up with January 1994 next time.

The Sun obtained funding in late 2009 from the City of Dawson, YTG's Heritage Branch and the Community Development Fund to conserve and archive early issues and make them available once again in the public domain. This is a great resource for students, writers and historians, and also for prospective tourists with an interest in Dawson City's life. Each month, we are re-printing our front pages from 20 years ago (seen above) as a souvenir of our lively history. If you want to see page 2 and beyond, check out our website. Past issues are available there for download. Go to http://klondikesun.com. More will be added periodically (heh) when we have time!

Getting together and sharing the holidays

Story & Photos By Dan Davidson

The pre-Christmas feast at the TH Hall on December 21 was a gathering for the entire community of Dawson, with well over 250 people packed into the room. There was music, good food, dancing and time for the First Nation's community awards.

"This feast is all about getting together and sharing during the holidays," said Chief Eddie Taylor in his opening remarks. "It reminds us of what's important about our community. We are better together and there's always time to give and share. I'm honoured to be a part of this Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Christmas Feast."

The meal was a combination of Christmas staples and traditional foods, served buffet style to a line-up that took up three quarters of the perimeter of the hall. During the meal music was provided by the duo of Peter Menzies and Jimmy Roberts, and later Menzies was joined by four young fiddlers from the North Klondike Highway Music Society's fiddle project.

After the meal Deputy Chief Jay Farr and Cultural Education Coordinator Georgette McLeod announced the community awards.

The Volunteer of the Year Award went to Robert Joseph, who was said to be "someone who makes herself available when there's work to be done and is there to help out the Elders. If there is an activity taking place, she gets involved without having to be asked. She gives her all, whether it's fundraising for the Hän Singers, assisting with a funeral, or helping at her church. In the words of one of her nominators, (she) is just "there when she's needed."

The Elder of the Year was Peggy Kormendy.

"She dedicates time to our youth and our camps no matter what. She goes to great lengths to be part of every onthe-land experience, whether it's to share her knowledge or just have a visit. For many years she has been spreading the message of working with others to better ourselves and our community. She sets a positive path to follow and is one of the great story tellers and joke tellers in our town."

Ryan Titus was selected as the Youth of the Year.

"He is a good role model with a kind heart and a calm personality. He is steadily growing into a leadership role, especially at the daycare and the Youth Centre. He has taken an active role in fundraising and helped out with the Saturday night MacDonald Lodge bingos. We got a look at this future leader when he presented at our last General Assembly on behalf of the youth and the Youth Centre, and one of his nominators described him as 'doing his job for the youth'."

Kevin McLeod was named Employee of the Year.

"He is recognized for his dedication to the government. He's a great worker and never complains about any task he's given. No job is too big and no job is too small for this hardworking individual. Most of all, Kevin has been with TH for a good many years, and we are pleased that he has remained loyal to our government. Employees like him are hard to find. His commitment makes the TH government better."

George McLeod was named Citizen of the Year.

"George is being recognized for the work he does for the First Nation and the work he's done on himself. There isn't a person in this town who isn't proud of how this individual has turned over a new leaf. He is a constant reminder of the good we all have in ourselves. He shows us that with hard work everything is possible. This person is an inspiration to us all."

The evening continued with the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Singers presenting Hän versions of several Christmas hymns and carols and with a display of various dances by the Robert Service School's jigging club.

Spenser offers a bit of holiday cheer

Silent Night: A Spenser Holiday Novel

By Robert B. Parker and Helen Brann 240 pages Putnam $26.50

Unabridged audio book read by Joe Mantegna Random House Audio $23.20 3 hours and 39 minutes

There are over 120 customer reviews of this book on the Amazon and Audible (owned by Amazon) websites. Most are negative and some go on at great length as to why the book didn't work for them. The positive reviews are generally quite brief.

Some complain that the book is short, but Spenser novels have never been that long, and most of the audio book versions clock in at between four and five hours.

I haven't sampled either of Ace Atkins' extensions of the series yet, but seeing them in book stores I noticed they were thicker than those I have at home, and the reading times given at the Audible site show them to be an hour and a half or more longer than Parker's regular offerings.

Some complain that Hawk's dialogue is inconsistent, but it always was. It's usually street talk patois, almost a parody of black tough guy, when he's just with Spenser, but often formal standard English when he speaks to Susan.

Some complain that the plot is thin. Parker's plots were often thin, and several of the later books seemed to me to be excuses to have Spenser and Susan chat in between set pieces. I enjoyed them anyway. Sixkill, the last one he finished, was mainly about the relationship between Spenser and the titular character, who he seemed to be grooming as a protégé.

This book is the last one Parker actually worked on and it appears that he had nearly all of a first draft done. They haven't said exactly how much of it he wrote before he died, but it fell to Helen Brann, his longtime friend and agent, to pick up the pieces and tie up the loose ends. This is an arrangement that Joan Parker (all the books were dedicated to her) agreed to and I don't have a problem with it. Not all of the Parker novels were brilliant works, but I always enjoyed them. This is a minor effort in the canon, but it apparently contains some things the original author wanted to say about his characters, and I found it road worthy.

There are two connected plots going on here. One has to do with Spenser's decision to come to the aid of a home for homeless boys called Street Business. Someone is picking on Jackie Alverez's clientele. Spenser and Hawk (good to see him again) take it on as a charity case during the Advent season.

Jackie has some financial support from his wealthy brother, but the latter's import/export business seems to be a bit shady from the outset, even though he has ties to a charity that Susan favours and is known for his philanthropy.

He has arm and eye candy, a former star tennis pro who had fallen to drugs and fame but has rebuilt herself with his assistance, only to discover that he is not the nice man she once believed him to be. Learning of Spenser's work for Jackie, she approaches him to help her and one of Jackie's young charges, Slider, in whom she has taken a big sisterly interest.

Large chunks of the story are as predictable as episodes of any TV detective show, but this doesn't really hurt the story that much. After all, Dr. Parker was a devotee of Raymond Chandler, who once admitted that he had no idea who killed the chauffeur in his murder mystery The Big Sleep. Parker wrote his PhD thesis on an analysis of tough guy detective fiction.

It develops that Jackie's brother is planning to wrap up his Boston operations and flee the country as the feds are nipping around the edges of his enterprise. He has an interesting sense of personal honour and responsibility. He doesn't like to be seen to be directly connected to anything nasty, so as not to bring dishonour to his mother. That doesn't stop him from arranging for other people to torpedo his brother's unlicensed group home and set up the assassination of his former mistress.

Spenser and Hawk have not only to save both individuals but also find a way to do this without causing Street Business to be shut down. A plot is hatched to accomplish these twin goals while taking down the crime lord and his operation. It's a complicated scheme that requires local, state and federal authorities to cooperate. It works out in the end - but this is a Spenser novel, so you knew

This audio book was read by Ioe Mantegna, who played the role in three TV movies a decade back before taking up residence as part of the cast of Criminal Minds. He has read about a dozen of the later Spenser novels, and does a good job with them. The earlier books in the series were generally read by Michael Prichard, but others were read by David Dukes and even Burt Reynolds.

Once again St. Paul's was full for the annual ecumenical Christmas Eve Pageant. Those empty chairs are for the choir, which had been practicing since just after Remembrance Day, to sit in during the Pageant's slide show, which was shot this year in the Dawson City Museum. Clergy and members from all four congregations come together for this event.

Music Festival happy to be a little smaller and calmer

There weren't a lot of changes to the 2013 edition of the Dawson City Music Festival, but the most obvious physical one was the relocation of the Beer Garden from the Minto Park dirt infield to the grassed over outfield. Speaking at the DCMF annual general meeting in late November vice-president Jody Beaumont noted that the new site was cleaner and more user friendly, and it seemed to from the Atlin festival, which apparently drew off some of the visiting crowd that tends to be of the rowdier sort. Beaumont noted that the festival doesn't mind being slightly smaller. It's been a couple of years since the board decided to concentrate on being better rather than bigger. "Our numbers had been growing. We hit a tipping point and decided to bring those numbers down," so the board was not dismayed to have sold 200 fewer tickets last summer, that the festival itself was very laid back and calm.

Once again the cooperated with other organizations in town to produce a series of eight nonfestival events during the year, including having its ninth songwriter-in-residence during the winter, a film screening and concert with Calypso Rose, the festival opening concert with Wanda Jackson and the Martha Wainwright concert in the fall.

Elected at the meeting, the new DCMF Board of

encourage the performers to wander over and mingle with the crowd rather than staying in the hospitality area.

Less obvious was the fact that "we tried to maintain the same level of quality in the performances but bring in less people." That basically meant bringing in smaller groups, with the result that there were 25 fewer performers to have to find billets for as well as reducing the travel costs for the festival.

The board observed that the festival seemed to be calmer this year, and attributed some of that to the competition prior to the actual event, but

and will not be planning to sell out in 2014 either.

Producer Jenna Roebuck echoed a number of those points and added a few more. Last summer the performers who played the Beer Garden had a better open stage. Finding the money to hire two summer staff meant that everything ran much more smoothly. Having the Y2C2 (Yukon Youth Conservation Corps) crew available for the clean-up worked out really well.

Roebuck said that her second festival was plagued with a batch of "bizarre, crazy" snafus

The meeting concluded with a review of the new strategic plan for the years 2013-2016, which was prepared for the group by former DCMF producer Dominic
