Uffish Thoughts: The Three Scrooges livened up the holidays this year

By Dan Davidson

As if the Senate Scandal That Won't Go Away was not enough to bedevil Steven Harper's Conservative Party ...

Okay, I know that's not the official name, but I've been dying to repeat it ever since one of the party's pollsters called it just exactly that when she phoned here a few years ago looking for my support. I asked her why the party name had been changed from the Conservative Party of Canada and she hung up on me.

At the time I was already upset over the rebranding of the Government of Canada as the Harper Government, so I'm afraid I wasn't terribly sympathetic.

But I have digressed.

You can kick Pamela Wallin, Mike Duffy and Patrick Brazeau out of the Senate chamber and stop their pay cheques, but it's doubtful you can make anyone forget that $90,000 cheque from Nigel Wright and the many, many variations of what has been said about it, nor the continuing speculation of who knew what and when.

That being said, you would have thought that anyone close to the Conservative Party would have been taking care to speak softly and keep their heads down while Parliament was on vacation.

In no particular order, the following individuals did not do so, and indeed made it seem as if they had been infected with whatever illness possessed Ebenezer Scrooge just before his Christmas Eve epiphany.

Canada Post waited until Parliament had booked off for Christmas before announcing the increase in the price of stamps, and the planned elimination of door-to-door mail delivery.

I've never had the pleasure of delivery to my street address. There was that long stretch in Beaver Creek where we didn't have a post office at all and we took turns sorting the mail in each other's homes because driving to Destruction Bay just wasn't practical, but that's not the same thing.

There was quite naturally some editorial finger wagging about the announcement, but it might not have lasted quite as long if the CEO of Canada Post hadn't decided to explain that the move to super mailboxes was all part of his ParticipACTION Plan for Seniors.

"Seniors are telling me, 'I want to be healthy,'" said Deepak Chopra."'I want to be active in my life.' They want to be living fuller lives."

So, he suggested, the walk to the mailbox would be good for

This Deepak Chopra, by the way, is not the better known fellow of the same name who writes books about alternative medicine and spiritual enlightenment south of the border. Our Mr. Chopra is a Conservative Party appointee who makes enough money annually (half a million) to be able to hire other people to pick up his mail.

Meditate on that for a while. Meanwhile, Industry Minister James Moore could be found in a media scrum in British Columbia, talking about child poverty. Some of what he said made quite a bit of sense and wasn't alarming, given that this issue is under provincial jurisdiction.

"Of course nobody wants kids to go to school hungry..." the minster said. "We want to make sure that kids go to school full-bellied... Empowering families with more power and resources so that they can feed their own children is, I think, a good thing."

But then, later on, he got a little testy and this came out: "Is it my job to feed my neighbour's child? I don't think so," or "is that always the government's job to be there to serve people their breakfast?"

Give Mr. Moore some credit. Within a day he realized just how that sounded and apologized for it, which is probably more than his boss would have done, but it still leaves a bad smell in the air.

Not perhaps as bad as our current Minister of Justice, Peter MacKay, who was formerly best known for helping to merge the country's right wing parties after being elected to lead the now defunct Conservatives Progressive while promising that he would never do that. Later, he would gain headlines for being dumped by Belinda Stronach and having military aircraft pick him up while on fishing trips when he was the Minister of National Defense.

Among the changes the ReformaTories have made to the criminal justice system is an increase in the surcharges levied on people convicted of crimes. The money is to go to help finance victims' services, which, in itself, seems a good enough idea.

However, what do you do when the perpetrator of the crime is so poor than he or she cannot raise the $100 or $200 to pay the surcharge? In the past judges have quite reasonably determined that vou can't get blood from a stone and have waived the surcharge. Apparently the changes brought in last October have removed this discretionary

Some judges have skated around the law by giving people up to 50 years to pay the surcharge.

Mackay advanced what he thought was a better solution, and was quoted in various places saying that people could "sell off a bit of property" to find the cash for the surcharge.

He seems to have missed the point that the judges have already determined these people have no resources or property to begin with.

But then, this is the man who could not tell the difference between the Progressive Conservative Party and the Canadian Alliance Party, so perhaps it is not a surprise after all.

The Klondike Sun will bring you light and guide you where to go. It'll warm your heart and then your soul when it's forty one below.

It has the power to wake you up, brings life to northern climes. It shines a view on what is now, and back in olden times.

Its illuminating features will make you warm inside. Hell, it's even got some want-ads and the weekly TV guide.

After having my on-line subscription for a few months now, I have come to very much enjoy reading "The Sun", and quite look forward every couple weeks to receiving my new

Many thanks to Dan and Alyssa and all the others that have a hand in putting out each edition.

Please accept this little ditty as my way of saying thanks for an iconic read, from someone south of fifty.

Dawson's emergency services at the ready

Story & Photo submitted

While most were hunkering in for another cold grey weekend on January 11 and 12, Sgt. Mitch of the Search and Rescue team coordinated a specialized low angle rope rescue course for 12 participants from the Search and Rescue team; Dawson's Fire Department; and the Klondike Fire Department.

The course, taught by Warren Zakus of Northern Safety Network, consisted of one day of classroom and one day of outdoor practical training, and two exams.

Dawson's Fire Chief Jim Regimbal said that this coordinated training amongst various agencies is a very proactive, leading edge way of ensuring the safety to both residents and visitors alike to the Klondike region.

"I want to thank all who took part in this training, especially Sgt. Mitch for making this happen and Yukon's Emergency Measures Organization for funding this training event."

Over the weekend, Yukon Soccer Association's head coach and technical director John MacPhail put on a soccer clinic for the Dawson kids over the weekend. Over 40 kids participated in two clinics each. MacPhail also went into Robert Service on Friday and put on clinics for several grades with Mr. Lazilo.

Trading card games

By Daniel Titus

The card game they played is called Yu-Gi-Oh!. One of the top duelists, David Von Johnston III created the tournament to start the game again.

Yu-Gi-Oh! is a Japanese card game that uses strategy and mathematical calculating. It was created in 1998 by Kazuki Takahashi and the company Konami.

Time has passed since it's first launch and it has grown a lot through the population of kids, seniors and adults all over the globe. When I was in elementary school, the whole school was playing this game. It was an excellent hobby for everyone and I also played because that was what was popular.

I wasn't the best, probably one of the weakest duelists there ever was, but it was always fun to watch other players compete with each other to find out whose deck was stronger.

I've been to several local tournaments in town, including the one that happened last month. That was my third Yu-Gi-Oh! tournament in a row that I won in Dawson City.

Some of the other amazing players that you can find in town are Blake Loewen, Keenan Davis, Cody Stephensen, David Johnston and Ryan Titus. If you are ever up for a good challenge then prepare your deck for the battle of your life with these incredible duelists. They may even participate in the new, upcoming tournament that will be happening at Dawson City's youth centre on February 15, which will be hosted by Ricky Mawunganidze and Huey.

Grab a deck or pick up your old one and use it to compete against the very best of Dawson City's youth to become the strongest card master in town!

Two Yukon First Nations and two Yukon environmental organizations launch legal action against Yukon Government to protect Peel River Watershed

Press release

Van., BC (January 27, 2014) – Today in Vancouver Thomas R. Berger, O.C., Q.C. announced that a lawsuit is being filed against the Yukon Government on behalf of two Yukon First Nations and two Yukon environmental organizations.

Berger and his clients, the First Nation of Nacho Nyak Dun, Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in, Canadian Parks and Wilderness Society Yukon Chapter (CPAWS Yukon) and the Yukon Conservation Society are launching a legal action to force the Yukon Government to implement a Land Use Plan that would protect 54,000 square kilometres of wilderness in northern Yukon's Peel River Watershed, against mining and other industrial development.

"This is a lawsuit that nobody wanted to bring," said Berger. "But the Yukon Government has forced these plaintiffs to go to court not only in defense of First Nations and environmental values in Yukon, but also to uphold principles entrenched in the Constitution."

Followingaconstitutionally mandated process under Yukon land claims agreements and seven years of research and consultation, the Peel Watershed Planning Commission produced a final plan that recommended the permanent protection of 55 per cent and interim protection for an additional 25 per cent of the 67,500 square kilometre Peel River Watershed.

Although the Commission's plan is supported by the affected First Nations and has wide public support, on January 21, 2014 the Yukon Government adopted its own unilaterally developed plan for the region, which opens up most of the watershed to roads and industrial development. Yukon Government's plan leaves 71 per cent of the watershed open for mineral staking and industrial development. In the 'protected areas' identified by the Yukon Government, which cover just 29 per cent of the watershed, all-season roads would be allowed in order to develop existing mining claims.

"Since 1993, when the Yukon First Nations, Canada and Yukon signed the Umbrella Final Land Claims Agreement, its provisions have formed the basis of land use planning in the Yukon. Those provisions are entrenched in the Constitution; they protect the rights of First Nations and all Yukoners," said Berger. "Yukon Government's plan discards the years of work by the Peel Planning Commission as well as the views of Yukoners."

Nacho Nyak Dun Chief Ed Champion emphasized the opportunities that were available for input during the planning process. "The Government of Yukon had seven years to provide input into the planning process while the Peel Commission was developing its Final Recommended Plan," Chief Champion said. "Chapter 11 of our Land Claims Agreement does not allow the Government to introduce a new plan at the end of the process. We will do whatever it takes to defend the integrity of our Agreements."

Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Chief Eddie Taylor spoke about what the Peel River Watershed means to his people. "As our elders say, the Peel Watershed is our church, our university and our breadbasket. It sustains our spirit, our minds and our bodies. It is as sacred to us as it was to our ancestors, and as it will be to our grandchildren."

"The fresh water that the seven rivers of the Peel Watershed provide is by far the most valuable resource within the Peel," Chief Taylor added.

"Seventy-five per cent of the Yukon is open to mineral staking," said CPAWS Yukon Executive Director Gill Cracknell. "To compensate for the fragmentation and disturbance resulting from industrial development on the rest of the landscape, we need to set aside large areas for wildlife, cultural uses, tourism and climate change adaptation. The Peel region is one of the last remaining, ecologically-intact wilderness watersheds left in north America. There needs to be real protection, not postage stamp areas riddled with roads and mines."

Karen Baltgailis, Executive Director of the Yukon Conservation Society, issued a warning to companies who may be eyeing the Peel now that Yukon Government has announced its land use plan. "Companies considering industrial exploration or development in the Peel region until this lawsuit is resolved do so at their own risk. The tide of public opinion will be against anyone who tries to develop in the region. On the other hand, companies that voluntarily give up their Peel claims in the name of responsibility corporate will win major points in the hearts and minds of people in Yukon and around the world."

About the Peel River Watershed

Located at the northern end of the Rocky and Mackenzie Mountain Chain, the Peel River Watershed is a spectacularly rugged region defined by the Peel, Ogilvie, Blackstone, Hart, Wind, Snake and Bonnet Plume rivers. One of Canada's most striking and pristine mountain river watersheds, the Peel is the heart of a great mountain ecosystem with a long cultural history, free-ranging wildlife and a rugged northern beauty. Encompassing over 67,500 square kilometres, the Peel Watershed dwarfs more famous landscapes, such as Banff and Yellowstone national parks-in size, unspoiled splendor and ecological integrity.

The Peel Watershed is one of North America's largest intact ecosystems-a region of mountains, deep canyons, plateaus, wetlands and rolling hills laced by rivers. The watershed is the northern anchor of the Yellowstone to Yukon Conservation Initiative, a broad-based international project to protect ecosystem connections for wildlife.

Wastewater Treatment Plant takeover date has moved to March

By Dan Davidson

The current earliest date that the City of Dawson will have to assume ownership and control of its new Wastewater Treatment Plant has been moved to March 4, 2014, following the fledgling plant's failure to meet all necessary requirements of the town's water licence again in December.

The town was originally supposed to have had the plant turned over by Corix, the contractor, in August, but a clause in the memorandum of agreement has triggered a series of delays as the plant has consistently failed to meet the necessary standard of performance.

From the town's point of view this is not the only issue standing between the plant and the "fully operational status" that council and administration would like to see it demonstrate before it becomes the town's responsibility.

At this time, and for the foreseeable future, the town does not have the sort of trained personnel that would be able to run the plant. The MOU assumed that such training could occur while the plant was running, but that was predicated on the plant being fully operational, and that hasn't happened yet in the 16 months since the plant went online.

Among the deficiencies noted in various reports from the town's Superintendent of Public Works, Norm Carlson, and agreed to by the town's Chief Administrative Officer, Jeff Renaud, is a key one. The plant has yet to receive any educted effluent from residents who are not hooked up to the town's sewer and water system. That was part of the requirements in the operational design and it has not been tested.

At the January 28 council meeting Renaud told council there had been an incident that very day that was under review to see if it constituted "an unauthorized discharge at the plant."

While this was nowhere near as serious, nor of quite the same type, as the one that took place last February, but he said it had to be fully investigated to see if it needed to be reported to the Water Board.

"(The) Yukon government, the City of Dawson and Corix are all working towards determining exactly what happened," he said, "if it's reportable and what it means for takeover dates and anything else."

Earlier this month the Recreation Department commenced a new program called KIK which stands for Kids In the Kitchen.

KIK is about cooking with the youth and teaching them about nutrition and staying healthy. This group gathers each Thursday after school in the Home Ec. Room. Right now the helpers are Shelley of the Recreation Department, Huey of the Youth Centre and myself.

This 10-week program is a fantastic way to teach the kids how to be a chef at home or anywhere! We make dishes such as Tuna Melts, Fruit Kebobs, Yam Chips and plenty more, and have new experiences as well whether it be trying a new food out, learning different cooking techniques or cooking for the first time.

"The kids are really fun to work with. They're always polite and it's nice to give back to the community," says Huey.

"It's very rewarding to see the kids/participants looking and being very excited to cook and so enthusiastic to be there," says Shelley.

The kids aren't the only ones that love KIK! I've only been at the program a few times so far, and it really enjoyable and a lot of fun!

The Discovery Channel's "Klondike" mini-series drew a big crowd for the watch event

Story & photos by Dan Davidson

The Oddfellows Hall has a capacity of 135 people and it was full for the watch party organized for the first night of the Discovery Channel's Klondike mini-series.

Klondike The Visitors Association's Justine Hobbs actually came up with the idea early last November. She tried to pitch a world premiere to the folks at the Discovery Channel. but they decided to rebuild their set (filming in Alberta finished last spring) in Times Square and have a launch party there. This was, after all, their first original scripted drama, and New York is a much bigger venue than Dawson City.

The way Hobbs sees it she eventually managed to convince the Discovery people that a) a Dawson City event would be good PR and b) that it was their idea.

So what happened was that the first night's broadcast, the opening two hours of the show, were live streamed into the Oddfellows Hall on the big screen used for the International Short Film Festival, and web cameras in the room broadcast the Dawson audience and their reactions to the Klondike Social Saloon Live web page.

"That's great," said Hobbs, the marketing and events assistant at the KVA. "Any exposure for Dawson City is good exposure."

All week a couple of webcams have been broadcasting street scenes from Dawson to this website. Locals have organized a few flash mobs as special events. On Monday night the Watch Party screen opened up and viewers could watch the Dawson reaction online. Several thousand did, and there was a lot of Twitter commentary running in the frame beside the viewer.

"I think that the people of Dawson City had a good time," Hobbs said after the show.

There were predictable groans when the NWMP didn't show up until well over a year into the Gold Rush and when the local First Nations folk were identified as Tlingit rather than Hän. When actor Nicholas Campbell hefted a large metal can full of gold nuggets off a bar with one hand early in the show's first hour without showing the slightest bit of effort, the audience knew that veracity was not going to be the evening's strong point.

People began arriving for the show around 5 o'clock, prepared to visit the bar, munch popcorn and socialize until 6. About 5:30 the buffet table of appetizers was declared open and the crowd fortified itself for the show that was about to begin.

There were groans when Soapy Smith (who never came to Dawson) turned up and a few more when Father Judge (who got here by way of Forty Mile) was seen among the stampeders coming north from Dyea.

"The groaners were expected, I think," said Hobbs, for whom one of the biggest was the Aurora in the dark night sky during a scene set sometime in the middle of August.

The dance hall girls and Belinda Mulroney were portrayed as being much better looking than any of them appear in historical photographs, but Hobbs had a chuckle over that.

"If we can make Dawson City as sexy as it actually is, that's great."

A lot of the locals dressed in various types of Klondike inspired garb for the evening, and the best male and female costumes were judged after the show. There were also door prizes.

Employees with Parks Canada and the Klondike Institute of Arts and Culture assisted in making the evening work smoothly.

Below: This is the scene viewed by people who were watching the Dawson reaction to the broadcast.

Finding the Klondike's howlers was part of Yukon Government misses the fun

By Dan Davidson

Part way through the first two-hour chunk of the Discovery Channel's "Klondike" miniseries, Bill Haskell's partner, Byron, is murdered out on their hillside claim. Bill wheels the body into town and asks around as to where he can seek justice for his murdered partner.

He's informed that there is no law in Dawson, won't be until the Mounties arrive.

This rather ignores the fact that the Mounties had been in the territory since the rush at Forty Mile (which is DOWN stream from Dawson, not UP stream, as someone says in the show) and were well established in the Klondike by the time Haskell and the other stampeders arrived.

In terms of the show, this explains why there were no Mounties checking the stampeders' supplies at the top of the Chilkoot Trail.

Later in the series (which hasn't all run yet as I write this) there will be a hanging – US frontier style - on what appears to be a main street. Now we all know, after the discovery of the Nantuck brothers' graves on the site of the new wastewater treatment plant a couple of years back, that two of the four brothers were hanged at the first public hanging in the Yukon in the Fort Herchmer compound in 1899.

The six hour "Klondike" event has been adapted rather loosely from former Berton House Writer in Residence Charlotte Gray's Gold Diggers: Striking it Rich in the Klondike. One must say "loosely" because a meticulous historian like Gray would not want to held responsible for some of the howling inaccuracies that have crept into the final shooting script for this epic, which was actually filmed a few hours from Calgary.

Chris Turner, another Berton House alumnus, wrote about the recreated town site in the winter issue of Walrus magazine and pronounced it impressive, while not having much use for the way the Gray's history had been transformed into a sort of Deadwood North.

If you scan the first chapter of Gold Diggers you will find that Bill Haskell (as played by Rob Stark - err... Richard Madden) travelled with his friend Joe Meeker, and not with the imaginary Byron Epstein. They actually bypassed Dawson (which hadn't been built yet) when they sailed north in 1896, the year before the time given in the show, and went on to Fortymile, the site of the first major gold rush in the Yukon. That's where they met Father Judge, a bald, bespectacled Jesuit priest who was never anywhere near Skagway or Lake Bennett.

While I'm thinking of displaced persons, I should mention Soapy Smith, who arrived in Dyea and Skagway in 1897 and stayed there until Frank Reid shot him about a year later. He was never in Dawson.

Haskell (who would have been in his late 20s at this point) and his actual partner went on to Circle City, which was the place first enhanced by the title "Paris of the North". We recycle a lot in the North.

Of course, if you're going to have a murder victim in a story "based on the facts" it's best to have it be someone who never existed, and the Epstein character made it possible to have that little scene showing the anti-Semitism and racism in Dawson, which was real enough. Bill's actual partner died by drowning when the two of them were headed Outside after two years in the territory.

In the true tradition of American westerns there are several points in the show where the travellers look up to see armed Indians lining the hills, menacing looking fellows who suddenly vanish when our heroes look away.

Further south in the Yukon these might well have been members of the Tlingit First Nation, but the show has them occupying the land all the way up to Dawson, much to the surprise of the Hän people who were here at the time. These imaginary Tlingit are led by a mixed race chief who speaks perfect English when he confronts Bill and Jack London later in the show.

Jack London? Well, for all that he's scribbling down phrases like "burning daylight" this can't be the actual Jack, since he hadn't yet reached the Klondike during the time frame the Speaking of time frames, there's a lovely shot of the Aurora Borealis against the dark night sky, except that the scene is supposed to take place sometime in July or early August and, well ... Land of the Midnight Sun and all that.

As for lovely, if you've seen pictures of Belinda Mulroney you'd know that she was a plain lady who wore glasses, a far cry from the svelte young woman with the cleavage revealing blouses and dangerous looking six shooter portrayed in the show, not to mention that her big success as a hotelier was out on the creeks, not in town.

Oh – and those pistols. They're all over the place. The North-West Mounted Police would never have allowed it.

Then there's Father Judge's storefront chapel in downtown Dawson. The actual site for St. Mary's and the hospital he went on to build was in the town's North End, under the shadow of the Moosehide Slide.

Ah well. Historical inaccuracies aside, it's a bit of fun, and picking up on the flaws is part of that. I simply wish they wouldn't try to pretend that it was anything else.

a golden promotion opportunity with Klondike mini-series

Press release

Whitehorse (January 23) -The Government of Yukon's decision not to promote the Yukon on the Discovery Channel's Klondike miniseries is another example of the Yukon Party's Department of Tourism dropping the ball when it comes to marketing, says Klondike MLA Sandy Silver. The program reached 1.9-million viewers in Canada and 3.4-million American viewers during its Monday night opening.

"This was a great opportunity to promote the Yukon and encourage viewers from across North America to visit the place where the Klondike Gold Rush actually happened," he said. "I'm surprised the government didn't try to take advantage of

The MLA for Klondike raised the issue of the Government of Yukon buying advertising on the History Channel program Yukon Gold last year and was told it was not a priority. Silver noted viewers who tuned in to Klondike did see commercials from the State of Alaska.

"Our neighbours certainly thought marketing their tourism product on this program was a good idea," he said. "Why did Yukon not take the opportunity? It is part of the mandate of the department to promote the Klondike Gold Rush."

Silver watched the opening night at an event hosted by the Klondike Visitor Association

"KVA did a great job pulling this event together. They developed an excellent rapport with the production company, who was more than willing to contribute to the KVA's marketing ideas. Despite some artistic license issues I would say people in the room quite enjoyed the program," he said. "Many people were asking the same question as myself - where is the advertising encouraging viewers to make the trip to the Yukon?

Silver added that while commercial spots might be too expensive, the possibility of a Tourism Yukon banner displayed on the bottom of the screen could have been possible, had the government reached out to the Discovery Channel. The government could also have advertised on the Discovery Channel's website.

Advanced Artist Award supports artistic development

Press release

Whitehorse (January 27) — Eleven Yukon artists will share $40,000 through the Advanced Artist Award to further their career development in the performing, visual or literary arts.

"The Yukon government is proud to support artists who contribute to the creative and cultural life of our communities," Minister of Tourism and Culture Mike Nixon said. "This support translates into opportunities to strengthen individual career development and grow community appreciation for the arts."

The Advanced Artist Award helps professional artists looking to advance their practice through individual artistic development. The funding is for innovative projects or educational pursuits that include learning through workshops, mentorship programs and informal study.

Performing artist Monique Romeiko is receiving $4,600 to explore new ways to understand and appreciate dance creation.

"The unique nature of my project lies in its exploration of roles and relationships interpreted through dance," Romeiko said. "This Advanced Artist Award will allow me to explore my own creativity while collaborating with others in the pursuit of inspiration, imitation, voice and interpretation—all concepts that celebrate the performing arts."

Writer Kirsten Madsen is receiving $2,500 to continue the work on her novel, The Cantilevered Universe, which is focused on family dynamics that define the human experience. Madsen will work under the supervision of Giller Prize winner Joseph Boyden.

"The work to complete a novel requires time, solitude and attention to the craft of writing," Madsen said. "I appreciate the support of my peers to enable me to give this attention to my novel-in-progress as the story takes shape, from first draft to polished manuscript."

George McConkey received a performance grant of $2000 to attend and participate in the World Harmonica Festival in Trossingen, Germany.

The Advanced Artist Award program is funded by Lotteries Yukon and is administered by the Department of Tourism and Culture. Submissions are adjudicated by a jury of professional artists. There are two intakes per year: April 1 and October 1.

Applicants are encouraged to consult with the fund administrator before applying.

Of Ice Bridge and melting Arena

It's taken some time this year, more than usual, but an official ice bridge across the Yukon River has been constructed. This version is slightly south of the informal trail created a couple of months ago by West Dawson residents, but it follows the same general path for most of the way.

From the ferry landing you drive south next to the west bank about one kilometre to approximately opposite the RCMP Detachment. From there, a straight and very wide crossing has been levelled and refrozen, leading to the lower dike road on the east bank. This road leads to an off ramp that dumps traffic on to Front Street opposite the small park that is situated between Front and Craig Streets.

After a goodly stretch of freezing cold weather over the holiday period, the latter part of January brought weather so mild that a recent weekend's hockey tournament had to end before the final playoff games when the ice in the arena got too soft to play on. What that kind of weather is doing to the new ice bridge is an open question (beg pardon), but as of a few days before the Sun's deadline certain spots have been marked off with barriers at both ends of the stretch.

Birthdays of Burns and Service celebrated in food and verse

Story & photos by Dan Davidson

The typical Double Bob Bash, held annually in Dawson since 1999, seems to feature a bakers' dozen or so lovers of the bards Burns and Service dashing inside from temperatures in the minus thirties or worse, with one of two of the men actually braving the weather in kilts.

So this year the warmth provided by the so-called Pineapple Express was certainly welcome, and perhaps contributed to the increase in numbers. It was only about -5 outside.

There were 17 people assembled at the Legion Hall, where the joint birth celebration of the two bards has been held for several years now, when the evening began, and it was this group which marched the haggis around the banquet table and listened as a kilted Chris Collin brandished his sgian-dubh (a ceremonial dagger) while reading Robert Burn's "Address to a Haggis", carving the beast and "Trenching your gushing entrails bright."

"Fair fa' your honest, sonsie face,
Great chieftain o the puddin'-race!
Aboon them a' ye tak your place,
Painch, tripe, or thairm:
Weel are ye worthy o' a grace
As lang's my arm."

The eight verses are a little easier when translated to Standard English.

"Fair and full is your honest, jolly face, Great chieftain of the sausage race! Above them all you take your place, Stomach, tripe, or intestines:

Well are you worthy of a grace As long as my arm. "

The two Roberts, Burns and Service, share the same month for their birthdays, though they are just over 114 years apart in time. Burns would be 255 years old had be made it to the present, and Service 140. That both birthdays fall in January is what prompted Dawson's Community Library Board to combine the two events.

The feast was under way when five latecomers joined the evening, boosting the number to 22, the largest group in a number of years.

After the potluck meal came the reading. While Service's rhymes dominated the evening, falling more easily from the lips, there was a good attempt to bring in some Burns, and the prearranged group recitations did feature both. It was an enthusiastic group this year and it seemed that just about everyone read at least one poem, while about half of the tables read two or three.

Photos:

Skins examines the relationship between the natural world and human creation

Story & photos by Dan Davidson

Rebekah Miller explores concepts of coverings, be it clothing, bark or skin in her exhibit "Skins", currently on show at the ODD Gallery.

In her artist's lecture on January 23 Miller discussed the type of work that she has been doing since she first came to Dawson around 2005. Fascinated by Dawson's architecture, she produced a number of etchings of the iconic buildings here. She carried that interest in structures back to Alberta with her and subsequently experimented with a number of print styles, making life size prints from abandoned doors and bits of buildings, as well as creating resemble works that hanging three-dimensional structures.

"Skins" is a collection of works that examines various aspects of two and three dimensional coverings, or skins.

A bird and fox are rendered in detailed frontal drawings. A butterfly is bisected and then joined together with a zipper. Zippers also both open and hold together a wasps' nest hanging from the ceiling.

In one corner there is a grove of trees, but a closer look reveals them to be merely the bark of trees, fastened together in tree shapes with zippers and suspended from the ceiling by ropes and pulleys that are counterweighted in place by an arrangement of stones. None of this actually touches the floor.

In her artist's statement Miller writes of the change that occurs in natural objects when they are imported into the human world of constructed objects.

"...the object transformed, though losing its original purpose, gains a value in human culture. Through human adaptation, many natural objects also become subjects of ornamentation and even reverence.

"In the transformations that I mean to display, I hope to evoke a recognition of the simultaneous celebration and subjugation which lies at the heart of our culture, derived, as it is, materially from nature."

Rebekah Miller is an emerging artist originating out of Buck Lake, Alberta. She attended the Alberta College of Art and Design in Calgary, graduating with a BFA in Print Media. Recently she completed her MFA at the San Francisco Art Institute in California, USA. She currently lives and works in Dawson City.

Skins will be on display until February 21.

First Nation Opposes VLTs

by Dan Davidson

The Dawson First Nation has taken an adamant stand against "the addition and installation of further facilities/establishments/opportunities in the Yu-

The pilot project proposed by the Yukon Lottery Commission is called "a waste of time and money" in the letter which is signed by Chief Taylor and dated January 14,

Taylor points out that the statistical weight of evidence so far 'clearly indicate(s) the negative effects of gambling, and especially VLT's. on society in general..." He goes on to say that the Han people's experience in Dawson shows that it is even worse when it comes

"Experience in Dawson has shown that aboriginal people are especially susceptible to the lures of gambling," he writes. "And unfortunately, aboriginal people can least afford it."

Taylor further cites the economic argument that Video Lottery Terminals will not bring new money into the Yukon economy, but simply reapportion that which is already in circulation. Changing the market share allotted to the various sectors now will not improve the overall lot of people in the territory, not will it provide new jobs, he notes.

"Everyone will suffer, with the exception of those premises where the VLTs are located."

He is especially harsh on the members of the BC/Yukon Hotel Association, saying that the membership has backed this proposal "for their own private gain - at the expense of the Yukon public" and that no one will profit from it accept these businesses.

This resolution puts the Dawson First Nation firmly in the camp of the vast majority of the 34 written responses so far forwarded to the

awson gets religious about counselling

by Dan Davidson

The community of Dawson is so convinced of the need to keep its Stay-in-School Counsellor that it has decided to hold a telethon to raise the money to employ him, irrespective of a commitment for funding from the federal or territorial governments.

A public meeting on February 4 moved quickly to this con-clusion when the town's recreation director, Peter Menzies, captured the mood of the nearly 45 people in attendance.

"It's time to get religious about this position," he said. "Let's go out and raise the money." There wasn't a voice raised in disagreement.

The meeting was called as a result of discussions between the members of the school council and Klondike M.L.A. David Millar, organized by Yukon Party member and local businessman Chris Sorg a way to deal with the issue for anand chaired by school council chair other year, he was rebuked. City Fletcher Hunston.

those at the meeting wanted to do nal Stay-in-School initiative protwo things, as summarized by posal on behalf of the Dawson First Hunston. The first issue was to try Nation over three years ago, reto find a way to guarantee some fi- minded Millar that this same issue may be involved in. An ombudsnancial security to stay-in-school had arisen last year when it looked counsellor Jim Johnston. The second was to find a way to salvage the expiring stay-in-school program itself, which has been dependent for three years on the federal monies invested in the initia-

Members of the local counselling community, including educational psychologist David Peat, social worker David Amirault and Yukon Family Services Counsellor Judy Reimer, took turns explaining what their mandate is in the community and why Johnston's more immediate, in-the-school presence has been a boon to the whole counselling process in Dawson over the last 3 years.

David Millar took some heat for the fact that the Yukon Party government has not addressed this issue at all during the last year. When he asked the meeting to try to find councillor Glenn Everitt, one of those who put together the origilike the federal money would not be granted to Dawson for an unusual third time.

According to Everitt, the government's line last year was that if the Dawson First Nation could coax another year out of the program, the government would be able to find a way to help. Everitt was concerned that community efforts would simply take the government off the hook for another year.

"What Glen is saying is true," Millar replied. "I cannot argue with it." But he vowed to prevent the government from passing this matter by again. When Wanda Schmidt asked what was to prevent the government from simply saying that the community had managed for itself and could do so again, a visibly agitated Millar shot back, "I won't let that happen - period. I don't see how any government could ignore this."

Other people at the meeting could understand the government's reluctance to move. Johnston's counselling position has evolved into one that cuts across departmental boundaries and serves the client irrespective of what area that client man-like approach such as this is something that most communities would love to have. School council member Bonnie Nordling noted that it could lead to the demand for a whole new government position in every community.

Menzies felt that one of the problems was that no one really seems to know how to deal with success.

As figures quoted at the meeting show, the coordinated efforts of the Dawson First Nation and the Robert Service School, enacted by Johnston, the school staff and other people, have cut the drop-out rate in Dawson from 45% (in a study of the late 1980s) to .71% last year.

Menzies said he felt the system, meaning the bureaucracy and the government, needed another year to figure out how to deal with success, perhaps because they weren't used

Besides, as Chris Sorg noted, set up at the CIBC. EM

"We can do it ourselves and shame

Other suggestions at the meeting including a continued lobbying of the two senior levels of government and a letter writing campaign to the MLA and MP Audrey McLaughlin. Millar welcomed the letters, and said he had already written several of his own to Ethel Blondin, Secretary of State for Youth and to others in Ottawa

The telethon to raise money to continue the program is tentatively set for February 24, a week after the next edition of the local paper hits the stands.

No one was sure exactly how much money would need to be raised, but the amount is likely in excess of $60,000. Ed Note: On February 7 a trust fund for donations was

The Sun obtained funding in late 2009 from the City of Dawson, YTG's Heritage Branch and the Community Development Fund to conserve and archive early issues and make them available once again in the public domain. This is a great resource for students, writers and historians, and also for prospective tourists with an interest in Dawson City's life. Each month, we are re-printing our front pages from 20 years ago (seen above) as a souvenir of our lively history. If you want to see page 2 and beyond, check out our website. Past issues are available there for download. Go to http://klondikesun.com. More will be added periodically (heh) when we have time!

Dawson Regional Planning Commission seeks feedback on initial plan alternatives

Submitted by the DRPC

The Dawson Regional Planning Commission continues to move forward in creating a vision for future land use in the Dawson planning region. The Commission is currently set to release five plan alternative maps to the public for review and feedback.

Each plan alternative represents a different potential land use future for the Dawson region. The alternatives use different land use arrangements to address potential conflicts while striving to achieve the vision and goals for the region. The five maps and associated background information will be available February 3, 2014, on the Commission's website or by contacting the Commission's office in Dawson City.

People can fill out a survey and comment form online, in-person, through email, or over the phone until March 2, 2014. The feedback received will help the Commission develop the preferred alternative that will form the basis of the draft plan. Further feedback will be sought during a review period for the draft plan, currently scheduled for May and June 2014.

Two events are also planned to give the public a chance to meet Commission members, discuss the plan alternatives, and provide feedback. The events will take place in Whitehorse on Friday, February 7, 2014, from 10 am to 8 pm at the Old Fire Hall and in Dawson City on Wednesday, February 12, 2014, from 10 am to 8 pm at the YOOP Hall. A presentation will be given at 12, 5, and 7 pm for both events.

More information on these public events will be available on the Commission's website.

The Commission is a six-member board established in 2010 under terms of the First Nation Final Agreements. They have a mandate to develop and recommend a land use plan for the Dawson region to the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in, Vuntut Gwitchin, and Yukon governments. The plan will identify conservation and development areas and provide guidance and direction to land use decision makers.

Season two of HISTORY's #1 Canadian docu-series premieres Wednesday, February 26 at 10 p.m. ET/PT

Press release

Toronto (January) - This February, HISTORY's number one Canadian docu-series of 2013, Yukon Gold, returns for a high-stakes second season. The brave gold mining crews are back at it again, battling the elements with only four short months in Canada's wild Yukon to earn what they desperately hope will be one big payday. For these miners, one good strike can make a man rich, but one bad season can take him down for good. They're willing to risk it all once again, for Yukon's gold. Produced by Paperny Entertainment for Shaw Media, Yukon Gold season two premieres Wednesday, February 26 at 10 p.m. ET/PT.

A late spring and falling gold prices crank up the pressure in season two. Miner Ken Foy is back at Moose Creek – despite nearly going broke last year. Ken has high hopes that this season he'll beat the Moose Creek curse. Going home broke is not an option; Ken must prove to his wife that investing their entire financial future into the mine was worth it. Also with lots to prove is Karl Knutson, who is stepping out of the shadow of his father, respected self-made miner Marty Knutson. And after a successful first season in the Dawson area gold fields, Alberta boy "Big" Al McGregor returns to the Yukon, this time with bigger machines and a bigger crew. These diehards have gold fever and they're back to wager it all in hopes of striking it rich.

The new season sees the addition of a new miner, Cam Johnson. Cam mines on the remote 10 Mile Creek, several hours upriver from Dawson City and only accessible by boat or plane – a huge obstacle when a part breaks or someone gets hurt. Family is Cam's top priority, and he keeps his close. His wife and children help out at the mine in any way possible, from operating machines to cleaning gold.

In the premiere episode, the miners battle frozen ground that forces them to sluice harder than ever. Karl races to get 100 ounces of gold in the first week in a bid to prove to his father that he's ready to take over the family mine and stake his own claim. Ken's operation is jeopardized when a junior miner destroys important – and costly – equipment, forcing him to decide if the eager but careless hand should be fired. Big Al's gamble to strip muddy ground to keep sluicing is a bust when he is forced to replace big iron – without a big payday.

My Best Stories

By Alice Munro Introduction by Margaret Atwood Penguin Books 509 pages $22.00

You can't get through a career spent teaching high school English without bumping up against Alice Munro's work but, while I have taught several of her stories over the years, and read a few more, I haven't spent an intensive amount of time on her writing.

when dealing with a three time winner of the Governor General's Award (1968, 1978 and 1986) as well as two Giller Prizes (1998 and 2004) the Man Booker lifetime as an afternoon, International Prize (2009) and the Commonwealth Writers Prize (2005), not to mention a page long list of other honours.

I was, however, spurred make her further acquaintance when she won the Nobel Prize for Literature last fall. The volume at hand as was published in 2006 and contains 17 of her short stories, selected from books published between 1977 and 2004, the most recent story being "Runaway" from the book of the same name. There have been several books since that time, including another collection of best stories that overlaps this one for content.

What is useful about this book, rather than two other best stories collections, is that it has an informative page introduction Margaret Atwood. It Q, As it Happens and Sunday Morning, and had read in Maclean's, but gave it all a literary shape.

What would have made the book a little more useful would have been to arrange the stories in the order they originally appeared in either book form or in the

New Yorker, where a good many of them first saw ink, though not, it seems, in necessarily the same form as the versions between hard covers. Munro apparently liked to tinker and revise.

There are books of short stories where you can sit down and breeze through several of them at a sitting. There's nothing wrong with that sort of writing, but it's not what Alice Munro does. One of her tales, which are usually not that short by page count (something my students used to complain about), is enough to chew on at one time.

Indeed, it has been said That's enough of a lapse repeatedly than Munro's short stories are rather like condensed novels, and I can certainly see where that idea comes from. Her tales may as easily span a and often slide back and forth in time without a great deal of warning. They may be narrated in the first or third person, may be very individual in tone, or take what seems like a historian's eye view of events.

They have been described domestic in subject matter, but the activities of housewives are never exactly what they are about. They deal with relationships failed and successful, or under stress. The earlier stories have a lot to do with fathers and daughters in some way, and the ones in the middle seem to have a lot of failed marriages.

During her early life she was by turns a waitress, a tobacco picker, and a library clerk, and these professions appear in her work, along with that of bookseller, for she and her first husband contained much of the same opened Munro's Books in material that I had heard on Victoria, where she began her writing career.

Much of her early life was spent in south west Ontario, which Atwood refers to as Sowesto. She seems to spend much of her energy bringing that area to life in her books, much as Stephen King spends his energy in New England and William Faulkner's work lived in Yoknapatawpha County in the USA.

Two months spent in the worlds of Alice Munro

Not everything is set in Huron County and not everythingisnicelydomestic. "Runaway" deals with an domestic unsuccessful intervention. "Vandals" is a tale of malicious vengeance. "The Albanian Virgin" deals with life in the Old Country as well as the New World. "A Wilderness Station" is a bit of historical fiction told in letters that turns out to be a bit of a murder mystery. "The Bear Came Over the Mountain" explores that unknown country of old age and dementia and asks how far a man might go to bring comfort to his fading wife, along with whether his actions are entirely altruistic. Having read that one I must now get hold of Away From Her, the movie Sarah Polley created from that source material.

I finished this collection today, after having spent about eight weeks the Munro-verse. It's an interesting place and expect to visit it again.

Start and finish lines moved for 2014 Quest

Press release

Whitehorse,/Fairbanks (January 28) - The start of the 2014 Yukon Quest 1,000 Mile International Sled Dog Race will be moved off of the Chena River in downtown Fairbanks to 2nd Avenue.

The relocation is due to thinner ice than normal from last week's warm temperatures, and concern for having 2-3,000 spectators on the ice. Historically, the race ran from 2nd Avenue down to the end and then went off the Chena River at the Nordale Bridge down Chena Hot Springs Road.

Also, due to the unusually warm weather conditions in Yukon, the Finish Line of the 2014 Yukon Ouest will be moved from downtown Whitehorse to the Takhini Hot Springs on the Hot Springs Road, off the North Klondike Highway. This is due to dangerous trail conditions for dog teams and mushers on the Yukon River.

All other Yukon Quest events will happen as planned. Specific checkpoint details will be released once they are available.

The starting line for the Yukon Ultra races out of Whitehorse was also changed to Takhini Hot Springs.

Celebrating the Great 88 in the Ballroom

Story & photos by Dan Davidson

The exact history of the Bechstein piano that currently resides in the Odd Fellows Hall's ballroom is not clear. It's not true, for instance, that it was moved to its present home by helicopter, though how they got it up those back stairs to the second floor would probably be a story in itself.

Barnacle Bob Hilliard believes that the grand piano's 145-year history encompasses several gold rushes.

"I believe this piano has gone through every gold rush in the North, beginning in Juno, and that it belonged to Joe Ladue and finally wound up here," he told the audience at the recent concert in the ballroom.

The Great 88: a Concert of Piano Music was organized by the Klondike Institute of Art and Culture, which currently has the care and keeping of the Bechstein, though it is actually owned by Parks Canada.

This, emcee Peter Menzies, reminded the audience, leads to the interesting scenario where players who have volunteered their time and talents at KIAC's monthly coffee houses may in fact end up playing the 1869 vintage instrument, something that can't been said about too many small town coffee houses.

As History Hunter Michael Gates (who used to have the care and feeding of the piano at Parks) has indicated in his regular column, the piano used to live in the Arctic Brotherhood Hall (now Diamond Tooth Gerties) and has been repaired and restored a number of times since Parks acquired it in the early 1970s.

The evening was a fundraiser for the piano's upkeep it raised between $700 and $800.

It was also a CD launch party for Barnacle Bob, who had two albums ready to go, one containing the honky-tonk bar tunes for which he is known around town, and the other a collection of original tunes and improvisations.

Three other players opened the show.

Angela Van Nostrand contributed Etude in C Minor by Henri Bertini; Waltz in Aflat by Johannes Brahms; and Georgia on My Mind by Stuart Gorrell and Hoagy Carmicheal.

Fred Osson, better known for his saxophone playing, was next to the keyboard with Nocturne No. 2 by Chopin.

Tiss Clark closed this portion of the show with Rhapsody Op. 79, No. 2 by Johannes Brahms.

Those performances ate up just under 30 minutes of the evening. The remaining hour and a bit was all Barnacle, as he ran through samples of his repertoire, including material from the CDs and other things that just came to mind, including his totally non-piano rendition of Stan Rogers' "Northwest Passage", with appropriate chorus harmonies from certain folk in the audience.
