Shooting the bull at the Dancing Moose

The big draw at the Dancing Moose in Dawson City on Saturday, March 8 was Heinz Naef's set of bull moose antlers. Visitors from the Trek Over the Top tour packed the Front Street between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. to gaze at the massive antlers and have their pictures taken with them, or have Naef pose standing between them.

The Dancing Moose is selling a line of t-shirts with a photo of Naef and his friends with the antlers, bearing the logo "Size Does Matter".

Naef shot the moose last September at the point where the Stewart River meets the Yukon River. He was hunting for the meat, which was a substantial prize from an animal weighing 560 kilograms

He wasn't concerned about the antlers at the time. As several press stories have related, it was only later that he was persuaded to pay closer attention to their size, which he measured to be 75 and 1/4 inches (191 centimetres) across at the time.

He decided to submit his antlers to the Boone and Crockett Club to see if they qualified for record status. In the end he took the rack to Reno, Nevada, where it was examined by five different judges, who determined that it was a record breaker.

Published reports indicate that it was bit bigger than Naef had thought. Boone and Crockett has a system for evaluating antlers. Naef's moose beat the previous record, held by John Crouse, of different "There's five measurements on here," Naef said, pointing them out on the antlers, "and they all add up. It's not inches no more, it's points. The length gets measured; the thickness gets measured; it's complex."

The antlers measure 75-5/8 inches at the greatest spread. The left side has 17 points and a palm measuring 17-5/8 inches wide by 51 inches long. The right antler has 19 points and a palm measuring 23-6/8 inches wide by 50-7/8 inches long. The antler circumferences are 8-4/8 and 8-7/8 inches on the right and left sides, respectively.

That makes a total of 263 5/8 points on the Boone and Crockett scale.

Trekkers enjoyed posing with Naef's antlers.

"The antlers weighed in at Information Centre," Naef said. 94 pounds," said Naef. "He was quite impressive coming at me."

What will happen to the antlers now that the judging is done? There are a couple of things.

"We're going to make a replica and put it in the Visitors

As for the original, he says it a matter of economics.

"A lot of people want to buy

He'd like it to go to some museum. "I wouldn't sell it to a private collector."

Uffish Thoughts: Setting the record straight on legislative history

By Dan Davidson

When the legendary nineday fortnight was instituted by Chris Pearson's government back in the 1980s, so that it could continue to meet its payroll while begging Ottawa for additional funding, it was applied equally to most government employees. Everyone had to work nine days out of every ten and received a wage cut equal to that day. School teachers, however, had to absorb the pay cut without the benefit of getting a couple of long weekends every month. Easy to see then, why Mr. Pearson was not one of my favorite Government Leaders.

This column, however, is not being written to complain about the late Government Leader. Like most of them he had both good and bad points and probably tried to do his best with the hand he was dealt.

But there is the matter of how he should be remembered in terms of his title. He never used the word Premier to refer to his

Yes, that's right. Mr. Pearson was a Government Leader, not a Premier, as stated in Premier Pasloski's press release last

He could have used the title of Premier. The famous Jake Epp Letter of 1979 reduced the power of the Commissioner, brought on the practice of responsible government and included the option for the in the Legislature to use that term if he or she so chose.

Pearson chose not to, and several of his successors, including Willard Phelps, who held the job quite briefly after Pearson, made the same choice. There are some reasons for this, but the main one would seem to be simply a matter of politics.

The NDP's Tony Penikett decided to make use of the new title midway through his second term in office. It was perfectly legal, but it was a mistake. People weren't ready for it. That move, coupled with reports of a certain amount of second term arrogance on his part, led to the Opposition of the day labeling him "King Tony". That accusation became a major part of the next territorial election campaign, which saw the Yukon Party's John Ostashek assume the office.

Once you've pilloried your opponent for using a certain title, you can't very well adopt it yourself, so Ostashek preferred to be called Government Leader during his years in office.

When it was the NDP's turn to run the show again, Piers McDonald apparently decided that being called a Premier wasn't worth the risk, and so he too was a Government Leader.

It would be Pat Duncan's Liberal administration that returned to using the title of Premier, though the change a very messy government reorganization that had most people worrying about a great many things other than the proper title for the leader of the territorial government.

Besides, by that time the NWT had taken to using the term for its government leader (as would Nunavut in 1999) so it no longer seemed presumptuous.

Since then, in the absence of any fuss whatsoever, our government leaders have been called Premiers. If we number them from that beginning, we are currently looking at the third person to use that title: Duncan, Fentie, and Pasloski.

know the federal government's Parliamentary website says otherwise, listing eight people with that title. This, however, is just another example of the federal government's habit of ignoring facts in favour of whatever message it would like to see accepted. When you do things like this and don't seem to realize that you are rewriting actual history, you do give people some cause to worry about your intelligence, if not your motives.

Don't even get me started on this fuss over the British/ American War of 1812-14.

Unfortunately, this error has been copied by that all-purpose online source, Wikipedia, which credits the federal website as the source for its list of Yukon Premiers. The leader of the majority party occurred in the midst of saving grace of that particular web page, however, is that it includes footnotes indicating which persons "used the title Government Leader instead of Premier" and in a separate entry notes "They are the territory's head of government and de facto chief executive, although their powers are considerably smaller than that of a provincial premier."

In a somewhat less detailed account than the one in this column, the website states: "From 1978 to 1990 and from 1992 to 1996, the term 'Government Leader' was used instead. Tony Penikett chose to change the title to 'Premier' amid some controversy. His successor, John Ostashek, returned to the 'Government Leader'."

So now we have Premiers.

This same period has seen the deletion of the definite article (the) from most references to the Yukon, even in places where it is grammatically awkward to leave it out. Further changes have involved substituting the abbreviation YG (for Yukon Government) instead of the traditional YTG (for Yukon Territorial Government), apparently on the assumption that if we don't call ourselves a territory we can pretend that a population as small as a Toronto city block or a Calgary "new community" can be the equal of a province. These changes, however, are all matters that lead on into our future. Let's be a little more careful with how we remember the past.

Dawson Ranger Patrol's Annual Training Exercise

By Sgt. John Mitchell

The Dawson Ranger Patrol conducted its Annual Training Exercise during the period 26 February through to 6 March. A total of 32 Rangers participated.

The purpose of the annual training is to update administration, re-fresh military skills, conduct firearms training and practice patrolling on the land.

The most challenging (and fun) part of the exercise is the Field Training when the Patrol deploys on the land. The area of operation chosen this year centered on the little travelled Chandindu River.

In order to present a challenge to each of the five Sections that comprise the Dawson Patrol, the units were initially sent off by various routes and by various modes of transportation to complete a reconnaissance patrol before rendezvousing as a group on the Chandindu.

At least that was the plan.

Shell ice on the Tombstone River

Two Sections, Echo and Delta, travelled west to demonstrate Canadian sovereignty at three locations on the Alaska Border. On the Top of the World Highway Echo traversed some extremely steep side hills to reach their objective. Both Sections then headed for the rendezvous point.

Concurrently "Charlie", led by Cpl Bob "Buckbrush" Blanchard, broke trail up the Chandindu to establish a Patrol rendezvous and base camp.

Although all the Sections worked hard to accomplish their assigned tasks, the toughest action occurred to the north as the Rangers there negotiated thin shell ice, open water, rough trails and steep terrain.

At Cache Creek on the Dempster Highway, Cpl. Richard Nagano's Alpha Section patrolled west and south on the Lost Patrol route through Seela Pass into the headwaters of the Chandindu and on to the RV location. Several skidoos were damaged, one was sunk in the river and one Ranger was injured when his skidoo fell through shell ice into a hole. The Section wisely opted to return to Dawson via the Yukon River rather than try to retrace their route.

It is believed that the last time this route was done by a large group was the recreation of the Lost Patrol by the RCMP in 1996.

Just to the south, Bravo's Rangers moved up the North Klondike past Tombstone and Monolith Mountains and into the Tombstone River drainage. Although they skillfully located and scouted the way down the river to the Chandindu, in the end the terrain proved too steep and too rough to be traveled pulling the sleds and 'boggans. Operations were based out of a camp located high in the headwaters. A few broken sleds and bruised bodies also resulted from this portion of the exercise.

The end result was that all units accomplished their tasks and did link up on the Chandindu but not quite as neatly as planned.

It was a learning experience for every participating Ranger but the challenges were backset by some of the most beautiful country in our area of responsibility.

It was worth it big time.

The next action for the Dawson Patrol will commence on March 25. We will act as a recce unit on Exercise Beaufort Ranger 2014 to lead over 30 Rangers from all over the Yukon from Eagle Plains to Hershel Island and on to Aklavik and Fort MacPherson.

At least that's the plan.

Gold Rush known around the world is more than just that event

If you were trying to build a case for the Klondike region to be declared a World Heritage Site, you could hardly find a more enthusiastic booster than historian Ken Coates. He made that very clear during his talk at Myth and Medium 2014 in late February.

While his lecture had the rather long-winded academic sounding title "Precious Lands: Territory, Resources and Values in the Klondike River Valley" there was nothing stuffy about the presentation itself.

Coates first visited Dawson in 1965 and has been fascinated with its history and that of the Yukon every since.

The Klondike, he told his audience, is unique for two reasons. First one must acknowledge the long history of the native people who have lived here for thousands of years. Secondly, however, one must recognize the impact of the Gold Rush.

"We can't get away from that. We can pretend the Gold Rush isn't a dominant theme, but it really is. The Gold Rush is really probably the only event in Canadian history that's known around the world. Interestingly, the only place where it's not really known as a Canadian event is in the United States, because they claim it as theirs, which is why Sgt. Preston on the Mounted is there in Disneyland, right in the middle of it."

In his world travels Coates has run into a number of gold mining centers where the promotional banners have read "(This country's) Klondike", and that says a lot.

"In the United States they still think of the word Klondike as an ice cream bar, but in the rest of the world, where they're literate – oh, I shouldn't say that. In these places, the word Klondike didn't need an explanation. (In New Zealand and South Africa) they didn't have to add 'famous place where they found gold and dug it out of the ground'. All they had to say was the word Klondike."

His brother, who is a historian living in the United Kingdom, found dozens of places named Klondike and Bonanza there when he did a search just for Coates said he made the mistake of downloading the recent Discovery Channel miniseries Klondike, only to discover that the peaceful history of the Yukon had been transmogrified into the American frontier myth before his eyes and had become Deadwood North.

In the serious portion of his talk, Coates outlined a number of key points about the Tr'ondëk/Klondike experience, breaking each one into three parts: the event itself, the values it displayed, and the threads that spin out from it.

"The real transcendent importance, the powerful story about the Klondike," he began, "is not just about what happened here, but what it tells us about the broader world.

"What is happening in Dawson City is actually a marvelous way of telling the story of humanity, not just the people who came here, but of the broader forces that shape big parts of the human condition."

Aboriginal occupation is the first event, a story of human adaptation to the environment. The values are reflected in the way this adaptation took place, how people managed to thrive in a place most would find inhospitable. The threads speak to the fact that this same type of process has taken place in different settings all over the world.

European exploration started here well before the Gold Rush, a process that was frightening for both the explorers and those being explored. Out of this drive to both expand and satisfy curiosity came a key development, which was the establishment of the boundary between British North America and Russian North America. This would eventually lead to the boundaries we know today.

The Europeans brought to North America the value of human domination over the land. It's not a value unique to their culture, he said. You find it in Japan, China and other cultural milieus, but it was fairly new here, where the ethos had been to work with what the land provided. Europeans had technology that could overcome most obstacles and they tended to do just that.

The search for gold did not begin in the Klondike. It is a global story, Coates said, one that continues right down to the present day. It is a trail we can follow down through history, a human phenomenon, and a very North American one. It's the pursuit of wealth, of fame, of opportunity.

The Klondike Rush occurred at a time when it seemed like the last frontier had already been closed off, and at a time of a great North American depression. economic captured the imagination of the world.

"This was a truly global phenomenon," he said, "and Ken Coates is Canada Research Chair in Regional Innovation at the Johnson-Shoyama Graduate School of Public Policy, and Director of the International Centre of Northern Governance and Development at the University of Saskatchewan. In 2013 Coates was named as the Macdonald-Laurier Institute's Senior Fellow in Aboriginal and Northern Canadian Issues.

this thread is what gives the Klondike its greatest mystique."

The imposition of Canadian Law is another process, and one that plays a major role in the history of this region.

"The fact that the Northwest Mounted Police were already here when gold was discovered was very, very important," Coates said, wondering how the degree of American influence might have increased without them.

"The value here is one of sovereignty, of national governments demonstrating their ownership and control over territory."

Again, this process was going on all over the world at that

The stampede led to cultural encounters between aboriginal people and newcomers.

"In very few places on the planet does it happen as fast and on such a large scale," Coates said. "A couple of hundred local first nations people and several tens of thousands of outsiders pouring in and imposing themselves on the people in this area very, very quickly."

The new arrivals, as they did in places around the world, assumed they were the superior people with the absolute right to displace those who were here already and marginalize them in their own land.

boomtown, though Coates noted that "Dawson City is one of the most resilient places" in this regard.

There follows the development of the Klondike legend, magnified, popularized and distorted by the tales of Jack London, the verses of Robert Service and even the narrative history of Pierre Berton, not to mention the reimagining that has taken place in the movies, on radio and on television.

In more recent times, there has been the development of a tourism industry, somewhat based on reality and somewhat on the mythology.

And even more recently there has been the revival of First Nations culture that is producing the sort of events at which Coates had come to Concluding his talk, Coates put forth a sort of manifesto.

"I think we need to use the history of this area as a means of teaching about reconciliation, and teaching about partnership.

"This is a precious land, as aboriginal people, clearly your land. As newcomers you're hopefully welcome as neighbours and friends into this territory. You know it but not enough people do.

"Only a single story has really leaked out from the Klondike. Only a single story has leaked out from the Yukon and that is about the Klondike Gold Rush. We have allowed outsiders to tell the story, I think, too long.

"You are telling the story differently with your lives. You tell the story differently with the cultural centre. You tell the story differently with the kind of wonderful celebration Following the Rush there is you are having this week, in the inevitable decline of the this particular event of Myth and Medium. And you find new ways of telling stories to different people in different audiences.

> "It is magnificent that you are telling these stories to each other as aboriginal and nonaboriginal people. Please do it and please find a way to share these stories with the rest of the world."

Art can be a path to personal healing

For Ross River's Dennis Shorty, and his partner Jennifer Froehling, art is a healing activity. Shorty had a lot of feelings to deal with after his experience at residential school and he found that he was able to exorcise much of that through his art.

"I used to be ashamed of who I was and even to speak my own language," Shorty told the crowd at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre on February 24, during the week long Myth and Medium conference.

He said that his early art was very dark in tone and theme, but as the years have passed he has found his art lightening up in tune with his recovery, showing happier colours and themes.

Dennis makes jewelry, creates antler and bone carvings and is also a painter. His work has been on display in a number of Yukon exhibitions since 1991 and extensively in Germany since the first decade of this century

Froehling, who was born and raised in the former East Germany, has some demons of her own to deal with. She and Dennis met in 2006. She moved to the Yukon in 2007 and in 2012 they formalized their bond with marriage.

Together they perform Dennis' music as the duo "Dena Zagi", which means "peoples voice" in the Kaska language.

Their presentation, "Healing Through Art and Music", was a slide show during which they talked about their travels and what they have discovered through Dennis' art and songs.

"We live in both worlds and are sharing both traditions," said Froehling. "It's part of our healing."

When Dennis first travelled in Germany his hair was much shorter than it is now. He grew it because clients in Germany kept asking him why his hair was so short.

During the week, Shorty also taught an intensive carving worship and the pair performed at an evening concert

Driftwood Holly launches his first CD

Holly Haustein is known for many things, for the driftwood benches the ferry landing on both side of the Yukon River, the giant bench up on the Midnight Dome, the years he conducted horse and cart tours around town, the year he constructed a massive ice arch out on the river and for the Smoke Shack outside of Bombay Peggy's.

He's also known for turning up at the regular monthly coffee houses to play his Neil Young influenced brand of folk tunes and for hosting the annual Harvest Moon Festival with his wife, Kirsten Lorenz, at their home in Sunnydale.

The CD is packed with Holly's own material for the most part, although several tunes were co written with folks like Paul Mahoney, Andrew Laviolette, Doc MacLean and Robert W. Service. One tune is by the Bryant Crooks (Laviolette and Kristen Poenn), and Holly is joined on vocals by Ecka Janus, Susu Robbins and Joey Lorenz, as well as Laviolette.

Accompaniment was provided by Aaron Burnie (bass), Trapper Dan (guitar), the late Willie Gordon (vibes Harmonica and violin) George (mouth organ), Laviolette (guitar), Pavel Now Driftwood Holly has Osvald (violin), MacLean

Not all of these folks were available for the launch at the Oddfellows Hall, but Holly was joined by Jacki Reznicek on bass and Pavel Osvald on

The group sampled the tunes on the CD as well as playing tunes by some of Holly's favorite artists.

A hard-hitting play prompts a lively discussion

As The Hours That Remain begins we see a close family trio interacting on the last night they will all be together. Daniel (Eli Ham) will be at home watching a hockey game while his wife, Denise (Christine Wesley Grenier) and her sister, Michelle (Melaina Sheldon), will be part of a "girls' night out".

Later that night Michelle's car breaks down on the way back to Daniel's place to catch the third period of the game. She is picked up by someone who is driving by, and it's the last we see of her – in the flesh, at least.

This is not a surprise to the audience, who know from the promotion surrounding the Gwaandak Theatre production of Keith Barker's play that it was inspired by the infamous Highway of Tears, and all the missing women connected with

We are expecting grief. What we are not expecting is the disintegration of the remaining couple.

Denise does not recover. She disappears into the search for her sister, sometimes vanishing for long stretches of time. In one touching scene Daniel desperately hugs his absentee wife, so happy is he to have her back. This is a key scene in the play though we don't realize just why until near the end.

Denise's obsession appears to manifest itself in a sequence of encounters with endangered women, all of whom bear some resemblance to Michelle. but are not her: a mothering streetwalker, an ambushed lawyer, a bedraggled, hooded teenager. At other times she is visited by Michelle herself, but never when Daniel is in the same room.

We are told that five years or more have passed between the opening scenes and some of these later encounters, and during this time Denise has become more and more erratic.

going missing for weeks at a time, getting arrested for unruly conduct in public places.

Several times Daniel is driven to distraction and almost walks out on her, but in the end he can't do that.

It would be a massive spoiler to say much more about the action of the play. There are many differences that have to be resolved and some tough decisions that have to be taken during the final act.

At the conclusion of the play the playwright, cast and stage manager were available for a Q&A session which came almost a little too soon for the audience, most of whom were still catching their breath. After the hour long performance the actors and crew were back at the front for another 35 minutes with the audience.

Barker explained how he came to write the play as a result of stories he was told while travelling with another play. It was the first time he had ever heard of the Highway of

"I got really angry and upset," Barker said, "and the more I looked into it the more upset I got. I was thinking that if this was a non-aboriginal issue it would be front page news. So I did the only thing that I knew how to do, which was to create art."

There followed a llively discussion about the issues raised in the play, and a bit of technical talk regarding the challenges of mounting the production the restricted stage space at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre.

This was the third performance in two days for the players. They'd been seen by 55 school students in a matinee on Friday and 25 adults that same night. The Saturday show added another 32 to the tally.

"Art is my life," says visiting Inuit artist

Mathew Nuqingaq is an artist and drum dancer from Iqaluit who tried out several different careers and spent several years as a teacher before he realized that being an artist was what he really wanted to do.

"I was a professional," he said.
"I taught in the school system for 12 years and I totally loved it. Then I took one evening course in jewelry making and I was hooked. I took another one. I took another one."

Eventually he cut back his teaching to half time so he could work more on art, and then decided to take the plunge. A graduate of the jeweler program at the Nunavut Arctic College, he has now been a jeweler for more than 16 years, full time making a living as an artist since 1999.

"The reason I became an artist is that I wanted to have something inside me come out and be shared."

"Art is My Life" was the title of his presentation to the Myth & Medium gathering.

Nuqingaq arrived on stage at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre wearing traditional garb and carrying the large Eastern Arctic style drum, which he spent much of his talk tuning, rolling the synthetic skin ever tighter with his beater.

When he was ready he drummed and sang the song he made up while he was working on massive carving projects for the new government in the year when Nunavut was just new.

During Nuqingaq's talk there was a constant flow of slides off to one side, images from his artwork, many of which can be viewed on his Facebook site, as well as the land that can be seen from his studio. Many of the pieces show were quite small and were made from odd bits of metal that he scavenged from the local metal; dump, which he jokingly referred to as Canadian Tire.

"I found a lot of amazing stuff to put in my studio and I'm lucky to have friends to go with me to find stuff.

"We have been very lucky to be able to get the studio running and to have no boss and to be able to do it."

Snow goggles on base: sterling sliver, sinew, ivory and stone.

In some ways he compares his work as an artist to the life his dad used to live on the land – independent, able to work with the things around him to make what he wants to make and thrive that way.

"We always figure out the way to make something out of nothing, and it's amazing."

The drum dancing he traces to his uncle who used to sing and dance when he was a boy.

Also a storyteller, Nuqingaq threatened to put the audience to sleep with one of the many variations of the tale of Sedna (also known as Arnakuagsak, Arnaqquassaaq and Sassuma Arnaa). In this story, which is told all across the circumpolar North, a badly treated young woman is transformed into a mighty sea goddess who controls all the creatures of the sea, which gave her control over the ocean itself as well as all the beasts the people needed to hunt in order to survive.

The most powerful shaman would be sent to the bottom of the sea to find a way to placate the sea goddess by combing her hair, which she could not do on account of having lost her fingers during the event that caused her to sink down and transform.

Nuqingaq also performed as a drum dancer and singer during the week's concert evening as well as conducting a two day intensive workshop in free style jewelry.

St. Paul's raises $747 for Kenyan relief project

Each year on Shrove Church Tuesday, St. Paul's Anglican Relief Church holds a traditional Pancake Supper, featuring Aldene Snider's famous sourdough pancakes. The money raised at the event is used to fund some worthy cause, either in the community or abroad.

This year attendance was good and donations ran higher than usual.

The supper, held in the Richard Martin Memorial Chapel, collected $747.00 for the Kakuma Refugee Camp in Kenya, where there are 130,000 refugees, with 900 new exiles from Sudan arriving daily. Admission to the supper was by donation with a suggested amount of $8.00. Most people donated much more than that.

The camp is partially sponsored by the Anglican Church's Primate's World Relief and Development Fund.

Why the modern recreational kayak is not really a kayak

Can a modern day adaptation of another cultures' artifact possibly have the same meaning and identity as the original? Ken Lister, specialist in watercraft at the Royal Ontario Museum, tackled this issue at Myth and Medium 2014 in his talk "'That's Not a Kayak': Form, Function and Cultural Appropriation".

The first part of the title actually came from Andrew Oyukuluk, an Inuit elder who responded with some disdain when he saw the mass-produced kayak that was the last item in a display at the ROM.

For non-Inuit people the word kayak ("qajaq" in Inukitut) simply references a type of boat, Lister told his audience at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre.

"For the Inuit, the word ... references a complex cluster of associations. Is it a surprise then, to hear an Inuit elder standing in front of a fiberglass kayak in an exhibition that I curated devoted to kayaks exclaim 'That's not a kayak!'?"

Such a challenge causes one to reflect on the depth of cultural meaning that underlies the object.

Not that there aren't many different types of kayaks. Lister's slide show revealed half a dozen variations on the one and two man craft, each influenced by the purpose (always a type of hunting) for which it was intended, taking into account the local climate and the type of creature being hunted, which might be sea mammals, birds or caribou.

Variations on the basic design were developed all over the circumpolar North.

"In Greenland alone, 13 different kayak designs have been identified," he said.

Traditional kayaks are made of naturally occurring materials found in the North. Oddly enough, in this treeless environment, wood is an essential element. It would have washed into the Arctic Ocean following the spring floods and breakups on all the rivers that flow into that sea, and may have been carried half way or more around the circumference of the sea before it was salvaged.

Speaking of salvage, that may well have been the fate of many of the European ships of exploration that were trapped in the winter ice and never seen again. In post contact times wood was also bartered from traders and purchased from RCMP posts.

The remainder of the construction materials came from the animals the Inuit hunted, creating the ironic situation that the animals were, in some way, assisting in their own capture.

"It's a wonderful cyclic reality."

For the Inuit then, the kayak was not merely an object with a certain shape, form and function, Lister said. "(for them) it is animal, land, water, family and tradition. All of these elements is the kayak. When you look at a kayak, the kayak can tell its own story."

Lister related a version of the legend of Sedna, the Mother of the Sea, in which the kayak played an important role, and showed photos of a number of carvings that dealt with images of the hunt. The artwork shows the interconnection between the hunter and the hunted.

"Oyukuluk's view of that fiberglass boat on display was a comment on that boat's inauthentic elements, manufactured in a system of production disengaged from the user and the land, the fiberglass vessel is a product designed for a purpose foreign to the Inuit needs. It has few of the qualities of the Inuit kayak."

The non-Inuit boat known as the kayak has none of the cultural qualities of the original and is simply a design appropriated for our mass production culture. It is a recreational boat rather than one designed for hunting.

In Inuit terms, said Lister, "kayak is not a simple word but a myriad of words in a composition that tells a story of cultural complexity. Intimately related to the animals hunted, the kayak had a depth of cultural significance characterized by family wellbeing, community strength, hunter prestige and individual sense of place in a world that was comprised of both human and non-human entities.

"Unlike its commercial progeny, the Inuit kayak symbolizes the rhythms of a life experience and a world view where the totality and the complexity of its attributes embodied Inuit associations with their natural, spiritual and social environments."

So, Lister concluded, when Andrew Oyukuluk looked at the commercial boat and exclaimed, "That's not a kayak!" he was quite correct.

The 21st Trek Over the Top arrived in Dawson

Story & photos by Dan Davidson

Dawson was a little different for this year's Trek Over the Top riders. Watching them arrive at the ferry landing on the west bank after what they were describing as a great ride over the Top of the World Highway from Tok, one could see them getting a little confused and taking one false route before doubling back to pick up the actual trail.

On a snow machine it's not necessary to travel the entire four kilometres that people are having to drive in order to cross the river in a truck or car, so the riders peeled off the ice road just across the river from the place where the docks are installed every summer and entered town from the boat ramp hole in the dike.

Trekkers departed from Tok between 6 and 11 a.m. Alaska time, and the first of them, Randall Hill, arrived in Dawson at 12:30 local time on February 27.

John Kaercher and Aaron Stillwell were the next to arrive, around 1:50, making them the silver and bronze riders, respectively. They are Trek veterans, with Kaercher on his 14th run and Stillwell on his 9th. Both of them were Crossing the Yukon River at enthusiastic about the trip, saying the conditions were great, the temperatures moderate and the beautiful.

> The grooming the trail received after the Rangers did their recent patrol to the border must have improved it a lot, because the Rangers reported it was a bit rough for them.

> The Trekkers had two days of events ahead of them. organized by the Klondike Visitors Association and the Dawson Sled Dawgs. They returned to Tok on Sunday, March 2.

Conference attempts to define the concept of the traditional economy

The Dawson Regional Planning Commission's Plan Alternatives Package, which was released in February, contains five possible maps that designate portions of the region in different ways. It is not intended at this point that any one of these maps would be the final recommended plan, which is expected to be released at the end of April.

On the maps there are three different classifications of Integrated Management Areas, as well as Conservation areas, and Protected areas.

There is a Community designation, which encompasses Dawson City and its satellite settlements, which are not affected by the planning process.

There is also Tombstone Park, which is distinct from the process.

There are two additional plan designations, the nature and extent of which are still under discussion. One is the Yukon River Corridor, the part of it that passes through the planning region.

The other is a new designation, which has been Traditional Economy Area. It is represented to varying degrees on three of the alternative maps and not at all on the other two.

On the three maps that show proposed boundaries, the Traditional Economy Area designation is close to Dawson City. It is sometimes depicted as one particular area, and other times as two.

During the two day conference on this subject, held over March 4 and 5, delegates discussed such broad topics as harvesting natural resources, traditional land use, and trail networks. On the first evening the discussion session was open to the general public.

The Selkirk First Nation's Bill Trerice was the keynote speaker for the evening, summarizing some of what had been said during the first day, covering precontact history, the land claims process and certain principles to consider during the development of the concept.

Historically speaking, he said, "the traditional economy is a term we use to describe the whole reality that existed here (prior to the arrival of settler culture): the labeled the trail networks, harvesting practices, stewardship, social relations, the culture and so on."

Trerice spoke about how recognition of traditional practices is built into both the Umbrella Final Agreement and the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Final Agreement. He cited in particular, section 10.1.1: "The objective of this chapter is to maintain important features of the Yukon's natural or cultural environment for the benefit of Yukon residents and all Canadians while respecting the rights of Yukon Indian People and Yukon First Nations."

Looking to the future design of the plan, Trerice offered the opinion that the Traditional Economy designation might best be thought of as a renewable resource area.

The Land Use Designation Table in the alternatives package describes purpose as being to "Enable renewable resource development and enhance the traditional economy."

The traditional economy is defined broadly as "forestry, non-timber forest products, agriculture, and tourism well as subsistence harvesting activities."

That would include such

Bill Trerice presented an overview of the history and elements to be considered when speaking of the Traditional Economy concept.

things as hunting, trapping and fishing.

In a press release the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in characterized it this way.

"The traditional economy concept joins together community development objectives like recreation, local harvesting opportunities, learning and social well-being and is intended to create a space for compatible land use activities. The Traditional Economy Area would foster sustainable economic development and presents an opportunity for the whole community to engage in traditional practices within natural settings."

During the discussion following Trerice's presentation several people made the point best expressed by Darren Taylor, who is both a Dawson town councillor and TH's Director of Natural Resources.

"Despite this land use planning process coming out of Chapter 11 of our final agreement, I just want to let the community know, and everyone else that resides within traditional our territory, that ... this is a regional land use plan, and it requires the input from everybody that resides in this area.

"Land use planning (used to be) dictated by governments. The unique thing about this planning process is that it's a grassroots up approach. It's based on the wishes and the needs of the people that reside within the planning region.

"In my view, it's not only our land use plan - Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in's - its everybody else's that are within those confined boundaries."

Bill Casselman, the chair of the regional planning commission, confirmed that although the deadline for comments on the plan alternatives had passed on March 3, the commission was still happy to see comments written in or posted on its website.

At that point, it was noted, neither the territorial government nor the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in had filed their comments.

Maybe we need to change our narratives to find real peace

Story & photos by Anna Vogt, the Sun's Columbian correspondent

"No da papaya" is a popular saying here in Bogota. It literally translates to "Don't give papaya" and means to not be thin skinned and easy to cut into like a papaya, i.e. by allowing someone the opportunity to take advantage of you.

There is a high level of mistrust and urban crime in the city and we are encouraged not to stop to talk to strangers, to be aware of our surroundings at all times, not to carry valuables, not to take money out of ATMs at night, etc. Not following these safety precautions is the equivalent of handing out free tropical fruit to everyone on the street.

Everyone has a story about how they were taken advantage of in some way, or they know someone who has. In a team meeting, a colleague shared about an incident on the Transmileno (Bogota's above ground metro system) where a woman holding a small child was repeatedly bumping against a seated man in the crowded bus. Holding to common courtesy, the man stood up to give his seat to the woman and her child. Later, he realized that she had picked his pockets while appearing to only need a seat.

Another colleague told us how he had witnessed a fight break out on his way to work over who had to give up their seat to a very pregnant woman on the bus. Other friends have told me how they have stopped to help someone asking for directions and then been robbed.

It all makes sense. As a noticeable foreigner, I am automatically a giant walking papaya and need to take the appropriate security precautions. This is the opposite of small town Dawson, where we would leave our car unlocked. I have been mugged before (not in Colombia) and understand the validity of taking precautions. Yet, it is hard to think of a postconflict scenario with all of this mistrust in the air. How can we rebuild this country if we cannot even say good morning to each other on the street without questioning motives?

I am a firm believer in peace processes and signed accords.

But I also believe that changing the narrative we tell about each other and ourselves is a way of building peace from the bottom up. A new incentive here is called Reconciliation Colombia. It focuses on telling stories of ordinary people who have done the extraordinary: communities that have forgiven perpetrators of violence; former combatants in different armed groups working together; people from different regions coming together to discuss differences and similarities. The most important part: people who would never be in the same room together talking about their experiences of war, peace and being Colombian.

Yet, we cannot only focus on the extraordinary. Each one of us also has a story about the good things we have experienced from strangers. I have seen countless people give up their seats for children or disabled people on the Transmilenio, Yet we hold to the narrative that those around us always have our worst interests in mind and those are the incidents that we talk about.

What would happen if every day I told my colleagues and myself about all the people I passed that were courteous, the taxi drivers that charged me a fair rate, and men that treated me with respect? This category far outweighs the other. What if I remembered that I also do not always have the worst interest of those around me in mind?

This does not mean we deny the complex challenges facing Colombian society and the reality of urban crime, but rather recognize that part of overcoming these challenges means changing the story we tell about ourselves and about the other. In Canada, we are trying to do that with the Truth and Reconciliation Commissions: acknowledging the past and the way we have viewed each other as less than human, leading to horrific practices such as residential schools, is a start to change the story. But perhaps the way we encounter the people we meet every day on the street is more important for building peace and reconciliation than any kind of plan or program.

A writer's search for the roots of depression and suicide

What Disturbs Our Blood: A Son's Quest to Redeem the Past By James FitzGerald Random House Canada 512 pages $14.99 shocked when one day, at the age of six, he announced that he wanted to change his name to Gerry?

Where had that come from? He did not know then that his grandfather's name was John Gerald FitzGerald, that he generally went by Gerry and that he was one of the biggest names in Canadian mid-1960s pretty much meant being a housewife and mother. She had other aspirations which she crushed.

James' personal concerns probably began watching his father fall apart in the middle of his life and end his days in a state of depression and drug induced lethargy in a small apartment, sans wife, sans children sans ability, sans self-respect. In James' judgment, Jack was a victim of the psychology wars, where scalpel and medication were the politically correct tools of the trade and Freud was still spoken of as a Viennese quack with a dirty mind.

Much of this book, indeed, is an indictment of the profession, and James has researched it so thoroughly that he is now able to make part of his living telling auditoriums full of uncomfortably squirming doctors just what they are doing wrong.

Delving back into his family's past he discovered case after case of depression and mental instability, and eventually found out what no one had ever told him about his grandfather, what the medical profession of the day had hidden away, that Gerry had crashed and burned in the middle of his life, too, and that his third suicide attempt had been successful.

Jack was treated unsuccessfully after his own attempt at ending it all.

James began his work on this book partly out of a desire to figure out what was wrong with his family so that by Dan Davidson he could avoid the same fate. For him, the talking cure so despised by the doctors who treated his grandfather and father, was the beginning of salvation. After that he was not quite so shocked to find that his great-grandfather was also depressed, that a great-uncle had leapt from a bridge, and that other relatives were alcoholics and manifested strange behaviors. After that, he had hope that finding out as much as he could about his forbears might be his own cure.

Aside from depression and insecurity being a family plague, James is quite convinced that there is something in the Irish temperament that rises in some families, turning into the Black Dog that Winston Churchill (who lived in Ireland as a young boy) used to complain about. Part of his research was to trace his family tree back as far as he could, only to find that there had been problems long before the FitzGeralds immigrated to Canada.

If you want to read an abbreviated version this story, James' National Magazine Award winning 2002 article "Sins of the Fathers" can be found on at http://www.sanofipasteur. ca/, the website of Sanofi, the company that now owns the Connaught Laboratories that his grandfather founded, where vaccines for diphtheria and other diseases as well as the discovery and refinement of insulin took place.

The book is worth the read even if you have already perused the article. It won the 2010 Writers' Trust Non-Fiction Prize and is available in both physical and digital editions.

James FitzGerald was the writer-in-residence at Berton House during the fall of 2013.

The title of James Fitzgerald's memoir/ history/detective story says a lot. What was there in his family's past that needed to be redeemed?

Why, as he wrote in the essay that eventually grew into the book, did he react to the family home this way?

"As a small boy, I believed our house was haunted. In my bones, I felt that 186 Balmoral Avenue - - the gloomy, stuccoed-brick three-storey where I lived until age seven -- was inhospitable to children. Sometimes, when I wandered alone through the dark rooms, I felt sure that some daunting, suppressed secret was about to burst out of the cast-iron radiators, flooding the hardwood floors."

Why was his mother so public health history, right up there with Banting and Best, who worked out of the Connaught Labs that he founded.

James grew up in a desperately dysfunctional family, led by Gerry's son Jack, who followed his father into medicine and had his own stellar career, though never one that equalled the heights of international acclaim his father had soared.

Indeed, jazz loving Jack would probably have been much happier running a nightclub and hobnobbing with the musicians who were frequent house guests at the FitzGeralds.

James mother was also unhappy in her choice of career, which in the post WWII years up to the

News & Happenings from the Community Library

In the Library this month

Mystery fans know it's the women who are really making a splash in the genre these days, and we have several new arrivals from female authors. Kathy Reichs has the 13th installment in her Temperance Brennan series with Spider Bones, while Bailey Cates offers us Charms and Chocolate Chips : A Magical Bakery Mystery. And bestselling author Carolyn Hart has released Cry in the Night in printed form. All are upstairs in our Fiction New Arrivals section.

March is Nutrition Month in Canada, so to help you maximize your health the Library has a special display of books on nutrition — and health in general. From Better Food for Kids to The Healthy Boomer, we'll have you eating and feeling better. And for those interested in newer food perspectives, we've included some specialized dietary diatribes.

Of course, March is also when the Academy Awards took place. (Well, normally it's February but they were pushed out this year due to the Olympics). Yes, the envelopes have been opened, and acceptance speeches made, but we'll continue to pay tribute to the movies all month long. Our special Hollywood Goes to the Library display teams up movie DVDs alongside the book that spawned them. From kids' classics to teen goth to blockbuster bestsellers, we have a popular selection to watch and/or read.

With support from the Yukon Public Libraries and the Canada Council for the Arts, we'll be hosting a reading at the library by me, Dan Dowhal on Monday 31 March at 7 p.m. Admittance is free, and refreshments will be served. I'll be reading excerpts from my new work-in-progress, Bury Your Horses, and discussing how living in the Yukon has influenced the novel's development.

For more information about any of these contact the Library at 993-5571 or e-mail dclib@klondiker.com.

Stories inspire positive emotions and strong communities

WHITEHORSE (March 6, 2014) —Twenty-five stories from nearly a dozen Yukon communities have been collected in a new publication called Stories that Inspire: Working Together Towards Wellness. The stories describe activities that promote health, happiness and positive relationships. The project is part of Pathways to Wellness, an initiative launched in 2012 to improve the health and well-being of Yukoners.

The collected stories cover a wide range of activities. These include promoting healthy eating through community greenhouses, preserving cultural heritage through traditional dance, harvesting from the land and restoring historic sites. They support a view of wellness that takes into account physical, emotion al and spiritual well-being as well as learning, being productive, and cultivating solid, healthy relationships with others.

"We know that this is only a sample of the good work being done in every Yukon community," Minister of Health and Social Services Doug Graham said. "It's wonderful to see what happens when people bring great ideas to life. It truly is inspiring."

Stories that Inspire also looks at what draws people to healthy activities, and what keeps them engaged and coming back for more. These include volunteer commitment, reducing barriers to participation, and making healthy choices easier. It looks at factors that build stronger communities, including partnerships, mentoring, skill building, and opportunities for employment.

As Pathways to Wellness executive director Paula Pas-quali explains, positive emotions are not transient experiences. "Gratitude, pride, joy and awe have long-term impacts on individuals and communities. Their benefits include increased creativity and productivity, openness to new ideas, and acceptance and empathy," she said.

"Our hope is that these stories will inspire others to take action. Small steps taken by many people add up to big changes in the health and well-being of Yukoners," Graham added.

The stories were collected by Yukon's Trish Newport, a student in the Masters of Public Health program at the University of Toronto. Newport travelled to rural communities last summer and visited places where people gather, such as cafés, garages and community markets. The ideas for the stories came from asking people what makes their community a great place to live.

The 2014 Percy de Wolfe Race is ready to take off

By Dan Davidson

According to Anna Claxton, with the Percy De Wolfe Race Committee, there's a fair amount of buzz about this year's race, and if everyone shows up that has talked about coming, this may be one to remember. Of course, the organizers never know for sure until the mushers' meeting, so there's always a surprise or two in store.

This year's races will be run on March 27, the week after the school's March Break, which means that there will be school classes there to watch the mushers take off, at least there will for the main race, which launches from outside the Old Post Office on King Street.

Street clearing is already taking place in Dawson, but the town will lay fresh snow on the route between the Post Office and the ferry landing for this event.

The teams will leave one at a time at two-minute intervals, starting at 10 a.m. with the departure of sled No. 1, the spirit of Percy himself. Sled No. 2 gets the honour of carrying a bag of memorial mail to Eagle.

Seasonal Clearances

Roof clearing is a sign of the changing season in Dawson City, where nighttime temperatures in the low minus 20s are bouncing up into single minus digits these days. Here, a worker scoops away the winter accumulation from the roof of Diamond Tooth Gerties while yellow caution tape warns people to beware of heavy falling snow. The worker wears a harness and tether to prevent a fall from the slippery surface.

The main race is a 210mile (338 km) run, mostly following the Yukon River, to Eagle, Alaska, and back. Running times for the race are generally between 20 and 30 hours. There's a mandatory 6 our layover in Eagle and a 2-hour break that must be take at either Fortymile or Eagle. Last year the first three teams all came back in under 24 hours running time.

The Percy Junior group runs down to Forty Mile and returns, about half the distance. There are two changes this year. The mass start will occur at 3 o'clock instead of the usual noon hour, and there will be just an 8-hour layover instead of an overnight stay. These changes are at the request of the mushers, who want the Junior to become more like the main race, with definite times and schedules.

Both sets of generally manage the return trip by late Friday afternoon, and the banquet is held on Saturday. This year the banquet moves back to the Oddfellows Hall, after having been bumped by conflicting events for a couple of years.

Technology has made the race more of a spectator sport in recent years and that will continue. Instead of just watching starting and finishing lines, you can see the progress of the teams in the main race on your computer, pad or other handheld device, anything that will surf the Internet.

"We have the spot tracking again this year," Claxton said, "which makes the race more fun to watch online." You can find it at http:// www.thepercy.com.

The Percy de Wolfe Memorial Mail Race began as a commemorative mail run in 1977, to honour the memory of the Iron Man Mail Carrier after whom it is named. De Wolfe carried the mail back and forth between the two towns in all kinds of weather from 1910 to 1949.

An open letter to the powers Youth Lip-Sync that be

By Jack Vogt

One of the things I do when we are in the grocery store is look at where all of our "fresh" foods come from. Chile, Mexico, South Africa, Israel and many places in-between. You would think that fresh food from so far away should be expensive, but it is cheap when we think of the many miles it has traveled. It is cheap for us, even here in Dawson, but there is a whole other cost that we do not see.

We have just returned from Mexico where we have gotten to know some of the people who work on the farms that produce some of the food that we eat every day, like tomatoes, grapes, oranges, and much more. What we have learned is that these people are often abused and taken advantage of. Their salary is very low, about $10 a day Canadian. This is not surprising, but it still is sad that those who work growing our food do not have enough to feed their families well.

These conditions make Canada seem like heaven for them and they want to come here to work. We have friends from Mexico that have come to Canada to work as farm labors. What a surprise for them when some things are not much better here. They may not be treated illegally, but the problem is how Canadian law allows farm workers to be treated. One of our Mexican friends told us of working up to 20 hours a day, with no overtime, and feeling that if he did not comply with his boss' wishes that he would be sent back. He described his work as being in a prison without walls. But it was all legal.

Allow me to quote from the Manitoba labour standards:

"What about employees who spend one season in climate controlled facilities, and the rest of the year working both indoors and outside?

If employees are hired to work partly outside on the farm and partly inside a climate controlled facility, they would not be entitled to minimum standards regarding overtime, hours of work, general holidays or wages for reporting to work.

"An example of this is an employee of a vegetable farm, who works outside tending to the crop for part of the year, and then works in a climate controlled facility during the winter for grading, packaging and shipping." (http://www.gov.mb.ca/labour/ standards/doc,ag_employee_standards,factsheet.html#q156)

Things only get worse for farm workers in Alberta and Nova Scotia. There they are not even covered by any safety standards:

Alberta and Nova Scotia are the only provinces where workplace safety standards don't apply to farms. In Alberta, farm owners don't have to be part of the workers' compensation program, and the government doesn't have to investigate fatalities like it does for other industries. Farm workers are also barred from unionizing. (http://www.canada.com/story.html?id=5beefccbc421-49d2-912f-bd2ffec1226c)

Conditions like these are what we would expect to find in third world countries but not Canada. I think it is time for the Federal Government to step in and put pressure on the provinces to change their farm labor laws and bring them in line with the other sectors.

Thank you for taking the time to make positive changes for those who bring us our daily bread.

HANK & FRIENDS

Local Psychic News & Advising by Hank

Hank is a local psychic adviser whose visionary gifts will help guide you to uncovering the mysteries of life. Ask him anything! Life, love, money, anything! Just remember - the truth hurts!

Hank's Birthday Horoscope: Aries (March 21 - April 20):

Something will happen this week that will pass the following week. Embrace it and then shed it off like a dead snakeskin. Don't be too disgruntled at something that changed that wasn't supposed to – Mercury is sending electric mind waves and your cup will be full once more!

Hank's Singles Romance Reading:

(Hank knows that Thaw-di-Gras was 'good' to many people in terms of 'romance'. Although he was out for a bit and doesn't actually want to think about it much.)

Hank's Lucky Number Forecast:

The lucky number for this week is 1065.

March 19, 2014

Ask Hank:

If you have questions requiring psychic answers, just ask Hank! Everything welcome. See disclaimer below.

Dear Hank

I would like to hear your love predictions for me. Leah

Dear Leah,

Your inner animal is the charismatic He-Goat. Be willing to take charge of your love life and manage your strong and erratic emotions. Any sense of confinement is self-imposed. Your own fears are the 'dragons at the gate' and you have a choice in creating a life that is blissful or blah. And sometimes it can only get better!

xo Hank

Dear Hank,

What is the average velocity of an unladen sparrow? Holly

Dear Holly,

We could do the obvious scientific analysis (and the answer is, in brief, really, really stinkin' fast), but this is not why you are writing me – you are more deeply searching for a connection to your inner beast. After doing several cleromancy readings for you (reading fortunes through the tossing of small, insignificant objects), your bits indicate that the High Priestess and the Devil are urging you. This is excellent news! But unfortunately I can't help you.

xo Hank

Dear Hank, How will I find true love? C.J.C

Dear C.J.C,

Your inner animals are a peculiar hybrid between a Mongoose and a Snake. These beasts are both naughty hyper-hypos and are in constant struggle, despite being of the same form. So basically, it's not looking good.

xo Hank

Celebrity Birthdays (March 19 - April 2):

Lady Gaga (#24), Mark the Undertaker Callaway (#194), Bruce Willis (#342), Celine Dion (#534), Elton John (#538), Diana Ross (#792), Vincent Van Gogh (#1043), Susan Boyle (#1070), Eric Clapton (#1160), Harry Houdini (#1207), Quentin Tarantino (#1302), M.C. Hammer (#1396), Johann Bach (#1366), Christopher Walken (#1602), Mr. Rogers (#1637), Robert Frost (#3696), Rodney King (#4853), Akira Kurosawa (#5746), Tommy Hilfiger (#6107), Rene Descartes (#7173), and David Suzuki (#10988).

Disclaimer: Please be advised that Hank does not necessarily believe anything he says. Hank does not necessarily answer questions he doesn't like or finds insignificant. Although Hank will give readings to people he doesn't like, the people receiving them might not like them. As a general rule, Hank tends to give better psychic fortunes after payment. Please be further advised that Hank is not responsible for anything. Particularly with regards to anything he says or does or how those actions are interpreted. Or anything.
