Communities gather in Dawson to discuss economic development

Seventy delegates to the 2014 Fall Conference of the Council of Northern Economic Developers gathered at the Odd Fellows Hall in Dawson City on Wednesday to begin their "Lessons Learned" conference.

They received a fulsome welcome to the community from Mayor Wayne Potoroka and from Darren Taylor, standing in for an ailing Chief Eddie Taylor, on behalf of the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in.

Keynote speaker for the day was Maury Forman, who spoke to the them 'Economic Development: Know it When you See it."

Most of the first day of the two and a half day event was taken up with reports from community speakers, each reflecting on the progress that has been made in the Yukon's communities.

Larry Bagnell addressed the efforts of the Watson Lake Economic Revitalization Commission, which is two years into its program and has focused on housing needs, a downtown revival, natural gas development and a district heating plan, as well as being several phases into a study on potential hydro development in the region.

Philip Fitzgerald, representing the Carcross Tagish Development Corporation, had a lot to tell the group about. The most visible achievement of the community has been the creation of the Carcross Commons commercial development, but the organization is also planning a residential expansion in the town and is involved in the creation of a high end wilderness resort quite close to the community. The biking trails on Montana Mountain have attracted a lot of international attention.

In the afternoon, Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Executive Director Jackie Olson outlined the nine bundled projects which were developed from the 31 initiatives identified in the First Nation's Regional Economic Development Plan, in cooperation with a coalition of other Klondike organizations, including the City of Dawson. These include revitalization of the Dawson downtown core, development of an application for UNESCO World Heritage Status, updating the Klondike Visitors Association's marketing plan, revival of the Palace Grand Theatre summer shows, an artists' market, a business advisor, a local procurement strategy and labour market development.

The final two community presentations were from Teslin and Burwash, communities which are just beginning to travel the economic development paths being travelled by the larger communities.

Carol Geddes represented Teslin's Deslin Development Corporation, which is just beginning, she said, to bring business to its area. Geddes was extremely positive about the conference.

"There's great value in hearing other people's stories," she said, encouraging the organization to hold more such meetings.

Geordan Clark, of the Kluane Development Corporation, described how his community had missed out on the potential benefits of the most recent staking rush because they had nothing in place to deal with economic opportunities.

"We're the toddler," Clark told the group. In terms of economic development "we're ten years behind."

Following those presentations the group divided into four breakout sections, meeting at the hall, Yukon College and the Legion Hall to discuss four topics and report back to the main group about an hour later. The sessions dealt with building local capacity, overcoming barriers to entrepreneurship in communities, motivating a workforce and engaging with resource development companies.

The day ended with a CNED annual general meeting.

OPINIONS

Uffish Thoughts: Amazing! They actually found a boat down there.

By Dan Davidson

great fan of our Prime Minister's decision to spend tons of money looking for the remains of Sir John Franklin's last expedition. It's not that I'm opposed in principle to attempts to fill in bits of pre-Canadian North American history. No, as with the obsessive interest in the British-American War of 1812-14, I objected to elevating that as a priority budget item at the same time as Mr. Harper's federal government was announcing massive cuts to Parks Canada and planning to slap padlocks on major Parks attractions here and elsewhere across the nation.

In all fairness to the current government, the decision to refer to the Franklin Expedition as Canada's Undiscovered National Historic Site - which seems to me kind of silly given all the sites that are "discovered", if you will - goes back to 1992 and belongs to the Mulroney administration.

Sir John himself is not so impressive a figure as all that. On his first Arctic expedition - an overland trek - he lost 11 of his 20 crew and those who survived were reduced to chewing on their footwear, earning Franklin the nickname "the man who ate his boots" well before Bishop Stringer earned a similar title.

There seems to be general agreement that his more adventurous second wife, a younger woman, persuaded him to head out once more when he was almost 60 years old. We don't know exactly why the expedition was a disaster, but we know they all died, and that he was gone well before the last of his crew left the boats and tried to walk to safety over the Arctic ice, hauling sledges piled high with a ridiculous assortment of ship's goods, much of which would have had no survival value whatsoever.

The Inuit told John Rae, about a decade later, that the sailors perished on the ice and the evidence indicated that the last of the living resorted to cannibalizing the dead. Even before those events, Lady Jane had launched (quite literally in some cases) numerous attempts to locate her missing husband and his expedition. There were more than 30 searches made over a number of years and the original tally of 128 lives lost was added to on many of those voyages.

Subsequent discoveries in 1997 proved that Rae's reports, and his Inuit sources, were correct. Some of the bodies showed the signs quite clearly. That should probably have been a really strong clue that Inuit oral history regarding the location of at least one of the ships could also be trusted, but it doesn't seem to have been.

That said, I am as impressed anyone else that they actually managed to find an intact ship on the sea bed. I fully expected that both boats had been crushed by the ice, and that any husband's name (though he remains above the water would have been scavenged over a

Yukon Documentary Premiers in Vancouver

Vancouver, BC – Sept 8, 2014 –

Dawson City filmmaker Suzanne Crocker's first feature documentary, All The Time In The World, will have its World Premiere on October 1, 2014 at the 33rd Annual Vancouver International Film Festival. The Vancouver International Film Festival is among the five largest film festivals in North America. David Suzuki calls All The Time In The World a "magnificent film with a powerful message to those of us who live busy urban lives. Anyone watching this film will have to ask, what is life all about, why am I in such a hurry, what is it that gives us true happiness. Thank you for making a film that demands that we answer those questions."

Film Synopsis:

In this deeply personal documentary, a family searches for a new perspective by leaving the comforts of home and taking their three children to live in the Yukon wilderness for nine months. They live remotely over the long Yukon winter in a small cabin with no road access, no electricity, no running water, no internet, no TV and, most importantly, no clocks or watches.

All The Time In The World explores the theme of disconnecting from our hectic and technology-laden lives in order to reconnect with each other, ourselves and our natural environment.

The Vancouver International Film Festival (VIFF) screens approximately 350 films over 16 days. VIFF presents one of the world's largest annual public exhibitions of new Canadian films. All The Time In The World was one of 31 Canadian feature films and one of 9 Canadian feature documentaries chosen to screen at VIFF this year.

Vancouver International Film Festival: www.viff.org/festival/series/canadian-images

All The Time In The World was also one of 15 feature film projects selected from across Canada for Telefilm Canada's 2014-2015 Microbudget Production Program.

Suzanne, a filmmaker from Dawson City, Yukon, switched careers from rural family physician to filmmaker in 2009. Her award winning short film Time Lines (2010) screened at film festivals in Canada, the US and Europe, and was selected for a National Film Board Filmmakers Assistance Grant.

Yukon Economic Developers Conference in Dawson City

WHITEHORSE— The Council of Northern Economic Developers, a non-profit society focused on developing skills and experience of Yukoners involved in economic development, is hosting a conference in Dawson City this fall.

"Our goal is to facilitate the sharing of experiences amongst economic development practitioners of what works and does not work, and dialogue around what we are all currently doing for our communities. We are looking forward to participation by development officers in communities and from First Nations, Yukon and the federal government, as well as municipal representatives and consultants", said Conference Chairman Norman Eady. Eady is also a director of the Council of Northern Economic Developers (CNED).

The keynote speaker is Maury Forman, Senior Manager for the Washington State Department of Commerce. His focus is on creating healthy downtowns and a culture of entrepreneurship in rural communities. He is a popular speaker in Western Canada and the Western US.

This is the third conference/workshop organized by CNED with support from the Yukon Government and CanNor. "We are grateful for the support we've received from Economic Development and CanNor over the past three years. It is gratifying to know that they understand the need to invest in developing the knowledge and skills of local economic development practitioners", added Michael Pealow, founding member and current Acting President.

Other speakers are involved in supporting economic development in their communities and will include: Brad Stoneman (Teslin), Cory Bellmore (Carmacks), Larry Bagnell (Watson Lake), Philip Fitzgerald (Carcross/Tagish), Mark Wickham (Dawson City) and Tom Lie (Faro).

Workshops will include topics on community revitalization, hubs for collaboration and innovation incubators, and ecological principles and the modern economy, community revitalization, and Yukon reflections on creating business opportunities.

More information is available on the conference website http://www.cned2014conference.com/and on CNED's own website http://ecdevnorth.org/.

On Sleepless Nights

By Nolan Boehm, Whitehorse

Dear reader:

It is only in desperation yet come. that I commit the following to ink, for I have tried with ever family, yet am always dismissed. I now can only submit this silent invocation to the masses.

Let it be known that the following is true, however history may remember. In reliving this, I see kare assuranceof my own sanity, but if it may be a boon to any other who has also spent much of their life in doubt of themselves, some good may

It starts with my sister.

A childhood fraught with waning resolve to make myself friction is no new thing, but it understood by friends and was Catherine's design that no other soul save myself would bear witness to the true venom of her cruelty. In the early years, my wails might bring Mother or Father running, but sister Catherine, in her innocuous fragility, would swiftly dispel any suspicions I aroused. Thus, as time went on, I grew forsaken, and Catherine's sadism found free reign.

To any outward appearances, she was as kind and loving as a sister ought to be, and she took great care that this was so. But oh how she tortured me! And humble I knew not the skills to rebuff her machinations, nor had I and protector to whom to turn. I was forced to bear it, and the cruel cycle perpetuated. Catherine grew up strong and bold, while I withered in fear and insomnia.

Insomnia yes, for I could never be assured of my safety, and in the dead of night, with our parents only a room away, Catherine would feed my terror and steal any sleep I might have been able to coax. For years we were made to share a room, despite any protest I might raise. Catherine would always seem to know when Mother and Father had at last fallen asleep, and then she would take full advantage of our solitude. On these most dreadful of nights, whenever she was feeling most murderous she would creep out of her bed and glide across the room like a phantom. Even when I strained my senses to anticipate her coming, I was never quick enough to stop one icy hand from closing around my mouth and stifling my scream, or the other from grasping my throat.

Then she was upon me, holding me down with a strength belied by her slight frame. Her eyes would blaze in the darkness with some ancient hatred as from hers and deliver her grim assurance time and time again. Her voice was always cool, calm nature of her character. and quiet, but I never had any trouble catching every word.

"One day, Amelia, I am going there will be no one to help you. I will kill you and dispose of you so that not a trace is left on this Earth. No one will suspect; none shall show remorse. Mother and Father will secretly be glad to be rid of you. You are a pest and a burden. And with the passing of time, everyone will forget. You will be erased, Amelia. I will erase you. Sleep now while you can, the long sleep of death awaits."

I shudder, even now, to think of the terror that encompassed my soul at these moments. When she finally would release me and float back to her bed I could do naught but hug myself and sob silently in the darkness. I could never sleep. What had I ever done in a past life to deserve so callous and wicked a daemon as this for a sister?

Catherine would always sleep soundly. On normal nights she would present such a beautiful lovely mirror of our Mother as everyone always said; but on nights like this she slept with her eyes open. I knew because I could see them gleaming at me from across the room, her face mocking my terror with a slight, wry smile that played at the my sister. I could never sleep little consolation, because then Catherine would face the day vibrant and beautiful as ever, as if she had not just shared in a sleepless night. Perhaps she gained vitality in my terror.

As time went on, these nights gradually grew in frequency and intensity, and it wore on my sanity. I only had one glimmer of hope, one thought that kept me going on. Soon I was to graduate, and emancipated, I might leave this foul place behind me. Any obscure hardship awaiting me in the wide world hardly seemed worse than this.

Finally the day at me from the front row and clapping harder than anyone. I could just hear the thoughts of all our neighbors and relatives, praising her for supporting her vounger sister, their pity for me dissolving when they saw how when she caught my gaze briefly, she would pull my face inches that so evil of grins flashed across her face once more and betrayed for an instant the true

I shuddered suddenly, for it occurred to me that she might know all about my prospects of to kill you. You may cry out but flight. A chill ran up my spine at the thought that this might all fit right into her plans. The fear swelled. My hand shook as I reached for the diploma that was supposed to be my ticket to freedom.

> Indeed, her intentions became known that night. Our parents were dressing for a party at the neighbors, supposedly in my honor. "We will go ahead, and you can make your entrance later, with your sister if you like. Catherine says too that she has a surprise for you..."

> At this I abandoned all pretense. I pleaded with my parents, begged them to not leave me alone. Of course I met with dismissal. They only told me to act like the lady I was supposed to be growing into. I collapsed into submission, and they were out the door without another word, leaving me alone as always.

But this time was different. and sanguine form, as much a I was alone now, for how long I knew not, but I was determined to oppose, if I could, Catherine's vile intentions. As to their nature I had no doubt, and the only thought now my exhausted mind could conceive was that she might not expect much of a fight, having worn me down corners of her mouth. In these over the years so. Immediately moments I no longer recognized I took any possessions I thought I might need and threw them knowing that she was watching into a small suitcase. I needed to me, and so the mornings brought travel light, but I also got out two more suitcases and threw them into the fire. In also went more clothes, shoes and books, the bounty of my youth. I thought I might convince Catherine I was more laden down than I actually was, thus affect her direction while looking for me. If she went first to the train station I might actually make my escape.

This deed done, I broke briefly and thought on what to do, but presently, exhaustion rose up in my mind like a fog and I almost gave in. Clearly I was in no state to travel, but now was my chance to away. came. What to do? I had needles in my Striding across the stage at eyes, and badly needed sleep. my graduation, I only received My best thought was if I could a smattering of applause, no hide myself, I might convince more than I expected, but then everyone I had left, be able to there was Catherine, beaming rest, and still make my escape before any could pin me down. Maybe ... I would need luck. My plan was far from sound, but the lateness of the hour afforded me little option.

I made my way into the attic and barred the door behind me. lovely and supportive a sibling Huddled in a corner, it was not I had. But then that has been long before I heard the front Catherine's design all along, for door of the house open and close. I held my breath.

I awoke with a start, and a feeling that I was not alone. One glance at the attic door, still barred, did little to quell my beating heart. I was no longer at ease. I knew I wasn't alone here in the darkness. I could see my breath rising in fog, the air felt sweetly. much too chill for the summer night I knew it to be.

All at once I felt a tremendous weight on my chest. My first thought was it must be Catherine, but I could see no one there! Still I felt this terrible pressure on me, and slowly too, the sickening touch of long, thin fingers closing around my

With this she kissed me on the forehead gently, I was surprised at the warmth of her embrace. I heard her pass someone in the hall who must have been the doctor. He praised her in a deep voice for being such a caring sibling. "Oh yes," Catherine replied, "We have always been the best of friends..."

The Ghosts of Dawson

I looked at them and smiled. and said, "I don't believe in ghosts or even monsters," and so I took my leave.

I went on every tour, exploring every street. I listened to the stories, my God, they were so neat!

I ended up at Gerties, a dance hall of renown. but damn. I was so tired. I'd walked the whole darn town.

In Gerties, wine was flowing, the black jack game was but later on that evening I knew that I was done.

I lay back down and shuddered, then covered up my head, and prayed that, come the morning, I'd still be in my bed.

I often think about it, that night in Dawson town. How many ghosts there could be, still wandering around.

Robert Service School Runs for Terry once again

By long tradition the staff and students of the Robert Service School spend part of a Friday in early September doing a Run for Terry along the Dyke Trail beside the waterfront.

During the earlier part of the Winning team flushed with success at Outhouse Race

Story & Photos By Dan Davidson

The last day of August is a trifle early for the Great Klondike International Outhouse Race, but it does take place on the Sunday afternoon of Labour Day weekend and that's just how the calendar worked out this year.

The numbers for the race were down somewhat this year. Paul Robitaille said that five teams had registered, but that two had dropped out and then another had entered at the last minute, so four teams was the total

The program was somewhat the same as last year, with a few changes. Gone is the mass start of earlier years. Instead there was a trivia contest to determine which of the four teams would be matched with another for one of two run-off heats.

The catch was that the losers in each trivia event had to suffer some sort of "humiliation" involving shaving soap, chocolate syrup, baby powder or coloured dye.

Following this the teams presented their chants and cheers and that the races began. The second big change was an obstacle course located on the final lap of the one block run.

The teams had to dig through two buckets of dirt in the Sewer Diver, in search of three golden coins. Then they had to weave through the gauntlet in the Golden Egg run, with the outhouse's passenger holding an egg balanced on a spoon.

Obstacle number three required one of the team members to eat a "Cowpie" without using their hands to the point where they could read the word written on the bottom of the tin plate. Last of all was the TP Toss, in which a team member had to knock down two balanced toilet plungers by tossing toilet paper rolls at them.

The first heat featured the Turds of a Feather (with two members from New York) against the Safety Turds, with the latter team setting out strongly and navigating the obstacles well ahead of their feathered opponents.

The second heat pitted the Philosophers' Throne against the Potty Mamas. It wasn't a close running race and once the Philosophers dropped an egg and had to start the Golden Run over the Mamas were the clear winners.

The Potty Mamas team was made up of Gertie's Girls and Boys and this group, in various incarnations, has won most of these races for the last 7 or 8 years, so they were the odds on favorite in the deciding race against the Safety Turds. Indeed, they were running away with it until they hit the gauntlet, where their opponents made up the distance, passed them, and went on to win the race.

That left the Safety Turds, with some members hailing from the United Kingdom and Florida as the winners of the

The Mamas were selected by the crowd as the Peoples' Choice winners.

All the groups were winners of a sort, with gift certificates from the various hotel restaurants in town.

The Potty Mommas took the lead over the Safety Turds in the running, but lost in the gauntlet.

Commentary: PM's token northern tours solve no problems

By Yvonne Jones

As another summer comes to a close, Stephen Harper embarked on a six-day trip to parts of northern Canada in an attempt to portray his government as one that supports our northern communities and developments.

Sadly, those of us who live in northern Canada are all too familiar with his attitude that a yearly trip, lasting less than a week in the middle of summer, is enough to solve the challenges northerners face.

I would like to take the time and address some of the key challenges that must be solved by the federal government.

I have spoken about the inadequate food security in our North, which is causing Canadian children and families to grow up eating non-nutritious frozen fast-food in place of fresh fruits and vegetables.

This has led to protests in many communities against the government's Nutrition North Program, which is failing to meet the needs, as well as against some grocery stores which are selling food that has high markups and is months past its best-before date.

Thankfully, Canada's Auditor General is currently reviewing the program and will provide valuable insight into how the federal government is so poorly managing this department.

A second major concern is the dire infrastructure needs for northern communities and for resource development.

Leaders in all three territories and other northern parts of the country, such as my own district of Labrador, have been very clear about the infrastructure challenges they are facing, and what the government can do to address

Many communities are only accessible by plane year-round, and the runways and airports for these communities are in disrepair.

The large majority of airstrips are still unpaved, and many are for aircraft equipped only for Short Takeoff and Landing

This limits the type of aircraft available and the amount of cargo and passengers that can be accommodated.

This past winter, we witnessed colder than usual temperatures, which kept supply ships tied up for longer than normal.

This in turn led to food and supply shortages in many communities.

The aircraft left to handle deliveries were smaller Twin Otters that had to make multiple deliveries and left many items deemed nonessential, like toilet paper, off the cargo manifest.

A byproduct of the lack of paved roads and runways is that many new development projects are nearing approval but lacking the necessary infrastructure to make these projects a reality.

This represents lost opportunities for revenue and employment in the three territories and northern parts of some provinces.

It is a shame to see major developments not go forward due to the federal government's unwillingness to work with firms in order to build the access routes and improve existing infrastructure in northern Canada.

It is also important to understand that development must take place in such a manner that it does not contaminate our beautiful wilderness or harm the wildlife that has provided food for many generations.

Another area of concern is the lack of judgment the prime minister has shown with regards to our Arctic sovereignty.

While he has waxed poetic about our Arctic sovereignty in the last few years, we now know that this is mostly for his own political benefit.

While his Foreign Affairs minister makes speeches around the world about our Arctic claims, the scientists and other government officials who are working on these claims are left scrambling to find the data that will line up with the political statements being given.

This approach does not give other countries involved in this process the appearance that our federal government knows what it is doing, and that it is accurately preparing a claim with supporting data that will succeed in confirming our view of how far our sovereignty extends in the North.

Canada and northern Canadians need a prime minister to govern responsibly in our North.

It is time to dispense with the political statements and grandiose speeches each summer, and instead work with local communities and leaders to set and work towards meaningful aims.

We cannot afford to see another deep-sea port announced that never gets built.

We cannot afford to patch up 45-year-old icebreakers instead of looking at an open bidding process for new ones.

We cannot afford to leave our roads and runways unpaved.

We cannot afford to leave nutritious foods off the shelves in some parts of the country.

The challenges are plentiful. The solutions are available.

It is time the prime minister takes this region seriously and invests in the future of northern Canada.

Sights and Sounds at the Oddfellows Hall

By Dan Davidson

As film maker Dan Sokolowski noted at the beginning of September 8's KIAC event, Dawson City has some definite advantages over many small towns.

"It's an amazing place where there are so many great musicians, great visual artists and great film makers," he said.

Of course he couldn't resist a healthy dose of self-deprecating humour.

"The big question was always 'when are the three greatest ones of all of those going to get together and do something?' Tonight's not the night."

What this night was, was a showcase for the musical duo of John Ostrander and Aaron Burnie, who perform as Three Chords and the Truth, as well as a showing of four short films from Sok Cin-

There was some collaboration as well, since Ostrander and Burnie provided the musical soundtrack for Sokolowski's latest

The evening began with about 45 minutes from Three Chords and the Truth, whose music was suited to old-fashioned feeling of some of the films and which concluded with a live version of "Eh to Zed", which the audience would hear again later in the evening.

From Sok Cinema there were four films advertised as road trips.

Land of the Pines was a five minute short in film and animation dealing with different kinds of pine trees, the spoken words celebrating the pines of Algonquin Park and a whole lot of business names that contain the word pine.

From the Ashes was a four minute look at the Klondike Highway, organized according to the road signs that the Dept. of Highways put up a few years ago to commemorate the various forest fires that have marked the landscape. Sokolowski animated the fires, but had the camera linger on the new growth rising from the ashes. Music for this film was by George McConkey, from his CD, Tin and Bone.

Stone Bruise was another four minute road trip. This time all the live footage, augmented by animation, was shot on the Dempster Highway, but focussed through the cracked windshield of a fairly typical Yukon vehicle.

Eh to Zed was the longest of the films, at 11 minutes. It was inspired by the Grand Trunk Railway's rule for naming the railway sidings on its route across the Prairies. There were 93 altogether and they were named in alphabetical order, from A to Z, repeating the pattern until all were accounted for.

Sokolowski's notes indicate his theme: "EH TO ZED illustrates the effects of nature and time on man-made objects across a landscape. 55 of these railstops and sidings were located and recorded on digital image, HD video and black and white hand processed 16mm film."

Sometimes the images were crisp and clear, sometimes they had been animated and sometimes they were deliberately scratchy, as if they were archival footage.

In the accompanying song, Three Chords and the Truth managed to work in all the names of the sidings that appeared in the film; an interesting challenge for sure.

Franklin Ship located in the Arctic

Ottawa, Ontario September 9, 2014

Prime Minister Stephen Harper today issued the following statement to announce the discovery of one of the ships belonging to the ill-fated Franklin Expedition which was lost in 1846:

"I am delighted to announce that this year's Victoria Strait Expedition has solved one of Canada's greatest mysteries, with the discovery of one of the two ships belonging to the Franklin Expedition lost in 1846.

"Although we do not know yet whether the discovery is Her Majesty's Ship (HMS) Erebus or HMS Terror, we do have enough information to confirm its authenticity. This find was confirmed on Sunday, September 7, 2014, using a remotely operated underwater vehicle recently acquired by Parks Canada.

"This is truly a historic moment for Canada. Franklin's ships are an important part of Canadian history given that his expeditions, which took place nearly 200 years ago, laid the foundations of Canada's Arctic sovereignty.

"I would like to congratulate and pay tribute to all partners involved in this year's momentous Victoria Strait Expedition, including Parks Canada, the Royal Canadian Geographical Society (RCGS), the Arctic Research Foundation (ARF), the Canadian Coast Guard (CCG), the Royal Canadian Navy and the Government of Nunavut. This discovery would not have been possible without their tireless efforts over the years, as well as their commitment, dedication and the perseverance of the many partners and explorers involved.

"Our Government has been deeply committed to finding HMS Erebus and HMS Terror, which were Canada's only undiscovered national historical site. Since 2008, there have been six major Parks Canada-led searches for the lost Franklin Expedition ships, pain-stakingly covering many hundreds of square kilometres of the Arctic seabed. It is gratifying that the ship's remains were found during the Government-supported 2014 Victoria Strait Expedition.

"Finding the first vessel will no doubt provide the momentum – or wind in our sails – necessary to locate its sister ship and find out even more about what happened to the Franklin Expedition's crew."

The History of the 1845 Franklin Expedition and His Lost Ships, Her Majesty's Ship Erebus and Her Majesty's Ship Terror,

On May 19, 1845, the Royal Navy ships Her Majesty's Ship (HMS) Erebus and HMS Terror departed Greenhithe, England, on a much-heralded Arctic expedition in search of a Northwest Passage. Under the command of Sir John Franklin, with Captain Francis Rawdon Crozier second in command, the expedition's two ships set out with a total complement of 134 officers and men. HMS Erebus and HMS Terror were converted bomb vessels of 372 and 325 tons respectively, and both had already seen prior service in polar exploration, with the latter also having seen service during the War of 1812. They were stoutly-built and soundly reinforced for operation in the ice, equipped with novel auxiliary-steam screw propulsion systems, fitted expressly for the expedition, and lavishly provisioned for a voyage of up to three years. Sir John Franklin's orders were to traverse the passage and return to England without delay via the Pacific. The expedition was also expected to conduct a variety of zoological, botanical, magnetic, and geological survevs.

The last Europeans to have contact with HMS Erebus and HMS Terror were the crews of two whaling vessels, the Enterprise and the Prince of Wales. Conversations during this chance meeting in August 1845, between the Expedition leaders and the Captains of the whaling ships, indicated that Franklin was waiting for an opportunity to cross Baffin Bay to Lancaster Sound. However, after entering the eastern Arctic Archipelago later that season and enjoying initial success, the promising expedition soon began to falter. Indeed, except for some encounters with the Inuit, the crews of the vessels were never seen again.

The disappearance of the Franklin Expedition set off a massive search effort in the Arctic and the broad circumstances of the Expedition's fate were not revealed until 1859 when Lieutenant William Hobson of the steam yacht Fox, a vessel privately chartered by the indomitable Lady Jane Franklin, found a sombre message left in a cairn on Victory Point, King William Island.

The message revealed that both ships had become trapped in ice in late 1846 and had remained so for approximately one and a half years. It indicated Franklin had died on June 11, 1847, while an additional 23 crew members had similarly perished under unknown circumstances. On April 22, 1848, the 105 remaining survivors deserted the ships and recorded their intention to proceed on foot in the direction of Back's Fish River. The entire complement of both ships perished and HMS Erebus and HMS Terror were lost to the ice. While the message revealed the general vicinity of the two vessels at the time of their abandonment, neither wreck location is currently known.

In 1992, the Government of Canada declared the missing wrecks to be a national historic site. This designation came about as a result of their association with Franklin's last Expedition, and their role in the history of exploration of Canada's North and the development of Canada as a nation.

Remembering the Lost Patrol of 1911

Story & Photos By Dan Davidson

Keith and Muriel Billington have very fond memories of their life in the Northwest Territories in the mid to late 1960s, so much so that Keith has been churning out books about them ever since the early part of the present century, beginning with House Calls by Dogsled (Harbour Publishing, 2008) and continuing with Cold Land, Warm Hearts (Harbour Publishing, 2010).

After immigrating from the United Kingdom and training in Halifax, the couple lived for six years in Fort McPherson, from which base he (as a nurse) and she (as a mid-wife) provided medical services to a number of outlying communities, including a number of families who lived in the bush - hence the title of the first book.

Billington explained this to his audience of about 15 folks at the Dawson Community Library on September 2. He was in town, with Muriel this time, on a tour to promote his latest northern memoir. The Last Patrol: Following the Trail of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police's Legendary Lost Patrol (Caitlin Press).

His first book contained some part of this tale of the 1969 reenactment of the Fitzgerald Patrol of 1911, organized to help celebrate the NWT's centennial.

The object was to recreate the trip - "except for the dying," he said with a chuckle - as perhaps the last trip by dogsled before the much ballyhooed Dempster Highway would be completed. They could have waited a few more years, since the Dempster wasn't officially opened until 1979, but the next time a group decided to recreate that trip they used snow machines.

The Billingtons both love the north and the rural lifestyle, and they now live in the country outside Prince George, where they continue to use snowmobiles and skis in the winter, while summers are for camping and kayaking.

For this trip they travelled in an extended cab truck, towing a small "bubble type" travel trailer, and giving themselves a break in hotels every few days.

On this tour, they did public readings in Fort McPherson, the Tombstone Interpretive Centre, Dawson and Mayo. Keith provided a slideshow narrative of the main events in his book, with short readings from some sections.

His audience, about half locals and half visitors, were enthusiastic listeners and there was a lot of discussion after the show.

Following the events in the book, the Billingtons relocated to Vancouver for some years. By 1988 he was the band manager for the Tse-loh-ne from the Sekani First Nation and took part in another long trek, which he has recorded in Tse-loh-ne -The People at the End of the Rocks: a Journey Down the Davie Trail (Caitin Press).

TWENTY YEARS AGO IN THE SUN

Dawson City, Yukon

A very poetic issue

Are Dawson businesses counting summer over too soon?

by Caroline Murray

Although the store's hours are posted 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., it's ten o'clock in the morning and the sign still reads "CLOSED".

Chris Sorg, owner of Maximilians Gold Rush Emporium, says he's annoyed at businesses not keeping posted hours.

"We noticed visitors coming into our store and asking us when a certain business opens because it's not open at that hour," said Sorg.

After Discovery Day weekend, it's normal for hours to be cut-back as the tourism season winds down and seasonal workers leave

"This year, on the back end of the season, it seems many more businesses than normal have reduced their hours or closed entirely," said Sorg.

Babett Lavalee, the manager of Marina's Restaurant, said she had to reduce hours and available seating after 22 of her 26 employees left to return to school. The remaing half of the restaurant was still doing a packed business. As a result, the restaurant had to turn away many potential customers during the busy Labour Day Weekend.

"They were mad and pissed-off, but what could we do?" said Lavalee. "Since Aug. 20 all my staff left. I put an ad at Outreach and had no response. Next year I'm going to ask the staff right away, 'when are you leaving?'

Elaine Cowan, from Peabody's hoto Portrait Parlour, sa sales after Discovery Days meant reducing hours and closing Sun-

Heather Klassen, owner of the 98 Drive-In, closed up her restaurant completely on Aug. 31 after she said business was "pathetically

"It ticks me right off," said Peggy Amendola, who works at the Visitor's Reception Centre. "This is happening throughout the whole territory. It's an age old problem of we're out promoting the shoulder season and people are closing Amendola says the KVA works to extend the season by opening Diamond Tooth Gertie's and the Palace Grand earlier in the spring and closing them later in the fall. Events like the recent outhouse race and dart contest are KVA events intended to lure visitors to

"Tourism is the number one industry," said Amendola. "The outhouse race was designed 18 years ago to extend the season. The Dart Tournament is this weekend and the dart people coming from Alaska have Yukon dollars to Sorg says efforts have allso been made to jump-start the tour ism season earlier. This year the Gold Show Committee decided to bump the show up one week earlier.

"I think it got things going sooner for that weekend, only, the following week was still a challenge," said Sorg.

Sorg said there's been talk about starting a couple of new spring events, like another baseball tournament and a country music jam-

Donna VanBakel was a recent visitor from Newmarket, Ontario, problems with stores deciding to close early or reduce their hours.

"We noticed some stones were closed," said VanBakel, "but there were enough stores open that it wasn't a problem."

Pre-Election Madness Begins Early Webster Challenges for Mayor's Job

by Dan Davidson

While there are still two weeks left before he can actually file nomination papers, Art Webster has officially announced that he is seeking the office of mayor in Dawson. The former NDP MLA cheerfully confirmed that the ru-mour circulating around town was "not a rumour but a statement of

"I feel I have something to offer, some knowledge, some expe-rience," he said. After losing to Clark Ashley in the 1982 territorial election, Webster turned to municipal politics and served one two year as a councilor from 1984-85. During the last year of that term, he ran again for territorial office and was successful. For most of the first term of the New Democratic Party government Webster was a Cont'd on p. 2

by Dan Davidson Well, it's official. Peter Jenkins announced yesterday that he will be running for another term as mayor of Dawson City. He was first elected to the office on April 3, 1980 and has since held it in perpetuity. While Jenkins is sometimes termed high-handed and has been investigated twice this term for failing to consult with the other members of his council before taking action on certain undertakings in the community, no one has ever accused him of taking his position lightly. As mayor, he puts in long hours, and brings to the job a wealth of knowledge and an ability to simplify issues. That he sometimes makes things more complex than others care to see them is a result of his tendency to forge linkages between seemingly unrelated issues

Jenkins has always maintained that it's easy to have everyone on your side and no one mad at you. ingness to do nothing.

In spite of "Peter the Pirate" okes and lots of vocal opposition from people who sometimes attend council meetings, Jenkins has not been seriously challenged for the position for some time, and always wins handily over his opponents.

The Sun obtained funding in late 2009 from the City of Dawson, YTG's Heritage Branch and the Community Development Fund to conserve and archive early issues and make them available once again in the public domain. This is a great resource for students, writers and historians, and also for prospective tourists with an interest in Dawson City's life. Hospital Corp's AGM's low attendance thought to be a vote of confidence

Hospital Corp's AGM's low attendance thought to be a vote of confidence By Dan Davidson September 13, 2014 - 596 words -

What can you assume if you hold an annual general meeting in a town where such meetings have not always been pleasant and no one shows up? Well, almost no one. The local press person was on time and another citizen wandered in 19 minutes or so later on, but considering the turnout at previous meetings, this is just about no

Yukon Hospital Corporation Chair Craig Tuton chose to interpret the attendance as a sign that most Dawsonites were happy with the way the Dawson City Community Hospital and Health Services Facility has functioned since its opening last December.

Only the first four months of that operation are covered in the YHC's annual report, but the corporation feels the facility is well on its way to equaling the annual statistics at the Watson Lake Community Hospital at the other end of the territory.

When the report was prepared, there had been 28 admissions to the 24/7 hospital during its 97 patient days, for an occupancy rate of 14.6%. On the other hand, there had been 538 emergency visits, the lab had been used 574 times and the imaging facilities 158.

Watson Lake's comparative figures were 176 admissions, 817 patient days, 37.3 occupancy, 2,119 emergency visits, 1,755 lab uses and 346 imaging uses. Watson Lake had been open nearly twice as long as Dawson.

"We've delivered a product we are proud of," Tuton said. "We thank the people of the City of Dawson for being so vocal and standing up for their concerns. They were listened

The boulder mounted plaque honouring Father William H. Judge, who founded Dawson's first hospital, has been relocated to a prominent place next to the main entrance of the hospital. A memorial wall inside the building was to have been established, and Tuton, who recalled promising that this would be done, didn't know exactly why it had not, but promised to look into the matter.

The was a pledge made after the board rejected a community led vote to name the new facility after Father Judge and go with a name similar to the one used in Watson Lake.

Maureen Turner, Director

corporation, indicated that the original temporary mounted display that was on the wall during the opening ceremonies, had failed to hold together and needed to be replaced. In the meantime the painting of Father Judge is upstairs in the Community Health Centre.

In addition to the Hospital Services and the Community Health Centre, the building houses the Dawson Medical Clinic and its associated retail pharmacy.

Dr. Gerard Parsons, the head of the clinic, expressed his personal thanks to the YHC board for its commitment to improving health services in Dawson.

Tuton noted that in many ways the building was much more of a community health facility (hence the addition to the name) than it was a full fledged hospital, and added that it is still lacking the First Nations Health Care component that is part of its long range plan. This is still being worked on, he said.

The meeting, held in the second floor meeting room in the hospital, was brief.

MEDIA ADVISORY

Results of Wildlife Act charges heard in court August 26th

(August 26, 2014) – Territorial Judge Peter Chisholm ordered a B.C. resident to pay a total of $15,000.00 and a Montana resident to pay a total of $11,500.00 to the Yukon Fish and Game Association TIPPS fund after they pleaded guilty to charges arising from a hunt held off the South Canol Road in 2011.

The matters were originally set for four days of trial commencing August 26th. The sentences imposed were based on a joint recommendation from the Crown and the two B.C.-based defence counsel.

The B.C. resident, a licenced guide in Yukon at the time, was guiding the non-resident Wyoming hunter back in 2011. They were accompanied by two other men, including a cameraman, and the hunter killed a caribou, sheep, moose and grizzly bear on a remote

The caribou was photographed within minutes of the group landing by airplane to begin the hunt and was hunted and killed within about 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ hours after landing rather than the required 6 hours following their flight. The six-hour rule is aimed at ensuring fair chase and the offence is commonly referred to as hunting by aircraft. The hunter and guide initially claimed that the caribou was harvested the day after the party landed.

In addition, all the meat from the caribou and some of the meat from the sheep and moose was wasted.

The guide pleaded guilty to wasting the meat from a caribou, sheep and moose and to hunting by aircraft. In addition to the fines, the guide is prohibited from hunting or guiding in Yukon for 20 years.

The accompanying Wyoming hunter was fined $11,500.00 for wasting the meat of a moose and sheep and for hunting by aircraft. He is also prohibited from hunting in Yukon for 10 years. The hunter withdrew his application for return of the wildlife seized and all wildlife, including the trophies from the caribou, sheep, grizzly bear and moose seized by Conservation Officers in 2011 were ordered forfeit.

Conservation Officers remind the public that Wildlife Act and Environment Act violations can be reported confidentially at any time to the TIPP line (1-800-661-0525) or www.env.gov.yk.ca/tipp.

Mental health first aid course has been adapted for northerners

Press Release

The Mental Health Commission of Canada launched its adapted Mental Health First Aid (MHFA) course at the commission's annual general meeting in Yellowknife earlier this summer.

The Yukon's Department of Health and Social Services' mental health services branch officials were part of a pan-territorial working group that helped the commission develop MHFA for Northern Peoples, a first aid course adapted specifically for people living in northern Canada.

"Developing a course with northern culture in mind shows the Mental Health Commission of Canada is dedicated to helping people in various regions across Canada," Health and Social Services Minister Doug Graham said last month.

The Yukon government and the Northern Institute of Social Justice, Yukon College, will continue. to work in partnership and offer the course tailored for our northern context."

The MHFA for Northern Peoples course recognizes northern life, peoples and related experiences. It will be an asset for anyone interested in helping someone who is experiencing mental health symptoms or working with high-risk individuals.

This year, the course was offered to the public in Whitehorse and to students in the Home Management Support Essential Skills Program at the Yukon College campus in Haines Junction.

In addition to public offerings, the course can be delivered to organizations upon request. It will be delivered to students in the Yukon College Home Support program in Dawson City, Oct.

Seats in this training session will also be available for the public. Other course offerings will be advertised throughout the year.

"Work of all parties, particularly the pan-territorial community-based advisory committee, should be clearly acknowledged and celebrated," Graham added.

In recent years, the Northern Institute of Social Justice, at Yukon College, offered the standard twoday Mental Health First Aid course.

The newly adapted three-day course is based on the standard course as well as highlighting the challenges of living in remote and isolated communities.

By looking at the main elements of health, course participants will be taught to identify—and temporarily deal with—someone who is exhibiting mental health symptoms or experiencing a mental health crisis until a higher level of help can be obtained.

The institute handles training requests and will offer the course to the public twice per year and upon request by groups of interested individuals or workplaces.
