Dawson's new fire truck will benefit West Dawson and Sunnydale

Fire practice night was a little unusual on October 8, as the evening was given over to a community BBQ and the inaugural appearance of the Klondike's new $310,000 fire truck.

"For people who live across the river in West Dawson and Sunnydale," said Fire Chief Jim Regimbal, "this truck is for you."

"For those who don't know, last year we had a fire in Sunnydale and someone did pass away, so that kind of sped up the process of getting this truck here.

"It's a compressed air foam system truck, so along with water and foam you have air introduced. There's a 300 gallon holding tank of water, but with the air and foam you get about ten times (the effect) more, so it's like 3000 gallons of water working properly.

"This truck will better service places where the driveways are too narrow for our fire trucks to get up in some places."

The same could be said for some of the driveways and access streets in the Dome subdivisions, as well as in Rock Creek, Bear Creek and Henderson's Corner, so it will be useful for the entire Klondike region.

Specially designed and sized to be useful across the river where the roads are narrow and there are no fire hydrants, the truck is what Mayor Wayne Potoroka called" the cherry on top of Dawson's new mutual-aid agreement with the Yukon Government that reaffirms our partnership with the Klondike Valley Fire Department and now extends the town's fireprotection assistance to our neighbours across the river in West Dawson."

Both Regimbal and Potoroka had a long list of folks who helped to make this new "initial attack vehicle" a reality.

The working committee that designed the features for the type of truck that was needed was made up of Buffalo Taylor, Gerry Crayford, Eric Blattler, and Chris Cleland. Fort Garry Fire Trucks, out of Winnipeg, made the design a reality.

"Kudos to CAO Jeff Renaud and Fire Chief Jim," said the Mayor, "who made sorting out the details of this partnership a priority and whose vision for community security keeps finding better ways to keep us all safe.

"And thank you to Yukon Government Community Services Minister Brad Cathers and the Yukon Fire Marshal's Office, especially Fire Marshall Dennis Berry and Deputy Fire Marshall Kevin Taylor they are truly partners in our greater community's wellbeing."

Harkening back to the events of the tanker rollover the previous week, and the sterling service rendered by everyone involved in that, Potoroka continued.

"Most of all, a huge thank you to the men and women of the Dawson City

Firefighters' Association and Klondike Valley
Fire Department. This partnership does not work without them. We politicians can sign all the agreements we want; those agreements mean nothing without their commitment to everyone's welfare."

Following speeches and food, the official launch of the truck concluded with a hose cutting ceremony and a community photo.

Premier is content to obey Ottawa's orders

By Sandy Silver Klondike MLA

In January, I issued a news release calling on the premier to go public with secret negotiations he was conducting with the Government of Canada on changes to the Yukon Environmental and Socio-economic Assessment Act.

The premier ignored my suggestion then and when I raised the issue during the spring sitting of the Yukon legislature.

On April 30, I predicted the Cathers/Pasloski government's "My way or the highway" approach would once again strain relations between public and First Nation governments.

In the legislature, I noted the Yukon Party only wants to work with one group – the Conservatives in Ottawa.

I asked the premier to make the secret amendments public. He refused.

I asked the minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. He also refused.

I asked, "Why has the Government of Yukon decided to go it alone, instead of working with the Yukon First Nation governments to come up with a united position to present to Ottawa?"

That question still stands.

Given the magnitude of these changes, I find it hard to believe the government didn't bother to share its knowledge and resources with First Nations.

The Yukon Forum would have been an ideal place to come up with a united approach to Ottawa. The Government of Yukon didn't even try.

And today, the fruits of this government's unilateral approach to First Nations relations have led to more division and the threat of yet another court case.

It is unfortunate that after three years in office, the government continues to demonstrate a complete inability to work with First Nation governments.

At the same time, the premier seems content and even pleased to do whatever is asked of him by his conservative masters in Ottawa.

At the very least, the Senate of Canada should hold a public hearing in the Yukon so the public can have their say on this bill.

If the government was really interested in working with First Nation governments, it would urge its Conservative colleagues to withdraw the bill to allow for more discussions to occur.

That is unlikely to happen, given the government's track record of siding with Ottawa instead of Yukoners time and again over the last three years.

A House Concert in Stereo

It's hard to imagine Carli and Julie Kennedy on a stage. It's not that they wouldn't perform well. The twin sisters are naturals at that, great at putting an audience at ease, getting them to sing along and enjoying the show in front of them. It's just that the two move around so much that having to work shackled to the limitations of a microphone must be more difficult for them than the space in Peter Menzies' living room.

Still, their online videos sometimes have them sitting down (just barely) so it must be possible.

They'd worked their way up through the Yukon with concerts in Whitehorse, Crag Lake, Marsh Lake, Atlin, Haines Junction, Mendenhall, Mary Lake, Mayo and Pelly Crossing as part of their Yukon Trail Home Routes Tour, which would send them to Old Crow and Inuvik before it was done.

In Dawson they sat in on a songwriters' circle at the Odd Fellows Hall on the afternoon of September 27 before the evening house concert.

They both have degrees in music performance from the School of Music at the University of Victoria, where Carli says her teachers would often catch her putting a different spin on her classical exercises.

Along with their country stylings, they showed off their classical chops as well in a couple of solo instrumental pieces. These young women are not simply accompanying themselves as they sing; they are serious instrumentalists as well.

They performed a lot of their own material from their two CDs as well as excellent cover versions of material that ran the gamut from Joni Mitchell's "Both Sides Now" to Tom Cochran's "Life is a Highway" and Sting's "Fields of Gold". Whatever they sang, they made it their own.

The twins play beautifully off each other, switching melody and harmony lines, trading verses, cuing instrumental breaks with a raised eyebrow or nod of the head. They had such evident enjoyment in their performance that it would have been impossible not to be taken in

Final round of Municipal Act review underway

WHITEHORSE (October 6, 2014) —The final round of public engagement is taking place on a number of proposed changes to the Municipal Act.

The Municipal Act provides a foundation for strong local governance and the sustainability of Yukon communities," Minister of Community Services Brad Cathers said. "Yukon government is committed to supporting local governance and to working with our partners to ensure that this legislation is the best it can be."

The Municipal Act was developed by the Government of Yukon and the Association of Yukon Communities and came into effect in 1998. It was amended in 2003 and 2008.

In partnership with the Association of Yukon Communities, the current review of the act started in 2012 during the Our Towns, Our Future initiative.

The purpose of this final round of public engagement is to gather feedback on the proposed amendments and any additional suggested changes. Many of these potential amendments aim to help clarify language in the legislation.

"We encourage Yukoners—as well as our community partners—to provide feedback on these proposed amendments," Cathers added. "We also thank those who have shared their thoughts and participated throughout this multi-year process."

To provide feedback, fill out the comment form at Municipal Act Review. The deadline for comments is November 19.

He Lost His Mind but Not His Heart

By David Thompson, Whitehorse

as the man who lost his mind over a beautiful dance hall girl named Chantal Delacroix.

Chantal lived in Paris where star attraction at the Moulin Rouge. She was a classic emeraldeyed, red-haired beauty whose perfect hour-glass figure was the envy of every other woman.

Princes from Europe and as far away as Japan threw fortunes of jewels and gold at her feet. A drunken wealthy Baron tied 1000 franc notes to pigeons and launched them from the balcony at the theater. Rarely did the birds deliver the goods but the Baron didn't care: he was in love.

Men filled Chantal's bath tub with pink champagne then fought to bottle the bath water.

"Perverts," said Paulette, Chantal's friend and confidant.

These men bored Chantal out of her wits, she yawned in their faces, but they were beyond taking a hint.

Chantal asked Paulette, "I am so tired of all this fawning and stupidity, where might I find a real man who does not worship me but takes me for the intelligent women that I am?"

Madame," said Paulette. "I have heard through the Journal De Paris that there has been There are many stories of a tremendous gold find in ghosts but there has never been Canada's far north in a town one as frightening or disturbing called the Klondike. If you want adventure and freedom from these men then you should cast your eyes in that direction."

"Show me the newspaper," for five years she had been the Chantal ordered, "and I will decide if this is an adventure or not."

> The next day, March 01, 1901, Chantal and Paulette were gone. A strange forlorn wind blew through an open window floating newspaper across the floor of her dressing room. It was as if the brightness had gone out of the Moulin Rouge.

> A story circulated that Henri Toulouse-Lautrec threw himself down, wrapped himself in Chantal's discarded pink boa and cried, "Chantal, Chantal, Mon Cheri, vous m'avez laisse!"

> Other men wept openly and a group locked themselves in her empty dressing room, uncorked the Bunny champagne and got blind, staggering drunk. One died of alcohol and bath flakes poisoning but his last words, a toast, were, "Tout pour Chantal."

> A heartbroken distraught Stage Door Johnny named Maurice Bonnet, who had never missed one of Chantal's shows, arrived in Skagway two months

City along the frozen Yukon River. He died a horrible lonely death, freezing solid, kneeling, his arms outstretched to the sky as if awaiting rescue from business woman and knew a Sterling Everest and I'm here to above. The last entry in his diary read, "I will never give up. I will never stop loving Mademoiselle Chantal."

In the spring the crows ate his eyes then picked his brain out through the sockets. His body was discovered by a prospector who informed the North West Mounted Police and gave them Maurice's diary. A patrol was dispatched but when they arrived the body was gone.

Corporal Sterling Everest scratched his head and said to Constable Evert Hammerstone, "It could have been dragged off by a bear."

"Any trail has been obliterated by spring thaw," said Constable Hammerstone.

"Let's head back to Dawson and make our report," Corporal Sterling said, "maybe the corpse will snag on the sandbars below Forty-Mile.'

Although Sterling was young he was ten years on the force and had distinguished himself with his bravery and intelligence. The NWMP headquarters in Whitehorse were proud of him and like the citizens of Dawson City they knew all was well when Corporal Sterling was on the job.

Meanwhile Chantal and Paulette arrived in Dawson travel-weary and exhausted but Chantal looked radiant without a hair out of place and wearing the latest Paris fashions.

"I'll make it the Moulin Rouge of the north and import dancers from Paris."

She bought the theater renamed it The Auditorium and Charlie packed up and left for Arizona.

It wasn't long before the Auditorium was in tip-top shape with new melodramas and the spirit of Moulin Rouge can-can dancers. The gold miners loved it and the place was packed to the rafters for every performance.

On a stormy night when black clouds filled the Yukon River valley and heavy rains poured down a crash was heard behind the stage in the empty theater. Tobacco Jim, the late night watch man, stepped into the darkened main hall illumined by only a few flickering yellow gas lights, and listened.

He heard something again and strained to make it out. It was a few minutes before he caught the distinctive sound of a man sobbing and mumbling something..

"It sounded like 'chant all," 'chant all,' but I couldn't make it out," he told the police later.

In Chantal's eyes, all the crown princes of Europe would not equal this person.

Sterling was not unaware of Chantal's reaction, after all, he was trained investigator. He acknowledged her affection but was all business.

"Tobacco Jim tells me you had an after hours intruder."

Yes, and he told us there was a terrible smell and pools of water on the floor," Chantal said.

"I'll take a look. It could have been someone trying to get out of the rain that night."

Chantal led Sterling back stage and pointed out the bench that was sat on.

As he worked Sterling said, "I have a bit of unpleasant news. It appears a Mr. Maurice Bonnet has passed away. His diary mentions your name. Did you know a Mr. Bonnet?"

Whether he wanted to admit stopped. There was a shuffle it or not, he was struck by Chantal's charm and beauty. She knew he was. Tipping his hat, he wished her good day.

"We are very happy to award our Northern Futures Scholarships to another deserving group of students, and we are pleased to help develop these students as they work toward graduation."

The scholarship program is open annually to northern postsecondary students enrolled in commerce/business, engineering, electrical/telecommunications or computer sciences programs across the country.

Since the program's inception in 2002, 121 scholarships have been awarded, representing a total of $329,500 in contributions to outstanding northern students.

The 2014/15 winners of the Northwestel Northern Futures Scholarship are:

"After working at Northwestel in the data centre, it has further confirmed for me that this is the field that I want to work in. After living in Moose Jaw for a winter, it has also reinforced that I love the North and wish to continue living here."

In addition to the cash award, each winner will be presented with an opportunity to work at Northwestel for the upcoming summer.

Several past winners have found permanent employment with Northwestel after completing their academic program.

He Lost His Mind but Not His Heart

"It was a monster!" Paulette cried hugging the tenant. "Help us please."

Chantal was calmer but frightened just the same.

The next day Corporal Everest's investigation was as thorough as the first one but this time he had foot prints and two witnesses.

Both he and Chantal had an animated friendly conversation after the investigation. One could see the attraction growing between them.

"That is a real man, Chantal. You should latch on to him," Paulette said.

A week later, Tobacco Jim took to his bed with the flu.

"I've had malaria in India but I've never had a flu like the ones in the Yukon," he said. Chantal told Jim she would take care of closing up the theater and he should not worry about anything.

"Make sure you turn out the gas lamp behind the stage, Chantal. It is a fire hazard." Chantal was busy counting the night's receipts so she didn't get around to Jim's duties until past two o'clock in the morning.

As she walked down the isles of chairs she smelt the sickly odor of rotting meat. She walked up on the stage and pulled the curtain back there stood Maurice, the man she had seen in her window.

Chantal screamed so shrilly and loud the lime-light glass vibrated. She screamed again and again, as loud as her lungs let her and until her eyes bulged. The man seemed shocked but advanced toward here his arms outstretched.

"Chantal, my love," he said. "It's me, Maurice."

"No, no, you're dead," Chantal said, covering her face and running from the stage. She tripped in the isle and Maurice was almost upon her. Suddenly the front door burst open: Sterling and Constable Hammerstone, who were on patrol for another matter, rushed in, their guns drawn

"Stop! Police!" ordered Hammerstone but Maurice came forward with a knife he had drawn from his coat pocket. Hammerstone fired once, striking him in the chest, and he fell to the floor. Chantal collapsed in Sterling's arms and he held her close.

"It was terrifying," Chantal said.

"Yes, I know, I think it was the same man Tobacco Joe chased out of the theater that night," said Sterling.

Maurice was taken to Lowe's Mortuary and laid out on a slab.

Because a shooting was involved, Dr. Ryan N. Macintyre assisted the mortician Henry Baxter in the examination and the report. They undressed Maurice but the smell was so bad Henry got a bottle of his wife's French perfume, soaked rags in it and stuffed them up their nostrils.

"That's cheap perfume! Where did you get it? I hope it wasn't a Christmas gift!"

Communication and Cooperation were key elements in dealing with this potential crisis

Story & Photos By Dan Davidson

"This cell phone was a godsend during this whole emergency," Fire Chief Jim Regimbal said as he reflected on the events of last week's LNG tanker rollover just across the bridge from Dawson City.

He was able to use it from the very beginning of the crisis on Tuesday evening, Regimbal was able to contact a variety of people and organizations while he was actually at the site and describe exactly what the situation was.

"I was in a conference call right on the scene, right there, as opposed to radioing back to dispatch (at the fire hall), getting them to make the phone call."

The links would have been clumsier, though still better than the week before when cell phone service was down for most of a day.

"Oh yeah," he said, "that would have made things much more difficult."

Dawson actually has an Emergency Response Action Plan, and several scenarios have been practiced as tabletop exercises over the last few years, including a 2010 exercise called Operation Fireball, which had involved a tanker load of an unknown substance actually burning on the Ogilvie Bridge after a collision.

All the exercises have been built around the Incident Command System, which lays out the steps to be taken in different types of emergencies, who's in charge, what resources to call on, etc.

In this case there was no mystery. The driver had the shipping manifest readily available so the contents and its condition were known, and the 1-800 number to call in case of an incident was right there.

Regimbal was quickly in contact with Ottawa based Canutec, which produces the Emergency Response Guide. The proper guide page was stenciled on the tanker in large letters that could be read from a distance with binoculars.

"This provides all the parameters," he said, "safe distances, what to do, whether you should put water on the product or foam, how it mixes with things."

The phone call to Canutec was initiated at the dispatch office. Canutec linked to Transport Canada and to Regimbal's cell phone at the site.

The tanker was not leaking and the pressure was stable, so then the fire department, RCMP and the driver were on the scene. Next Quantum Murray, the company responsible for the Emergency Response Action Plan (ERAP) was brought into the conversation. FortisBC, a British Columbia energy company, was actually responsible for the contents of the tanker, and they were contacted as well.

"With all these players, we're all talking in about 15 minutes," said Regimbal. "What was really nice is that a lot of the time when you're talking to people who aren't on the scene they try to run things, where here it was just 'this is the information you have' and the information they provided was fantastic."

This left Regimbal in the position of being the "incident commander" until the experts in handling this product arrived about 18 hours later. Then he handed control over to the newly arrived Quantum and Fortis people.

In the meantime, local cooperation was great. The Highways Dept. provided necessary signs and barricade material. Yukon Energy made ready to move power lines where needed. A crane was dispatched from Whitehorse and a relief tanker from Delta, B.C., where FortisBC is headquartered. Snowy road conditions meant the tanker took longer than originally expected, but there were no problems with the rolled tanker, so that was all right.

In the event that problems developed, a piece of equipment called a vaporizer was on site to handle venting the LNG if necessary. That would have taken four days from start to finish and venting was definitely not the desired plan of action, but it was a backup.

Grenon Enterprises provided four yards of gravel to build up a cushion in the area where the tanker had to be flipped and Crawford Mining provided two large loaders to help the crane lift and balance the tanker as it was rolled onto its wheels.

Of the three businesses close to the site, only the Bonanza Gold Hotel and RV Park had to close down for the entire period. Northern Superior, Advance North and Dawson City Gas and Tire were open until Friday morning, when the operation to right the tanker and drain it was put into place.

On Friday morning the recovery exercise got under way around 9:30, after several adjustments to the timetable. Residents with internet access were kept informed of changes by means of Facebook postings on several sites as well as announcements on CBC radio.

Traffic was redirected through the adjoining parking lots of Bonanza Gold and Dawson City Gas and Tire for much of the morning, with complete road closures amounting to 43 minutes in total put in place during the more sensitive parts of the operation.

The tanker was back on its wheels by shortly after 1 o'clock. By 3:45 the product had been transferred to the back-up tanker and both had been moved as an inspector had determined it was safe to drive the one that had rolled. Half an hour later the power lines were back in place and the highway was open to regular traffic once more.

There was a Friday night debriefing/BBQ for those who had worked on the job.

"There's more to come," Regimbal said. "You learn from everything, learn how we can deal with this better, take the good and the bad from it."

He's pretty certain that this is the first incident quite like this in the territory, at least in his decade here, and it raises issues about safe transit, parking and various other things. He's welcoming that discussion at all levels.

In a final Facebook post on the event, Mayor Wayne Potoroka was effusive in his praise.

It's always a great honour for me to say 'thanks' on behalf of the community when the DCFD responds to a fire. It's even nicer to say 'thanks' for their role in helping ensure one didn't get started in the first place.

"And while it's tough to imagine what must have been going through the minds of the firefighters as they first approached that tanker, wondering what potentially dangerous situation they were walking into, it's important for all of us to acknowledge that if the worst case scenario happened—like it has in other communities—the Dawson City Fire Department were there and ready to deal with it. That warrants not only a 'thanks' to them, but their families, too,"

Quebec educators study how we do it in the Yukon

Students and staff from the Yukon's rural high schools were not the only participants in last month Rural Experiential Model (REM) week of ten 28 hour workshops that covered a variety of subjects tangential to the regular school curriculum.

They were joined as participant-observers by seven teachers, principals and school board staff from the Western Quebec School Board. This is comprised of some 25 schools with their administrative offices in Gatineau. Most of the schools are English language schools, though some share campus space with French language schools. Staff from four of these schools were in Dawson to look at how the Yukon's Department of Education is implementing its Rural Equity Action Plan.

Ruth Ahern, Assistant Dir. General for the Board, said that it was the responsibility of the group to report back to the board and to Quebec's Education Department.

Dodie Payne, Principal at two schools in the district, explained that she had applied on behalf of this group for a department scholarship to travel and study programs in other, somewhat similar rural schools.

Ruth Ahern, Assistant Dir. General for the WQSB, said that several of the educators in this group had been to a conference in Saskatoon last year where they heard about this program.

"RSS Principal Anne Moore gave a presentation on the REM. Because we're a large real territory, these guys made a connection to what was going on and Dodie put in an application for the group to go and observe."

All of the visiting educators work in rural settings, in schools that are somewhat smaller that Robert Service School's current enrolment of 210. The smallest of the schools has 47 students in a K-6 configuration, while the largest K-11 school has about 185.

The REM wasn't the only aspect of educational delivery that they found intriguing. RSS is one of the schools that has adopted the "blended learning" model for some courses, and the possibilities of Distance Education combined with Computer Assisted Instruction were of great interest to the visitors.

Then too, some of the schools in the district, Principals Ann Addleman's Maniwaki Woodland School, have a high percentage of indigenous students, and so the pedagogical partnership here between the school and the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in was of considerable interest.

"They've had indigenous perspective and now they're moved to indigenous skills," said Ahern.

"We're interested in the engagement aspect," said Addleman. "How do we engage our students? With the amount of staff that we have and the amount of students – we have a small student body – how do we build student interest."

"The first purpose of the scholarship (trip) is REM," said Ahern. "How could we use it for high school level and elementary level? How can we contextualize this back in our own territory?"

"The aim ... is to impact student engagement and a connection to the real world as opposed to the traditional classroom," Ahern said. "This sounded like a very exciting program."

With that in mind the seven educators arrived a day early in Dawson to get the lay of the town and learn where all 10 of the workshop sessions were taking place. During the week they each sat in on and participated in several of the sessions each day, gauging the quality of the curriculum and the way in which the students bought into the programs.

The team was impressed with the degree of coordination, cooperation and organization that went into the REM.

"Our group greatly appreciated the openness with which we were received by everyone," Ahern wrote from her office in Gatineau this week. "Being able to actively participate in the sessions was a great way for us to not only see REM in action but to exchange and share with the session leaders, students and school staff.

"The REM was an exceptional example of making learning meaningful and relevant to students. We were very impressed by the quality of the learning opportunities in each session and specifically the level of student engagement. After having experienced REM first hand, it is definitely something that we plan to tweak and implement in our own context."

Daughter relives the story of the man convicted in the Great Yukon Silver Ore Heist

By Dan Davidson

Alicia Priest can't be sure exactly what her father, Gerald H. Priest, actually did in connection with the 1963 theft of $160,000 worth of ore from the United Keno Hill Mine (UKHM) in Elsa in 1963. What she is sure of is that, while he was convicted of the theft then, he couldn't be under current interpretations of the law.

There were so many that Priest and his partner, Anthony Bobcik, sent south was searched in a highly questionable manner several times well before there were actual charges. The evidence was basically destroyed by having the entire shipment smelted and the money given to UKMH before any final judgements had been handed irregularities. The ore shipment down in the case.

During a recent exchange of emails Priest, who is suffering from ALS and can no longer talk, was clear in her responses.

"Yes, the charge my dad was convicted on no longer exists and I highly doubt he would be found guilty today. After all, UKHM could not prove it (the ore) belonged to them even though the smelter gave them the money for the ore."

There is no doubt that Priest and his partners obtained some high grade ore from somewhere, Gerry Priest, who worked as chief assayer at the mine, offered a number of versions of the tale over the years, but they centered on his personal Moon claim. Just how high grade ore ended up at a site where later investigations didn't find any is hard to explain.

The first version of Gerry's story has it that a large high grade boulder rolled down the mountain and landed there. That's the version Alicia Priest used to create the title of her newly published book, A Rock Fell on the Moon: Dad and the Great Yukon Silver Ore Heist (Lost Moose, $32.95 in hardcover).

Priest and her husband, Ben Parfitt, who live in Victoria, were in Whitehorse for a book launch event on October 8 at the Baked Café.

Alicia was born at the cottage hospital in Mayo in 1953, the second of two daughters for Gerry and Helen Priest. She lived the first ten years of her life in the company town of Elsa, and loved it there.

"It was simply splendid. I had it all: creative and loving parents who adored me and adored each other, an older sister and friendly playmates, a live-in grandmother who embodied maternal love, a dog and a cat, complete outdoor freedom no matter the season, lots of alone time, a pleasant school and a beautiful home full of good food, music, books and

"My father was the clever, adventurous and affectionate master of ceremonies. I can't imagine a better childhood. In fact I often turn back to those times when I need a reminder of how magical life can be."

In 1963 it changed. Suddenly the family relocated to what was initially pretty poor housing in East Vancouver - a basement suite with few of the amenities they had been used to. No father either, since he was often away on what he called business, but it eventually turned out that he was being investigated and later arrested for his part in the alleged ore

There was a long preliminary investigation, two trials, the first of which was mishandled by the prosecution and resulted in a hung jury. The second trial sent Priest and "Poncho" Bobcik to jail. An appeal failed to get him released or his time shortened.

"Can you say calamity?" Alicia writes. "His criminal escapades turned our lives upside down and inside out. Financially we went from needing nothing to being on welfare. But it was the emotional whammy that hurt the most. He broke our hearts. It took me decades to get over Decades during which she worked as a nurse for years to be able to afford to go to university and move to the second career she wanted.

"We were poor and there was no money for university so with the help of scholarships,

I completed a two-year RN course at BCIT. Most of the time, I felt like a fish out of water. But I nursed for eight years, travelled, saved money and put myself through UBC, where I studied anthropology and English. Then one year at Langara's journalism program."

That began a 25 year career in journalism, with work appearing in a variety of publications: the Globe and Mail, Canadian Medical Association Journal, Georgia Straight, Vancouver Sun and others. Even though her father broke her heart more than once, she still says it was his flair with words as well as her love of reading that nudged her in this direction.

She ignored most of the story that had given her family such pain for a long time, but then she finally began to tell bits of it to her close friends and found they were intrigued.

"The more distant I became from the trauma," she says, "the more I realized I had a darn good yarn to tell. My mother told me as much as she wanted me to know, but when I turned to my father, his version of events could scarcely be believed. Details changed with each telling and as time passed he slipped into dementia."

Parts of the story have been written in other mining histories, but Priest went for the RCMP and court files and found as many people as she could who still remembered something of the story. While she first vowed to look into the matter in 2006, after her father died, she didn't begin her research until 2011 and it was the ALS diagnosis that pushed her to finish the book before she would no linger be able to.

Aside from documentary evidence, she made contact with some of the investigating officers and litigators from the period, as well as travelling to Keno City and Elsa to refresh her memories of the landscape.

The end result is a book that is part memoir, part detective story and part family history. It's also a look at the history of Elsa, which exists today, as she notes, as "an ATCO trailer camp surrounded by encroaching bush and the remains of a few forlorn buildings." There was that bump a few years ago when Alexco opened up the Bellekeno Mine, but it has temporarily fallen prey to the ups and downs of the silver market; not before it ate away at a quarter century of promoting the place as a wilderness tourism retreat.

"I am satisfied," she wrote during our exchanges, "that I have dug up 90 per cent of the truth of what happened. But because about a third of the RCMP file was redacted, there are still a few mysteries."

Not the least of these would be what Gerry actually came to believe so firmly about his part in it all, believed with a fervor and eloquence that convinced many people he was innocent.

The last version he told his daughter varies a lot from the version he took to court.

"It's the story of three sleigh loads of super-rich ore dumped down Keno Hill back in the Werneke days," she said. "They landed on his Moon claims and for whatever reasons were abandoned. He found them and therefore they were legitimately his. He blamed Poncho for stealing the precipitates. You are right many people, to this day, believe he was innocent."

The pending war will be long and difficult

By Audrey McLaughlin

The situation in the Middle East with ISIL and the many offshoots of this violent group has the world community scrambling, confused and finally, realistic, realizing that something has to be done.

I have had the opportunity to work in many Muslim countries in the Middle East and North Africa, including a number of missions in Afghanistan, the Balkans and Iraq.

As the current situation unfolds, my heart goes out to the many wonderful people I met in those countries.

Stephen Harper has decided that Canadians don't really need to know what we are doing regarding the international coalition and doles out information through foreign reporters, ignoring Parliament. This is unacceptable, undemocratic and an affront to all Canadians.

This arrogance is unnecessary, and so, here is my advice to Parliament ... perhaps this is my own arrogance, but I think I do know from the accounts of many with whom I have worked what it means to experience war, to be a refugee, to have no security, to have your home and your community simply taken over by others.

Firstly: ISIL and its offshoots are not true Muslims; while I cannot speak as a Muslim, many have made this clear.

We need to work with the Islamic community here in Canada to help combat the recruitment to terrorism. And I can assure you that that is happening and has been for at least a decade.

Second: Unfortunately, these are not people with whom one can negotiate; they do not care for anything but power and the ability to frighten others into Canada must participate in the coalition using force against these groups.

But we must do so, with no illusion that force will solve the issue. Just picture a group coming into Whitehorse or Teslin, entering your home and business and simply taking everytning, threatening you with your life if you did not wear what they decreed or join their brand of "religion". These are not folks who negotiate.

In participating through some limited military contribution, we should be under no illusion that we are a superpower or that that is our strength.

Third: Canadians have demonstrated that we have genuine strength in promoting the rule of law, community and economic development and humanitarian aid. The Conservative government's ideologically-based narrow definition of this is not working.

We know that it is easier to destroy than build, and Iraq post-2003 and Afghanistan demonstrate this dramatically.

There are far more refugees than combatants, so we must contribute to relevant United Nations organizations, including the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and others which provide immediate aid.

If the countries receiving refugees are not assisted, we only contribute further to regional in stability.

We cannot lose sight of the strengths which exist in all of these countries.

There are many people who know exactly what must be done, and we have to listen to them and help them exercise their strengths.

This includes aid to those organizations which help to build functioning legislative institutions, the rule of law and promote the role of nongovernmental organizations.

Yes, we have done all of this in the past.

There is a tendency, however, to contribute for a period of time rather than recognize that no good results are achieved by ill-thought-out, one-shot deals, no matter how well-intentioned.

Whatever Canada decides, there will be a war; it will be long and it will be difficult.

We cannot be naïve.

What is happening is not the Iraq of 2003; there are bad people out there, and they use religion as an excuse for

A three-pronged strategy by Canada of limited military participation, a much larger sustained contribution in humanitarian and legislative aid and working with Muslim groups in Canada to combat recruitment here, will be a substantial contribution to a world which we do all wish for ourselves and others.

And, above all, let us remember that there are many people in the region and in other regions who have experience with war, and we need to listen to them.

Surely, after these many conflicts, we can learn some lessons from the past.

Ed Note: Among other things, McLaughlin is one of the Yukon's former MPs and was the leader of the NDP for a number of years.

"Enjoy this place as long as you can," says Anik See

Anik See first visited the North in the summer of 2003, visiting Yellowknife, Fort Smith and Hay River while on a FAM (Familiarization) Trips while she was a contributing editor to Outside magazine.

She was reluctant when she got the call to go, being afraid that this would basically be advertorial promotional writing as dictated by the publisher and the potential advertising client. She was delighted when it didn't work out that way and she was free to write whatever came to mind as a result of the trip.

Sometimes that happens. Sometimes, as in a piece she did for National Geographic about bicycles in Amsterdam, there may be a lot of editorial tweaking and rewriting. Other times, as in a recent piece in Walrus magazine, there is a specific guideline about style, but not so much about subject.

Usually she casts out a proposal and actually writes the piece for whoever decides to nibble at the idea she has given

Like most writers, she would prefer just to be able to write about what interests her, and the freedom to do just that is one of the things that she really appreciated about her just completed stint at Berton

"It's been wonderful," she said a couple of days before her residency ended. "I love the scale of Dawson City. It's a human scale.

"I find that the older I get, the less I like cities."

See lives in Amsterdam with her partner and their son on the top floor of an old school that has been converted into co-op apartments. There are five units on the floor and they share some interior courtyard space. Being in a single house with a yard, in a less densely populated neighbourhood, was a kind of relative isolation for Anik See in the kitchen at Berton House.

She has done about 10 residencies in various places - one being out in the middle of nowhere in Iceland - and prefers a bit of rural isolation when it's time for her to get some work done.

She arrived here to work on a longer biographical work that starts with her grandmother's story. Her maternal grandparents wanted to get married in 1938. In Hitler's Germany that meant that they both had to prove that neither of them had any Jewish blood, going back three generations. The story of her grandmother's search to flesh out the necessary genealogical record became a family legend, one that See intended to spend her residency writing about.

She's spent some time trying to work out how to make the book more than just "my family's history" in chronological order. She'd like to play with the timeline a bit, work in some of her own experiences, talk about the social setting that made her grandmother have to do this.

She doesn't usually plan extensively when tackling a subject, but this book will, at least, require her to plan the travel itinerary that she needs to follow to trace her grandmother's journeys. She's spent some time thinking about that process.

But she is triggered by phrases and ideas, and several other topics, things she said she would not have thought about at home, occurred to her while she was in Dawson. Since the residency's requirements are quite elastic, she felt free to pursue them.

"More often than not pieces, whether they're short stories or novels or essays, will come to me in a phrase and then I'll think 'Okay, let's see where that goes.' This doesn't always work, so I'm not a very prolific writer and I often do the research while I'm writing."

She handles radio interviews in a different way though, going in prepared, with lists of questions and a clear sense of what she wants to get out it.

"I do not leave that to chance. That is just a waste of everyone's time. I don't mind wasting my own time, but I don't want to waste someone else's."

She found Dawson to be a very balanced town.

"Often you have places that are industry and others that are art and never the twain shall meet. This feels like there's a good balance here and there's a recognition and regard for the others - which makes it real.

"I mean, you have to recognize that gold mining is a part of this place, but then there's the arts and health care. It seems very open and flexible."

For the next writer she had the following advice, "Enjoy this place as long as you can. Get as much out of this place as you can."

Departing Detachment head given key to the City of Dawson

A sad fact about the reality of rural Yukon is that RCMP personnel come and go and that time has arrived for Sgt. Dave Wallace, who arrived here as a constable in 1996, was posted to various other communities after his first stint here, and returned to head up the detachment.

Wallace has certainly been one of the most popular and respected officers to hold that post in recent years and town council decided to do something special to mark his passing and honour his time here.

"We're very happy," said Mayor Wayne Potoroka, "that you've given this opportunity to your community before you did leave, because as you are probably aware you've been special part of it for the last several years.

"In all the meetings we have with our RCMP commanding officers from Whitehorse, they always acknowledge the positive relationship we enjoy with our local detachment. That doesn't happen everywhere. It takes a lot of work and I think a big reason has been Sgt. Wallace."

"I arrived here on May 22, 1996," Wallace said. "It was a great day."

"You came back during some pretty difficult times at the territorial level, and you were exactly what this community needed. You brought a common sense approach to policing our town and a human touch to the Potoroka made special mention of Wallace's strategy for policing major events like the Dawson City Music Festival, where an influx of party people had the potential to get out of hand.

"On top of all that we've always seen you at local camps and working with our youth, and it's always been appreciated.

Dave's Key: Councillor Stephen Johnson, Sgt. Dave Wallace, Mayor Wayne Potoroka, Councillers Kyla MacArthur and Bill Kendrick.

"We've gotten used to the style of policing that Sgt. Wallace has brought to our town and we hope that his replacement will operate to the standards we have become accustomed to."

In appreciation of his time in office here, the Dawson Council and the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in council presented Wallace with a framed Key to the City.

"In communities around the world, and especially in Canada," said Potoroka, "there is no greater honour than to be given a key to the city."

The framed plaque contains an eagle feather from TH and the key, with a plate inscribed "For Service to our Community".

"It'll be going in my office," said Wallace, who has been transferred to a post in Whitehorse. "I can't think of a better community to be based in. Dawson is home. I feel very fortunate to have spent 10 years of my career here. The citizens of Dawson have made it home for me.

"I'm not really wanting to leave, but with the RCMP there comes a time when you have to go. I'm very sure that the community will be left in good hands, that my replacement will be the type of person you want to have here."

Study Says Second School Needed

by Dan Davidson

A consulting firm hired by the City of Dawson projects that the Robert Service School could have as many as 500 students within ten years and recommends that immediate planning begin to provide the community with a second school.

IPS Consulting has two sets of projections for the next ten years. The base projections, developed from a steady growth rate of 1.7%, and based on August 1994 opening numbers of 305 students, assumes a minimum population of 360 at the end of ten years. This is on the assumption that nothing happens to change the economic picture here in that time period.

This does not take into account the seasonal fluctuations which saw the numbers hit 320 in late August and then drop back when summer people departed. The same thing happens in reverse each spring as summer workers and their families arrive.

The maximum projection of 500 students "is based upon stimulated economic development in the Dawson area due to Loki Gold, the bridge/airport, and the centennial anniversaries." Of the three sources of potential growth listed here, at least one of them, the centennial activities, is a certainty.

Of the existing school, which was completed in the late 1980s at a size three classrooms smaller than the original recommendations of the local steering committee, the report notes that it has a capacity of 250 students and that it is already overtaxed. In the report company president Terry MacDougall writes that "The present overcrowding in the existing school coupled with the prospects for growth within the community suggest the need for construction of a new school to begin late next year and be capable of accepting students in September 1996."

MacDougall recommends retaining the existing school as a high school to serve grades 7 to 12, where the numbers should hit between 144 and 200 in the next decade. The new school should, he says, be aimed at the kindergarten to grade 6 level, though it might begin by serving K to 4 with six classrooms, and be constructed in such a way as to accommodate additions (up to 12 classrooms) for the higher grades later in the dec-

Members of the Grade 6 class work on another skit for the special Gold Rush curriculum unit being prepared for the Department of Education.

The study assumes a more concentrated development of housing in Dawson's north end and recommends that the new school be located in that area. Discussion on city council have already focussed on the location of the present Goldrush Campground as a potential site for a school building and play-

In the meantime the YTG will soon be moving two modular classrooms onto the parking lot of the Robert Service School as what has been described as a short term measure to deal with overcrowding. There was much resistance on the part of council and the planning board to the introduction of these portable units. That, and arguments over how they could be made to conform to the "historical look" which is a major feature of the existing building, delayed their arrival until this fall, but they are supposed to be in service before Christmas.

White Pass Source of Oil Leak

by Dan Davidson

The relocation of the White Pass company's bulk fuel storage operation from owntown Dawson to the former Tesoro plant in Callison and the removal of the below ground tanks in town have confirmed what was generally suspected all along. The forty year old site was the source of the hydro-carbon leak which had been plaguing the storm sewer outfall on the far side of the dyke from Harper Street for some time.

"Just look at the corner of Harper and Front," was the opinion generally expressed by residents when the subject of the leak came up but such brisk common sense could not induce a city hired engineer to express more that a "definite maybe" early last summer.

There was a lot more than that coming from hydrogeologist Gary Hamilton at the October 7 meeting of municipal council. Hamilton specializes in this sort of problem for the Burnaby based firm Golder Associates, which has been contracted by White Pass to deal with the mess at its former bulk site.

Hamilton told council that the company had so far expended about $50,000 cleaning up contamination from "spilled product" which had accumulated over many years, most of it probably originating in the period before the tanks were buried. The relative warmth of the buried tanks, however, had probably kept the oil from freezing and had certainly rendered the surrounding ground more susceptible to percolation. This became noticeable in the leakage from the storm sewer outfall after work was completed on Harper Street a few years back. The trapped oil was able to work its way into the discharge from time to time.

When the buried tanks were removed there was a pool of "something less than 1,000 litres" of oil mixed with diesel in "free form", Hamilton said. The contamination had spread through the adjacent ground, necessitating the removal of 1,000 cubic metres of soil from the area. This soil has been removed to the Callison site, where it is being treated.

Hamilton has remained in town since the work was finished at White Pass to assist in monitoring the possible existence of contaminated soil in the streets adjacent to the company lots. Here, work to replace Dawson's faulty sewer and water system has been under way at various times throughout the summer and especially right now.

Mayor Jenkins noted in his own comments to council that the company appears to be taking this situation quite seriously. Company president Marvin Taylor was here during the relocation and remained in spite of his prior commitment to speak at a conference, Jenkins told council.

Councillors wondered how far the clean-up would be taken if it turned out that the oil had migrated further than tests so far indicated. Hamilton assured them that the situation near many a corner garage is as bad as, if not worse than what has happened here, and that the usual practice was to restrict clean-ups to the actual site and leave the streets alone.

A September 9, 1994 letter from Bob Lorimer of the engineering firm of Lorimer & Assoc. indicates that he is not happy with the steps proposed in the White Pass cleanup operation, which he describes as more cosmetic than actual. The intention of the company is, he says, "not to remediate the site but instead to deal only with the symptom," he recommends that the City of Dawson should "consult a specialized environmental law firm regarding its potential liability for future remediation costs should it accept the proposed partial cleanup..."

A report from city works superintendent indicates that the White Pass excavation around the old tanks reached a depth of "fifteen feet, at which point permafrost was encountered."

Monitoring of the area will be carried out by means of three observation wells. Absorption booms at the Harper Street outfall will be monitored for hydrocarbon traces over the next two years.

LETTER

Here's what alienates me in modern-day Canada

To the Editor:

A lot of things really upset me in today's Canada.

I can't stand that Canada likes to call herself the best democracy in the world, when political parties enforce most of the voting with whipped votes.

This results in a party dictatorship. Each and every MP must vote as the party dictates or face disciplinary action.

This makes every one of the members a sheep led by the big

I can't stand that governments have public hearings and then, even though 80 to 100 per cent of the submissions go to side A, the government turns around and totally ignores the public and votes for side B. (Witness the Peel watershed plan and I am guessing fracking, too.)

I can't stand that bad science is touted in the news as if it were real.

I remember as a kid listening to bad scientists actually claiming that cigarettes did not cause cancer. Apparently, one of the same "scientists" who made these claims also makes claims that global warming is not caused by human activity.

Heck, even the president of the U.S.A. admits that something must be done about global warming now.

I can't stand that violence is passed on from one person to the next, and governments do exactly the same.

I can't stand that as a Canadian traveller, my reputation has been so degraded by Canada taking on combat roles that we are no longer the revered Canadian traveller, but now I could taken as a hostage or killed because my country killed many of the citizens of the country I want to travel in.

I can't stand that by making these statements, some would want to brand me a terrorist, just because I have enough guts to say so.

In a democracy, you should be able to say anything for or against anything, and not be censured.

I can't stand that a true scientist is not allowed to say what he thinks for fear of losing his funding.

There; I have stated a few things that bother me, and probably someone in some office is starting a file on me and thinking, "Is this guy a terrorist?"

Remember that I did not try to incite you or anyone to

I really do love Canada, my home, and I wish it would become a world leader in science and green technology and peace.

May you live well and prosper.

Henry didn't answer.

The doctor removed the bullet. Henry removed Maurice's dark glasses. They recoiled in horror: where the eyes should have been there were only gaping black holes. The doctor took a probe form his satchel and inserted it in the socket the metal bar stopped with a clunk at the back of the skull.

"What the hell? This man has no brain and he was walking

The doctor decided not to include this part in his report. He had read Stoker's novel so he knew what to do. They dressed Maurice, then before closing the pine coffin, they drove a sharp stake into his heart.

Later that day the doctor and Henry met with Sterling and Chantal.

This is strictly on the QT. No one is to ever hear about this."

"Okay," said Sterling. "You have our complete cooperation and Henry couldn't contain himself anymore and blurted out, "He had no brain! The man had no brain!"

He then collapsed in a chair. "It was the most horrifying thing I ever saw. The man had no brain!"

The doctor went over and put his hand on Henry's shoulder to console him.

Sterling and Chantal sat speechless.

"You're joking," Sterling said.

"No, it's all true and that is why you must never mention any of this to anyone, ever. It will start a panic and the town folk will act like they are after Frankenstein. I can imagine a mob with flaming torches headed up the Dome Road looking for Maurice.

Chantal and Sterling were married three months later in the grandest wedding the Auditorium had ever seen. The doctor, Henry and their wives sat together.

"I've heard of men losing their hearts over a lady but never their brains," said the doctor.

Beading time at Dänoja Zho

Allison Anderson helps Tara Beagan with her 2nd pair of earrings. Tara is the latest Writer in Residence for Berton House, and wanted to find out about the local Traditional Beading techniques.

Story & Photos by Alice Thompson

Twelve participants attended the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre's Beaded Earring Class held on October 8th and 9th. The class was taught by Allison Anderson, who has been teaching classes on traditional beading techniques for the past several years to Robert Service students. This is her first class open to adults, and it was very well received.

Allison asked her mother Dolores Scheffen to assist her with the class, as Dolores has been teaching traditional crafts for over 40 years and has been asking Allison to help her with teaching since Allison turned 15. Dolores started at the age of 8 teaching how to make beaded necklaces and earrings to her siblings and friends. She went on to learn traditional moccasin and glove making from her mother and grandmother and has been passing on her skills in our part of the Yukon ever since.

She usually can be found teaching traditional skills at the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in and Dawson City festivals and events, and her and Allison's work can be found in the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre Gift Shop.

Allison says you can expect her to be offering more of the Earring workshops as there was more demand for the class than they were able to fill this time, and she will also be offering other workshops on traditional beading projects.

Dolores Scheffern helps Irene von Deschwanden with her project. Irene is a permanent resident from Switzerland working at the Aurora Inn.

HUMANE SOCIETY DAWSON UPDATE

with Danielle Thorne, Humane Society Dawson

We are asking you to please spay and neuter your pet.

Every year the shelter gets countless litters of unwanted puppies and kittens from right inside the Dawson community, due to a lack of spaying and neutering from pet owners. Although we have been fortunate enough to find loving homes for these animals, our veterinary bills are very high as a result! This is because it is the Humane Society Dawson's policy to spay and neuter intact animals before adoption. We believe in reducing the numbers of unwanted pets and animal overpopulation within the Yukon.

If we keep going down this road of high veterinary expenses, we might not be able to afford to keep the animal shelter running in Dawson.

Along with keeping the shelter afloat, there are many other benefits to spaying and neutering your pet, such as: longer life spans, less aggression and less wandering.

WHY SPAY/NEUTER?

Spay/neuter ends companion animal overpopulation

JUST 1 25 KITTENS BORN IN ONE YEAR

Spay/neuter benefits animals and people

Health Benefits to Animal

Prevention of testicular cancer and prostate disease in males. Prevention of mammary cancer and uterine infections in females.

Behavioural Benefits

Reduced roaming, aggression, urine spraying, and territorial marking in males. Reduced aggression, howling, and house soiling in females.

Cost Savings

Reduced spending related to complaints, picking up, impounding, sheltering, caring for, and euthanizing stray & homeless animals. Reduced livestock death.

Public Health and Safety Benefits

Reduced incidence of dog bites and nuisances. Decreased transfer of rabies and other zoonotic disease from animals at large.

Additional Benefits to Society

Alleviating injury and death to wildlife. Decrease in direct suffering and death of animals. Less suffering to empathetic humans.
