Old Nursing Station demolished to make room for new seniors' home

Story by Dan Davidson Photos by Aedes Scheer

The decommissioned Dawson nursing station has been demolished to make way for the planned replacement for McDonald Lodge on that site. The building has been vacant since the new Dawson City Community Hospital and Health Services Facility opened for business in December 2013, but it took a while to decide just what to do with it.

A typical Dawson City solution would have been to figure out how the various portions of the building could be recycled and where they might be located to await that eventuality. Such was the fate of the old Robert Service School in 1989, when the segments of the building were moved and repurposed in half a dozen locations around town, including what was at that time a major expansion of the Westmark Hotel.

The preferred territorial government solution, as demonstrated with the Kobo Apartment building a year or so ago, is to demolish the building and truck the pieces out to the Quigley Landfill.

Public Works Superintendent Norm Carlson commented on the process in a recent report to town council.

"The demolition of the old Nursing Station is proceeding and we are accepting the waste at the landfill ... provided it is segregated as much as possible. The contractor doing the demolition is responsible to segregate the waste and compact and cover all that is to be landfilled."

Carlson also noted that the landfill has a projected lifespan of just two years unless its boundaries are expanded before that time expires.

The Dawson City Health Centre facility was originally constructed in 1969 as a hospital by the Federal Government. Since that time the facility had undergone renovations, expansions, several service and name changes, including a transition from a federal to a territorial facility, and ended its operating life as a nursing station called the Dawson City Health Centre. Along the way it was downgraded from what used to be called a "cottage hospital" status to a nursing station with an attached medical clinic.

By the mid 1980s local agitation for a replacement for the facility was a regular feature of municipal and territorial election campaigns, even before the health care transfer to the territory took place. After the transfer one set of plans for a "multi-level health care facility" was prepared and rejected when they met with general disapproval.

It was 2000 before a report by Options Consulting prepared a Functional Program for the redevelopment of the health centre, McDonald Lodge and Dawson Ambulance Service and 2009 before the Yukon Hospital Corporation and the Yukon Government decided how they were going to jointly proceed with the project.

The new hospital construction was fraught with difficulties and ran over budget as well as being a couple of years late being finished. The federal Auditor

General was very critical of the planning and consultation that went into the project.

The demolition has had to deal with problems related to asbestos and other hazardous materials found in the building. A detailed work plan approved by Occupational Health and Safety branch was put in place to deal with these materials, which will also end up in the landfill.

OPINIONS

Uffish Thoughts: Does the territory deserve more money for affordable housing?

By Dan Davidson

Normally an announcement of federal funding coming our way is something the territorial government is happy to share with the public and take credit for the harmonious relations it has with Ottawa.

The ceremony taking place this Thursday might be a little different.

The notice to newsrooms came through on Tuesday morning.

"Signing ceremony for Affordable Housing Agreement with Canada.

"The Honorable Candice Bergen, Minister of State for Social Development, will be in Whitehorse Thursday, July 31, to sign a new Investment in Affordable Housing (IAH) agreement with Yukon.

"The Honorable Brad Cathers, Minister responsible for Yukon Housing Corporation will be signing on behalf of Yukon."

This will happen, the notice goes on to say, on Thursday July 31, 2014, from 9:00 to 9:30 a.m. in the Lobby of the Government of Yukon Main Administration Building, 2071 2nd Avenue, Whitehorse, Yukon.

I guess that it is assumed the local press will not be able to find the building.

As I said, this ought to be an occasion for some celebration, but given the events of the last five or six weeks, it is likely to be an occasion for embarrassment.

When the territorial government hands out money for specific purposes, it is usually (after several Auditor General's reports complaining about past practices) careful to make sure the money gets spent for the projects it was given for. If you don't spend it all at the time you need to explain why.

A good example would be the $4 million given to the City of Dawson for the repair and maintenance of the recreation centre here. It hasn't all been spent yet and the reason, duly given, is that studies had to be undertaken to determine the best way to spend it.

The recent history of the government's management of funds provided to it for affordable housing projects should have raised some type of red flag in Ottawa when it came time to consider doling out some more.

Perhaps they were looking at the October 2013 announcement that privatesector partners would be recruited to bolster the affordable housing stock in the territory. It sounded like a good deal. That program was developed after quite a bit of consultation, but it only took a determined bit of last minute effort by the associations representing realtors and landlords to kill the Whitehorse aspects of the program.

Protests about the cancellation came from anti-poverty groups, the Chamber of Commerce, the opposition, private developers and contractors, but the government had "unmade up" its mind by then.

There were also two projects in Dawson City that got as far as looking good and then got the axe. I have no idea who was not in favour of these projects, since "more affordable housing" is a constant public mantra by everyone in these parts.

Press reports indicate that the Northern Housing Trust still has some $11.5 million in funds left and that only two rural projects remain as having been approved, one in Carcross and the other in Carmacks. Good for them, but it leads one to wonder if allocations weren't made on the basis of alphabetical order.

If I were in charge of handing out more money for affordable housing, I would be looking at what has and has not been done with the money that was previously allocated.

If I were attending the press conference on Thursday at which more money will be handed out to a government which has so signally failed to make use of the funds it already has, I would be asking some pointed questions of both the Member of Parliament and the territory's Minister in Charge of Yukon Housing, Brad Cathers.

If I were either of those people I would be wondering just how to respond to some of the questions that I would surely be expecting people to ask me.

And I would be more than a little bit nervous.

Postscript: As it turned out, several days later the federal minister presented the $1.8 million funding program to combat homelessness in the Yukon to the Council for Yukon First Nations.

Bus proves to be a low rider

by Dan Davidson

It doesn't often happen that Fifth Avenue gets blocked, but this Holland-America Explorer bus managed the feat for a short time on August 14 when it bottomed out while crossing from the H/A parking lot to the Dominion Store Fas Gas just across the street. It took a bit of figuring to change the angle of the vehicle so it would not spin its wheels at the edge of Dominion property.

Friend or Foe? Alternative storytelling at Riverside Arts Festival

Story and photos by Hannah Eden

The only light in the studio of KIAC Artist Residence shines from a small projector illuminating the shape of a man as he works. Back and forth go the brushstrokes; forming intricate lines on a primed piece of white canvas.

"I would like people to remember them, if they can. Or take a photograph and then go and interpret it," says internationally renowned artist Terrance Houle as he sits in his studio painting over projected outlines of First Nation Sign Language.

Since arriving at the Artist Residence in Dawson City, Houle has swiftly been collecting local tales of Dawson and translating them into First Nation Sign Language.

Working on this theme for five years, Houle has always been fascinated with the idea of gesture and signs as a means to communicate.

"It was used for trade and used for communication between different tribes because they didn't all speak the same language," says Houle as he flicks through a thick book of words and signs.

"They would use it in ceremonies."

A graduate from the Alberta College of Art and Design, Houle has traveled to reservations throughout North America participating in Powwow dancing. A master of all trades, Houle not only utilizes his artistic background in his work but his musical skill too - often composing music and piecing together film and video exhibitions. Performance runs thick in Houle's work and his exhibition entitled Friend or Foe? at Riverside Arts Festival is no exception.

"It's about making people perform, because it's such a gestural language," says Houle about First Nation Sign Language.

"I want them to do the gestures and that's the language. Gesture is a huge thing in indigenous cultures – it's how we judge emotions."

Houle's vision is to see attendees at the festival engage with his pieces – forming the gestures and then finding the appropriate translations if interested.

His interest in people and the ideas behind the human need to communicate came from his youth. His work at a gas station on a First Nation reserve influenced the way he looked at emotive story-telling.

"They would tell me stories and they would be so animated!" shares Houle, excitedly. "They would be telling their story but also enacting it for you, so it becomes a performance." To see more of Terrance's work visit terrancehouleart.

A Friend or Foe finished piece rests in the Artist Residence on Seventh Avenue. (below)

A fundraiser for Dawson
City Human Society was held
on Saturday August 9th. The Human Society, which provides shelter and care for abandoned animals, invited pet lovers to bring their furry friends to
All the proceeds collected on the day went to towards a replacement oil tank for the shelter to keep the animals warm this winter.

Peabody's Photo Parlour, who annually host a Christmas fundraiser, felt they needed to host a summer pet-friendly photo shoot in order to boost donations for the Human Society.

"It's all Peabody's!" said Danielle Thorne, Human Society Coordinator.

"They've been great. They are doing most of the work. The employees are taking the pictures and are processing the payments and the donations."

Prints were priced at $7 each - multiple purchases helped boost the amount raised.

"People are going to send the print to their friends and family as a summer keepsake," shared Thorne. "So it's actually adding up which is great – it's quite a bit of funding for us."

The fundraiser wasn't just for those with a pet of their own-Thorne donated her own dogs to those without, in order for guests to take part in the photo shoots.

"My partner and I have two dogs, so we've been lending them out too!

Posing in Peabody's traditional studio using props such as log furnishings and even a gold pan or two, dogs of all sizes and shapes lined up outside of the studio to have their five minutes of fame.

Luckily, there were no accidents on set as only the best behaved pooches attended the occasion.

"Everybody's dog has been really good!" said Thorne.

"And we have a big bin of treats and everyone is happy. And surprisingly, the dogs are posing really well!"

However, the sad truth for most of the animals at the shelter is abandonment after a summer of fun. Dawson, a town known for its thriving tourism, also brings in warmhearted people who adopt pets.

Deputy Chief Jay Farr attended the Human Society Fundraiser at Peabody's Photo Parlour with family dog, Beauty. (Top)

SUPPORT DAWSON CITY YUKON RIVER SALMON COMMERCIAL FISHERS

THE YUKON SALMON SUB-COMMITTEE IS LOOKING FOR LICENSED DAWSON CITY COMMERCIAL FISHERS THAT ARE INTERESTED IN SELLING YUKON RIVER FALL CHUM THIS YEAR.

We plan on putting some ads in local Yukon papers and spreading the word on Fall Chum sales. Provide us with your name and contact information that we can pass that along to those interested in ordering some.

No guarantee for sales, nor will we facilitate the transaction but we are pleased to provide interested customers with some contact information.

PLEASE PROVIDE US WITH INFORMATION SOON SO THAT WE CAN GET THE WORD OUT BEFORE THE RUN IS DONE!

Nevertheless, upon returning to their lives outside of the Yukon, most animals are left right back where they started – in the care of the Human Society.

Thankfully, this summer has seen healthy relationships between owners and pets. "I have heard that there is a problem with transient summer workers who have been known to take puppies and having them for the summer and then leaving them when they go home," shared Throne.

"But we've been having a great summer so far with great adoptions for both dogs and cats."

For those that missed Saturday's photo-shoot, feel free to book a special day with your pooch by calling Peabody's Photo Parlour at: 867-993-5209.

From Whitehorse to Circle by York Boat

Story & Photos By Dan Davidson

Joachim Kreuzer (aka "Red Badger") and Manfred Schroeter of Germany pulled up alongside the Dawson Dyke just over a month ago on July 13, finally completing a significant part of a river trip they had tried to undertake the year

Nasty weather on Lake Laberge in July of 2013 scuttled their first attempt to sail their home made, scaled down York Boat down the Yukon River, delaying completion of trip they had been planning for two years at that point.

"The inspiration for me," said Red Badger, "is that I'm a member of the Northwest company in Germany."

Schroeter, he said, had been going to do a river trip by canoe, but Kreuzer persuaded him that they could build and use the York Boat instead, dress in period garb and make the trip into a film.

The original York Boats used by the Northwest Company were 14 metres long and carried a crew of six to eight men. The Confiance (Confidence). at 7.85 m, is a tight fit for the two German voyageurs and all their gear.

They are members of an historical re-enactment group whose goal is to recreate historical events and film them. According to Kreuzer the inability to film after their equipment was damaged was the main reason for calling off the 2013 trek.

This year they started out on June 27, a few days after the Yukon River Quest, and were fortunate in that the turbulence which had plagued the paddlers had died down by the time they launched. On their second day they had headwinds that forced them to row hard all day, but on the third day they were able to use their sail and made good

That wasn't the case for most of the trip.

"The wind come on us and we had to row mostly," Kreuzer said. "It is a square sail and it is only possible if you have the back wind. No matter which way the river goes, the wind it is always on the nose for us. So if we don't row we make circles in the water."

They were 17 days out of Whitehorse but quite happy with their progress, having made 76 km rowing against the wind the day before they arrived in Dawson.

Since they had a time limit on their trip, they were looking to stay in Dawson for a couple of days and then push on either to Eagle or Circle, at which ever place they could catch a plane ride back to Whitehorse.

Schroeter needed to be home in Germany by August 3, and this wasn't the sort of trip in the sort of boat that Kreuzer could

The boat might be left behind if they are unable to find someone to sponsor getting in back to Germany.

"We have not the money for that," he said.

In Dawson they were offered a cabin at the Triple J Hotel by owner Brad Whitelaw and were pleased to spend some time with Driftwood Holly and his family, as well as having the opportunity to meet Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in elder Percy Henry and hear some of his stories.

On July 23 the pair reached Eagle and two days later were in Circle, where they ended their river trip. According to their Facebook page (New Historical Adventure) they arrived back in Frankfurt on August 1.

The pair had the confidence that they could make the trip and so they named their boat that, choosing to use the French word as most of the voyageurs were French.

Dawson commemorates 100 years since First World War

Story and Photos by Hannah Eden

Reenactments, stories and a moment of silence were shared on Monday August 4th at the Palace Grand. A special event organized by Parks Canada, the Yukon Historical Museums Association and the Dawson Royal Canadian Legion marked 100 years since the outbreak of World War One.

Dawson City joined the nation in commemoration of the anniversary as visitors and locals filled the lobby of the Palace Grand to listen to a welcome from Max Fraser – Yukon Historical and Museums Assistant followed by opening speeches from Mayor Wayne Potoroka and Deputy Chief Jay Farr.

Special guest speaker Michael Gates made the event a success with his insight into the events after the announcement of the war. He gave a quick welcome before eyes were turned to Parks Canada actors who transported guests back in time to the evening of August 4th 1914 as they entered the theatre with George and Martha Black.

George and Martha Black were hosting guests at a local theatre the evening the news arrived.

A short reenactment involving the initial hearing of the outbreak of war led the guests to stand and together with George and Martha Black, sing the National Anthem.

Although the official notice of Britain's declaration of war did not reach Commissioner Black until August 6th, respect was still paid.

Microphones and audio equipment was then tuned and turned on as Michael Gates took to the stage to share his speech entitled 'The Yukon Goes to War' which was broadcast for all to hear on local radio.

Gates, formerly a curator of collections at Klondike National Historic Sites in Dawson City, is a recipient of a lifetime Heritage Award from the Yukon Historical and Museums Association.

Gates said he has always been interested in history and especially the history of war in Dawson City.

"Although crowds were assembling around newspaper offices across the country," shared Gates. "The Yukon had seemed serenely unaware of the magnitude of the issue."

A quote from Laura Berton at the time, set the scene for the modern audience, now so connected with life outside of the Yukon.

"We all had read skimpy reports of European troubles in the Dawson Daily News," said Berton. "But Europe, really, seemed a planet or so away."

Photographs of the era were projected on screen at the Palace Grand to help aid guests in visualizing what wartime Dawson City must have been like Closing remarks from Gates (see a version of his speech on page 20) reminded audience members of the impact of war in Dawson City – a town seemingly untouched by the outside world, until the First World War.

"Only a hundred of the 600 returned to the Yukon after the war," shared Gates.

"But the Yukon had changed profoundly. The population was smaller, the economy had shrunk and the government had reduced its presence. For more than 20 years, the Yukon became a sleepy, colorful segment of our giant country.

Michael Gates was the special guest speaker at the 'News of War' event on Aug 4th.

Significant step taken towards implementing Territory-wide 911 services

WHITEHORSE (July 28, 2014) -The Government of Yukon has submitted an application to the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC), a significant step in the process of expanding 911 service to all Yukon communities.

The application seeks approval for an auto-select solution, which allows callers in communities to dial 911 from their landline or cell phone and then press "1" to call police, "2" to call an ambulance and "3" for the fire department. This will not affect customers in the current 911 service area, who will continue to receive the same service they do now.

"The filing of this application with the CRTC is an important step towards improving the territory's emergency response capabilities," Minister of Community Services Brad Cathers said. "We hope to see this application approved, and are pleased to be working together with partners including municipalities, the Association of Yukon Fire Chiefs, the RCMP and Northwestel in determining the next actions related to expanding 911 services to all Yukon communities."

Northwestel—the telecommunications system operator in Yukon—will apply to the CRTC for approval to establish and operate the proposed system.

"Northwestel is excited to play a part in delivering territory-wide access to 911 services in Yukon," president and CEO of Northwestel Paul Flaherty said. "As Yukon's leading telecommunications provider, we're pleased to contribute the technical solutions required to further connect the territory."

The application also notifies the CRTC of the plan for a territory-wide basic 911 service. There is work required before that can be implemented, which includes system upgrades by Northwestel and further discussions between the government and stakeholders.

"Establishment of 911 service across Yukon has been a priority of municipal and local governments for many years, and the Association of Yukon Communities is pleased to see this initiative go forward," Wayne Potoroka, president of the Association of Yukon Communities said.

President of the Association of Yukon Fire Chiefs Jim Regimbal added: "The Association of Yukon Fire Chiefs (AYFC) is extremely pleased that the Yukon government has committed to the establishment of a fully functional Yukon-wide 911 system within two years. We understand that an interim measure is being proposed and we also support this temporary initiative. The AYFC is willing to serve in any capacity necessary to see this life-saving service implemented as soon as possible."

A New Soccer Fan is born

By Anna Vogt Our Columbian Correspondent

I have never been fanatical about sports. While the rest of Canada was glued to the Stanley Cup and singing along to the Hockey Night in Canada theme song, I happily remained in my own competition free world. Since moving to Colombia, however, things have changed as I have come to embrace another part of what it means to live in this country.

In other words, World Cup season has come and gone, and, in the name of the beautiful game, I have become a soccer fan. Every time Colombia played, I joined with the faithful and wore my jersey, walking to work with pride alongside everyone and their dog dressed in yellow, red and blue. Over 2 thousand children were named after stars and coaches during the World Cup: Pékerman, Mondragón, James and Jackson.

Every time Colombia won a game, thousands poured onto the streets with flags, dancing just like their players did after every goal.

Excitement reached a fever pitch when Colombia played against Brazil in the quarterfinal, a game they had never before reached in their history. President Santos declared the afternoon a civic holiday and my office closed at 2 p.m. so that we could watch the game. My colleagues stopped sleeping because they were so worried about the game, analyzing possible scenarios all night long; even I felt ulcers coming on.

Although we lost the game, Colombians, as always, showed the world how to celebrate. I know of no other place where losing means throwing a giant street party of 120,000 people to welcome the players home, as took place the Sunday after the game. In my three years here I have never seen so many people so excited, together, about something happening on a national level.

For once, Colombia was not playing against itself. I would rather see the streets full of flags that unite than election posters that divide and turn peace into a political campaign to be for or against, as often takes place. Maybe that is why thousands of people destroyed their votes, writing in Pékerman, the national coach, for President ,during June's elections. Former President Santos was reelected in the end, but the 45% of the population that did not vote still celebrated every game of their national team, because soccer is something they actually believe

Just like conflict, the energy of soccer excitement is a neutral force that can be harnessed for good or for bad. A group of campesinos (small scale farmers), Indigenous people and afro-Colombians of a group called Con-Paz wrote an open letter to Colombian James Rodriguez, winner of the Golden Boot award. They remind him that during the extreme violence of the early 2000s, armed groups played soccer with human heads, that in many spaces there are no televisions with which to watch the game and children play soccer with balls made of garbage.

The organization also reflects on the way the Colombian team is expressing collective values. Even a few years ago, no one would have imagined that Colombia would win the Fair Play award. Soccer can go beyond nationalism, to lead to cooperation, to encounter and to community. For Con-Paz, the excitement surrounding the team is an expression of a national desire for a country where difference is complementary. It is the joy born of an inclusive democracy where respect for people and the land are shown. In the end, the games, and sports in general, can be an invitation for hope by bringing collective energy to the art of sustainable peace building.

There are only 4000 some odd days left until the next World Cup in Russia in 2018 and under a year until the women's Cup in Canada next summer. I hope that is enough time for my emotions to recover from all of the excitement. Because, without a doubt, I will join with the rest of Colombia in cheering for peace and unity, both on and off the field. Maybe I will even watch hockey.

Dawson Rocks a Winner!

Story & Photos By Josée Bonhomme

Dawson hosted another important event in the Yukon's mining history on August 6th. About 100 people took part in this annual and relatively low-key event on its fourth occasion. This attracts geologists, prospectors and potential investors in a forum that is technically correct. They come from all over Canada or overseas: Japan, China, Russia, Europe.

A mix of conferences, trade show (with enlightening rock and core sample exhibits), mine property tours and social venues make this a unique event. The Yukon Mining Alliance might deserve the most credit in making it work, thanks to Anne Lewis, executive director.

"We combine all resources in the community to welcome the industry and investors. The Yukon government department of Economic Development helps us, and we team up with all groups," she explains with a beaming smile. The event was very well organized and ran like clockwork. "The federal Northern Economic Development Agency is an important partner", she adds.

Being French, my priority is always good food, very noticeable at the closing reception of the core exhibit. I had to ask: "Who made the food?" Anne answered with glee that the hot food was prepared by the Downtown Hotel, now owned by Chief Isaac Corp. (aka Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in). The Downtown Hotel is a favourite of locals and visitors alike. The cold appetizer trays were catered by our little Bonanza Market that also "rocks". Compliments to all chefs are in order.

The cooperation and synergy of the exploration industry is very healthy. The keen exchange of geological knowledge, better exploration methods, old friends looking at rocks, this is so special. Really, the credit goes to the Geological Survey of Canada and the Yukon now. Let us not forget the noble work of McConnell, Tyrrell, and Bostock to skim the surface. Now Dr. Maurice Colpron, armed with a PhD in geology carries the tradition uncannily.

Dr. Colpron's presentation at the magically historic Oddfellows Hall was so gripping you could have heard a pin drop. No one even coughed. This time, after 116 years of searching, the focus is on the regional bedrock geology and tectonic settlement of an area more or less centered around Carmacks. This helps understand other occurrences and prospects further afield or to connect more pieces of the puzzle; similarities in patterns and deposits emerge. In theory, this could scientifically lead the patient, alert prospectors to an important economic deposit.

After 22 years in the Yukon, I've learned that understanding the geology of mountains is a slow, plodding, exacting process. It must not mislead, much like legal surveyors might be held to do. Dr. Colpron did his undergraduate studies at Université du Québec à Montréal (UQAM), let us not forget Quebec hard rock geology and tradition. He then did his Master's at the University of Vermont in Burlington (granite, etc. mountain country).

His doctoral thesis for Queen's University in Kingston, ON was on the extremely complicated geological structures of the Selkirk Range north of Revelstoke, B.C. (six-year study, never really done well before, too steep and remote). When asked how eastern geologists would have understood western Cordilleran geology, Colpron explains, "I proved it clearly."

That is the purpose of a winning thesis. I didn't ask how Maurice got to the Yukon, but I do know that very keen and capable geologists have graced us with their pilgrimages. Today the prospectors are searching better as a result. We have no major discovery announced this year but they are getting smarter. They are attracted by some force of the Earth us lowly humans may not quite understand.

This is because of the immense work of the Yukon's Geological Survey (once the Geological Survey of Canada/the best in the world). The Yukon community of geologists and prospectors present at the core display event are the following, and might be called junior exploration companies, promoters, miners, that's what built our country. The properties are briefly described for orientation. Seven properties were toured by 17 interested investors amongst those listed: Alexco Resource Corp.; Keno/Bellekeno. ATAC Resources Inc.; Rackla River east of Keno. Banyan Gold; Hyland project north-east of Watson Lake. Golden Predator Inc.; Brewery Creek south-east of Dawson. The sponsors and hosts for the gathering were the Yukon Mining Alliance with Alkan Air, the Yukon Chamber of Mines, Yukon Economic Development, Northern Vision Development, Air North, and the Yukon Geological Survey.

We pondered on the repercussions of the Likely, B.C. event, and want to extend our empathy to those affected by the dam breach at the Mt. Polley mine. Our consensus here is that a better effort could have been made by Imperial Metals because this could have repercussions for miners across the world. We are also concerned, and very aggrieved by the huge loss.

New Record For Yukon Forest Fires

by Caroline Murray

sparked a new record of 245 forest fires in the Yukon this summer, said an official from Forest Resources.

Suzette Delmage, the Regional Communications Clerk in Whitehorse, said the record-breaking fire began August 22 in Haines Junction.

Yet with temperatures dropping and humidity increasing, the Dawson and Old Crow district is on the verge of cooling down. Delmage said Dawson's risk of new forest fires is nil.

A fire did, however, start in the observation zone near Ladue River August 21, bringing Dawson's total to 58 forest fires. The record stands at 72 forest fires, set in 1986.

Edward Lenchuck, the Assistant Resource Manager of Field Operations said "there's no chance of breaking that record".

Lenchuck said the Dawson and Old Crow district might have two

A Monday morning forest fire or three more fires this season.

Management Officer for Field Operations, said this month's hot and dry weather prolonged the fire season another three weeks .

"The season was extended three weeks after expected heavy rains during the first week in August did not arrive," said Leary.

"There should be some rains by the end of August," said Leary.

The largest Dawson forest fire burning during mid-August was 2,000 hectres and located 27 kilometres up the Dempster Highway.

Edward Lenchuck said the fire ohters were able to limit the spread of this fire, especially to its west.

There were 25 fire fighters working on the fire, but Lenchuck said, chances of significant movement is minimal and the crew has been removed.

"The crews were successful and Kelvin Leary, Dawson's Resource the fire is well in hand," said Lenchuk. "We're still watching it."

The amount of money spent fighting fires around Dawson was $1.3 million. In the total territory the costs were $3 million.

This year's fire season helped employ many Dawson residents and seasonal workers. Between 75 to 80 people were hired to fight fires this summer.

'We've had a successful year," says Leary. "We've had a very good Initial Attack crew, probably the best we've ever had."

Leary said people should still be king fire precautions. Leary sai when burning on the property, use a barrel with a screentop and keep water available. Also, do not light with the changing weather, the anything adjacent to standing tim-

Women Retreat to Moosehide

by Caroline Murray

Despite it's connotations, the Women's Summer Retreat has nothing to do with "man bashing" nor the very loosely defined feminist movement.

Instead, the happy haven held at Moosehide August 19 to 21 is a chance for women enjoy to each others' company in a peaceful atmosphere.

It's against the rules to be upset at the retreat, according to Leanne Holt, the retreat co-ordinator.

Several dozens of women dressed in Birkenstocks, sneakers, and track pants casually drifted from workshop, to buffet table, to fire pit, to waterfront from morning to night.

On the west side of the village, the unspoiled setting of the river and hillside provided for more mellow moments.

Boat transportation to and from Dawson made getting to Moosehide very accessible.

The intimate affair complied with it's self-indulgent theme of "Learning to Honour One's Self", With an abundance of food and self-directed workshops, the idea of about 70 women retreating to Moosehide for a couple of days made perfect sense.

Most of the workshops dealt with either mind and body or arts and craft themes.

Sessions dealing with the body, like Kathy Goddard's Message Workshop, Verna Schreiber's Reflexology class, and Lauressa Stinson's Body and Soul Stretch, were relaxing opportunities for women to recognize and respect their bodies.

Workshops centered on the mind included Bertha Blondin's Healing Circle, Angie Senft's Creative Planning, Mary Glab's Self Talk discussion, and Esther Dobbs' Self Care Workshop.

The arts and craft workshops were ideal opportunities for women to learn new talents, while engaging in both light and educational conversation. Women had the opportunity to master mask making from Diane Freed, dream catchers from Freda Roberts, key chain making from Elaine Behn, and jewelry mak-(continued on page 9)

History Hunter: War is declared in the Yukon

by Michael Gates ©

"We all had read skimpy reports of European troubles in the Dawson Daily News, but Europe, really, seemed a planet or so away."

(Laura Berton: I Married the Klondike)

The Dawson Daily News for June 30, 1914 carried a brief article noting the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the Austrian-Hungarian throne. It amounted to 67 words.

This was an inauspicious way to herald the coming of a global Armageddon. The headlines in the newspapers devoted more space to the events surrounding the Mexican Revolution, and upheaval in Ireland, but by the end of July, reports from Europe became increasingly ominous.

On July 25, Austria-Hungary and Servia (Serbia) were engaged in open hostilities. Russia was sympathetic with the Servian cause. If they became involved, Germany would stand behind the Austro-Hungarian position. Britain, though not in a state of war with Germany over the "Pan-Servian question," placed her fleet on a war basis on July 27.

By July 30, the headlines declared that Britain might not be able to remain apart from the conflict. Across the country, Canadians were abuzz with discussions about the latest developments. Crowds started gathering outside of newspaper offices in hope of seeing new reports as soon as they were posted.

It is not clear how these developments affected people in Dawson City; there were was little commentary in the newspaper regarding public stirrings of concern, yet the News was well supplied with images of all the key players in the developing events. "WAR EXTRA" declared the Dawson Daily News in a headline that filled one third of the front page of the August 1 edition; "Germany Declares War on the Russians."

Meanwhile, the local news in Dawson City focussed on the arrival of a large contingent of Shriners from the United States. The Auditorium Theatre, today better known as the Palace Grand, had just opened for the season to present movies to Dawsonites. Advertised for the silver screen in early August were "The Honeymooners," "Prisoner of War," "Red Saunders' Sacrifice," "The Signal of Distress," and "The Contortionist." Miss Zella Goodman was the pianist.

In addition to the Auditorium Theatre, there were two other theatres offering the newest in silent film productions. The Dawson Amateur Athletic Association was presenting a drama: "Two Daughters of Eve," two comedies ("Two Gay Dogs," "Chumps"), and a Pathé weekly newsreel. The admission was 25 and 50 cents. Professor Carpenter provided musical accompaniment on the piano. The Orpheum on Front Street was presenting three drama and two comedies.

Just as the performance was ending at the DAAA, news reached the patrons that the British fleet had sunk 6 German ships. Mr. Creamer, the manager of the theatre projected a slide of the king on the screen, and Mr. Carpenter, who was at the keyboard providing accompaniment to the films, struck the introductory chords to "Rule Britannia," and the audience rose in a body and sang "until the house shook." That was followed by "God Save the King." When the picture of Queen Mary was projected on the screen, the crowd sang "The Maple Leaf Forever."

The same happened at the other theatres. The Auditorium was filled to capacity. During an interval, a telegram was passed to George Black, the Commissioner of the Yukon. Upon reading it, he went to the stage, and after a perceptible pause, eloquent with suppressed emotion, he read the cable. The message

"Volunteers marched, bands played, and the politicians gave speeches to the assembled community. Men left Dawson in droves to enlist in the "Great War." The war wasn't so great. More than 600 men left the Yukon to enlist in the armed forces; of these, almost a hundred died while in service, and only a hundred of the men returned to the Yukon after the war." Credit: Waugaman Collection was from the Under Secretary of State saying that England was at war with Germany.

In silence, men and women looked at each other aghast, trying to absorb the significance of the words. According to Martha Black, "In the centre of the house about twenty scarlet-coated members of the Royal North West Mounted Police occupied seats. Two of the men, brothers, were former members of the Coldstream Guards, well over six feet in height, and both with fine voices. They looked at each other, whispered to other members of the force with them, rose to their feet and commenced signing 'God Save the King.' The effect was electrical; with one move the audience was on its feet and never in the world ... was the National Anthem sung with greater fervour or more depth of feeling than that night in this tiny mining village on the edge of the Arctic."

As they filed out of the theatres onto the twilit streets of Dawson, men and women, young and old were abuzz with earnest discussion. Though not yet officially stated, the community knew what this meant: that Canada, too, was at war alongside her motherland.

Official notice of Britain's declaration of war, did not reach Commissioner Black until August 6th. Black immediately wired the Secretary of State that a force of volunteers would be raised in the Yukon.

The day after the official notification of war, Black placed advertisements in the newspaper calling for volunteers. He and Dr. Alfred Thompson, Yukon's Member of Parliament, were the first to sign their names to the book at the Administration Building.

Dr. Thompson was quoted as saying: "Our Empire and our Dominion now face the greatest crisis in their history, and I feel it is my duty to be in Ottawa when such momentous matters are to be discussed."

Howard Grestock, a veteran of the Boer War, was the first to volunteer. Within days of the declaration, he was aboard the steamer Dawson, heading outside to enlist. Grestock later became one of the Yukon's war fatalities.

It wasn't long before local business leader Joe Boyle set about recruiting and equipping a machine gun battery, with fifty men. By war's end, every officer and twenty-four of the forty enlisted men were reported to have received decorations. It is said that this was a record for any Canadian Army unit in the First World War. Boyle too went overseas and soon became involved in the most exciting events that any Yukoner was to experience.

The Yukon threw itself into the war effort whole heartedly. Various women's groups, including the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire (IODE), the Order of the Eastern Star, The Women's Patriotic Service League of Dawson and the Daughters of Nippon began raising funds.

By Christmas, Various community groups had raised $20,000 for various causes. Throughout the war, Yukoners contributed financially amounts of money that put the rest of the country to shame.

Yukon men volunteered to serve in numbers that dwarfed the rates of enlistment in other parts of Canada. Over six hundred men eventually signed up. Many were awarded medals for bravery in the fields of combat; two Yukoners received the Victoria Cross. Nearly a hundred of these men made the ultimate sacrifice and left behind widows, orphans and grieving families.

The Yukon went through dramatic changes during the war years that would impact the territory profoundly in the decades that followed.

I will touch on some of these events over the following months. I hope you will share with me these moments of remembrance.

News & Happenings from the Community Library In the Library this month

It's a sure signs of summer's waning. The Library has ended its extended hours and returned to a regular service schedule.

Fall/Winter/Spring Hours:

Monday – Friday Noon – 6:30 p.m.

The Library will host two great readings in the coming month. Both are free, open to the public, and offer refreshments. First, on Tuesday, September 2nd at 7 p.m., we're thrilled to present Keith Billington, the bestselling author of House Calls by Dogsled and Tse-loh-ne. Keith has a new book called The Last Patrol (2013). A registered nurse from England, Keith Billington emigrated to Canada and worked in the Canadian Arctic for six years with his wife, Muriel, who is a nurse-midwife. In 1970 Keith, along with ten other men, embarked on the nearly 800 km trip by dog team, from Fort MacPherson to Dawson City. This was a commemorative journey of the famous "lost patrol" of 1910, when a crew of Royal Northwest Mounted Police tragically perished attempting the same trip. In addition to reading from The Last Patrol, Keith will share stories and do a slideshow presentation of his fascinating adventure.

Then, on Monday September 15th at 7 p.m., current Berton House Writer-in-Residence Anik See will do a reading before wrapping up her tenure here. While in Dawson, Anik has been working on a collection of essays, as well as a literary non-fiction book that combines "family history, personal experience, and the existence of a family tree that goes back to the 12th century". Anik has also been busy judging a pair of local writing competitions and participating in the Riverside Arts Festival, but it hasn't all been work. She, her husband, and young son, have also found time to canoe the Yukon from Whitehorse to Dawson.

Four things are needed to become a writer, says Simon Winchester

«To be a writer is one of the best ways to make a living that it is possible to imagine," Simon Winchester told his audience in Skagway back in May at the North Words Writers' Symposium.

For him to become a writer, as it turned out, required a number of things, and Winchester managed to possess them all: talent, persistence, dumb luck, and the kindness of strangers and of friends.

Nevertheless, this was not the career that the British born Winchester had selected for himself as a lad. At 70 he can look back with some humour at the young man who wanted to be in her Majesty's Royal Navy as a way of getting round to see a lot of the world, but at the time he was heartbroken to discover that people with red/green colour blindness are not welcomed into that career with open arms.

Writing wasn't his second career choice either. He went to Oxford and studied geology, thinking this would be another way to travel a bit. He was, he admitted to his audience, an indifferent student, and gained an indifferent degree.

In university slang it was known as a Twotwo (Tutu), after Desmond of the same last name, but it really meant a second class standing in a second tier subject.

It did get him to travel. He was hired to go to Uganda and find copper for a mining company. He didn't find any, but the job did allow him to live in quite a fine style and at the same time feel rather like he was spinning his wheels.

Winchester has loved to travel and backpack and hike all his life, and it was no surprise that he would read a book called Coronation Everest by James (later Jan) Morris. He describes this book as being his epiphany. He wrote to Morris, praising his book, outlining his state of mind, and asking for advice on how to become a Morris wrote back, advising him to quit his position and try very hard to get a newspaper job of some sort. So he left Uganda, went to work on an oil rig, read more of Morris's books and kept applying for newspaper jobs until he got one, in Newcastle.

While they had not yet met, he kept writing Morris, sending him copies of his stories and receiving a mentorship by mail. He moved on to the Guardian in Belfast and was there to report on the Troubles. He was posted to Washington just is time for Watergate.

All of this falls under the headings of talent and persistence. Morris provided the kindness.

He was not to meet his mentor for many years and finally did so while doing some climbing in Wales. By that time Morris had begun his transition as one of the earliest very public transsexuals and, while still living with his wife, had begun to live as Jan Morris (which is how you will find all of his books when you look them up). Winchester did not know about his gender switch and so was taken by surprise when they finally met in person.

James had become Jan, a middle-aged lady looking every bit the part, and they all sat down and had a nice cup of tea.

"Of course, being Britons, nothing was said," said Winchester dryly. "We drank our tea, ate our Arrowroot biscuits and talked about crops and things."

They have remained friends and have written a few things together, including a book about the British Raj in India.

It is interesting that Winchester's career was kick-started by this unusual friendship, because, although he was doing fairly well as a journalist and an author of travel books, he really hit his stride with The Professor and the Madman, a book which delved into the life of the unusual individual who contributed so much to the making of the Oxford English Dictionary project.

That was a case of dumb luck. He was working on a completely different project when he happened upon a book with a fairly slight reference to Dr. W.C. Minor, the madman of the story. He was reading in the bathtub and happened to have a telephone in reach. A call revealed one of his friends turned out to know where he could get access to the research material he would need to read to get the whole story.

In England it was originally published as The Surgeon of Crowthorne: A Tale of Murder, Madness and the Love of Words, and it's probably fortunate that North American editions had the much more catchy title The Professor and the Madman: A Tale of Murder, Insanity, and the Making of the Oxford English Dictionary.

It was also several levels of sheer dumb luck that the front page review of the book in the New York Times Review of Books came out on a stormy Labour Day in the USA and got read by many, many more people than might ordinarily have read it on a holiday. Winchester is sure that helped to make the book a hit.

The success of the book also changed his life again. He had been focusing on travel writing for his books. This shifted his attention to historical subjects, and that has been his field ever since.

The geology degree wasn't a complete waste of time either. Book about maps, about the ocean, about tectonic plates, earthquakes and volcanoes have drawn on this background as well.

That said, the story he told his audience that evening certainly did prove the points he began with, that talent, persistence, dumb luck, and the kindness of strangers and of friends were all important to the shaping of his career.
