Significant issues continue to plague the wastewater treatment plant

Two years into its operational life, Dawson's Fifth Avenue Wastewater Treatment Plant has yet to deliver three consistent months worth of operational success. Until it has done that the territorial government will not turn the plant over to the town and Corix, the contractor, must continue to run it. At present the town is not responsible for the 0&M of the plant.

The latest report from Superintendent of Public Works Norm Carlson, delivered on July 22, indicates that some progress is being made towards compliance, but there are still failures.

"Wastewater testing passed Water Board parameters on June 24 with results just coming in under the high limit threshold for CBOD (Carbonaceous biochemical oxygen demand ) and TSS (Total Suspended Solids)," Carson wrote, "but the samples taken on July 2 failed the Water licence parameter for

"The position of the city," said CAO Jeff Renaud, "is that a fail is a fail and that has been the position of the Yukon government to date."

Renaud said that the most recent test samples provided even more dismal results and that these were being forwarded to the Water Board.

These were exceptionally significant failures," he told

Previous failures have been what he called marginal, or

"close to the standard", but the samples pulled later in July were "drastic failures, in the order of 10 times" the acceptable amounts.

Carlson has also indicated that "There are still major construction deficiencies to address" at the plant. Councilor Stephen Johnson asked what some of these might be.

Renaud responded that there remains problems with some of the concrete in the building, with certain valves and with the H-Vac (heating, ventilation, air-conditioning) system in the plant. Problems in this latter area were thought to be the cause of mould issues during the first winter of the plant's

He said the Yukon government is aware of these issues and has told Corix that they must be resolved before the plant will be deemed acceptable.

Catherine Harwood, YTG's project manager on this file, confirms that the July 16 sample did show a spike in readings.

"There are operational reasons for that," she said. "I've been trying to get the message out for almost two years now that there are anomalies and there are things that are exceeding the limits. The goal is to get consistent compliance. We're not there yet, but we still have confidence that it will perform consistently. That's not just wishful thinking. There are external reviews and we're waiting for some reports that Corix has commissioned.

"There are some straightforward and inexpensive things that can be done," she continued, indicating that these will be outlined in the expert report that she is expecting to receive shortly.

"Essentially, the plant is doing what it needs to do that majority of the time, most months of the year and then we have 'over the limit' events when a couple of parameters or even just one -TSS mostly - have been difficult to meet. There are a lot other parameters that it is passing but we don't talk about those.

"It's never gong to work perfectly all the time - nothing does," she said, "but we've got the contract requirements that Corix, Dawson and the government are all well aware of and we're holding Corix to their end of the contract."

Once past the three month hurdle, the company will still be on the hook for a two year warranty, whenever that time

Uffish Thoughts: Remembering One Giant leap for Mankind

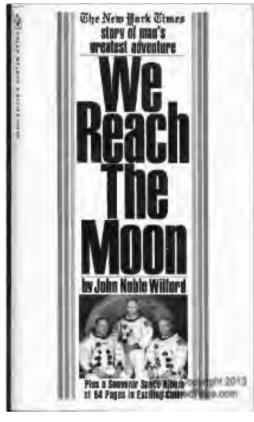

By Dan Davidson

Between July 16 and July 22, 1969 I spent a lot of time in front of my grandparents' black and white TV set in the living room, watching as much as the CBC and CTV networks would show us of the Apollo 11 mission to the moon. I was a month away from my 18th birthday and had been an avid science fiction reader since I was 11, so this was very much like seeing fiction come to life for me.

SF readers have moments like that in different generations. A Math professor who was allowed to offer an SF course while I was in university told me his moment came in August, 1945, when they exploded the atom bombs. All of a sudden those massive explosions in Doc Smith's Legion of Space novels were real.

The Gemini and Apollo missions were a lot like that for me. Oh, they were a bit tedious compared to the adventures of the back yard inventors who managed to work the whole miracle in the evenings and on weekends in the books I'd read, but they were real.

After the event the New York Times would put out one of the first instant books, a quickie paperback assembled from the reportage they'd done on the story and whipped into shape by a staff writer. I used to have a copy of WE REACH THE MOON, with its title in "second coming" type, and I even managed to ignore the fact that we Canadians weren't part of that the Challenger Shuttle explosion story in those days.

It'd be 43 years before Chris Hadley (who was 10 in 1969 when he watched the landing) made us really feel like we were in the frame. Not that he was the first Canadian astronaut, but he made it seem like a normal thing again and put some excitement

In those early days the excitement came when things went wrong, when rockets blew up on the launch pad, or when the first of the Apollo series incinerated the crew in a cabin fire during a pre-flight test. That disaster was surpassed only by in 1986. In between there was the misfire of the space. Apollo 13 adventure, Forty-five years ago Neil program, and probably made it easier for critics to harp about the massive expenditure and ignore the spin-off technological benefits.

Most of the electronic gadgets we rely on today would still be in the development stages if not for the space program. Massive computers that took up space the size of a classroom began their evolution down to the size of the laptop I'm typing on this evening and the smartphone in your pocket because all that number crunching power had to be squeezed into lunar and command modules and shot into

There's still a Norman Mailer (Of controversy over whether he a Fire on the Moon) used the definite article or not;

He would checklist mentality probably have loved to have deliberately tried been on one of the other five to make the space missions that actually landed program as boring men on the moon (ten other routine as astronauts in total) before the possible. Making it program ended in 1972, but that

Forty-five years later the Apollo program is gone, the space shuttle program is gone and any Canadians heading into space have to hitch a ride on some other nation's rockets. It seems quite likely that no nation could, at this time, be able to accomplish a lunar landing.

Of course, we humans have been there, so some folks are setting their sights on Mars. NASA already has a very successful robot wandering over the planet's surface gathering data. India, China and the United Arab Emirates are already planning unmanned missions of their own to the Red Planet.

NASA is talking about partnering with Elon Musk (founder of the Tesla electric car and the SpaceX rocket) to plan a public-private-partnership deal to make the trip by 2026. Let's see, 12 years? I should still be around to see that one.

Mähsi cho to the Moosehide Gathering

To Bonnie, Lydia, Marion, Rhonda, Linda, Trudy, Georgina, Marion, Martha and Dhana,

I am surprised and thrilled to be the winner and now owner of the beautiful handmade quilt from the Moosehide Gathering made by all of you!

Although I was at the Opening Ceremonies, I was not able to attend the Closing ones, however, my niece Hannah Eden was. Even though Hannah grew up in England and has recently moved to Canada in the past year, my stories of the Yukon and Dawson in particular made such an impression on her that she travelled here this summer and was fortunate to become the intern for the Klondike Sun. She has done a great job at writing many articles and photographing local events, several of them covering the Gathering. Having Hannah accept the gift of the quilt on Sunday for me, is just another experience that she and I have shared throughout this summer.

My husband Brian and I have spent 25 summers in the Yukon and also several years teaching in Dawson and Pelly Crossing. Darren Taylor, Mike Taylor, Jason Barber and Robert Christianson were a few of the wonderful students I taught at Robert Service School when they were in Grade Two and Three. Lydia was my Assistant!

The Peel River valley, the land and the rivers hold a very special place in our hearts for myself and Brian. He and I have done extensive hiking, camping and canoeing in the area over the years. Our most memorable canoe trip was down the Blackstone, the Peel, the Little Bell and the Porcupine River to Old Crow.

About 12 years ago, we could not resist any longer and were fortunate to be able buy our house at Rock Creek on the Klondike River, which we love and where I stay for the summer season. . Even though we are only here for now a few months of the year, we enjoy the extent that we are part of the Dawson community.

Each of our three sons have lived and worked in Dawson for varying periods of time and all of our family have a strong and lasting connection to the Yukon.

Never have I been able to experience anywhere, something as special the Moosehide Gathering. It is such a unique and important event that the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in community so generously host, welcome and share with everyone.

Even though I am tempted to leave the quilt here in Dawson, I have decided to take it home with me to Toronto where I can cherish it everyday!

Thank you again,

Louise Levett

Seattle Mayor Proclaims Klondike Legacy Day

Day Legacy in Seattle, The mayor of Washington. Seattle made a proclamation to ensure that the Klondike history and its importance to Seattle is recognized. Seattle was the primary gateway city for the rush of gold seekers as word spread about the Klondike gold fields. Today, National Parks in Seattle, Skagway Alaska, Whitehorse and Dawson City Yukon keep the story alive and preserve this history that has had such a significant impact on those communities and the world.

The proclamation by the mayor of Seattle comes as the Friends of the Klondike Corridor organized a Seattle block party on behalf of the Klondike Gold Rush National Historical Park in Pioneer Square, downtown Seattle. The block party was a day-long event featuring Gillian Campbell as Klondike Kate and her band, Robert Service readings by Buckwheat Donahue and Delenn Larsen, gold panning, food, a silent auction, the Keystone Kops, old time photos, as well as booths from the Yukon and Alaska for Holland America, Air North, Yukon's Airliine, White Pass & Yukon Route Railroad, Tourism Yukon and Skagway AK.

Donna Larsen, the executive director of the Friends of the Klondike Corridor explained the purpose of the event was to increase awareness in Seattle, Alaska and the Yukon that there is a National Park in Seattle that is completely dedicated to the Klondike Gold Rush. "People we talked to had no idea that the rich history that the Yukon and Alaska share with Seattle is displayed right in downtown Seattle." commented Donna. This National Park is an urban park, and is actually located inside a historic brick building the old Cadillac Hotel. There are no trees at this National Park. However there are two floors of incredible exhibits that not only talk about the start of the Klondike gold rush in Seattle, but carries the story all the way the exhibits talk about Skagway, the Yukon, the First Nations and the experience – which is really cool to see in Seattle" added Donna. "I also think by inviting down Yukon tourism businesses, the vast marketing opportunities in Seattle are now more obvious. Residents and visitors who visit the National Park get very excited about the Gold Rush, and would love to help learn about tourism products that actually lets them see the real thing."

Holland America, Tourism Yukon, Skagway, AK, White Pass, Air North, Yukon's Airline and 4Culture, the event was a huge success for us. I think that we introduced a lot of people to the potential of the Klondike Corridor."

Throughout the day shows were performed by Gillian Campbell, a long-term Klondike Kate performer, and stranger to the Yukon. She has performed throughout the Territory over the past 30 years. Buckwheat Donahue flew down from Skagway to share Robert Service poetry with audience, joined by 14 year old Delenn Larsen, an avid Service fan. A big hit at the event was gold panning for the younger crowd, and silent auction generated several hundred dollars. Even the Keystone Kops showed up to toss a few people into "jail". Klondike Penny used the museum exhibits for old time photos and had a constant lineup all day. The day ended with two big reveals. First, the proclamation by the mayor of Seattle, making July 17, 2014 Klondike Legacy Day. And finally, the new signage for the National Park was unveiled, which will make the Park more visible in Pioneer Square.

The Friends of the Klondike Corridor, Inc is a non-profit corporation and a Yukon Society, created, organized and lead by Donna and Mike Larsen. The organization began as a Yukon Society to support the needs of Parks Canada Klondike Historic July 17, 2014 is now Klondike through to Dawson City. Many of sites in the Yukon. However, after meeting with the U.S. National Service superintendants in Seattle and Skagway for the Klondike Gold Rush National Historical sites, it was agreed to join together to form the first international Friends group. "All the paperwork took a bit of time to sort through, but formal agreements are now in place with both federal governments." The Friends group's mandate is simple: support the National Parks by providing services that they are not able to or don't have "Thanks to our sponsors, the budget to do themselves that assists in the preservation, management and delivery of programs for historical, educational, scientific and recreational purposes. example, in Seattle, the goal was to raise awareness and increase visitation in the park, but parks are not able to do marketing or advertising themselves, so a Friends group can step in and help with that need.

"Our next projects are to work with Parks Canada and the National Park Service superintendents to develop other initiatives to support them. Ideas we are exploring include help to restore the Atlin Barge (The barge that is docked next to the SS Klondike), opportunities at Bear Creek, a family game idea and building a facility to house the historic trolley in Skagway, and youth programs in music and art mainly, but not limited to Seattle." organization is hoping to build great projects that the residents and businesses of the Yukon, Skagway and Seattle all want to help out with. While they will require funding, they will also provide training programs and internships for people interested in quality restoration work, living history, and other skills that will be very valuable in the future.

Anyone interested supporting the organization visit www.GoKlondike. can com, follow us on Twitter @ GoKlondike, or FaceBook at Friends of the Klondike Corridor.

DCMF Triumphs in spite of thunder and rain

Story & Photos By Dan Davidson

Shortly after midnight on Sunday the 36th annual Dawson City Music Festival ended with many repeated choruses of Neil Young's "Keep on Rockin' in the Free World" (into which someone slipped a verse from Michael Jackson's "Billy Jean" for some reason). With a final cry of "Save the Peel!" the weekend came to an official end, though a number of parties lingered on into the middle early morning. Joy Mullen

The year's DCMF couldn't boast of its weather, unless you like everything but snow. Friday was fine and the Waterfront Gazebo concert that has been kicking off the official weekend for some years now was well attended and the show basked in sunshine.

What was missing was the presence of CBC-North, which has been sponsoring this event for years and making it a part of the afternoon's Airplay show. Not this year. Nor was there a CBC presence, except for some folks who only freelance there, at all. Budget cuts.

Friday night remained fine and the DCMF venue in Minto Park was well attended, though it seemed a bit thin for the first couple of hours. Those who came later missed a spirited opening set by the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Singers and solid performances from Diyet and her sidemen Bob Hamilton, and Robert van Lieshout. While the first two acts seemed to be more listening music, Cris Derksen and Joy Mullen got the crowd on its feet with their set, and the floor was busy after that with DIANA, Cousins and By Divine Right. The evening wrapped up officially at 1:50 a.m. with about ten minutes of flex time to allow for the inevitable chants of "ONE!MORE!SONG!" that always seem to crop up past 10:30 in the evening.

Daytime events on Saturday began with the Kidsfest at 11, while the folks who had headed up King Street on the Midnight 10:00 were probably still slogging up the Dome Road.

Afternoon workshops in the Main Stage tent and the Palace Grand filled up the afternoon, along with mini-concerts at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre, the Waterfront Gazebo and St. Paul's Fortunately all the outdoor events had finished before the clouds burst and the thunder rumbled around the hills. It was an epic downpour that included a mixture of rain and hail. Fortunately there were lots of tents and canopies, but the several dozen campers at the overflow campsite on the Crocus Bluff Ball Diamond would spend the rest of the weekend hoping their fly canopies kept the rain from soaking their tents.

The evening – during which it drizzled from time to time - gave listeners a lot of choice. There were concerts at St. Paul's (7:30 - 9:00) and at the Palace Grand (7:30 - 11:00) and of course the Main Stage Tent from 7:30 to Canyon Mountain was full of energy and rocked more than their bluegrass look would make a person expect. Jaffa Road took the tent into a jazzier, more eastern space. The Midnight Suns were a big hit and the end of their set provoked some angry demands for more. It is to the credit of Alex Cuba and his band that this negative energy was dispelled almost as soon as they hit the stage once the crew had reset the mikes.

Jaron Freeman Fox, Monkeyjunk (another crowd favorite) and Rural Alberta Advantage closed out the evening.

The City of Dawson public works crew was kept busy when a water main burst between the Pentecostal Church and Fifth Avenue Bed and Breakfast. It was a gusher that flooded about half the block around it and necessitated cordoning off that part of the street and the adjacent flooded boardwalks. RCMP had to be stationed to keep lookieloos from wandering too close to the potentially dangerous large rated ground near the eruption, had begun at 7:30 with Feed- been sold for this year's event. which was quelled but still not safe, before 11 that night.

Sunday's events began at 1 p.m. with themed workshops at Main Stage and mini-concerts at all the other venues, except the Gazebo, which had to be moved indoors to the Odd Fellows Hall because it was raining on and off most of the day, though without the volume and intensity of Saturday.

In the evening the Palace Grand was busy from 7:00 to 9:30, after which folks joined Musical laughter rang from Moosehide Village on July 24th as Moosehide Gathering 2014, one of the largest gatherings of First Nation people, came to the shore of the Yukon river. Hosted by the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in First Nation, the 12th Moosehide Gathering was a huge success.

First Nation communities from across the Yukon and Alaska came together for a weekend of dance, song and celebration of First Nation traditions. Moosehide Gathering, founded in 1993, is one of the biggest gatherings of traditional dancers and singers in North America.

Dancers and performers from Pelly Crossing, Whitehorse, Ross River and Old Crow adorned the stage and performed traditional dances all weekend long – the theme of song and dance reflecting the theme of the weekend; water and water conservation.

Celebrations continued through Sunday's downpour and despite the rain, organizers such as Tyla Crowe and Kristen Cook were extremely pleased with the numbers at this years gathering. Overwhelmed by the enormous generosity of volunteers, whose selfless effort made the gathering run smoothly, Crowe offered her thanks at Sunday's closing ceremony.

Craft vendors such as Dennis Shorty and Jennifer Froehling from Ross River, Yukon, said it is the people that make the gathering so special.

"The people are so warm, welcoming and every time we get hooked!" says Froehling about Moosehide Gathering. "There is a pure energy and a positive energy."

The positivity and welcoming energy was reflected in every element of the gathering, from the free four day feast provided by the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in for the thousands of guests, to the gift giving after the closing ceremony – a custom of the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in people to honour the visitors.

"We love Moosehide, it is one of our favourite festivals to come to," says Marilyn Jensen of the Dakhkà Khwaàn Dancers from southern Yukon.

"There is so much good energy and it is so great to see how strong the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in culture is."

Dennis Shorty, artist from Ross River sits in front of his jewellery and art stall with his wife Jennifer Froehling, originally from Germany.

Drum making workshops took place all weekend and were free for participants who wanted to learn traditional drum making.

Moosehide Gathering Begins in Showers and Sunshine

Story & Photos By Dan Davidson

Moosehide Gathering 2014, the 12th event of that name since 1993, got off to a rousing start on the evening of Thursday, July 24. Given the forecast for the weekend, it may have been tempting fate to select "Water" as the theme of this year's event.

The Arbour gathering place was packed as the crowd squeezed in out of the drizzle that had been teasing the Klondike all day, sometimes pelting the area with rain and making for damp boat trips to and from Moosehide Village.

The crowd was greeted by emcee William Greenland, filling this role once again as he has many times in the past. Greenland settled the people and introduced the political speakers for the evening.

Taylor spoke first.

"Good evening everybody. It's an honour on behalf of Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in council and all its citizens, we are very grateful that you've taken the time out of your schedule and made the effort to share this weekend with us. To the organizers ... and the 200 plus volunteers, mähsi cho. To the elders: create a great spirit for our youth this weekend. To the youth: get out there and dance.'

Sandy

Klondike, spoke a bit longer, quoting a passage from the UN Declaration of the Rights of Indigenous People. Silver, a former teacher, spoke of the importance of education and of the willingness to learn that he had experienced during his years at the Robert Service School.

For the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in, he said, the willingness of the elders to teach and the capacity of the youth to learn, "has developed this community into a powerhouse."

"What impresses me most is the strong cultural identity and the desire to share ancestral values."

"It's an absolute honour to be here today I hope you all enjoy yourselves. I want you all to dance together, sing together and live together because that's what really important up here."

Mayor Wayne Potoroka began Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Chief Eddie and ended his speech by showing off his fluency in Han.

Dawson City loves its cultural events, but none has more meaning or significance than Moosehide Gathering. It connects a nation with its traditions. It unites people from every corner of the earth in a celebration of First Nations' culture, the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in people and the importance of friendships and family. '

Following these speeches, the entire crowd filed outside Silver, Member of (where it had ceased to rain) and the Legislative Assembly for gathered around the pit where

After the Rangers fired off a salute and raised the four flags. the Hän Singers and Dancers presented a number of traditional songs from their growing repertoire. The return of five songs from Tanacross, Alaska, was the inspiration for the first Gathering in 1993.

LNG Protest held in Yukon Energy Plant

A small protest against the decision to allow Yukon Energy to build liquefied natural gas (LNG) generators at its plant in Whitehorse, took place outside the utility's diesel plant in Dawson on July 24 at 4 p.m.

This was timed, explained Julia Frisch, to coincide with a similar protest in Whitehorse.

In the view of the protesters saying yes to LNG for power generation is the same as saying yes to obtaining natural gas by hydraulic fracturing, which the community of Dawson made it quite clear it did not want when the government's Select Committee Regarding the Risks and Benefits of Hydraulic Fracturing had its public hearing here in June.

"How can we say no to fracking in Yukon and buy it from elsewhere?" asked Suzanne Guimond. "Fracked gas is not a solution, it is a big part of the problem. We need to spend dollars on REAL solutions, not

No Rules in Rustic at the distillery

Story & Photos By Hannah Eden

The soft purr of a generator creeps through the walls of the homemade wooden still of the Klondike River Distillery. Hidden behind the looming spruce trees of West Dawson is the illusive family-run company – a small collection of wooden buildings the only give-away to life between the trees.

Hands are hard at work, bottling and labeling the fresh batch of premium vodka, made from the Klondike, for the Klondike.

Start to finish, every element of the process is Yukon based, from the natural Klondike river water to the equipment used – founded in 2008, this mysterious distillery is the first of its kind in the Yukon.

Glenn Riegert and Dorian Amos are sat with muddied boots on a small picnic table soaked by sunlight. These two long-term friends and former brothers in law, are not your usual business entrepreneurs. Only referring to each other by nicknames such as "Zebedee" and "Dudes", this friendship is the foundation of the business.

"I got that nickname from Dudes," shares Riegert, or more commonly known as Zebedee. "He is always bouncing all over the place!" shouts Amos from across the still where he is filtering the next batch of liquid gold – the vodka in which will soon be married with real 24 carat gold flakes.

Former British cartoonist, Dorian Amos worked on the label for the bottle of their prized product – Klondike Vodka. Branded as 'The Spirit of The Yukon' this premium vodka is only crafted in small batches with a slow and methodical technique.

Filtered to its purest and smoothest taste and then laced with gold flakes, the bottle is continuously being watched by the omnipresent men.

However, the laid-back lifestyle of these two entrepreneurs is also a reflection of the Yukon. A 'no rules in rustic' theme runs through the blood of the business, from the location of the still to the design of the building itself.

A rustic, wooden laboratory sits off to the side, hidden away from most eyes – a reflection of the business practice.

Mason jars labeled orange, blueberry and smoked salmon sit high on selves soaking in the Klondike Vodka produced by the still.

"When we were going into it, we just wanted to have fun," says Riegert.

"We're building this for the kids and that is our dream goal – so that the kids can have something to look back onto and can have a life."

Family, fun and a simple life are values reflected in every drop of the distillery's final product – Klondike Vodka is the stepping-stone for greater things to come from Klondike River Distillery.

Dawson City's Flynn named to Arctic Winter Games board

By Marcel Vander Wier on July 22, 2014 The Whitehorse Star

Dawson City resident John challenge for the Stanley Cup. Flynn is one of two new directors named to the Arctic Winter Games International Committee on Monday.

The Arctic Winter Games is the largest multisport cultural event in the circumpolar North.

Flynn, 59, replaces the recently-retired committee president, Gerry Thick of Whitehorse.

Joining Flynn on the board will be Jeff Jacobson of Fairbanks, who replaces Wendell Shiffler as an Alaska director.

Flynn participated in seven Arctic Winter Games as an athlete and coach, beginning with the 1974 event in Anchorage, Alaska.

He currently manages a successful mining business in the Klondike, and is a member of the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in First Nation.

'John will be a great resource to the committee because of his experience as a participant and the volunteer roles he has played committee's nominations chair.

Flynn is well known as a into the Yukon Sport Hall of North Star Borough. Fame in 2012.

The long-time minor hockey coach helped organize the 1997 Dawson City Nuggets reenactment of the original 1905

Prior to that, he was known as a star snowshoe biathlon athlete, winning 13 Arctic Winter Games medals over a 15year span. Nine were golds.

In an interview today, Flynn said he is hoping to use his position to inspire youth from rural Yukon to pursue their dreams.

"Being from small community, I understand the hardships of the young people trying to get onto teams coming from, as we call, the big city of Whitehorse," he said.

"I always loved the Arctic Winter Games, and just want all of the young people to be involved in any way possible. I will try my best to promote Thick, 70, retired last month after spending 30 years on the committee - including 20 as president.

Jacobson was born and raised in Alaska, and most recently served as president of the 2014 in rural Yukon," said Shiffler, Fairbanks Arctic Winter Games outgoing Host Society.

A teacher for more than 30 years, Jacobson is currently hockey player, and was inducted the chief of staff for Fairbanks'

"Jeff's exceptional understanding of the goals of the Arctic Winter Games and his positive leadership style helped Fairbanks host one of the most successful Games in recent memory," said Shiffler. "His experience and enthusiasm will be a great asset to the committee."

The next Arctic Winter Games will take place in Nuuk, Greenland, March 6 to 12, 2016, but will feature a smaller athlete contingent than usual, as six sports cannot be hosted due to a lack of ice facilities.

include Games participation from Alaska, Yukon, Northwest Territories, Northern Alberta, Nunavut, Greenland, Nunavik (Quebec), Yamal (Russia) and Sápmi.

Visitor Names: Katherine Epstein and Paula Joyce

Traveling from: Davis, California

Comments about their visit: Katherine Epstein and Paula Joyce visited Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre as part of their northern tour to celebrate their retirement from teaching.

Hailing from Davis, California the ladies were enjoying the cultural and natural history of the north by car and bike. Katherine and Paula were grateful for the kind support and schedule planning provided by the Dawson Visitor Centre. They have enjoyed Yukon and Alaska so much they are scheming how to get back to check out winter and the northern lights.

Feminine Fury Rocks the Klondike River Valley

Story by: Andrea Pelletier Photos by: Michael MacLean

On Saturday night at a cabin off Bonanza Creek Road affectionately known as the Hobo Mansion, there was an all-female wrestling match. The fight, which took inspiration from classic WWE matches of the 1990s, was the second event of its kind in Dawson City.

According to league officials 'The Dawson City League of Lady Wrestlers (DCLOLW) was founded in 1898 by Klawin' Klondike Kate and Martha Black-Eye. What started out as a monthly event quickly gained popularity with the miners and soon there were bi-weekly fights held at the Palace Grand Theatre. As boom turned into bust, so did the league and it eventually folded in 1905.'

The Dawson City League of Lady Wrestlers (DCLOLW) was re-established last summer by a group of young women, in tribute to the founding fighters. Their first event the "Hobo Showdown" was held August 23, 2013 to a crowd of just under a hundred enthusiastic fans. This second installment of the now annual match drew a crowd of over 200 on Saturday night and featured a collection of wacky characters, humorous fight sequences as well as a hot dogs and a full line of DCLOLW merchandise.

After the success of the first "Hobo Showdown", the league began operating a sister chapter from Toronto known simply as the League of Lady Wrestlers (LOLW). The LOLW held their first event in February of 2014 in Toronto to a sold out crowd of 250 people. The LOLW also has an upcoming event the "Island Rumble" on the Toronto Islands September 6, 2014.

Tracking down grandmother by land and water

Nadia White, greatgranddaughter of Elmer (Stroller) and Alice Josephine (Josie) Keys White is on a quest to find out all she can about the life of her great grandmother.

Klondike newsman Stroller White is pretty well known as a historical character, having worked at the Skagway News during Soapy Smith's heyday. He moved on to Dawson in 1899, where he became "The Stroller" for the Klondike Nugget and wrote all manner of news for the next five years. Then he relocated to Whitehorse where he edited and eventually owned the Whitehorse Star until 1916. After that he moved back to Alaska, and was elected to the state's House of Representatives.

"The stories of Stroller White's Klondike news days were a part of the myth of my growing up and I'm sure led to me being a journalist," said Nadia White while basking in some Klondike sunshine after paddling to Dawson.

In her teens the family traced the White family's travels during his career and Nadia was fascinated even then, found herself wanting to get off the ferries of the Alaska Marine Highway and look around the corners.

Thirty years later, while visiting a friend in Ketchikan, she was challenged to pursue Josie's story as a way of getting to follow all that up. That appealed to her, especially when she learned that Josie was something of an outdoors woman herself.

While some of the Stroller's legend is of his own invention, according to his granddaughter, much less is known about the wife and child who tagged along with him, shared his adventures and had a few of their own.

It was said of Josie in her obituary that she had climbed every worthwhile peak in southeastern Alaska. Nadia is a wanderer too, and has often wondered what made Josie wander.

"I have followed her in my imagination, followed her path in my way," she said.

"I rode my bicycle from Oklahoma to Sumner, Washington. I paddled a kayak (solo) from Fort Townsend, Wash., to Juneau, Alaska, and then I took the ferry to Skagway."

This year she paddled the Yukon River Quest as part of Skagway News publisher Jeff Brady's Skagnificent Six crew.

"This was to finish her journey by river."

Nadia sees both differences and similarities between her travels and Josie's.

"It really is moving through landscapes that were busier back in those days. Now that busyness has faded and the landscapes I'm passing through are not that different from the landscapes she passed through – a lot of wild space in between those towns that I passed through on my own power."

Now a journalism professor at the University of Montana in Missoula, after an earlier career in journalism in the Rockies, her ambition after all her investigations into Josie's past is to produce a biography.

"My hope is to make the information dump meaningful by connecting it to her everyday life, which I'm not going to pretend is the adventurous life of some of the entrepreneurial women in the North. I think being a homemaker here during the Gold Rush was its own kind of adventure and I'd like to understand that."

The final product will be a blend of her research and her experiences while doing that research.

"I want to combine those things in a way that will appeal to regular readers. Not just an adventure book or a biography, but two stories about lives that are intertwined. It's a little exploration of gender and place as well."

Some of Nadia's own adventures are recorded in her blog, Travels with Josie. One of the last pieces of the puzzle for her would be to spend part of the winter in Dawson City. She hopes to be able to organize that for some time this coming

Shaping the unending Slide

Story by Nina Vroemen Dan Davidson

In our attempt to situate ourselves in the ever-changing experience of the present we create markers, indicators, proof of the past and tools to As measure it's existence. human beings, subjects to the effects of time we take comfort in continuity, in the falsities of so-called permanent structures, laws and landmarks.

For many Dawsonites the streets, the slide can be seen its perpetual gathering, it's unending fall.

The Moosehide Slide became the subject of inquiry for visiting artist Alison Judd when she applied for the Klondike Artist in Residence Program. Even before visiting Dawson Judd knew the landslide moved, not just the landscape but the people. From the first people, the Tr'ondek Hwech'in, calling it "Eddha dadhecha", meaning "weathered moosehide hanging" to those today that climb its weary terrain, the landslide reminds us of change.

Working in the medium of print, a seemingly reproducible a sprawling banner of crinkled art form, concepts of loss and impermanence are of particular ridge. interest of Judd's. Capturing moments of decay in ink can engage with the "so so oh", creates a trace of its existence, the "slow sudden slide" of Judd's with the sedentary restraints Photos by Nina Vroeman and of printmaking, Judd's work in Dawson consisted less of printing than of casting. Rather than lugging up a printing press, Judd chose a more nomadic method of capturing the slide. Instead of imprinting the rocks Judd chose to capture the impression of the rocks themselves by casting their form with hand pressed paper.

Prior to her visit in Dawson, Judd produced, pressed and shipped 125 sheets of Abaca paper to the artist residency. Moosehide slide is that. Looking Judd chose to make Abaca, North, down any of the city's a banana fibre-based paper, because unlike regular paper, on the horizon, hanging in the Abaca shrinks when wet and holds its form once it dries. With the paper in hand, a jug of water, and a head full of quiet thoughts, Judd would hike up the slide in her contemplative practice.

Every day while Judd was here Institute of Art and Culture's she engaged in her rock ritual, waking early to climb the slide, wrap rocks, descend and finally retrieve the sundried forms in the evening, filling plastic garbage bags with the virtually weightless impressions of rocks.

> Judd cast the jagged, weighty rocks of the landslide in delicate paper chrysalises. For her installation she scattered them on the ODD Gallery's floor, forming a mound at the based of tones, simulating the slides's

Entering the gallery visitors a wordless obituary. However, installation that quietly moves

During Alison Judd's artist talk she shared own unexpected her realizations, ruminations brought about by the landslide. While applying for the residency Judd's father was diagnosed with a terminal illness, making loss an inevitability on the horizon. Reflecting on her daily procession up the mountain, passing funeral mosses and Old Man's Beard, Judd saw the experience as a healing time, a place to accept our vulnerability to nature's cycles; shrouding rocks and remembering.

Alison Judd's installation

"Living With A Landslide" is the first of this year's exhibitors for the ODD Gallery's series "The Natural and the Manufactured". The exhibition ran from July third to August first. However, if you did not have chance to visit the gallery, there are still two more artists in the series to see.

Opening Thursday, August 14th is artist and professor Dylan Miner's work "Michif-Michin" that will be investigating Métis medicine expressed through the medium of installation and print. And finally on August 14th internationally recognized interdisciplinary media artist Terrance Houle will be engaging the community in an outdoor installation, a culmination and ongoing performance/ series that has crossed the Americas called "Friend or Foe" and has now made its way to Dawson City!

A writing couple shared Berton House in the spring

Berton House is intended to be a retreat for one writer at a time, but it has happened that two writers have ended up there at the same time. A little over a decade ago it was the Spaldings, Andrea and David. Most recently it was the last couple to inhabit the house, Alan Cumyn and Suzanne Evans.

The residency was Alan's, but there is space in the residence for two people to set up laptop computers and if only one of them actually needs to spread out research materials while the other simply searches for the material in his head, it can work out well, as it did in this case.

Alan and Suzanne learned about Berton House some years ago but set it aside in their minds to a time when they would no longer have kids living at home. Once Alan actually visited Dawson in 2012, and went back to Ottawa armed with photographs of the town and of the residence, courtesy of Tim Falconer, who was here at the time, there was a bit more pressure to apply.

They're so glad he did.
"This has been such a positive experience for both of us," Alan said in late June, a few days before their time was over.

"We love it," said Suzanne.

"Alan just said, on our way downtown today, 'I don't think I'll close the bank account here."

Alan's project while in Dawson was a young adult novel with the improbable title Hot Pterodactyl Boyfriend. It will be a romantic fantasy of sorts set in a mundane high school where this teenage male pterodactyl swoops in one day and asks to enroll in classes. Where he came from will not be explained in any great detail, but lots will be said about the impact of him being there.

"My model for this," Alan said, "is Kafka, who never explained how that man transformed. He's just there."

Alan has previously written a number of young reader, young adult and adult novels, is a past chair of the Writers' Union of Canada, and teaches Writing for Children and Young Adults at the Vermont College of Fine Arts. He has been short listed for a number of prestigious awards, included the Governor General's Award, the Giller Prize, and the Trillium Prize.

Suzanne's project is a biography.

"It's about a Canadian woman from Manitoulin Island, Ethel Mulvany," she said, "who was a prisoner of war in Singapore during the Second World War, and while she was starving there, she wrote a cookbook. It was something of a survival

Alan Cumyn and Suzanne Evans greatly enjoyed their time at Berton House and hope tactic.

"The book is partly about the power of imagination. She was inspired by a poem by E,J. Pratt called 'The Depression Ends'"

In the poem the poet imagines a table in the sky laden with all the food they were still lacking in 1932 when he wrote it.

There are a lot of stories about prisoners or soldiers in dire straits describing wonderful meals to each other, and while it seems more to come back to Dawson. like an exquisite form of self torture, Evans says it is such a consistent story that it must actually work.

After the war, she took her manuscript to a publisher and insisted on having it published. Then she used her profits to send food to England to ex-POWS who were still not getting enough to eat.

Evans previous book was also war related: Mothers of Heroes, Mothers of Martyrs: World War I and the Politics of Grief.

The couple was impressed by the changing seasons, having arrived in late winter and seen the place change from April through to June. They'd had a chance to travel to some of the gold fields and talk with all manner of people in the town: miners, artists, members of just about every walk of life in Dawson.

As with many Berton House residents they have expressed a strong desire to return and see some of Dawson's other seasons.

City drills four new wells along Front Street

The City of Dawson has nearly completed the drilling and testing of four new wells along the greensward between Front Street and the Yukon River Dyke.

In a public notice the town's administration said, "The four new production wells will replace three aging existing wells that draw groundwater from an aquifer that is well proven and has provided water to the City of Dawson for decades."

Drilling operations began the week of June 23, and were completed by the time of the July 22 council meeting.

In his report to council, submitted on July 18, Public Works Superintendent Norm Carlson wrote, "(The) Project is proceeding smoothly. The drilling and placement of the screens is complete for the 4 new wells. Well testing is scheduled to commence July 21 and be completed by July 25th."

"The civil works part of the project will be tendered July 25 and close August 15th. We are hopeful that the tendering of the civil works will proceed smoothly so that this work can be awarded and the project can be completed this year by the beginning of November."

Council was pleased to note that there had been very few complaints about the noise associated with the project. This was attributed to the ton have issued lots of advance public notice by all the means available to it so that people would know well in advance what was gong to take place and when.

The wells are part of larger project to improve and upgrade the town's water supply system.

A street musician solves a northern mystery

Devil's Pass By Sigmund Brouwer Orca Book Publishers 237 pages $9.95

Devil's Pass is a third book in "Seven, the Series". Jim Webb is another of David McLean's grandsons, one of seven, who has been left a task to perform, and the money to perform it, by his grandfather. The elder McLean lived a full life all over the world, but left items on his bucket list incomplete at the end of it. He planned a quest for each of the lads, something that would not only complete his unfinished business, but also provide them with a growth experience. He has also provided them with people who will assist then on their journeys, but the exact nature of their help is kept secret.

For Webb, who has been living on the streets in Toronto since his stepfather, Elliot, poisoned his formerly happy home and threatened to hurt his mother if he didn't run away, this means a trip to the Norman Wells, NWT, and a long hike on the Canol Road. Jim, named for songwriter Jimmy Webb, carries with him his Gibson J-45 guitar, with which he has been earning a meager living busking for some months now.

The structure of this novel is different than the first two I read, though all the adventures take place in about the same time frame, so it doesn't matter what order you read them in. They all have to contain the reading of the will and viewing of McLean's video in the lawyer's office, and they all have a series of letters that the grandfather has written to explain the task.

Webb is given minimal instructions, and this adventure is a bit more of a thriller than the first two I read. On his journey Webb has to deal with a man who is the image of his abusive stepdad, and with two German tourists who try to give him a hard time after he cleans up their messes along the trail. There is also a wolf.

In Norman Wells, he falls afoul of a nasty piece of work named Brent, who is abusing the woman he's with. There are two confrontations with him in that town and then another out in the bush. All three work out badly for Brent, but the third one is a near thing for both of

Webb has been given directions to a specific location off the Canol trail, and there he finds the remains of a man who had been killed back in the 1940s when his grandfather was part of the US Military crew that worked on building the road.

Webb has a secondary task after his journey north, and that is to return to the family of the dead man and tell them what happened to him. They never knew. Then, with the help of some research McLean had done on Elliot, he is off to set things right with his mother. We are not told that story, but we have no trouble imagining how it will work out.

Yukon Riverside Arts Festival

The 14th Annual Yukon Riverside Arts Festival takes place Aug 14th - 17th, 2014, and aims to provide an accessible environment for community members and visitors to interact directly with artists and explore their own creativity. KIAC will welcome artists practicing traditional and non-traditional contemporary art from the Yukon and abroad, and present workshops, interactive projects, exhibitions, artist talks, live music, kids programming, and more throughout the community on Discovery Days weekend.

Artist Profile: Bry Webb

Best known as the lead vocalist for The Constantines, Bry Webb is no stranger to Dawson City. After playing the Dawson City Music Festival with his band in 2005, the experience left quite an impression on Webb, and was the inspiration for the first single on his debut solo album Provider, titled 'Rivers of Gold'. The Constantines were back in Dawson to play the Festival five years later in 2010, and this time, the Dawson Festival ended up being the venue for the band's final concert together – until now, as the band recently started playing shows together again.

Webb's music has been featured in films, nominated for a Juno award for The Constantines' first self-titled album, nominated for a Genie for Best Original Song for his solo composition 'Big Smoke', and has received vast acclaim and recognition throughout Canada. The artist has collaborated with musicians such as Casey Mecija of Ohbijou, as well as Feist, who invited him to sing with her on her 2011 album Metals.

Once again, Webb will be back in the North – but this time, on different terms. Though the artist has evolved appreciably, both personally and musically, he has never stopped creating original, poetic music that leaves his listeners in awe. Bry Webb will be playing at the Palace Grand Theatre, accompanied by lap steel player Rich Burnett on Saturday, August 16th, doors at 7:30 PM. Webb will also be per forming a live version of his radio show Messenger Bird, made up of home recordings and improvised guitar playing. The show will happen on the SOVA stage on Sunday, at 6 PM.

Artist Profile: Terrance Houle

If you don't know Terrance Houle, you probably should. Though he is cheerful, charismatic, and easy to talk to, Houle is not just a friendly guy. An internationally recognized interdisciplinary media artist and member of the Blood Tribe, Houle has been involved with Aboriginal communities all his life, and has traveled to reservations throughout North America participating in Powwow dancing and other ceremonies. Using performance, photography, video, music and painting in his varied practice, Terrance Houle has an impressive body of work that just keeps growing.

After visiting Dawson and working with the SOVA art students through a residency this past winter, Houle is back in town as part of The Natural & The Manufactured; a project jointly organized by the ODD Gallery and the Artist in Residence Program at KIAC. Houle will be a significant part of the Arts Festival, taking on various multimedia and performance based projects involving the community. Bringing his ongoing performance/installation series Friend or Foe to Dawson, the artist will use Native American Sign Language & Signals to communicate history, time travel, myths and legends, and diverse points of view. One of the final products will be a series of hiking tours to reenact stories told by the local indigenous people of the area, the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in.

A rainy day's line-up at the ferry

Lineups create problems for West-Dawsonites

To register your float or for more info. contact the Rec Dept @ 993-7400 ext 299

The lane system at the George Black Ferry works quite well most days, except when all the vehicles wanting to cross the Yukon River are of pretty much the same type and are all part of the same caravan. That is what happened Wednesday morning (June 25) as the line-up of RVs stretched back several blocks as far as the Visitors Information Centre and Waterfront Building offices of the Klondike Sun newspaper.

At the VIC they do advise caravan leaders that there is nothing to be gained by having everyone try to leave at the same time, that there is a limit to the number of large RVs that can make the trip, and that local and business traffic have a certain amount of priority in the lanes. It would be better to stagger departure times among a large group, and the caravan members would probably be more comfortable having a second cup of tea or coffee back at the campground rather than inching forward in the lineup every fifteen minutes or so.

Line-ups much longer that this used to be commonplace prior to the inauguration of the lane system, but they are rare these days.
