Yukon government to meet with First Nations on mining initiatives

WHITEHORSE (January 29, 2015) —Yukon Premier Darrell Pasloski is encouraged to hear of Council of Yukon First Nations Grand Chief Ruth Massie’s support for the mining and exploration industries and will soon meet with Yukon First Nations to discuss several mining initiatives.

The grand chief’s comments were made at the Mineral Exploration Roundup in Vancouver on January 27.

“The Yukon government believes that working cooperatively with Yukon First Nations and industry is essential to promoting sustainable, responsible development and creating greater certainty for mineral development in the territory,” Pasloski said. “Grand Chief Massie’s suggestion to meet comes on the heels of my December invitation to First Nation chiefs to meet to discuss mine licensing improvements. I am pleased that everyone is committed to developing a shared vision of a robust mining industry that benefits our economy, our communities and our future.”

The meeting will provide an opportunity to discuss several initiatives, including Class 1 exploration thresholds under the Quartz Mining Act and the Yukon government’s Mine Licensing Improvement Initiative and Mineral Development Strategy.

A meeting between Yukon government officials and Yukon First Nation officials is set for early February. The premier expects the meeting with First Nation chiefs will take place shortly thereafter.

Government of Canada Supports Yukon Geothermal Energy Study

Investment fosters development of alternative energy, Aboriginal entrepreneurship

WHITEHORSE, YT, Jan. 28, 2015 /CNW/ - Yukon MP Ryan Leef, on behalf of Minister Aglukkaq, announced today the Government of Canada is supporting the second phase of a study focused on assessing the potential of geothermal energy development in the Ross River area by the Dena Nezziddi Development Corporation.

This investment will assist the Dena Nezziddi Development Corporation to complete a more detailed study of the location and extent of a local geothermal energy source that has the potential to be developed into a commercial scale electricity generation facility. Geothermal development could provide a less expensive local power source for the community by replacing diesel generation, as well as offering potential revenue from providing power to the Yukon energy grid.

To support this project, CanNor is making an investment of $247,310 which builds on previous CanNor funding for geological exploration in two areas of Yukon thought to potentially have near-surface geothermal resources.

Since 2011, Kaska First Nation has been active in the investigation and promotion of clean energy projects within their traditional lands through their nationally owned company Kaska Energy Corporation.

The Dena Nezziddi Development Corporation took the lead on behalf of Kaska Energy Corporation to complete the initial research on the geothermal potential in the Ross River and Watson Lake area in 2013. Dena Nezziddi is wholly owned by the Ross River Dena Council, a Kaska First Nation in southeastern Yukon.

The Kaska Geothermal Project offers the potential for development of a much-needed energy source in southeastern Yukon. Grid loads in the area are expected to exceed capacity in the next five years as new mines such as MacTung and Selwyn are developed in Kaska territory.

“Our Government recognizes that access to reliable and affordable energy plays an integral role in fostering northern economic development. That’s why CanNor is continuing to work with its partners and stakeholders, including Aboriginal development corporations, to develop alternative sources of energy that will help meet future power needs in the North and support resource development.”

Ryan Leef, Member of Parliament for Yukon

“The Kaska are cautiously optimistic that geothermal resources will prove to be viable near our communities. Geothermal energy is ideally suited to our northern climate and it is in keeping with our philosophies of small footprints on the land and sustainable opportunities for our people and the region. It is the Kaska vision to play a lead role in energy development within our traditional territory.”

OPINION

Uffish Thoughts: On being blinded by a blizzard

Story & Photo
By Dan Davidson

On my occasional trips to the city and back I do run across an accident or two. I stop and take a photo and try to figure out just exactly what happened. Sometimes it's really obvious; sometimes it's not.

In the case of the car you see in this photo, they were coming south on a straight stretch of road, going just slightly uphill when the fresh tire tracks showed them suddenly turning across the road and into the snow filled ditch on my side of the highway.

What was unusual about this event was that the people were still with the car. They were fine, and just waiting for a tow truck to arrive from Carmacks after another passerby had stopped for them before I did. The car was still running, so they could use it to stay warm. They were just well and truly rammed into that snow bank and would require mechanical assistance to get out.

The man told me they had been driving along nicely until they came up behind one of those transport trucks that I have often referred to as mobile snowstorms. They couldn't see the truck but thought they were far enough in back of it not to be in any danger.

It is often hard to tell. I've been in that position many a time and the only thing to do in hang back. If there's a lot of loose snow being kicked up it's sometimes even better to pull off the road and let the big truck get well ahead of you.

This couple thought they were safe until the snow suddenly cleared and they plug either mineral or oil (in any form) extraction into this observation.

At the territorial level it seems to be mainly mining, found themselves way too close to the origin of the blizzard. She braked, veered and shot across the road into the snow bank. The alternative on the other side would have been worse. I once had to make almost that decision myself, so I can appreciate the situation.

No one was injured in this accident, but it did put a dent in their travel plans for the day.

What came to mind for me on this occasion was something of a parable.

Lately the two senior levels of government, territorial and federal, have persisted in following way too closely to the economic mobile snowstorm that is the market in natural resources. You can so far. Despite the well known boom and bust cycles of this industry, the current government has hitched its wagon to this industry to the extent that it is willing to spend large sums of its citizens' money on a series of court cases to open vast spaces of the territory to exploration or mining. Mines are shutting down, cutting back and reexamining their options all around us, and yet the Yukon Party wanders blithely on, as if this were not happening.

We don't yet know what the government will decide to do with the Report of the

Select Committee on Fracking, but the press releases we have seen make it sound as if the party brass want to spin a very uncertain set of recommendations into an endorsement. That will mean another court case, almost certainly.

For the current federal government, tagged in many press reports as the Harperites, it seems that it's all been about oil.

They have declassified rivers, shut down environmental review processes, muzzled federally employed scientists (who are supposed to be serving us, not the Conservative Party) tagged anyone with an environmental viewpoint as radical, refused to acknowledge climate change, sicced the Canada Revenue Agency on non-profit groups that are even mildly critical (a bird watchers group can't express concern for avian habitat?) and pushed plans for pipelines east, west, north and south.

In the case of the southern lines, we would currently have to sell that oil for less than it costs to get it out of the oil/tar sands, so where is the logic in that?

They've both been chasing the snowstorm behind their vision of progress, following it so closely that they could not help but run off the progress road when the engine ahead of them stuttered and began to fail.

In an echo of events in the fall of 2008 the Conservative Party has misread the economic tea leaves to the extent that they can't manage to produce a budget within the normal time frame. They have flipped from certain to uncertain in just about 24 hours and don't seem to have any real idea of what to do now that the dream of the petro state has drained away with the price of a barrel of the black gold.

Do I even need to mention the rapid decline of our currency's value, rated at under US80 cents on the day I'm writing this. Progressive Conservative Prime Minister John Diefenbaker was hurt when the value of the dollar fell to US92.5 back in 1961. A cry of outrage against the Diefenbuck swept across the land.

Progressive Conservatives were embarrassed. The current Conservative brand seems unable to blush.

Governments of all sizes are fond of taking credit for any economic progress that may occur while they are in power, and quick to find other causes when things go badly. In truth, governments really don't create jobs. If they are good governments, they merely craft the conditions that will encourage industry to create jobs. Following one fixed idea, blind to the potential for it to fail, is not the way to accomplish that goal.

We want to hear from you!

A Nice Surprise from Box 1374

The holidays were quiet here in Gold City. A bad flu kept me housebound for over a week. When I checked my mail on January 14, there was a large tote waiting for me, with only a Dawson post office box number as a clue to its origin. The kindness of northerners, and Dawsonites in particular, is always astonishing. The tote was full of thoughtful gifts selected by a caring person full of good energy.

I would like to take this opportunity to send my thanks in a loud and public way to spread the kindness of Box 1374 to the whole community. Remember, all of you, that Dawson is a special place, where people look after each other and where friends are most important. Being far away for now never changes my attitude towards the jewel of a little town, such a unique shelter from the mad and hurried pace in bigger places.

From Quesnel with love and admiration, may the occupant at Box 1374 rest assured that the care package is more appreciated than what words might convey. From the bottom of my heart and soul, may this New Year bring you all the kindness you have shared a million times over.

Josée Bonhomme

Mineral Exploration Roundup 2015 Report from the MLA

By Sandy Silver

(January 29, 2015) “I was pleased to attend my fourth Roundup as the MLA for Klondike and to meet with First Nation leaders, companies doing business in the Yukon and miners from my constituency of Klondike. My main purpose was to convey my support for a strong mining industry in the Yukon. Our party’s message was extremely well received.

“The atmosphere has changed considerably from the first event I attended in 2012. Industry and First Nation government representatives were busy discussing strategies to get us through this downturn, while the Yukon Party seems content to pretend all is well and that relations with First Nations are not strained. No one was buying this messaging and many who were hoping for leadership, were disappointed by a government that is in denial.

“A few short years ago, the Premier used his time at Roundup to boast about Yukon leading North America in considering environmental and socio-economic impacts of development and land use planning and the economic certainty they can deliver. This year, Pasloski and his ministers refused to even attend an information session hosted by CYFN on these issues. Industry came out in droves to hear First Nations Chiefs express their concerns over the changes to S-6 that will all but destroy the partnerships and relationships build by his predecessors. In three short years, we went from leading the North to trailing far behind.

“After years of taking credit for an upswing in the mining fortunes of the Yukon the government spent most of the week in Vancouver blaming global market forces for the current downturn. If the Yukon Party wants a pat on the back for the good times it should be prepared to accept the blame when there is a downturn. It was clear from the government messaging that it takes no responsibility for the role it has played in the current slowdown.”

Canada’s Premiers collaborate on the economy and call for a better partnership with the federal government

January 30, 2015 – Ottawa
Canada’s Premiers are focused on actions to maintain the strength of the Canadian economy in the current international economic situation. Premiers shared perspectives on commodity prices, the fluctuating value of the Canadian dollar, and how these changes will impact their respective fiscal plans.

Provinces and territories continue to adapt to a changing global economic environment. Although the fiscal and economic ground has shifted since Premiers last met, most of Canada’s long-term challenges and opportunities remain unchanged. Priorities continue to be increased infrastructure investments and addressing the wide-ranging needs of an aging population.

United in their efforts to drive economic growth, Premiers committed to continue investing in strategically important public infrastructure and called for a stronger commitment from the federal government and greater federal funding.

Provinces and territories are facing changing social and economic realities associated with an aging population. Premiers called on the federal government to provide funding in support of provincial and territorial services that enhance the well-being of Canada’s seniors, while meeting the unique requirements of each province and territory.

Premiers remain committed to creating opportunities for Canadians through the following actions:

- Making strategic investments in public infrastructure.
- Ongoing collaboration on seniors’ care and aging.
- Establishing a mobility protocol for apprentices while they complete their certification.
- Ongoing collaboration on pharmaceuticals that is saving millions of dollars. Premiers are encouraged by the accelerated work to lower drug costs – current annual savings are estimated to be $315 million.
- Reducing barriers to trade and business within Canada.
- Continuing to expand our international trade, including in markets such as Asia.

• Finding solutions to address challenges facing Aboriginal communities.

Provinces and territories are working together to address key issues for Canadians. It is important that the federal government step forward to do its part as a partner in the federation. Recent changes in the fiscal outlook have not changed the fact that, in the medium and long-term, the federal government is in a stronger structural fiscal position than provinces and territories.

Premiers discussed the priorities that need to be addressed to strengthen Canada’s economic union, including fiscal arrangements, health care, jobs and skills, infrastructure, disaster financial assistance and Aboriginal issues (see attached media backgrounder). Noting that this is a federal election year, Premiers called on federal leaders to outline how they intend to support the work of provinces and territories in addressing these priorities.

All for a Cup of Joe

Story & Photos

By Anna Vogt

Our Colombian Correspondent

My parents never let me drink coffee as a child, even though I begged. Finally, in a ploy to cure me of my curiosity, when I was eleven years old they let me try coffee for the first time. It was disgusting and I vowed to never again allow the bitter brew to cross my lips.

I'm so glad tastes develop (I never used to like french fries either), especially because I now live in a country where Producing all of this coffee is back-breaking work, as we learned on a recent coffee farm tour in Salento. Tiny seedlings are planted on steep gradients. Pickers generally work long hours in the rain, filling the baskets tied around their waists with pounds of ripe coffee cherries. The cherries are then hulled, soaked several times to remove sugar, and finally dried. Depending on the farm, the the daily routine. This is true whether one lives on a coffee farm or works in an office. Breakfast is served with cafe con leche and the day ends with a small black tinto, to "help you sleep." I have never heard a single Colombian claim that drinking coffee will stunt growth. Kids drink coffee, mixed with milk and sugar, all the time.

I frequent the upscale shops on the Parkway in Bogota and in Cartagena, where I can choose how I would like my single origin beans brewed. Would the seño like espresso, french press, syphon, pour-over or areo-press?

Yet for the majority of Colombians, coffee-house traditions are not part of their daily routine and do not fit into a household budget. It is telling that coffee tours and tastings are primarily given in English and that crowds of us, with our fancy cameras and backpacks, rush to take pictures of every step in the process, while Colombian grandmothers sip on weak Nescafe.

Colombian ranks second worldwide for coffee production. Most is for export. Nationals generally drink Sello Rojo, produced out of the leftover beans that were not good enough to send north. Some claim that the quality of the beans is so bad, the grounds are mixed with dried cow blood to provide at least some colour, even if there is no flavour.

The more I travel, the more I encounter people who are trying to change that. For example, Café Mujer in Córdoba, Quindío, is a women's cooperative that works to empower women coffee producers and also form a coffee culture where Colombians learn to distinguish between good and bad coffee. The organization wants high quality, export level coffee to be available at a reasonable price for the Colombians who produce it.

Colombians already have a rich coffee culture, but it seems only fair that they can choose even more different ways to explore their own product. After all, I have gained a new appreciation for my daily joe by learning about the journey from producer to consumer. Now, when I sip my coffee, however it is served, I want other Colombians to have the same coffee choices I fully enjoy.

beans are either sold to the local branch of the Colombian Coffee Federation, or specialty roasted. Farm owners face numerous coffee is so important that the producing region has been declared a World Heritage Site. Experiencing coffee in Colombia, however, is not at all Starbucks and double-doubles.

Small sips of warm, sweet, milky, cafe con leche. Syrupy shots in tiny plastic glasses. Grounds boiled in a metal pot, balanced between two bricks, over the fire. The mug on my desk that I drink from all morning. Coffee cherries picked from a bush in the back yard. Giant urns filled with weak coffee poured over reused grounds at retreat centres. A cappuccino with perfectly steamed milk. A jar of Nescafe sitting on the counter at a coffee farm. A white porcelain cup and saucer emblazoned with Café de Colombia on the side, served with a sugar packet by the "general service" lady at meetings.

choices throughout the process. Arabica plants (better taste) or Robusta (higher yields)? Many farmers overcrowd their plants and chemically fertilize. While higher yields are produced, the soil eventually runs out of nutrients. Erosion is common. World market prices, however, heavily influence the lives of thousands of Colombians. A glut on the market from Vietnam or new trade policies with the United States makes a big difference in how much food kids living in the coffee region will have to eat. Strikes dominated the news last year (<http://colombiareports.co/colombias-coffee-farmers-and-other-sectors-announce-new-strike/>) Unsustainable farming practices are justified in the minds of many as a way to make ends meet in the midst of uncertainty.

SCAN unit continues to support community safety

WHITEHORSE (January 28, 2015) — The Safer Communities and Neighbourhoods (SCAN) unit continues to investigate community complaints and concerns, resulting in further action against illegal activities in Yukon communities.

"Yukoners deserve to feel safe in our communities," Minister of Justice Brad Cathers said. "SCAN gives Yukoners an effective avenue to report illegal activities in their neighbourhoods."

SCAN investigators are called upon to assess and investigate confidential public complaints regarding illegal or harmful activities that pose a threat to community safety. Complaints can be filed over the phone or online.

In 2014, 55 complaints were reported to SCAN, with detailed investigations leading to evictions or formal warnings in nine cases. SCAN continues to investigate a number of open cases.

"One member of the community was very much relieved to have our investigators involved," SCAN director Jeff Ford said. "He was fearful of attending his rental house once he became aware of the scale and recurring nature of illegal activity at his property, in this case, distribution of crack cocaine. The owner was also not aware that the tenant had a history of drug related violence."

Following the eviction of the tenant, SCAN investigators and the owner found evidence that the doors were fortified with steel bars without the owner's knowledge. Security enhancements of this nature, along with the installation of surveillance cameras, are often present at properties being used as distribution centres for illegal drugs or unlawful alcohol sales.

Individuals with concerns about drug trafficking or bootlegging at residential or commercial properties can make a complaint by calling 867-456-SCAN (7226) or toll-free at 1-866-530-7226, or by submitting an online complaint form at www.scanyukon.ca.

On Saturday January 24th residents of Dawson City participated in a winter arts festival called (s)hiver. Artists presented their art throughout Dawson City in several indoor venues, including the SOVA gallery, ODD gallery, KIAC Ballroom, Alchemy Cafe, and at the Conservation Klondike Society, as well as in numerous outdoor locations.

Residents were invited to brave the cold and take in a night of local culture that included everything from performance painting, to acrobatics, to projected light, and culminated in a celebratory dance party that started with DJs in the park and moved on to the Sourdough Saloon for a raucous live performance by local band Corn and more dancing.

This was the first time that (s)hiver has taken place and it is hoped that it will become an annual winter tradition.

Testimony and Cross-examination focus on details of vehicles and locations

Story & Photo
By Dan Davidson

Technical issues with the video displays bogged down the McDiarmid trial on both Thursday and Friday, January 22 and 23.

Testimony by Sgt. Dave Wallace continued on Thursday morning, picking up the story of October 20, 2011, after McDiarmid had been shot by Constables Nielsen and Marentette and had been transported to the Dawson Health Centre (Nursing Station) for medical care.

After seeing this accomplished, Wallace returned to the detachment and reported on the events of the evening to Whitehorse.

The IDENT unit was dispatched to Dawson by air and Wallace picked them up after they arrived. At that point some photographs of the scene had already been taken by both Wallace and Corporal Dave Morin, but many more were taken by the unit both that night in the dark and the next morning when there was light.

Questioning by Crown Prosecutor McWhinnie led to a detailed examination of various photographs, all contained in a book under various tabs. The locations of all the vehicles involved, both in relationship to each other and to the North Fork Road and Dempster Highway, were discussed in great detail.

During the lunch break an IT specialist with the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in was brought in to set up the two video displays which had proven to be problematic earlier in the day. This would eventually make it possible to show enlarged versions of the photographs as well as the video that was shot by one of the RCMP vehicle's VIC recording system. There were problems getting the two monitors to show exactly the same images, but this appeared to have been corrected by Friday morning.

Wallace had completed his direct testimony on Thursday afternoon and McDiarmid, coached in procedure by Judge Hughes, had begun his cross-examination. That continued on Friday morning, which was just a half-day for the jury.

McDiarmid's questions focused on trying to find inconsistencies in Wallace's account of events.

Having played the VIC video of McDiarmid's truck rolling over the spike belt on the North Fork Road, and continuing north onto the Dempster before coming to a stop, McDiarmid questioned the make and model of the RCMP vehicles in the photos. According to Wallace the Dawson fleet was all Chevy Tahoes at that time, but he conceded that he had mistakenly identified one of them as a Ford Expedition during an earlier preliminary hearing.

"I must have been tired. We only have Chevy products," Wallace said after he had reread the transcript of the hearing.

McDiarmid spent a lot of time displaying photos of the wheels of his own red pick-up truck, suggesting that it was possible by the marks on the lug nuts to say that a tire iron had been used on them. The purpose of this, he suggested, was that the tires on his truck had been replaced in order to shoot a fake version of some of the VIC video.

Wallace maintained that he could not tell, looking at the video stills, whether a tire iron had been used. He had no knowledge of any such action.

Court adjourned at close to 11:30 Friday morning. It will reconvene without the jury in Whitehorse Monday morning at

The McDiarmid Trial is taking place in the former Yukon Legislative Chambers, which also served as a court room after the Court House on Front Street was converted for use as a hospital. Chambers are on the second floor of the Old Territorial Administration Building and are accessed through the north side door off the lane.

10 a.m. to deal with procedural matters. As part of the jury was not available during the week of Jan. 26, and the judge was not available for the rest of the week after that, the trial will move to Dawson again on February 2. The intention was to have the jury back in court by 11 a.m., but it should be noted that none of the trial days so far have been able to start on time, mostly for technical reasons.

Wallace’s Testimony in the McDiarmid Case Concludes

By Dan Davidson

Mark McDiarmid concluded his cross-examination of RCMP Sgt. Dave Wallace on Tuesday, February 3, walking him through the events of October 19 and 20, 2011, though in reverse order.

Under questioning Wallace reiterated that he had, on October 20, looked into scanning the Dempster/North Fork area in a private plane, but had been unable to arrange for one, so that the search had been entirely land based.

He and Const. Jordan McIntyre had looked for McDiarmid at Henderson’s Corner and then all six available officers, travelling in two RCMP vehicles and one privately owned truck, proceeded to the North Fork Road off the Dempster Highway to track him down.

Wallace was with McIntyre in RCMP vehicle 10 Alpha 2. Auxiliary Const. Jayce Murtagh and Const. David Morin were in Murtagh’s truck. Constables Jeff Nielson and David Marentette were in RCMP vehicle 10 Alpha 1. The remaining RCMP vehicle, 10 Alpha 3, was still out of commission with a broken headlight and windshield after McDiarmid took a sledgehammer to it the day

Radio communication through regular police channels was poor on the North Fork Road. With Wallace and McIntyre positioned on the Ditch Road, near the junction of the North Fork and the Dempster Highway, and Murtagh and Morin scouting for McDiarmid in the unmarked truck farther along the road, they were all able to communicate only by relaying messages through Nielson and Marentette who were located between them.

In due time McDiarmid came out of his woodlot, headed for the Dempster. He ran over the spike belt placed by McIntyre, was pursued by both RCMP SUVs, and pulled off at the side of the road heading north after he had turned the corner.

Wallace arrived to hear that shots had been fired by Nielson and Marentette, who had been charged by an axe wielding McDiarmid after he had thrown a bottle full of an oily chemical solution at their window.

McDiarmid asked a number of questions about service weapons, attempting to establish that more than the three shots that hit him had been fired and that bullets had been replaced to hide that fact. He pointed to a reddish substance near the primer on photos of a magazine and its bullets, saying it was blood. Wallace replied that there is frequently a stain – sometimes red, sometimes green – around that area of a bullet, depending on the manufacturer.

Justice Elizabeth Hughes and Crown Prosecutor David McWhinnie objected that one could not prove it was blood from a photograph, that it would take a chemical test.

McDiarmid wanted to know how Wallace had taken charge of his officers’ weapons, which happened after they had administered limited first aid to their captive. Wallace replied that he had confiscated them while they were holstered in the officers’ duty belts, and so he had never touched the guns, leaving that for the investigative team that he knew would be dispatched from Whitehorse.

McDiarmid switched to questions about October 19, and appeared to find discrepancies between his memory of their original encounter in the North End of Dawson on Second Avenue between Albert and Judge Streets and Wallace’s account. Much time was spent debating left and right turns and where they would take a person. McDiarmid was sure that Wallace had accosted him while he was unloading some wood at a residence, but Wallace insisted that he had merely seen McDiarmid drive past him and that he has lost sight of him due to the street being blocked and having to turn around.

The Justice called a brief adjournment to work out a better way of settling the argument, commenting, “This is not rocket science.”

Results of this line of questioning did not improve much even after copies of the standard A4 paper sized map had been distributed.

Somehow the discussion between the two got on to the topic of their relationship prior to October 19, with Wallace saying he had been so shocked at the events of that day because he had considered McDiarmid a friend, and had never been attacked like that by someone he thought he knew that well.

“Friends help each other,” McDiarmid shot back. “You charged me with attempted murder.”

He moved on to begin to accuse the Mounties of using entrapment to snare him, and Justice Hughes raised her voice several times to cut of that line of accusation.

Asked whom he had consulted with over McDiarmid’s case on the 19th, Wallace replied that he had talked with his superiors in the capital and had been instructed to consult with medical professionals over the case.

McDiarmid wanted to know who, and what they had said, but McWhinnie objected that this would be hear-say evidence at best.

Moving back to the night of the shooting and subsequent events, McDiarmid wanted to know what Wallace had meant when he had used the term “reenactment” during his testimony to the Alberta Serious Incident Review Team, who investigated the shooting.

Wallace replied that this merely indicated that he had taken the Whitehorse based investigators to the site of the event and showed them where things had happened and where vehicles and people had been the night before.

In closing Wallace’s time on the stand, McWhinnie clarified that spike belts cause gradual deflation of the tires, that no one had ever altered the video recordings to the best of Wallace’s knowledge and that some sort of colour on bullet casings was fairly common.

Marentette provides a different perspective on the events of October 20, 2011

By Dan Davidson

Corporal David Marentette, now promoted from Constable and stationed in High River, Alberta, following his three years in Dawson, took the stand in the McDiarmid trial on the afternoon of February 3 to begin his testimony of the events on October 20, 2011.

McDiarmid is on trial, accused of damaging a police car, three counts of assaulting a police officer, one count of possessing a dangerous weapon, two counts of assaulting an officer with a weapon and two counts of attempted murder of a police officer.

As with the other officers at the Dawson Detachment of the RCMP, Marentette only became involved in the matter on the day after Mark McDiarmid had assaulted his commanding officer’s police vehicle (designated 10 Alpha 3). He was, he told Crown Prosecutor Jennifer Grandy, acquainted with McDiarmid in his official capacity after five or six encounters.

Marentette confirmed that the six officers on duty that day met in three vehicles on the North Fork Road off the Dempster Highway on the afternoon of October 20 in order to capture McDiarmid.

The one remaining member, Justin Smith, was not on duty that day due to a severe ear infection, though his heavier lined jacket and its outer windbreaker shell were in the back of Sgt. Dave Wallace’s vehicle (10 Alpha 2) on that day.

The three vehicles covered the North Fork Road, with Corporal David Morin and Auxiliary Constable Jayce Murtagh heading the farthest, out past the woodlot where the suspect was thought to be working. They were in Murtagh’s unmarked truck.

Wallace and Constable Jordan McIntyre were waiting near the junction of the North Fork and Dempster, backed into the Ditch Road. Marentette and Constable Jeff Nielsen were between the others in 10 Alpha 1, a vehicle in which the Vehicle in Camera System (VICS) had broken down and was awaiting a replacement unit. From their location they were able to relay messages between the two other pairs of officers, a necessity since the repeater towers were not up to handling the police band communications for some unknown reason. All the officers were able to receive on that band, as frequent requests for updates from operations in Whitehorse proved, but were unable to transmit any distance at all.

When Murtagh and Morin indicated that McDiarmid was on the move, it wasn’t too long before his headlights lit up all the reflective surfaces on 10 Alpha 1, and Marentette said he heard McDiarmid accelerate. Alerted to his coming, McIntyre placed the spike belt across the road, Wallace advising the pair in 10 Alpha 1 to hang back a bit so that there would be enough time to remove the belt after McDiarmid hit it.

On the VICS recording of the event, McIntyre can be heard rather excitedly announcing McDiarmid’s arrival and saying that he heard him hit the belt. He dashed out to remove it, and the VICS feed shows Marentette and Nielsen cruising past in pursuit of McDiarmid, who turned the corner onto the Dempster, facing north, and then stopped his truck.

As they turned the corner themselves. Marentette activated the vehicle's emergency lights and flashers. This may be standard procedure, but on a pitch-black October Yukon night, the light, he said, completely wiped out their night vision.

As they stopped, several vehicle lengths behind their suspect, something hit their window, smearing it with an oily substance. They later determined it was a glass jar McDiarmid had thrown, filled with a chemical mixture.

Marentette recalled the next event almost as a series of flashes. He saw McDiarmid, looking increasingly angry, advancing on their SUV with what seemed at first to be an axe, held first at his side, then raised, and finally held over his head. At first it seemed to Marentette that McDiarmid was advancing on him, that they had "locked eyes".

"I thought he was going to hit me with that axe. I was terrified," he told the court.

But then McDiarmid's attention shifted to Nielsen, standing on the other side of the SUV and he shifted his direction of advance.

In Marentette's recollection, Nielsen fired first, and his own single shot coincided with Nielsen's second.

Marentette tripped on the splitting maul, which had been dropped by the suspect, as he advanced toward McDiarmid. At this point in his testimony he unwrapped the maul, which he had brought with him to court.

Much of the rest of his testimony consisted of offering a narrative to go with the two videos that were shot on the night of the event. One was the VICS video shot by Wallace's car. The other was shot by Jayce Murtagh.

The VICS recording in Wallace's SUV showed him advancing towards McDiarmid (who can't be seen in the video) from the other side of the road, holding a Taser at the ready, just in case.

Since McDiarmid wasn't saying anything or making any noises at all, Marentette said he thought at first they had both missed. He took charge of the first aid (having just completed a course) while Nielsen got everyone to stop shouting, and Wallace was at McDiarmid's head, trying to communicate with him.

Marentette determined that their captive had been hit at least twice. It turned out to be three times, as was discovered back at the Dawson Health Centre. It was decided to place McDiarmid in the back seat of 10 Alpha 2, where they checked his back for any other wounds and covered him with Smith's coat, separated into its component sections.

McIntyre had been dispatched in the other SUV to get to a place where he could radio for EMS support. When he returned Wallace decided to go meet the ambulance rather than wait for it to get to them. Morin was left in charge of the scene. Marentette's and Nielsen's duty belts were confiscated and they were put into separate vehicles to work on their notes of the event.

The Murtagh video gave a better sense of the entire scene, showing the locations of the SUVs after McIntyre's return, the equipment boxes on the ground, the location of McDiarmid's truck and all of the officers at the scene except for Murtagh himself, who was operating the camera.

Testimony concluded there for the afternoon. Grandy finished her direct examination Wednesday morning and McDiarmid carried out his cross examination.

The Yukon government is committed to education

On New Year's Day, former Education Minister Elaine Taylor had the distinct pleasure of awarding Governor General's Academic Medals to top achieving Yukon students. It was an honour for her to recognize these young people for their outstanding academic performance, and they should be proud of their remarkable achievements.

Education is a top priority for this government and we recognize the importance of student financial assistance in helping Yukoners to further their life-long learning journey. We are committed to providing access to funding that makes it more affordable for Yukon students to pursue post-secondary studies. We provided $4.3 million in annual funding to approximately 980 Yukon post-secondary students during the 2013/2014 academic year. This helps give Yukon students a significant financial advantage as they pursue higher education.

Last December, my colleague, Watson Lake MLA Patti McLeod tabled a motion in the Yukon Legislative Assembly, urging the Government of Yukon to seek public input on changes to the Students Financial Assistance Act for fair, equitable and fiscally-responsible methods to enhance access to financial assistance for current and future Yukon post-secondary students. Members of the house debated the motion and it passed with unanimous consent.

We are therefore going forward asking Yukoners how to best update the Students Financial Assistance Act. The input of students, their families, and other key stakeholders will help us ensure that our financial assistance program continues to be accessible and to be effectively administered.

In addition to the upcoming consultation on the Students Financial Assistance Act, Yukon students and families may also be interested in learning about some important changes we have made to the Yukon Excellence Award Program.

The Award Program will be broadened to include more types of courses and consider course performance rather than focus strictly on final exams. Previously, the Excellence Awards focused on exam performance in language arts, mathematics, social studies and science. Under the new rules, scholastic performance in art, music, shop, home economics and outdoor education will also be considered.

Awards in the amount of $300 for each subject can be earned by students in Grades 10 to 12 who achieve a final overall mark of 80 per cent or higher in up to five mandatory and five elective courses. This will apply to a maximum of four Grade 10 courses, three Grade 11 courses and three Grade 12 courses, for a maximum total amount of $3000.

Why are these changes needed? We want to encourage more students to go into the trades and to explore all available post-secondary options. The Yukon Excellence Awards encourage Yukon secondary students to do well in their coursework and earn financial support for their post-secondary education or training. They promote Yukon Education's goal for success for each learner and help create an inclusive, adaptable and productive workforce that meets the needs of Yukon employers.

Post-secondary students have a significant advantage in that they can also apply for the Yukon Grant. Currently, between 750 and 800 students per year receive this grant. Grant recipients attending college in the territory receive approximately $3700 per year, with those attending institutions outside the territory receiving additional funding for travel expenses.

Information about student financial assistance and academic merit awards can be found on our departmental website at <http://www.education.gov.yk.ca/>.

I would like to reiterate the importance of lifelong learning. There is never a bad time to improve your academic credentials or make yourself more employable. This government is deeply committed to encouraging lifelong learning and enhancing students' access to post-secondary education opportunities.

Dawson was a quiet gift of time

Story & photo
By Dan Davidson

Tara Beagan's first reaction as she came to the end of her residency at Berton House was one word: "Quiet"

She expanded on that almost immediately. "It's been great. It's an interesting thing to get far away from your own life to be able to see where you're at. It just kind of enables you to see everything, in the way that leaving home does."

"It's also been interesting to me to just speak with others who have been here for 10 years or more and how interesting it is, how it does change people's perspectives, especially to live here. A friend of mine who lives in Whitehorse says that the Yukon is a bigger than human scale. That she can never go back now. Being here makes you feel small but in a good way."

She said that Dawson is different from other small towns of her experience.

"The bulk of my immediate family lives in a small town in Alberta – 6000 people – maybe it's 8000 now. It just feels quite different here, the interconnectedness, the energy that's put into maintaining community is pretty cool. It's something that you don't really see too often, or that I haven't seen too often."

The actor/playwright reflected on what moved her into writing.

"I used to think that I wanted so badly to be an actor that the only way to make it work was to write for myself. But now I think it goes back further. I was really small when I was a child – the smallest kid that's always front and center in the class picture and all that – and so I was treated like I was small, and I often felt like I wasn't heard."

"What was interesting to me was when I did employ the written word, whether in class or in play, I felt like I was heard. I wasn't regarded as a small girl. I was a voice that had something to say. Honestly, I think it was that."

"Also, I was lucky that we grew up in a house full of books. One of the most frequent drives downtown into Lethbridge was with my dad to go to the library, so we had access to the written word all the time, which is pretty cool."

Making things up came early for her.

"I remember the first time I ever felt singled out for having written something. It was a fictionalized account of hearing the news that my mother's mother had passed away, which she had. I can't remember just what the assignment was, but I remember I felt that I didn't have anything that was based in real life, so I fictionalized my own life. This was probably in about Grade 2.

"The teacher was so moved by my account of running to the basement and crying alone in my room – it was all very dramatic. She watched me put it in my school bag and she told me to be sure that I showed it to my mom – and I thought 'Errr – made up.'"

That talent for creation helped her in school when she was less than inspired by the work.

"It became a sort of thing for me to do throughout school, and I was pretty lucky because I always had at least one teacher who kept my interest, but there was one year ("Teenager? I ask. "Yeah," she says with a grin.) when I really wasn't too interested in the approach of any of my teachers. And it became a challenge for me to hand in written assignments, so I would fabricate book reports."

"I invented all kinds of things, and did great. So I found a creative way to stay engaged in the work anyway."

Her interest in acting also began around Grade 2, when she was cast as the witch in a version of the Snow White story for a Christmas play. She had wanted to be cast as Snow White but she found that the witch was way more interesting and she even got to turn into a dragon.

"Again I felt like after the show people were coming up to me and telling me I was so wonderful, and so once again I was being seen and being heard, being acknowledged. So that seed was planted early, and then I found the theater section at the downtown Lethbridge library and just randomly pulled anything that had dialogue in it."

"Then I had a great drama teacher in junior high named Norma Hoppens. She just really served the creative impulses way beyond the resources that we had at hand."

"The drama room at the time was in the old storage room for the Phys. Ed. department, so it wasn't pleasant. It smelled like Phys. Ed. equipment, but she made it a really great place to be."

"Acting seemed like the most obvious thing to be, and didn't occur to me that writing could be a thing to do or a way to live, until later on another teacher did tell me that was possible to make a living as a writer, that it could be an option."

Writing did become a way to give herself plays to perform in, in a Toronto that seemed to be crammed with would-be actors. At this point in her career it's been ten years since her first play was produced.

Beagan sees herself as being quite shy and so coming to Dawson was a bit of a challenge. She says she knew she was going to have to push herself, challenge herself to be more outgoing, to do things she wouldn't normally do. This included going to a house party put on by people she didn't really know, and lining up an opportunity to go mushing.

The gift of time was a big part of the residency, but for her it was expressed a little differently than for some other writers.

"One of the interesting things about being a theater artist is that do you what you do for so little money that you're constantly working, either working on the thing you're doing, or working on getting the next thing to do, so it's kind of unrelenting. This goes to the extent that a lot of theater artists don't even get out to see a lot of theater. They're working all the time."

"So here, it's amazing just to have the luxury of going for a walk for two hours. Just walking down and listening to the river. When it was freezing up, the sound of that was just unbelievable. Just having the time just to breathe, and take in the world, has been just been pretty great."

She worked on several projects during her stay, as is her habit.

"I have five on the go. I find it helpful to have many on the go because they're in different stages of existence. If you're kind of done digging through microfilament archives, you can actually go and get back to actively typing out a whole different thing on completely different subject matter."

"And if one thing is very dark and it's wearing on you, it's taxing your energies, your soul, and your spirit, it's useful to have something a little bit more fun on the go as well."

'Born to Ski' ~ with Recreation and Parks Association of the Yukon

Submitted by Cathie Findlay-Brook/RPAY

Legend has it that Norwegians are born with little skis attached. The fact behind this legend is that, in the country where skiing was born, Norwegians believe that skiing, much like walking, is instinctive and so natural from birth onwards.

A child - any child - is born a skier. Skis sliding on snow are just another form of play and a way to explore the world around them.

Now in its 10th year the Dawson Community School Cross Country Ski Program that began with programming for Kindergarten, Grade 1's and 2's has been extended to all grades in the school. A windfall opportunity landed in Dawson last spring when KATTS (Klondike Active Transport and Trails Society) got word that a ski area down south was unloading a whole suite of cross country ski gear at record low prices. With assistance from our partners – RSS, the Rec Department, the Rec Board, and Cross Country Yukon KATTS purchased 100 sets of gear to outfit the school, and augment the Rec Department's rental gear.

Why are children so natural on the snow? Snow means slipping & sliding, it means swooshing down hills, it means going fast. When they are playing in snow they pick up skills needed to move around effectively on snow for the rest of their lives. But above all it is their attitude that counts. Children have few of the hang-ups and fears that older youth or adults have about being beginners, seeming foolish, falling, getting twisted up, impressing others, or doing things perfectly the first time out. Most of the time they just want to have fun! Starting children at a young age on skis means they gain skills needed to develop a life-long love of all winter sports

This year's cross country ski program was made possible with gear from the Klondike Active Transport & Trails Society and local trained ski coaches through RPAY. The program focuses on FUN-damentals, learning skills while having fun! Younger grades will be skiing in the school yard, around town and on the dike. Older students will be navigating the Moose Mountain Ski Trails and River Loops. Watch for little skiing gnomes at road crossings!

By offering cross country skiing in the school as a community we are developing a 'Life-long Learning' love of winter sport and achieving RPAY's goal of 'Active Living for Life'.

The Ice Pool may be in doubt this year but, the

Yukon River Ice Bridge is Finally in Place

by Dan Davidson

After much delay, Dawson finally has an official ice bridge for the winter, but users will have to get used to a much longer drive. In normal years the ice bridge is at the North end of town, just where the George Black Ferry runs in the summer. This year the route begins by driving over the top of the dike just opposite the Yukon Electric generating station at the south end of Fifth Avenue.

It's a single lane access road until you actually reach the beginning of the river crossing.

"We've constructed an ice bridge," says Duff Felker at the Highways yard. "It runs above the berm and it's about 1.5 km long."

This is three times the length of the regular ice bridge. For five hundred metres it crosses the Yukon

River just above where the city built its controversial repair berm in the fall. Then it follows the west bank north for 1,000 metres until it reaches the ferry landing on that side.

The actual bridge is two lanes wide and is restricted to a weight of 5,000 kg. Felker says that's about the size of a ten ton truck. At its thinnest the bridge is 33 inches, while the strongest sections are up to 45 inches thick.

There have been difficulties. On February 2 overflow from the Klondike River swamped the new ice bridge, but Felker said that was just temporary problem. They would clean it off, build it up, and even flood it again to get the proper thickness, and get it back in business by about February 8, he thought.

In the meantime, people need to be cautious.

"Apparently one of our locals decided to go around. He tried to get around the overflow and went through the ice. He was up four or five hundred feet above the ice bridge."

The changed location and the warmer weather mean that the new bridge will not be open the usual length of time. Highways will maintain it until April 1, but Felker says they can't see it being really safe after that, so they will close it then.

The Yukon river itself is still open below the berm, though it does seem to be closing.

While Felker is still skeptical about the berm's effect on the freezing of the Yukon River, he won't rule it out as being part of the mix of events that have caused this unsual year.

"We still haven't had any really cold weather," he noted, on a day when it was a sunny -11 C in the middle of the afternoon. "We had a couple of weeks in December, but since then we haven't had any really cold weather. I'm wondering if it isn't the outfall from the sewer more than it is the berm. There's a lot of water flowing through that system now with all the bleeders on. Not more than usual, but it certainly must help."

The Klondike River is thoroughly frozen just a few hundred metres from the open water in the Yukon, and the bigger river is fairly solid above the berm. Past the outfall, though, there is open water. Since the main channel of the river is still out beyond where the berm ends, it seems unlikely that it is the major culprit.

Meanwhile, the bridge is not the only Dawson tradition getting a shake-up. At this writing it seems likely the annual breakup ice pool, which has been going for more than a century, may not happen this year.

Myrna Butterworth, a member of the IODE, which runs the event, says there does not seem to be any way to do what has been done in the past. The river is still open in front of the old CIBC building, where the tripod and cable are usually attached. Something could be set up on or near the new bridge, but there's no power there to handle the clock.

The organization will be meeting on February 7 to try and come up with an alternative or make a final decision, but right now Butterworth thinks the prospects are pretty dim.

International intrigue comes to the Klondike

Gold Web

By Vicki Delany
Dundurn
322 pages
$17.99

1898 was an exceptionally busy year in the Klondike. In fact, it was an exceptionally busy spring and summer, for that has been the time frame for all four of the Klondike mystery series novels.

While Dawson may have been free of any murders at all in real life, Fiona MacGillivray and her immediate circle of associates have had to deal with a dead dancer, an attempt on our heroine’s life and a kidnapping into the bush in search of a mythical motherlode.

This one begins with a bloody murder in the alley behind Fiona’s Savoy Saloon and Dance Hall.

“The last thing he saw in this world was world was my shocked face.”

Why did the murdered man breathe out her name with his next to last breath, and why did he use the last one to say “Culloden”? And in telling the NWMP all that she knew of the man’s last moments, why did she omit that last bit of information?

There are generally three narrative strands in these books. We get Fiona in the first person. Angus, her 12 year old son, gets the third person treatment, as does Corporal Richard Sterling, the man who may one day become her significant other. The interweaving of these points of view means that we very occasionally view the same scene from more than one perspective.

Of Fiona, we know that she was born to a servant family in Scotland, but got a first class education by virtue of being befriended by the local laird’s daughter, gaining a refined English accent in the process. At a young age tragedy befell her family and she was cast upon her own resources, living for a time with a group of gypsies, and leaving them when the potential for harm at the hands of one of the young men became too great.

This continuing development

BOOKENDS
by Dan Davidson

of her backstory comes to us courtesy of events in the present triggering memories of the past.

In this book’s flashback sequences we learn that she spent a number of years as a street beggar under the tutelage of a Fagin-like character who ran a kiddie crime family as well as a brothel. Good looks and refinement would eventually gain her entry to the homes of the well to do, where she was a successful thief, keeping a step ahead of discovery by moving on.

She moved on to Toronto where she and Angus (we have yet to learn of his origin) lived for a time before deciding to try out the Gold Rush in 1897. A short stay in Skagway convinced her that it was no place for her and Angus. Along the way north she formed a business partnership with Ray Walker, and together they founded the Savoy in Dawson.

There are a number of ongoing plot strands that began in the earlier volumes and weave their way through this book. Fiona has a continuing feud with one of the local madams on Paradise Alley, and that leads to an attempt on her life. The arrival of a lady photographer, Ellen Jennings, leads to Angus taking on a second summer job and appears to drive a wedge between Fiona and Sterling, who have been inching closer together during the months they have known each other.

As Sterling works to solve the murder mystery, other plots are swirling around the town. What is one to make of Count Nicky, the Russian, who seems intent on a hair brained scheme to wrest the Yukon from Canada and make of it and Alaska a new Russia, to escape from the tyranny of the Czar? Then there’s a group of warmed over Fenians, still bent on punishing Britain for all it has done to the Irish by somehow causing a revolution in Canada.

So, while there is a murder at the beginning of the book, much of the thriller action is provided by the presence of spies, both foreign and domestic, and agent provocateurs intent on mischief that go far beyond the confines of peaceful Dawson City.

Delany keeps busy producing books at the rate of about one a year. Aside from the four Klondike books, there are six in the Constable Molly Smith series, set in a town modeled after Nelson, BC, three standalone suspense novels, a book for reluctant readers and, most recently an entry, under the pen name of Eva Gates, in the mystery genre known as the “cozy” style, with the title of By Book or By Crook.

Request for Proposals

Records Management Plan
City of Dawson

Request for Proposal #15-01 Records Management Plan Closing Date: 4:00 PM, February 20th, 2015.

The City of Dawson wishes to contract the services of a records management expert to undertake a strategic planning process focused on determining how best to manage its records for the future. Desired results will include a high level Records Management Plan that assists the City Of Dawson in making future decisions about methodologies and functional requirements for its records management. The process will include the identification of deficiencies, required improvements, available options, recommendations for improvement and the best strategy for plan implementation.

The City of Dawson invites qualified suppliers to submit proposals for such a project in accordance with the terms and conditions of the Request for Proposal #15-01.

Proposal Packages

Proposal packages are available for pick up at the City of Dawson Office, located at 1336 Front Street, Dawson City, YT; from 9:00 AM to 5:00 PM. If you wish to receive an electronic version, please contact the City Office.

Proposal Submission

Three (3) complete hard copies of the proposal. Hard copies shall be submitted in bound packages of material printed on 8.5 x 11 inch paper and be identified as "RFP 15-01". All hardcopy proposals shall be submitted in a sealed envelope clearly marked "RFP 15-01" and be addressed and delivered to:

City of Dawson
1336 Front Street, Box 308 Dawson, YT Y0B 1G0
RE: RFP #15-01—Record Management Plan
