The X-mas Story By Erin Deacon

The Yukon cold, the Yukon cruel
The memories are well told,
Of the men who bled to get ahead,
By finding the cursed gold.

But the one thing queer, the one thing strange,
The puzzler that I have found...
Is why the tales are always of men,
When tales of women abound!

Oh there are some true,
Such as Lady Lou, or Montreal Marie,
But the best I've heard, the strangest word,
Is the tale that's told by me.

So gather 'round, and fill your cup,
And I'll tell you of the time when,
I dared the trail that many had failed
With the ladies, Erin and Jen.

It was the morn of the twenty-fourth,
That the trapper stumbled in,
He sought to gain our attention all,
By making an awful din.

"Listen now!" he cried aloud,
"There's sumpt'in I've got to say,
For as sure as a sinner needs the cross,
I've got to know the day!"

"The twenty-fourth!" I cried aloud,
"Oh woe!" I heard 'im say.
"Because of me, and my lazy pace,
A boy will miss his Xmas day!"

Then Jen the chef, came in with soup,
And the trapper slurped it down,
And told of how he's seen the widower,
Afore he went and came to town.

Now this widower, he had a son,
Not six and a half was he,
Whose fav'rite time, was Xmas time,
As for all boys, it should be.

They lived far out in the Yukon bush,
From town, a long ways ride,
He liked it for the stillness,
And the peace, it gave him inside.

"They have no calendar," the trapper said,

"They can't read numbers anyway.
And so they begged me, on return,
To tell them of the day."

"But it's a full day, and a half by dog,
And my team is tuckered out,
So now they'll never know tomorrow's Xmas."
"By god they will!" there came a shout.

And Jen the chef took off her cap,
And marched her way through town,
To see her best and true friend Erin,
Who ran the store, a few blocks down.

Jen explained the problem clear,
And both agreed within a minute,
That they would bring the news,
And the quest immediately they should begin it!

Now I'm all for this fem-ee-nism,
I support it true, without a doubt,
But in the Yukon, it just don't seem right,
To let two young ladies ...just run about.

So I let it be known that I'd give them my team,
And join them on their quest.
And though at first they were unsure,
They knew it was my team, that was best.

We had scant hours to reach our goal,
'Fore the setting of the sun,
And it usually took a day and a half,
And we had only one!

While quicker now it may have been,
To have sent only one,
There wasn't one that would stay behind,
For the widower's boy was my sister's son!

And the widower's wife had been a friend,
Of the best to Erin and Jen,
And so us three we did away,
On the trail that frightened the bravest men.

Well my team's the best, as I have said.
And they didn't let us down.

For we were just five miles away,
When the sun did set, and darkness came around.

And then Jen's lamp was brightly struck,
To illuminate our way,
And so we neared the widower's cabin,
At one A.M. Xmas day!

We found them both, still wide awake,
On this early Xmas morn.
We hugged and knelt, and bowed our heads
To give thanks for the babe who'd been born.

"We came to tell you it was Xmas," I said.
"I know," he replied with a silly grin.
"But tell me," he whispered close to my ear,
Why did it take you sooooo long to come in?!"

"We saw your lamplight, it was bright as a star,
And the silhouette of you three, as you came,
But you took a full hour, to come that last mile,
From the eastern side, all the same."

I said nothing, except good night,
And tried to gain my well-earned rest.
But a nagging question, still burned in me,
And kept me up like a loathsome pest!

If we had arrived in at one,
On my team which is the best,
Then who were the three in the east
When we had come down from the west?

But here! I see my mug's gone dry,
And I have worked up quite a thirst,
So let's drink some more and eat as well,
'Till we feel we're going to burst.

And for those of you that wonder like we,
About the wondrous things that come our way,
Remember it was friendship, the most wondrous of all,
That brought us together that Xmas day.

Paddle For The Peel

by Meg Walker

The Hart, the Peel, the Rat, the Bell, the Porcupine, the Yukon. That’s not all the rivers north of Dawson City, of course, but in 2013 six young men decided to paddle them, taking 63 days to travel the route, filming the adventures – and the wilderness – along the way. Director Simon Lucas and team leader Gabriel Rivest brought the resulting film “Paddle For The North” here on December 4. To no one’s surprise, it was a sold out screening.

The fast-paced film is beautifully shot. It blends lots of action with more peaceful panoramas and well-chosen GoPro close-ups (fish getting hooked for dinner!). Lucas and Scott Sinton (videographer, photographer) are from New Zealand, while Rivest, Alexandre Deschênes-Dénommé (experienced paddler), Matt Holmes (river guide) and Michah Rauguth (Dawson City miner and outdoorsman) are Canadian. So one storyline is of the friendships growing between them.

The heart of the self-funded film, though, is the rare beauty and complexity of the Peel River watershed: not just because it’s glorious, but because it needs to be protected. The scenes that reveal this best are when the team meet the Tetlichis, a Fort Macpherson, NWT family who have come to their fish camp on the Peel River for the season. We hear mostly from Steven Tetlich, the father, and watch the kids goof around with the guys and the camera gear. It’s a suite of well-edited moments which demonstrate that these rivers are home, and have been home, to local First Nations for generations.

Dawson City’s own Michah Rauguth was one of the crew. His comments in the film illustrate that many people involved in resource industries (such as mining) are also in support of protecting rare ecosystems.

A 25-minute version of “Paddle For The North” debuted at the Banff Mountain Film Festival. As a result, they are in discussion with National Geographic about making a five-minute version of the film. All Canadian screenings have been sold out, and the film will show in California and New Zealand in 2016.

The Dawson audience was enthused during the Q&A. Rivest shared how, in 2012, he had been at a Peel watershed land use planning consultation. Sarah Jerome, an elder from Fort Macpherson, spoke and mentioned how she loves it when canoeists stop and visit. Rivest approached Jerome afterwards and described the plan for the film. She helped arrange for the Tetlich family to be there early enough in the season to meet the paddlers.

One dramatic point in the trip was a sudden flood on the Rat River: a 2 metre rise in 5 hours. Several paddles were lost. While they out-waited the water, the guys cut a log into a rough wooden paddle. They had it with them, and someone asked if they’d used it.

“Actually right now it doesn’t feel too bad! It’s had time to dry out so it’s about half the weight and I wouldn’t mind using it at all,” said Rivest. “At first when we lost the paddles we thought, it’s no big deal, we won’t need them too much because we’re going upstream. But it ended up being the most important part to have paddles because we had to ferry across the river all the time.”

Then another hand went up. “I think my grandpa found one of your paddles,” a young woman said, and the crowd laughed in delight. Turns out Michelle Carmichael’s grandpa John Carmichael found it near his fish camp in the Husky Channel (part of Longstick River in the Mackenzie Delta, NWT) “We go up there every summer, and when I was up there one year it was his new favourite paddle. Then when I saw the film I recognized the stickers,” she explained when asked about it later. The team doesn’t want the paddle back, of course, but Michelle hopes to get them a photo of her grandpa posing with it.

With so much international discussion about climate change, debates can start to feel abstract. A film like “Paddle For The North” helps focus on one area for a few breaths. It’s exciting to know that northerners’ passion for the Peel Watershed, a place we can make important preservation decisions about in the near future, is shared by many others too.

Uffish Thoughts: A hopeful beginning to national discussions

By Dan Davidson

First Ministers' Meeting. Now there's a phrase we haven't seen in print or heard said – except in the sense of there being something missing in the national consultation on issues – for quite a few years.

It appears that the two main topics of discussion this first time – climate change and the Syrian refugee crisis – were worthy of the expense it takes to bring all these people together.

To my mind it is a good thing that the Premiers and the Prime Minister are talking again as a group, as opposed to the one to one meetings that had been Mr. Harper's chosen method of dealing with the provinces and territories.

Not that there's anything wrong with one on one discussions where issues restricted to one province or territory are concerned, but issues of national importance should be determined with the larger picture in view, and the way to do that is to involve everyone.

There are risks, of course. There have been First Ministers' Meetings where the Premiers simply ganged up on the Prime Minister, and the disagreements became rancorous. If memory serves, such meetings were often triggered by the federal government having done something autocratic without due diligence given to the consultation needed to build consensus before acting.

Unilateral action is always open to protest in our sort of federation if the proper groundwork has not been laid in advance. Justin Trudeau's father was not always good at this sort of thing. Wage and Price Controls and the National Energy Program stick out as programs that were not handled well. The Charter of Rights and the Patriation of our Constitution, on the other hand, were carried off with fair degree of style.

On the matter of climate change (global warming was never the best term to describe what's happening) it has been the provinces that have taken the lead on this file, acting in spite of the federal government's reluctance to set and meet targets. It isn't just the Conservative government that has lagged on this file. A couple of Liberal administrations didn't do much better. In fact, if Green Party Leader Elizabeth May has it right, the last government to take this issue seriously was Brian Mulroney's Progressive Conservative administration.

It remains to be seen what will be the outcome of last month's First Ministers' meeting, or the international gathering in Paris that is just now wrapping up as I write this. Certainly something more effective than world leaders setting deadline targets that will arrive after they are all dead, as happened at the last such world class gathering, needs to be developed.

On the question of the Syrian refugee crisis, it is heartening to hear our national leaders sounding so much less ridiculous than the noise being TRUMPeted from south of our border. Where the Republicans are all about building walls and refusing entry, Canada's response, even before the recent election, was always better than that.

Since the discussion here (aside from some social media nonsense) has really only been about timelines and whether the thing can be done properly and safely within the time frame promised by the Liberals during the election, one has to feel pretty good about our national response.

Personally, if more time is needed, I am happy to see them taking it and chalk it up to prudent management.

The only thing that concerns me about the overall plan is that there is a historical tendency for these people to end up being settled in our major metropolitan areas.

I think it would be better to spread them around a bit more and offer them places in some of our smaller communities to begin with. Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver are already pretty cosmopolitan in their makeup. It's not even so much that they don't need another layer in their cultural mosaic, as it is that there are other parts of the nation that could use more.

As we learn more about the settlement plan, and as the refugees begin arriving, it does seem that this is what's happening this time around.

We want to hear from you!

Pet Pictures With Santa

Story by Meg Walker

Phoebe the dog permits Marianne Collins and Daniel Vigliotti to be part of her portrait with Santa on Dec 6. Dani Thorne of the Humane Society Dawson is thrilled at the turnout for this year's Pet Pictures With Santa, with a record number of 47 different creatures (including children) coming to sit on Santa's knee. The event was at Maximilian's Gold Rush Emporium this year, and Dani would like to give a big thanks to Marianne for hosting and to Janice Cliff for donating her photographic skills. Thanks also to Jim Taggart, who is the Santa every year and does such a good job with all the animals. And as Marianne points out, "I was so happy that nobody peed on Santa or bit him!"

The event raised more than $1000, which will be used for the Humane Society's general operations, especially to help cover the spay and neuter program.

Dawson Council Concerned about Fireworks

Story & Photo
By Dan Davidson

An unauthorized fireworks display set off along the dyke on November 22 caused some discussion to take place at the council meeting two evenings later.

The matter was raised by Councillor Stephen Johnson, who, though he admitted to enjoying fireworks when properly displayed, felt that unauthorized and unsupervised displays could be dangerous.

"As long as someone's responsible and licensed to set fireworks off that's certainly fine," he said, but he had lots of concerns about safety, regulatory procedures and potential liability for the town if something should go wrong.

"Irresponsible setting off of fireworks can cause a great deal of harm in this town, especially if some part of the fireworks fall onto a wooden structure."

In the present case, Fire Chief Jim Regimbal says that these fireworks were set off quite near the Old CIBC Building, which the town has been putting quite a bit of money into lately, getting it ready to be put back into use in some way.

City manager André Larabie informed council that City Bylaw #42, quite an old bylaw, does deal with the matter of fireworks in the town boundary, and does prohibit them.

Regimbal says that the exception is when there has been an approved application to set them off, and some one who has the proper ticket is available to do the work.

"There's no selling or firing off of fireworks in the town at all. I've gone out to businesses that used to sell them and which no longer are."

The fire chief's approval is needed to allow a display.

"You have to have your ticket to be able to do it before I would approve it. It's a special licence for pyrotechnics. Several members of the fire department have this, so that's why we light them off when we do."

At the meeting all members of council agreed that this was an issue, that public education was going to be needed and that the bylaw probably needs to be revised and brought up to date.

Larabie indicated that by not having regulations in place to govern such activity, the town could be held liable if damage occurred.

"We are held responsible for enforcing a bylaw, and if we didn't have a bylaw it would be even worse."

Hunger-killers and shiny fruit: An Argentine Christmas Glossary

By María Sol Suárez

When I spent my first Christmas in the Yukon, I was thrilled to experience all of those iconic Hallmark card moments associated with the holidays that were so different from what I grew up with in South America. I wanted to bake ALL the cookies, wear ALL the ugly sweaters, sing ALL the carols. I felt like all those snow globe dreams were finally materializing: I could taste them, and touch them, and wear them. I had my first REAL tree, from a REAL forest, at the age of 25. And, I'm sorry, but I ain't never switching back to plastic.

However, as it happens with anyone who recently immigrated to a new country, distance makes silly things about home so much more endearing, and nostalgic impulses make you want to force-feed a failed batch of turrón (Spanish nougat with almonds) to your Canadian friends, in an attempt to bring a little bit of your past into your present. Well, this article is just that.

Recently, an Argentinean meme depicting a cute Chihuahua dog reacting to two different kinds of Panettone or Pan Dulce popped up in my Facebook feed, making me cackle so hard I startled my cat. One featured traditional candied fruit, while the other is a modern Nutella-filled version. I was out of breath, my eyes filled with laughter tears. My Canadian husband, sitting beside me, couldn't understand the magnitude of my response: "I mean, it is cute, but, why is it THAT funny to you?"

Which one would you choose?

The answer is in my childhood Christmas memories, in Argentina. Memories of desperately picking those disgusting pieces of candied fruit out of your Pan Dulce slice and quickly hiding them in your napkin, before your Nonna can see you desecrating this time-honored holiday treat. Those horrid nuggets of despair are NOT fruit, Nonna. Candied fruit has been traumatizing Argentine children for generations. Nevertheless, when December rolls around, we buy it. So help us, Baby Jesus, we buy it in bulk. But why?

WHY, MOM? Because, well, it just isn't Christmas without Pan Dulce.

This madness is a result of our European background, which puts things like rich and fatty Italian and Spanish winter delicacies on the tables of people that spend Christmas Eve in no less than 35° Celsius. We wear thin linen dresses and flip flops paired up with our Santa hats, and it takes your Dad exactly 2 minutes after the champagne toast to get rid of his tie and fan himself with a paper plate. Yet we keep the heavy, doughy, nutty, sugary traditional sweets on our table, even if they are barely touched.

The main courses don't follow much logic either, consisting in vittel thoné (boiled veal chilled and served with a tuna and caper sauce...somehow, it isn't hideous) and "Russian salad" (basically a glorified potato salad with carrots and peas), both dishes caked in so much mayo that your arteries shiver at the sight of them.

I can't help but scoff at turducken posts on the internet. Those people obviously never heard of matambre: strips of flank steak overlapped and stuffed with layers of grated carrots, herbed bread soaked in milk, hardboiled eggs, peppers and sometimes ham, all rolled tightly and tied, to be later boiled and pressed (my mother's matambre press looks like a medieval torture device) to pack the ingredients together.

This monstrosity, whose name literally means "hunger killer," is later sliced, revealing its colorful layers straight out of a 1950's cookbook, and served with (you guessed it) more mayo. I have no idea why a country with superb food has such retro taste for holiday classics.

If you are about to succumb to the heat and cholesterol overload, fear not. It's time for a frosty glass of champagne, or a whole one-litre bottle of Real cider while sitting on the sidewalk, if you are keeping it "Real" like I do. When the clock strikes Midnight on Christmas Eve (or Nochebuena), we have a toast, or as we call it, "Brindis". "Brindis" doesn't really mean anything in Spanish; its etymology is uncertain. Maybe it comes from "Brin dis...bottle over here".

Whatever your poison, it better have foil on its tip, and when you pop the cork you better do it in style: the thing has to FLY. One of my best Navidad moments was when I got a cider cork all the way across the street into the neighbour's yard, and everyone cheered like I had hit a homerun. There is a superstition that says if the cork hits you, you will get married in the next year. It is also likely you will lose an eye.

And if you didn't get what you wanted for Christmas, no worries, the Three Wise Kings have your back. If you are of Spanish origin, you get ANOTHER gift-giving holiday on January 6th. They put gifts inside your shoes and their camels (or your dog) drink the water you leave for them. Magic. But there is one thing we all have in common, no matter which side of the Equator you are on for the holidays. One thing that, in the middle of a particularly stressful Christmas with my family, saved my husband and me from desolation: watching Home Alone, every December. "Feliz Navidad, inmundo animal" is the Spanish translation of that infamous Home Alone quote. Feliz Navidad, ya filthy animals.

Husky Bus is more than just an award winning bus company

By Dan Davidson

Jesse Cooke didn't come to Dawson for the first time in 2006 intending to establish a ground transportation company. His University of Ottawa studies in glaciology the summer before had taken him to Kluane Lake. He had heard of Dawson but hadn't got there. He was curious and he really liked the geography of the Yukon.

Windsor, Ontario, where he grew up, is very flat. Cooke had discovered that he liked being within sight of mountains.

Getting to Dawson for the summer was not altogether easy in those days. Like a lot of other potential summerdoughs, he hitchhiked, having no idea then that he would eventually found a company dedicated to making that unnecessary.

Cooke, an accomplished performer who has opened for a number of higher powered visiting acts over the years, is also a teacher, and when he could gain contract employment as a subject teacher or an educational assistant, he stayed year round in the town.

"You know the allure of the Klondike," he said, as we discussed his latest enterprise last week. "Like so many others you keep coming back, or you just get stuck."

In 2011 the Klondike Development Organization held one of its early community forums, this one on the subject of ground transportation. At the time there was no taxi service in the town. Regular shuttle service to and from the airport had been discontinued unless you were staying at one of the hotels that ran their own vans. There was no place to rent a vehicle or a bicycle, for that matter.

Of particular note was the lack of a bus service, gone when Grayline pulled out years earlier. Getting to Dawson from Whitehorse was a matter of flying, driving, or a combination of hitchhiking and shank's mare.

Contract teachers have no summer income, so Cooke was persuaded by the KDO's study that there was a business case for picking one of these omissions and trying to fill the gap. He acquired two 15 passenger vans (still in use three years later), picked up and dropped passengers by the Front Street Gazebo and did all his bookings by cell phone.

By the end of the season he was the Dawson Chamber of Commerce's New Business of 2012.

For him it was a case of "if you drive it they will come". Starting slowly, he began to get asked to do other things. Town tours? Sure. Midnight Dome tours in the evening? Why not? All day sightseeing excursions to the Tombstones? Certainly. Special charters to Whitehorse, or perhaps Fairbanks? Can do. Before long he was even renting bicycles and running shuttle trips to and from the airport for the hotels that found it more convenient to use his services.

By now he was hiring more driver-interpreters, operating out of a storefront on Front Street, buying two 20 passenger buses and, last spring, buying a house on 2nd Avenue to become the new Husky HQ. The former hairdresser's home even had rental accommodation on the second floor: a two bedroom suite or a couple of private bedrooms, run under the name the Little Inn.

During the same time period he married girlfriend Sarah, who had been his first additional driver. They bought a fine log cabin on a nice piece of property in West Dawson and recently celebrated the birth of their son.

On the day we met, he had walked across the recently frozen river, with a vehicle parked on either side to complete the ride to town and the long uphill journey to the cabin at the end of the day.

The result of his entrepreneurial activity is a thriving business, one which now employs six people beside himself. This recently earned him the Parks Canada Youth Tourism Entrepreneur Award, at a ceremony held in Ottawa on December 2.

Cooke is justifiably proud of the accomplishment, but still a bit bashful about it when we talked and later on in the week at the Dawson Chamber's annual general meeting, where he was congratulated once again.

At that meeting he also announced that the adventure tour side of the business is undergoing a rebranding as the Klondike Experience, just because he's been doing a more of that sort of thing and people don't necessarily associate it with a bus company when they're shopping for travel experiences.

"Husky Bus is going to stay alive as well," he said. "The Klondike Experience is going to be a Dawson City adventure tour company. We don't have one yet."

The bus schedule will remain a spring, summer, early fall thing, but the Klondike Experience is being planned as a year round affair, hoping to push activity into the winter season.

"It's exactly what we're doing now, but we're going to do it better and with better marketing because when you think of hiking in Tombstone Park and mountain bicycle rentals, you don't really think of a bus company."

Jesse Cooke outside the headquarters of Husky Bus and the soon to be launched Klondike Experience.

Part of his seasonal success is based on picking up some activities that Holland-America doesn't want to run out of the Westmark any more. These include the town and Dome tours, and some of the Tombstone passengers, now that H/A customers who are flown here have more time on the ground than when they came by motor coach.

The success and increased activity has meant a change in his personal and work life. Since he started the company, he's been contract teaching in the winter and running Husky in the summer, actually overlapping the two jobs in May, August and September.

Last year he taught part time. This year, while there were a number of good teaching jobs that he would have applied for in the past, he didn't try for any of them.

"This deserved my full attention this year," he said. "For a couple of years with Husky Bus, I taught the school year and then worked at this all summer long. It was exhausting."

Northern Cross’ Search for is flawed, says YCS spokesperson

Story & Photo
by Dan Davidson

It’s the opinion of the Yukon Conservation Society that the proposed drilling activities in the Eagle Plains region by Northern Cross is an activity fraught with some problems that have not been sufficiently addressed in the company’s proposal.

YCS’s Dawson representative, Sebastian Jones, presented his take on these issues to a group of 18 citizens at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre on November 30.

Exploration has been going on in the Eagle Plains area on a semi-regular basis since the 1960s, including the drilling to date of some 40 wells and seismic exploration.

Calgary based Northern Cross (NC), largely owned now by a Chinese company, CNOOC International Inc., has been operating in the area since 1994.

The company recently acquired 15 exploration permits from the Yukon Government. In 2013-14 Northern Cross drilled four new wells and did additional 2D and 3D seismic exploration over a 325 km square area.

The next stage, currently before the Yukon Environmental and Socio-economic Assessment Board, is to drill up to 20 more exploration wells in the 3D seismic zone.

It is specifically mentioned that hydraulic fracturing is not part of the project plan.

Jones feels that the project plan currently before YESAB is deficient in a number of areas.

“It is not complete, in my view,” he told his audience, focusing on a specific areas where he feels more work is needed.

The return of the Porcupine Caribou herd to this region after a several year absence raises the issue of both direct and indirect impacts.

The intense activity of the exploration phase, not to mention the possible development of producing wells, will displace the caribou. NC is not willing to cease operations temporarily should the animals arrive in the area in sufficient numbers, a mitigation requirement suggested strongly by the Porcupine Caribou Management Board.

NC’s proposal includes the construction of some 80 km of new roads in the area, all-season roads that will mean more hunting access, Jones said.

The successful establishment of wells would mean an influx of largely male rig workers, which Jones feels would likely increase the number of hunters in the area.

Jones points out that while the exploration phase of this work does conform to the North Yukon Land Use Plan, it seems quite likely that full field development would not. At that point, the issue of whether the land use plan is more than just a guideline would have to be examined.

Oil wells, even without fracking, do tend to use a lot of water, and the Eagle Plains area does not actually have a lot of that. Just how much is not well known. That would mean that water for the project would have to be trucked in, greatly increasing traffic flows on the sometimes precarious highway.

Jones cited concerns about water quality and the possibility that tainted water might get into whatever aquifers and streams there are in the area.

In 2012, the waste water from NC’s exploration was trucked to British Columbia for treatment. This time, the proposal is to store it in re-injection wells.

Other waste metals and salts are to be contained in Mix-Bury-Cover (MBC) pits in the region of the project.

Jones is not satisfied that either the re-rejection wells or the MBC storage will be constructed to a high enough level of security to last and do the job effectively.

In terms of socio-economic factors, Jones is unconvinced that this very expensive to produce oil will repay the cost of getting it out of the ground at current prices, not to mention the costs of

PILLARS OF SUCCESS

with Mo Caley-Verdonk, Life Coach

Season’s Greetings!

This time of the year, probably more so than any other, is the time that we reminisce over our past, and contemplate our futures.

While we are attending gatherings with friends and families, breaking bread together, sharing gifts and good times, and rolling into the New Year with new energy and gusto, we are also creating big dreams, setting exciting goals, and making important promises.

- “I’m going to make 2016 my best year ever.”
- “I’m finally going back to school to get my degree.”
- “I’m not going to work so hard.”
- “I’m going to finally get my health back.”
- “This is the year to pay off my debt.”

You know your promises – you’ve probably made them more than once in the past. Some you have kept; many are nagging reminders of unfulfilled commitments.

In Bill Phillips’ book Body for Life, he explains why keeping promises to ourselves is much more important than it appears on the surface. Bill writes, When you set an important goal you must promise yourself that you will finish what you start, no matter what. That vow, although it might be very easy to break, is by far one of the most important ones to honor. You see, the very essence of confidence is self-trust. Would you trust anyone who repeatedly lied to you? Someone who broke the rules of the game again and again? Of course you wouldn’t.

So if you’ve developed a pattern of not honoring self-promises, this is a great time to make a change. If you can’t honor, trust, and depend on your own word, well... that may be the root of a lot of challenges in your life – a lot more than you realize.

Why not make NOW your year that you keep your word to yourself... more often!

I remember when I didn’t understand the importance of this...and would often wonder why I felt discouraged, disappointed and drained. Over the years I’ve learned a few super simple strategies to get better at keeping my word to myself and by doing so, have reclaimed my energy and enthusiasm for life!

I’d like to share these with you. To get started, you can take this knowledge and apply it to your business, career, health, finances and relationships by using the simple practice of noticing—you don’t have to change anything right away...just notice your habits and patterns for a couple of weeks.

- Are there promises that you are making and not keeping?
 - How does that affect your energy, motivation and progress?
 - How does it make you feel about yourself?
- Next, with the information you’ve gathered try these 2 simple steps to make the shift from breaking promises to honouring your word:
- Start small—pick one thing that you know in your heart will make a difference to your well being, functioning and how you treat others. It could be as simple as:
- taking a short break and having an uninterrupted cup of tea.
 - having just one latte a week (or a month) and really savoring it while knowing you are honouring your debt repayment plan.
 - taking 5 minutes when you first get home to relax before rushing to get dinner on.
 - going to bed a little earlier each night so you feel more rested.
 - taking the time before you go to sleep each night to notice 3 things you are grateful for.

Celebrate your successes – focus on what is going well and limit the attention you give to what hasn’t gone as well as you’d like.

- What promises are you making and keeping?
- How does that affect your energy, motivation and progress?
- How does it make you feel about yourself?

As you acknowledge your successes, feel free to give yourself a pat on the back or as one of my coaching clients created to celebrate her successes..... do a “happy dance.” This is really about “watering the plant that you want to grow” and allowing the one you don’t want “to wither.”

As you know, so many New Year’s resolutions don’t lead to lasting change and we feel bad about not sticking to them. So, if you view this as feeding yourself, being good to yourself, giving yourself a big wonderful gift each day . . . well, it sure is a lot easier to honour your promises. If you were to honour your promises even 10% more each day, imagine what you’d accomplish by this time next year!!

From my family to yours, I wish you the very best.

To Your Success,

Mo Caley-Verdonk

Dawson teams give good showing at Toonie Tournament

By Lynette Peterson

On December 4, 2015 thirty kids from Dawson hit the road to Whitehorse to play in the Whitehorse Minor Soccer Toonie Tournament. With ten kids on each team they entered in the U7, U9 and U11 divisions.

The U7's played a total of 6 games and came out with a bronze medal that they earned after a shoot-out where Jack Hawkins made 6 amazing saves and Diedra Carr scored the winner!

The U9's played 4 games, winning 3 of them with shutouts! There ended up being a 3-way tie for first place in their pool and it came down to counting goals for and against, they were eliminated by 1!

The U11's played 3 games coming out with a tie and 2 losses against some strong Whitehorse teams. They all played some great soccer and improved as a team with every game!

Coach Johnny was pleased with every kids play and how they got stuck in and was pleased he was able to coach them all - even Teagan who is always giving him a hard time!

Coaches picks for MOST IMPROVED:

U7 - Elliot MacAdams

U9 - Emily Taylor

U11 - Arnica Bulmer

Coaches picks for OUTSTANDING PLAYER:

December Offerings

The Dawson City Community Library will be closed for an extended period over the yuletide holidays, so be sure to stock up on reading, listening, and viewing materials. The Library will close at 6:30 p.m. on Friday, 18 December, 2015 and will reopen at noon on Monday, 4 January, 2015. However, you will still be able to return materials during that time – just slip them into the Library drop box near the main entrance of the Robert Service School building.

To get you into the Christmas spirit, we've put up a special no-ho-ho-hos-barred display of seasonal materials. Among the selected materials you'll find on the shelf are children's story books, holiday cookbooks for the chefs in the house, entertaining guides, how-to craft books, and family-friendly holiday movies. So come on in and find something to help make this season even more festive for you and your family.

The Library has had an influx of new books recently – both fiction and non-fiction. Among the notable acquisitions are: Aleph by Paulo Coelho (author of the international bestseller The Alchemist); Cloud Atlas by notable British SciFi author David Mitchell; After You by Jojo Moyes, (the sequel to her bestselling Me Before You); Children of the Broken Treaty, a new book by NDP MP Charlie Angus, about a young activist's fight for a school in Attawapiskat; and (for those anticipating getting a new camera for Xmas) The Beginner's Photography Guide by Chris Gatcum. Look for these in our New Books displays. (Non-fiction is located in front of the main entrance, while you'll find new fiction at the top of the stairs to our upper level).

The Dempster Highway's value as a tourist attraction will be diminished, Jones said, while many of the specialized jobs needed for the oil field will not go to Yukoners.

He concludes that the application needs more work at this time.

Cape Breton Harmonies Serenade at the Aurora Inn

Story & Photos
By Dan Davidson

Keith Mullins & Angelo Spinazzola serenaded a crowd of over 30 at the latest installment of the Dawson Home Routes House Concert experience.

Mullins, an accomplished vocalist, finger style guitarist, harmonica player and drummer (box drum solos, with kick pedal and tambourine in constant play) ran through a wide variety of material. His website indicates he is influenced by the work of Paul Simon, Ben Harper, Bruce Springsteen and Marvin Gaye, but you can throw Stevie Wonder and Michael Jackson into the mix as well as the Cuban influences that show up on his latest album, Island Sol.

Spinazzola uses a pick for the fine leads and rhythms he coaxes out of his guitar, and is equally adept with harmonica and flute. He cites influences from Donovan, Buffy Sainte-Marie, Valdy and Rickie Lee Jones.

Both singer/songwriters play a lot of school gigs and have produced songs at workshops in a number of high schools around the country. At Robert Service School there wasn't time enough to do that and the students they met there were happy just to hear them perform and talk a bit about where the songs came from.

An unusual feature of this house concert was that it took place in the dining room of the Aurora Inn, where the owners also donated rooms for the two travelling musicians.

Aside from their own tunes, picked from their several albums and some works in progress. Mullins and Spinazzola served up a cover of Simon's "Graceland", and a mashup of Jackson's "Billie Jean" and Wonder's "Superstition".

It would not have been possible to pigeon hole this pair into any particular musical genre, so this truly was an evening where there was something for everyone, even to a finale/encore piece that mashed several tunes together in a instrumental tribute to their Cape Breton roots.

The pair have known each other for years, and really seem to enjoy working together. This was Mullins' tour, but Spinazzola was far more than just a sideman. Mullins actually started out playing drums with Spinazzola's brother.

Fire Department scores hat trick

BY DAN DAVIDSON
Sun Staff

Fire fighting can get worse than 30 below and late dusk in Dawson. It can drop a lot lower and the calls can come in the middle of the blackest night, but it remains a scary feeling when the alarm goes off, especially when the alarm is ringing at the Robert Service School.

The department turned out in force shortly after 5 PM on November 30, when a ringing alarm and safety lighting announced to the students and teachers still in the building that this one was NOT a drill. The senior girls' volleyball team was in training gear and evacuated to the Post Office across the street under the watchful eyes of their coaches and several other staff members who were just wrapping up their days. They were later able to return to the school for their things. Coach Kathy Webster's cat, Lynx, was a big hit at the Post Office.

There was a smell of smoke by the Fourth Avenue exit door, though nothing was visible to the people still in the building, but the alarm system had already narrowed the problem to the Industrial Education Shop.

The fire fighters were ready on both sides of the block, but the main action was at the rear doors of the shop, where the water was ready to flow and the crew were

No bridge for at least 8 years, government says

BY TIMOTHY SAWA
Sun Staff

Through the entire Dawson bridge debate the territorial government has been excruciatingly careful never to offer a construction start date, or even a construction year, to Dawson residents.

Now, the Klondike Sun has learned that — by the government's own admission — it will be a minimum of eight years, and probably more realistically, ten years, before this town ever sees a solid link with the Top of the World Highway.

The news comes after a private meeting of Dawson Mayor Art Webster and town councillor Denny Kobayashi with Government Leader John Ostashek, Community and Transportation Minister Bill Brewster and Klondike MLA David Millar.

It was during this meeting that the government trio admitted to the two Dawson politicians that no money will be budgeted for bridge construction over the next five years.

"They said it would just cost too much money right now and that it's not even in their five year capital plan," Webster told the Sun last week.

"But that shouldn't be a surprise to you because the minister's been very cautious with this all along."

Webster sees two possible approaches the government could take in building the bridge.

They could either put a chunk of money away every year for the next five years. Then, with the money saved, they could start building. With this approach Dawson would have a bridge in eight years.

Or, they could put it in their capital planning and budget it over the next two years, and have the bridge built in three.

"So what I'm saying is they're taking neither approach over the next five years," he added.

Klondike MLA David Millar

The Sun obtained funding in late 2009 from the City of Dawson, YTG's Heritage Branch and the Community Development Fund to conserve and archive early issues and make them available once again in the public domain. This is a great resource for students, writers and historians, and also for prospective tourists with an interest in Dawson City's life. Each month, we are re-printing our front pages from 20 years ago as a souvenir of our lively history. If you want to see page 2 and beyond, check out our website. Past issues are available there for download. Go to <http://klondikesun.com>. More will be added periodically (heh) when we have time!

This front page is the last of the monthly issues. After this, we became a bi-weekly. Should 20 Years Ago be a feature of every issue of the Sun from now on? Let us know.

The 48 Hour Film Challenge Experience

by Matthew Grindstaff

On November 21, an audience of almost one hundred people in the KIAC ballroom at Dawson City, and many others in the Kwanlin Dün Cultural Centre at Whitehorse, attended the highly anticipated simultaneous screenings of hastily-made films that are only shown once a year.

These were none other than the films created for the 48 Hour Film Challenge, an event hosted by KIAC and the Yukon Film Society.

Upon entry to the KIAC ballroom, we received our ballots (which were also used to draw two door prizes) and rowdy socializing ensued as we waited for the main event. Eventually Dan Sokolowski introduced the participating filmmakers and the films began to play.

Having never experienced this event before, I couldn't have anticipated such a high level of quality in the compositions and humor. I had honestly expected hackneyed junk because, in the process of persuading Lindsey Johnson and me to submit a film of our own, our roommate, George Filipovic, assured us that the films would probably be mediocre at best. I took solace in this, thinking ours would be good by comparison. Anxiety struck as I genuinely enjoyed almost all of the films, many of them quite a lot, and I didn't know how the crowd would react to ours, which wasn't scheduled to be shown until the second-half of the show.

After all the films had played, the ballots were marked and counted. The official jury deliberated on a winner via video call. I can't name anyone who was dissatisfied with their judgment. Components of the winning film were stuck in my head through most of the screenings and long after the event was over.

From "Freezeup Meltdown"

and irrationally-despised ice cream salesman with a horrible sense for business. These, as well as thirteen other films, fifteen in total, brilliantly displayed the humor and profundity characteristic of life in the Yukon.

For the challenge, Lindsey Johnson and I had made a comedic film called "Witchcraft for Dummies," about poorly-studied witchcraft gone awry. Our film seemed to have been generally well received, earnings several good laughs and compliments, which significantly reduced the anxiety I have apparently associated with publicly displaying art.

The 48 Hour Film Challenge has undoubtedly made it onto the list of my favorite events in Dawson. This event exquisitely displays Dawson's deep sense of community, shameless quirky expression, and a level of social acceptance you'll find nowhere else. I intend to submit a film every year that I can.

From "Skin"

The winner of the Jury Prize and the Dawson Audience Favorite was "Freeze Up Melt Down." It depicts local West-Dawsonites hilariously losing their minds while coping with the isolation and frigid temperatures associated with living on the far side of the Yukon River as it freezes (there is no bridge).

Meanwhile, the Whitehorse Audience Favorite, "Out of Season," reveals the very real struggles of a sugar-addicted
