Cameras Set to Roll in Dawson Early April for the TV-Mini Series "Her Next Plan"

(March 15, 2015) Dawson City is the location for a new small-budget TV series from writer-director Lulu Keating and producer Max Fraser.

Cameras are set to roll in early April for the comedy-drama licensed by Northwestel Community television, and funded by community sponsors and government funding agencies - the Yukon Film and Sound Commission and the Canada Media Fund, Northern Production Incentive.

The show was announced today by Fraser and Keating, who share ownership in a new production company, Big Plan Pictures Ltd., which was incorporated for the production.

"Her Next Plan" builds on earlier work by Keating; the story is about two chechahkos from Atlantic Canada who arrive in Dawson broke but hopeful. It stars Stephanie Davidson, who is a co-writer on the project, and her real-life partner Brian Willdey. There are two animal actors as well – Buster and Brutus.

A cast and crew of up to 20 people will work on the production, which is an economic boost to Dawson at an otherwise slow time of year. The producers are putting the series together with all-Yukon and mostly-Dawson talent. A casting session is scheduled for Dawson on Sunday March 22. A call for local crew is being issued. Additional sponsorships are being sought.

Moose killed in collision

A bull moose was hit and killed by a car Friday night (March 13) near Fox Lake.

The car was damaged but its occupants weren't injured, conservation officer Ken Knutson said this morning.

"Sometimes you get lucky," he said.

The collision, which took place between Deep Creek and Fox Lake, was called in to Environment Yukon's TIPP line at 11:25 p.m. Friday.

Knutson said the meat was given to a local Ta'an Kwäch'än family.

After such collisions, meat isn't always recoverable but often moose quarters are still edible, he said.

No one was available at the Carmacks RCMP detachment this morning to speak about the condition of the driver and any passengers.

It's a high-collision area, Knutson said of that stretch along the North Klondike Highway.

Moose often emerge from the lowlands or valleys along the sides of the road to feed on willows and move back and forth across the roadway.

Last fall, a calf was hit by a vehicle and killed. Its mother met the same fate the following night, Knutson said.

He advised drivers to slow down when travelling through the area.

Contact the Yukon TIPP line at 1-800-661-0525 or www.env.gov.yk.ca/environment-you/tip.php.

OPINION

Listening to long winded explanations of just what took place where and when during the recent Supreme Court case here underlined to me just how confusing the street locations and numbers can be in this little town of mine.

A lot of that is because most of us who live here know where things are without necessarily knowing their official locations.

To find the school, just drive down the street by the Yukon Energy plant, and it's one block past the multi-coloured Westmark buildings. You can't miss it.

Well, you might if you didn't know the street in question is Fifth Avenue. You can probably find the school without knowing its number, which is a good thing, because I worked there from 1985 to 2008 and I have no idea what it is.

The City of Dawson is setting out to change all that with its new Civic Addressing Bylaw #13-01.

I wish them luck. It's been tried at least twice since I've been here. Our own house has worn its numbers since we learned what they were some time after the first go round. It's a little confusing because we have a double lot and the two parts are six numbers apart for some reason. But the part the house sits on is the residential number and it's the one I need to quote if there's a water line problem, like there was briefly a month ago.

It's also the number I have to give if I call the RCMP after hours and the call is rerouted to the response centre in Whitehorse, where they don't know the town layout at all.

And it's because of things like that, police calls, ambulance calls and fire calls, that we need to move on this numbering situation more effectively this time out.

You see, the territorial government has decided to give up on its interim 911 plan and go straight to the real thing. By 2016, if plans work out well, there will be 911 service all over the territory, and our calls will not be being rerouted to anyone with local knowledge. They will be picked up by the 911 call service, where ever that may be located, so that the person on the other end of the line will need precise, reliable directions to give to the responders.

"It's the blue house on two lots, two blocks straight back from the school," just won't do the trick any more.

The town's administration has been working on this for a while and has calculated that there are 600 properties that will need numbering within the municipal boundary. The greater number are in the core area, with other groups up the Dome in Literary Heights (my name for it) and others south on the Klondike Highway, including the Dredge Pond subdivision and the Callison subdivisions.

Of those, most have already been assigned numbers during the last couple of efforts. So it will just be a matter of persuading those who haven't done so to put them on their buildings where a responder would be able to see them when driving by. Yes, there seem to be people who feel that doing this is some sort of infringement on their privacy or just can't be bothered.

This cul de sac, leading off Albert Street, is to be identified as part of Fourth Avenue.

It's been estimated that fewer than 20 properties will actually need to change their address numbers, which will be a nuisance on official correspondence and other paperwork. I'm guessing that a lot of these will be corner lots where the frontage is on one street while the actual access is around the corner.

The bylaw had first reading on February 24 and its second reading on March 10. It will be on of the subjects at a Public Forum on March 31. See the back page ad.

As we have been the community pushing hardest, through the efforts of our Fire Chief, Jim Regimbal, as well as our council, for the extension of 911 service past the boundaries of the capital city, it would be embarrassing if we didn't do everything we can to make ourselves ready for it.

Silver says his team is ready to rule

Story & Photo
By Dan Davidson

Klondike MLA and Liberal Leader Sandy Silver made a presentation to and fielded questions from about 30 people at his open constituency meeting on March 3. The crowd in the Downtown Hotel conference room was basically friendly to its elected representative.

Silver presented a number of positions which the party has now taken a stand on in the Legislative Assembly, including support for a Independent Power Policy, and extension of 911 services throughout the Yukon.

The party is not now in favour of digitized staking for mining; though it did look at the practice during the last election, it has concluded there are too many potential problems.

Popular with the audience was his position that the territorial government should pick up much of the extra cost of running and maintaining Dawson's troubled new waste water treatment plant, which has yet to pass its acceptance testing.

On the issue of fracking, Silver, who was part of the select committee that turned in an inconclusive report last month, was clearer than the report in his position.

"A Liberal government would not issue permits for fracking, given what I heard from academic experts, Yukoners and First Nation governments," he said.

On the thorny issue of the Peel Watershed land use plan, he reiterated his press releases criticizing the Yukon Party government for continuing to pursue its vision in spite of widespread opposition and the Yukon Supreme Court decision handed down by Justice Veale.

Silver gave an overview of the issues on which he has asked questions in the Legislature, identifying several dozen themes he has been pursuing, often with the assistance of volunteers who were, in some cases, texting him critiques of the government's responses and suggesting possible new questions even on the floor of the Legislature.

Some locals were concerned that Silver's ambition to become premier might cause him to be less effective in his riding, but he insisted that his Klondike responsibilities would still be job one.

With reference to the Liberal party's lackluster record the last time it formed a government. Silver said that the party in those days had planned to win without planning how to govern once they won.

"We're ready," he said, confident that he is going to be able to field a strong team for the upcoming contest.

Raising the issue of voting for the party in power, Fire Chief Jim Regimbal noted that it had been Silver who was the legislature's champion in the push for territory wide 911 service.

"Thank you for that," he said.

Diana Andrew asked if the party was in favour of decentralizing the functions of some government departments, citing tourism and art as departments that ought to have representation in the Klondike.

Former teacher Sandy Silver perches on the front of a desk while fielding questions from his constituents.

"It doesn't matter ... what you're talking about, it's just 'so much easier for us to take care of it in Whitehorse'. That's the attitude," Silver replied. "It's not easier."

He said that some rural members of the governing party agree with the idea that some jobs should be placed outside the capital.

"It's obvious what we could do here in Dawson," he said, "as far as mining pursuits, tourism and culture. Why is that so hard to do? I don't understand that. "

On that same theme he questioned the wisdom of the government's plan to build a 300 bed seniors' facility in the capital, saying it would make more sense to built several smaller units and put them where their potential residents actually live.

Silver said a Liberal government would spend more time consulting with people to find out what they want and need, rather than spending its time telling people what they were going to get without proper consultation.

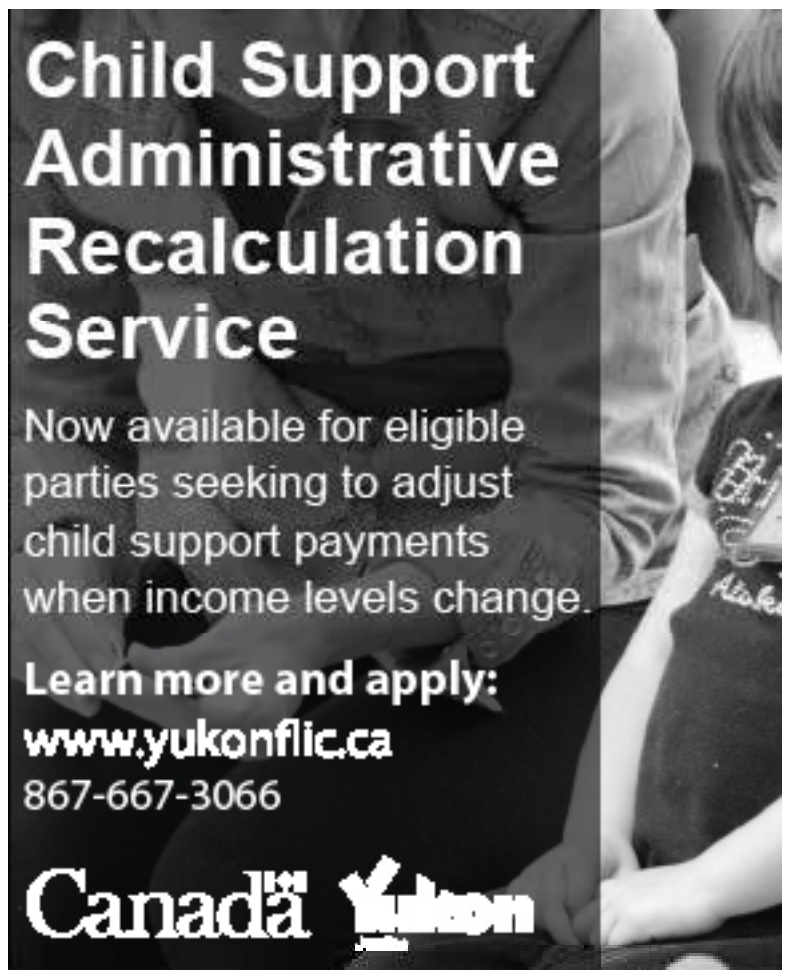
The MLA, he said, should be a conduit from the people to the government, not the other way around, as is so often the case with the Yukon Party.

Silver said he was in favour of developing a model for electoral reform, but felt that most of the ones currently under discussion seem to favour whatever party is advancing them. He would like to see an independent select committee come up with some proposals and see what might emerge.

Asked if he was in favour of recall legislation and referenda, Silver said he wasn't about to go into details at this kind of meeting, but he tended to favour those ideas and was open to finding ways of making them work better than they have in some other jurisdictions.

The meeting ended on a positive note with Glenda Bolt thanking Silver for his attempts to bring respect and kindness into the political realm.

The Girl Guides have returned to Dawson



"Our job is to replace this existing government," says NDP Leader Hanson

by Dan Davidson

There was no shortage of conversation during the Yukon NDP's Sustainable and Prosperous Communities Tour stop in Dawson City on March 10. Liz Hanson, Leader of the Official Opposition in the Legislature, arrived with MLA Jan Stick (Riverdale South) and NDP Chief of Staff, Francois Picard, to discuss issues with about 15 locals assembled in the Gathering Room at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre.

Earlier in the day they had met with Dawson's municipal council and the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in (TH) council.

There was considerable discussion related to the Casino Mine project, especially to the company's plan to create an enormous tailings dam to contain the toxic water that will be a byproduct of its mine plan.

Monina Whitfoth and Tim Gerberding, both of whom work for TH, expressed grave concerns based on their study of the project and the reviews that have been done on it. They see the dam, at the very least, as a serious planning error.

Hanson agreed that mining reclamation needs firm, reasonable regulation. The reclamation plan shortfall at the Wolverine Mine has shown, she said, that there is much work to be done in this area.

Hanson said that the party was particularly concerned about the changes that the Yukon Party has inserted into the federal amendments currently being studied in Ottawa regarding the Yukon Environment and Socio-economic Assessment Board.

On the other hand she took heart that the general opposition from citizens and from the First nations has been to object that these proposals are messing with "OUR agreements", referring to the individual Land Claims and the Umbrella Final Agreement under which YESAB was established.

When the Parliamentary committee comes to the territory for hearings later this year, she imagines they are going to get an earful.

The basic feeling in the room was that people were not opposed to mining as such, but were concerned about the lack of planning and forethought that seemed to be the norm. Sebastian Jones suggested that the model used under the territory's Oil and Gas Act, which allowed for expressions of interest in various regions rather that the current free entry staking, would be a better way to manage things.

Hanson said that the job of the opposition was to hold the government to account and work to improve the lives of Yukoners to the extent that an opposition party can do that.

She said that it has become clear to her that the current government wants to redesign the entire land use planning process in the territory. The ongoing legal battle over the Peel Watershed, which has led to the shutting down of the existing land use planning process, including the one for the Klondike, which was suspended in December, has shown the government's intentions.

She expressed her deep concern that the Yukon Land Use Planning Council is now chaired by former Yukon Party cabinet minister Patrick Rouble, who was the minister in charge when the Peel Watershed process began to go pear-shaped and was ultimately sidelined by the government.

Chief Isaac seems to look on from directly behind NDP Leader Liz Hanson as she discusses local and territorial issues in the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre on March 10.

The government's plan to building a 300-bed senior care facility in the capital city came under quire a bit of fire at the meeting. Locals expressed the opinion that the Health Department was missing an opportunity in not building a two story facility here and substantially increasing the number of rooms, rather than the one story McDonald Lodge replacement currently being constructed.

Continuing Care in the community, or in a similar sized community, was seen to be preferred over warehousing all seniors in a massive facility in the capital city.

Stick said that the government has already spent $7 million on the plans for this facility without serious community consultation at all. She said she had met recently with a number of organizations that one would have expected to be consulted on this matter.

"Nobody out there," she said, "– not one group – had been approached to say 'what do you think about this?'"

Much of the meeting was taken up with a discussion about the merits and demerits of the current electoral system, which makes possible the existence of majority government at both the territorial and federal levels, when the parties in power do not actually have the majority of the voters' confidence.

Gerberding who once ran here for the NDP, put forward a strategic voting proposal which would see the two opposition parties agree not to split the vote in areas where they came close to defeating the Yukon Party last time around. In his vision, the majority government that could be created by such a move would then be in a position to bring forth some form of electoral reform so that future minority majorities could be prevented from happening.

Hanson professed to be in favour of electoral reform, but not in favour of dictating to grassroots based local NDP constituency groups that they could not mount a candidate if they felt moved to do so.

She said she was willing to discuss the issue with Liberal Leader (and Klondike MLA) Sandy Silver, but so far he had not approached her with any signs of interest.

"Our job," she said, "is to replace this existing government because they have done harm." But it seemed quite clear that she meant it was her party's job.

Silver had expressed much the same sentiment at his meeting the week before.

Input wanted on proposed regulations for oil-fired appliances and carbon monoxide safety

WHITEHORSE (March 20, 2015) —The Government of Yukon wants to hear from Yukoners on proposed safety regulations designed to improve oil-fired heating systems and safeguard Yukoners from carbon monoxide and fire.

"These proposed regulations will go a long way to help safeguard everyone from the risks of carbon monoxide poisoning and fire in their homes," Minister of Community Services Currie Dixon said. "We now want to hear from Yukoners and gather their input."

The proposed regulations would require smoke alarms and carbon monoxide detectors in all residences – including rental units – with a fuel-burning appliance or an attached garage.

The proposed regulations would also put greater government oversight in place for the installation or modification of oil-fired appliances, but will not affect regular oil burner servicing. Only qualified oil burner mechanics and supervised apprentices would be allowed to install or modify oil-fired appliances. A registry of qualified oil burner mechanics would also be developed.

Many Yukoners have already taken action to improve their safety by installing carbon monoxide detectors and smoke alarms and annually servicing their home heating systems.

Over the last few years, territorial training and certification programs have helped a number of Yukoners become fully qualified as oil burner mechanics. The Yukon government has also helped raise public awareness through its "seriouslysimple" and "Be A Hero" campaigns.

Public review of these proposed regulations is one of the last stages in the legislative process.

Following the tragic deaths of five Yukoners from carbon monoxide poisoning in January 2012, the Oil-Fired Appliance Working Group was established to make recommendations on improvements to oil burner safety. A coroner's inquest was held to further understand the events leading to the tragedy and offer recommendations on how to improve public safety. The Yukon government's proposed legislative changes address various recommendations.

DDRRC's 2015 Fur Show sees a good turn out

By Dan Davidson

The 2015 edition of the Dawson Fur Show, sponsored by the Dawson District Renewable Resource Council, was held in the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Community Hall in the midst of the Thaw di Gras weekend on March 14. That there were a lot of other activities going on all over town did not seem to detract from attendance at the fair, which ran from noon until about 8 p.m.

This year's event was dedicated to the memory of the late J. J. Van Bibber and coordinated by Rachel Hunt, with the assistance of volunteers.

"We were pleased to have our Minister of Environment, Wade Istchenko, attend the fur show," Hunt said. Deputy Premier Elaine Taylor was also present and sorely tempted to touch the luxurious pelts on display.

The fur contest judges were Ryan Sealy and Doug Langila from the Yukon government and Dave Bewick and Pete Wise from the North American Fur Auction. Dave Bewick also brought a selection of 12 fur garments from NAFA for display in the Fashion Show.

The winners in the various categories were as follows.

SABLE: 1 - Kyler Mather, 2 - Jared Mather, 3 - Mel Besharah

LYNX : 1 - John Schoneville, 2 - Dean Thomas, 3 - Mark Elliot

FOX: 1 & 2 - Jared Mather, 3 - Kyler Mather

WOLVERINE: 1 - Logan Donovan, 2 - Mel Besherah, 3 - Logan Donovan

WOLF: 1- Jared Mather. 2 – Darren Kormendy, 3 – Frank Johnstone

YOUTH TRAPPER: 1,2 & 3 – Brendon Kormendy.

Darren Kormendy was the winner of the Jack Fraser "Best Trapper Award".

Allison Anderson and Ashley Bower organized the jigging contest, in which the winners were: 1st place - Jillian Hunt, 2nd place - Teagan Ewing, 3rd place - Taliyah Ewing.

Dave Robinson ran the trap setting contest and the winners in that even were: 1st place - Ryan Sealy, 2nd place - Dan Reynolds, 3rd place - Mark Elliot.

A moose stew and bannock late afternoon lunch was prepared by Nora Van Bibber and Carl Taylor.

There were numerous door prizes given out during the day to keep up peoples' interest, including a gold nugget donated by Schmidt Mining.

The day closed with the Fur Fashion show. (see related story)

Thaw di Gras 2015 was chilly but fun

By Dan Davidson

The mild temperatures of early March did not hold for this year's Spring Carnival, but, aside from the Friday, when everything was held indoors anyway, the sun shone clear and the skies were clear for Thaw di Gras weekend. By Saturday and Sunday afternoons the temperatures were hovering between the minus teens and early twenties.

The carnival is coordinated by the Klondike Visitors Association, with the assistance of many volunteer groups and quite a few of the town's businesses.

The big event on Friday was the annual Dawson City Music Festival Lip Sync, which kicked off at about 8 p.m. but audience members had no chance of a seat if they weren't lined up about 45 minutes earlier.

Saturday kept folks busy at venues all over town, starting at 11 o'clock. Even the General Store got into the act with a Price is Right game in which groceries were the prize. There were kids games and a Cabane a Sucre, provided by the Association Franco-Yukonaisse, at the Waterfront Park, along with a bonfire to cut the early afternoon chill.

Part of Third Avenue in front of the Westminster Hotel was blocked off for much of the weekend for the Road Hockey Tourney. There were games inside as well, including the hat toss, tricycle race and the ever popular bum darts. The Axe throw contest needed more room and was held in the parking lot across 4th Avenue from Gerties.

One big change this year was the renaming of the traditional Sunnydale Classic mushing and skijor race, which has been rebranded the Barry Fargey Memorial Dog Race in memory of the man who was so involved with mushing for so many years.

For pet lovers there were events for both cats and dogs at Bombay Peggy's and Diamond Tooth Gerties. The latter venue was also host to the Kids' Lip Sync in the afternoon.

Bar events included arm wrestling at the Eldorado and cribbage at the Downtown.

Saturday was also the date for the Dawson District Renewable Resource Council bi-annual Fur Show, which ran from noon until 8 that evening.

It was back to the Westminster in the morning for some piping hot Chili to ward off the morning chill while some brace souls actually turned out in the minus-mid-20s to run or walk from the ferry landing to Moosehide and back.

In spite of rather crumbly snow blocks several teams did manage to finish snow sculptures between noon Saturday and noon Sunday.

The Gertie's parking lot was the sire for most of the Sunday events including a belt sander race, several divisions of chain saw tossing and log sawing. Both kids and adults had a try at finding the money, cookies or candy hidden in the haystack, thought the adults had to scramble to locate just one toonie, while the kids had many coins to find.

The big group event of the day was the last one, the crowd pleasing egg toss, with each throw widening the gap between the partners by one giant step each. The winning team were show offs and managed an additional two successful tosses after they had already won.

AFY provided the Cabane a Sucre at the Waterfront Park and at Gerties.

This cliff-side castle was the most elaborate of the sculptures.

As can be seen, the distance between the team members increases after each successful throw. The dogs and the ravens love to clean up after this event; the people who missed - not so much.

Fur apparel was on parade at the Dawson Fur Show

By Dan Davidson

One of the highlights of the 2015 Dawson Fur Show was the Fur Fashion Show in the evening, featuring work by local designers, as well as a selection of clothing from the North American Fur Auction.

Georgette McLeod acted as announcer for the models and their apparel. Special guest models included MLA Sandy Silver, as well as Mayor Wayne Potoroka and his children.

Local designer Dolores Scheffen was the creator of the first group of items, which featured a lot of First Nation elements inspired by memories of work her mother did, and by nature.

Next up was a group of items by Megan Waterman, the creator of Skookum Brand parkas. Models showcased some of her parkas and anoraks in both classic and modern styles, along with a selection of hats and mitts.

The North American Fur Auction collection featured a number of items that seemed somehow to have been disguised to look less like fur. Most of the pieces had been dyed some shade of purple and seemed to be more decorative than useful as actual outdoor wear.

Rosemarie Gassner is known particularly for her hats and mitts that mix fabric and fur.

Sarah McHugh's works were the last ones in the show. Sarah is another local designer who took up the art after suffering a highway accident and put her recovery time to good use. Her contribution was a selection of hats and mitts.

Mike Stevens: Harmonica man with a Mission

By Dan Davidson

Mike Stevens has synesthesia, a sensory condition which causes him to see sounds as colours. His version of this cross-wiring of the senses is technically known as chromesthesia and it enables him to "play" the sounds in a room using his accomplished skills with harmonicas, and looping technology to compose a new song as the room reveals itself to him.

When you do that as an opening number at a house concert, as Stevens did on March 12, you've pretty much got the audience in the palms of your hands after that.

Stevens is a storyteller as well as a player, and spent about a third of the evening filling the audience in on some of the milestones in his career.

The Sarnia, Ontario, based musician started out at an early age and by 16 he was practicing 12 hours a day, influenced by the Blues coming across the border from Detroit. Somewhere in that unique mix of styles there's blues, jazz, rock, bluegrass beat-boxing and basic riffs, some of it fed through a looping system that allows him to become a one man band on some of his tunes.

One of his first gigs was with a bluegrass band, back at a time when harmonica really wasn't considered kosher for that musical style. He made it work.

In the 1980s the Lewis Family gave him a break, although it might have seemed chancy at the time. If he would follow them on their circuit on his own dime, they would make sure he had a chance to play with them at every concert. At the end, they would pass the hat for him and he says he did very well that way, as well as lining up paid bookings for the next year.

This eventually led to a regular gig on Nashville's Grand Ol' Opry television show, where he got to work with some of his musical heroes.

By 1999 Stevens says he was feeling a bit burnt-out by celebrity. He'd won major awards in Canada and the United States, had recording success and had published a book about his harmonica techniques. But it was a tour a northern Canadian fly-in community, where he first encountered the social curse of gas sniffing, that revitalized his spirit and gave him a mission beyond his music.

Music is part of the mission of the ArtsCan Circle, founded by Stevens after his experience on that tour. He'd promised to return to that town with harmonicas and to teach them how to use them, and so he did, Since then he has been joined by other musicians with other instruments, and some 11,000 harmonicas, along with thousands of other instruments, have gone to isolated communities where workshops have been held to teach young people a different way to turn on to the world.

Stevens' Yukon tour was part of the Home Routes program, and he was successful in making all his dates except the one in Old Crow. The plane couldn't land in Dawson on the day he was supposed to go north, so he had to spend part of Thaw di Gras weekend in Dawson before making his next appointment in Inuvik.

Hundreds line the dyke for the sled drop

By Dan Davidson

"Gee, must be just about all of Dawson out here," said the Trekker to his buddies lined up along the dyke on Friday afternoon.

"No," I told him. "You'd need at least another 1400 people for that."

I'd counted fifty walking to where I could get a decent line of sight for photography, and that was about a quarter of the crowd, so I was confident of about 200 people. Most likely half of them were from the 145 Alaskan snow machine riders who had arrived here the day before for the Trek Over the Top.

And let's face it, a lot of local people were just heading home from work at 5:10 and not all of the folks from across the river, from the suburbs south of town, or the country residential lots on the Dome were going to turn out for this event.

It had been a few years since the last Sled Drop though, and there might have been folks farther north on the dyke trail that I couldn't see from the Waterfront Park.

Shortly, the sound of the Fireweed helicopter could be heard rounding the bend where the Klondike River meets the Yukon, flying low enough that it almost looked like the derelict snow machine it was towing on a long cable could have touched the ice.

The sun had just moved behind the hill on the west bank, casting shadows that obscured the sled against the black spruce until the chopper began to rise as it approached. It continued north, turned, came back south to hover above the target zone festooned with stakes, and

News & Happenings from the Community Library

In the Library this month

The Library will host a reading by award-winning poet and author Susan Musgrave on Tuesday 21 April 2015 at 7 p.m. The event is open to the public and refreshments will be served. Since publishing her first volume of poetry at age 19, Susan has written close to 30 books. Her most recent novel is Given, while her latest poetry collection is titled Origami Dove. She has also recently produced a board book for children called Love You More. Susan lives on Haida Gwaii where she owns and manages a guest house. A cookbook centered around the island (Haida Gwaii: Foraging and Feasting at the Edge of the World) will be published in the spring of 2015. She also teaches poetry in the University of British Columbia's Optional Residency MFA in Creative Writing Program. For more information you can visit susanmusgrave.com.

* * * *

Fans of young adult fiction will find several new arrivals on our shelves. Award-winning Canadian author Kenneth Oppel continues his Apprenticeship of Victor Frankenstein series with Such Wicked Intent. Meanwhile, Gail Carson Levine reimagines the Cinderella fairytale in Ella Enchanted. For something a little more realistic and contemporary, there's Close Out part of the Impact Zone series by best-selling writer Todd Strasser.

Easter Closing

Don't forget the Library will be observing the Easter long weekend. We'll be closed both Good Friday, April 3rd and Easter Monday, April 6th.

For more information about any of these items please contact the Library at 993-5571 or email dclib@klondiker.com

Sled Drop

cont'd from p. 16

began its elevator ride to the drop altitude.

As it rose, it drifted towards the dyke and spectators began to worry that it would miss the target zone altogether.

There was a collective gasp as the cable let go and the sled began its 10 second drop to the ground, landing just at the edge of the target zone, nearly on top of the other sled that was waiting for its turn.

The chopper came down and hovered over the second derelict, was hooked to it, and set off north, making speed and a quick turn that had the sled hanging out at a 45 degree angle before it came back and released it at a low altitude with more of a throw than a drop this time. It bounced and rolled through the stakes, shedding parts as it came to a stop.

It was the dropped sled that counted for the contest, and won Paul Sindorf $1086 for having placed his stake closest to where the machine landed. Bob Brooks, also of Alaska, picked up a $575 second prize.

The drop was organized by the Dawson Sled Dawgs club, with the assistance of a number of volunteers, two donated superannuated sleds and a free ride from Fireweed Helicopters.

The sleds are old wrecks that are cleaned of every possible contaminant before they are used in this contest.

The Dawgs' Liz Foubister says the club isn't sure how many years it's been between drops. When they sat down to plan the event, they realized they didn't know if it was three or four years. It was intended to be an every other year event, but sometimes it's hard to get a sled donated.

Foubister says the Dawgs are thinking that the more dramatic "throw" of the second sled might actually be the way to determine the winner the next time they hold this contest – which should be in about two years. In the meantime, you can watch a video of the event on the club's Facebook page.
