IN THE ODD GALLERY: THE WORLD INSIDE: June 18 - July 25. Dianne Bos, Lea Bucknell, Bob Jickling, Ernie Kroeger, Donald Lawrence, Holly Ward & Kevin Schmidt AKA Desire Machine, Mike Yuhasz, Andrew Wright. Curated by Lance Blomgren. Opening Reception: Thursday, June 18th, 8:30PM. As a counterpoint to the site-specific installations in the Midnight Sun Camera Obscura Festival, the ODD Gallery presents The World Inside, a group exhibition that investigates the intertwined subjects of landscape and viewership, perceptual mediation and the urgencies of our material condition. The World Inside illuminates the ways in which our visual technologies, including the eye itself, have worked to define and undermine our impressions of the real, our sense of self and community. The images and objects in this exhibition draw connections between what we see, how we see, and the enduring cultural effects of our empires of sight.

IN THE CONFLUENCE GALLERY: ...STRANGE THINGS DONE...: part of the Midnight Sun Camera Obscura Festival. Opening Reception: Wed, June 17 from 6-7pm. Gallery hours: June 18 - 23, 3-7pm. Threading its way through the works in ...strange things done... is an interest in the manner in which early or low-tech forms of imaging, illusion and other communications technologies may be merged with new technology or with what is now the mundane or obsolete technology of modern times. Most of the artists have created works that are self-illuminated; the camera obscura's optical properties just a starting point for their thinking. Each of the artists in this exhibition is a student or alumni of Nova Scotia College of Art and Design University (NSCAD, Halifax), Thompson Rivers University (TRU, Kamloops), or the Yukon School of Visual Arts (YSOVA, Dawson City).

Uffish Thoughts: What will Duffy have to say in court?

By Dan Davidson

Now that the Mike Duffy trial has begun again, I feel like it's time to reconsider the most puzzling of the 31 counts on which the former journalist is being tried. For me, that's the bribery charge. I'll get to it shortly.

That Duffy should never have been appointed to the Senate seems to be conventional wisdom by now. He may have been no worse than a number of other senators when it comes to expenses, at least according to what we've seen of the reports from the Auditor General, but he should never have been appointed from Prince Edward Island.

You have only to compare photos of his Ottawa residence with those of his PEI bungalow cottage to decide where he has been living most of his days since he hit the big time in journalism. The length of his on-air career with both the CBC and CTV is another indicator.

According to him, he suggested that PEI might be a problem and that maybe Ontario would be a better choice. He says he was told, by the people who offered him the job, not to worry about it. Such appointments come from the Prime Minster's Office and are still under the authority of the Prime Minister.

What there is no doubt about is that Duffy wanted that seat badly, one might say in the worst way. Biographical sketches indicate he'd been hinting for years, and that he didn't actually take up the Conservative banner until it seemed that was where he might get what he wanted.

When he took it up, he did so with a vengeance, as anyone who watched those out takes of Stephane Dion struggling during an interview can testify.

Also clear, and this from lots of video evidence as well as the testimony of Conservative MPs, is that the party badly wanted him. He was a media star, a draw at party events across the nation and, as it seems fairly clear that part of a Senator's job is, in fact, to engage in partisan activities, he was someone that MPs wanted to have doing stump speeches, engaging their base, and helping to drive the party's fund raising machinery.

How much of this should be legitimate Senate expenses and how much should be covered by the party itself is a question that hasn't been settled. Did Duffy double dip? the man who offered the Did Pamela Wallin claim for non-eligible expenses and fail the residential test? Did First Nation star Senator Patrick Brazeau cross the same lines?

All three were appointed by Prime Minister Harper for the same partisan political reasons, and were intended to serve the same purpose: to help to win an election. Any conflicts were ignored until it was no longer possible to ignore them.

Of the three, Wallin may have come off best. While maintaining that she still didn't believe she had broken any rules, she paid back a large amount of her questionable expenses.

Brazeau had to go for other reasons involving his personal conduct.

Duffy? Well, we're still learning about what happened there and the stories don't line up much.

The party was going to pay his bills, initially thought to be $32 thousand, until the full amount to ballooned to $90 thousand. Why would that have been okay?

Now we come to that most puzzling question which I mentioned at the beginning. If Nigel Wright's cheque (originally called a "gift") was a bribe, then why isn't bribe being charged along with the man who received

How is it that the Prime Minster began his reactions to the situation by praising his former aide for being a public spirited citizen who had tried to save the government and the public a large sum of money?

How was it that he then reluctantly accepted Wright's resignation for what came to be characterized as a honest but regrettable error?

How did that morph into Wright becoming a villain who had deceived the Prime Minister's Office and Parliament, and had therefor been fired as soon as Mr. Harper realized what he had done?

In his last speeches in the Senate before he was suspended Mike Duffy made a spirited attempt to shift all the responsibility from himself to the PMO. Of course, Parliamentary privilege allows MPs and Senators to speak very freely while they are in their respective chambers. I'm looking forward to what Duffy may have to say when he's under oath in a courtroom

"Graduates, we've watched for the future." you grow as individuals and as a group," said departing Principal Ann Moore, moving on to her retirement from teaching after her three years at RSS.

"You are enthusiastic, energetic young people. I've noticed that you have displayed a real 'can do' attitude and that's going to get you far in You've demonstrated leadership. Sometimes it's inside the classroom; sometimes it's outside; sometimes it's in the community and the territory.

"I found the class of 2015 very diverse in their interests and passions. We have athletes ... others who shine in the fine arts ... others excel in working with textiles and culinary arts ... others have academic pursuits ... others demonstrate their love of learning in small engines and carpentry ... (as well as) hunting, fishing and other essential outdoor skills. Still others enjoy a passion for local culture and language.

"Personality-wise, I would say the spread is equally diverse. We have some risk takers on the stage, some adventurers (there were giggles from the audience at this point), some with very positive energy, determination and confidence. We have some very kind hearted and caring people on this stage and folks who have an encouraging word to say no matter what's happening, all the time.

"Your diversity is a strength to us and a strength to the world around you."

This day, she told the parents in the audience, holds a combination of happiness and sadness.

"Your babies are grown up and you have played a part in this success. It's your support that helped get them to the stage today - and maybe some more so than others.

City; hold your heads high with your family, your teachers, world. confidence. You've built a really your mentors. Tomorrow you 'What you paint is up to you, solid foundation in Dawson City and that is going to last forever.

"In closing, I would like to quote Percy Henry, Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in elder, who said this: their knowledge. They can teach us, too. They will be our future leaders. Show the youth how we live. We need to open our arms to the youth and teach them so that our culture and heritage won't be lost. We need to listen to them and give the youth hope Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Chief Roberta Joseph was the next to greet the students.

"High school graduation is an important transition in a young person's life. In many ways it marks the end of childhood. Each graduate came here today as a student but leaves as an adult. This step can be a scary one, but take heart, graduates, you're not taking this step alone. Your friends and family are gathered here today to support you.

"The past 13 years of instruction have given you the ability to live in a world where knowledge is the most important skill that will appear on your resume, but your education does not stop here. You will never stop learning. Each day you will learn more about your interests, about your world, and about yourself. I wish you the very best as you navigate that path through life."

Joseph made special mention of the First Nations graduates, reminding them that there was a time, decades ago, when high school graduation would have been nearly impossible for them.

"Your accomplishment proves how far our nation has come. As you grow strong, our nation grows strong too. We wish you the very best as you find your way in the world, but please remember, where ever life takes you, always keep an eye on that trail that will bring you back home."

Klondike MLA Sandy Silver, himself a former teacher at the school, was next to speak.

"Today is not a day for life lessons." he said. "Today is a celebration of what you've already learned. What you do remember is that you want to spend every single waking hour of this day with the people that you love.

are officially, if not practically, adults. Today, as they say in Latin, you are a tabula rasa, which means a blank slate."

This, he went on to explain, is 'Listen to the youth, respect not some sort of obscure insult, but rather a metaphor to explain that what they place on the canvas of their lives from now on is up to them. With reference to an artist friend of his, Silver said that she told him that every masterpiece begins with an empty canvas.

"You graduates have yet to begin your own individual journeys. The base layer (on the canvas) – that's your character. The colours that you have at your disposal represent a lesson in life that you've learned already. The more colours that you have at your disposal symbolize the more profound understandings "The rest of your life is up of the world that each of you 'Graduates ... take the lessons to you, but up until today it's have ...(and) help detail the final that you've learned in Dawson been defined by your friends, painting that you will show the but you are all masterpieces waiting to happen."

Silver followed his own presentation by reading greetings from Mayor Wayne attend the Federation Canadian Municipalities meetings in Edmonton.

chair School council Sue Lancaster began by characterizing the Class of 2015 as a difficult class.

"They were tough. There were tons of boys and only a few girls to calm them down.

"Boy - the things I could say about this group, but I'm not going to share those stories. None of them are appropriate. Everything with this group was challenging. They don't fit in a box. They challenge everybody. They question everything. They don't sit in their chairs and be quiet. They don't do what they're told - just because you tell them will be your own. You are the to do it."

Pointing to the very quiet and still group on the stage, who were probably wondering where this was going, she added, "This is really unusual."

But then she turned it all Potoroka, who had to be absent around, saying that all these traits were actually signs of a sort of maturity, the kinds of traits that society looks for in its elders, in the people who are outside for the traditional going to be leaders.

"Maybe these guys weren't challenging and difficult; maybe held at the school in the evening. they were ahead of their time."

Valedictorian Melissa Naef presented a light hearted and affectionate speech in which she characterized something special about each of her classmates, eliciting a lot of laughs from the audience.

"This journey," she concluded, "has taken us on a wild ride, and when you think about it, it's only the start, and with this solid foundation your next step masters of your destinies now."

Exiting the stage, they hurried mortarboard toss.

Larry Berman is not that big on gold

Larry Berman has a lot of nerve. It takes nerve to stand before a room of people at the Dawson City Gold show and say that gold really isn't such a big

His keynote address in May was entitled "What the Fμ©k is happening in the World: the art and science of speculation". Berman has a whole alphabet of letters after his name, and has worked in the investment business for CIBC, Thomson IRF in Boston, and Marlieu, Lemire Futures in Toronto. Aside from that he has the cachet of being associated with a long list of trading companies and having his own Berman's Call weekly show on BNN.

His message, reiterated in a number of examples during his 70 minute talk, was that investing is a field that involves both the head and the heart, and that you'd better let the head rule if you want to be successful.

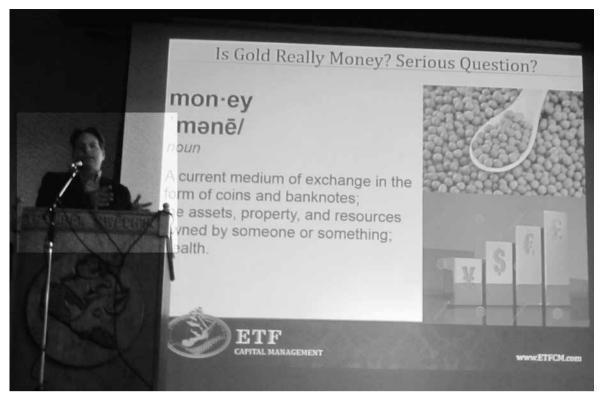

As one might expect from the title, his presentation was filled with scatological humour and a lot of reproductive analogies, but there were also a lot of charts, graphs and figures.

"I may say some things that may offend some people," he said, in what sounded like the beginning of a preemptive apology, but he concluded, "and if that's the case, just grow a

"There are a lot of people out there that think gold is money," he continued. "Listen, we're never, ever going back to paying for things with gold bars. I know gold is a great thing and in the long term I'm bullish on gold. But y'know there's a lot of bloggers out there talking about 'go buy gold bars and put them in your basement 'cause the government's coming...'

"I look on gold as an asset. Gold is a thing. I'm completely unemotional about gold and investing. Whenever I look at something, it's something I can own for a period of time and somewhere down the road I can sell for more money. That, to me, is smart; that's investing.

"I've got no attachment whatsoever to gold. I could care less what you think about it – is it money; is it not money. If we're gonna go Armageddon, I would rather have soybeans than gold, because if you've got gold bars and the world's coming to an end, your gold is worth shit.

"I want a gun. I want food. I want clothing. I'm not a big believer that you need to have gold for that."

Much of that speech was probably for shock value, to get across the notion that investing needs a rational approach to markets. He would go on to talk about the rollercoaster ride of optimism-excitement-thrilleuphoria-anxiety-denial-feardesperation-panic-capitulationdepression-hope-relief and back  $to\,optimism\,that\,is\,the\,emotional$ side of the boom to bust cycle that so often describes mining economic fundamentals, so we and the economy in general.

proves the activity in the brain when investing is similar to that there are patterns in the markets and in how people should invest. He advised that observing those patterns and acting rationally because of them is a counterintuitive proposition, that the head must rule the heart.

"Getting emotional about investing is a losing proposition," he said. "Markets are emotional, not explained by Berman cited research that are actually forecasting changes in emotion."

He had no good words for the of an addict. It's compulsive. He quantitative easing (printing produced a formula to show that money) that has been the US Federal Reserve practice since the slump of 2008.

He does not like the current head of the Bank of Canada, Steven Poloz, who was appointed to replace Mark Carney when he moved across the pond to head the Bank of England. "This guy needs to go," says one of his presentation slides.

The outlook for gold, he concluded, is not bad, but not

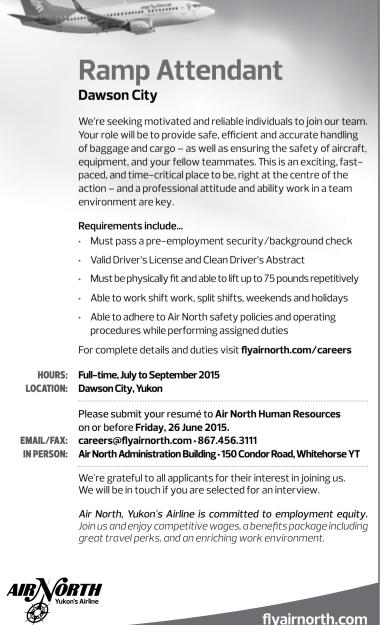

What drives the price of gold is inflation, he said, and all the central banks are currently creating deflation by their policies.

"For the next year or two, I'm a buyer of gold below $1175/oz. because I think here's an actual floor somewhere below $1100. If gold stays below $1100 there's an awful lot of guys who make no money. But I don't see where the up side is going to come from other than the 'flight to safety' kind of rally, so above $1250 to $1275 I'll sell it."

If central banks should happen to want more gold, that would raise the price, but he thinks current policies will keep inflation low for decades.

For the next couple of years he expects to see the price bounce around plus or minus a couple hundred dollars from current

That's not wonderful news for people in the gold business, and they may find it harder to remain as unemotional about it as Berman advises.

Midnight Sun Camera Obscura Festival begins

What is a camera obscura? Dawson has had one sitting just off Front Street in the Waterfront Park since 2004, the year that Donald Lawrence of Thompson Rivers University put on an exhibit of underwater pinhole camera photography in the ODD Gallery. The Midnight Sun Camera Obscura Festival will answer that question and many others.

While the reference is not exact and the devices actually predate photography by more than 2000 years, it might help to think of the camera obscura as a large pinhole camera. Light shining though a small hole into a dark room (hence the name from the Latin) casts an inverted image on some kind of a screen.

Artists used the device for many generations but, as Lawrence likes to point out, the camera obscura is a sort of bridge between the arts and the sciences, particularly the science of physics, which is concerned with optics.

The idea of a festival was born in 2004, but it took a few years to assemble the project and obtain the necessary funding to hold the event, which begins here on June 17 and continues until the June Solstice.

The project is primarily funded by the Social Sciences Humanities Research Council of Canada. It will have received $296,700 over its fiveyear life.

Locally, it is supported by the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre, the Klondike Institute of Art and Culture (KIAC), the ODD Gallery, the Yukon Arts Centre and the Yukon School of Visual Arts (YSOVA).

The Festival will also involve visual arts students and alumni from Thompson Rivers University, the Yukon School of Visual Arts, and the Nova Scotia College of Art and Design.

Bringing back childhood in a giant magical fort

Story & photo by Yaelle Gang

A disadvantage of growing up is that adults can no longer squeeze inside small homemade blanket forts. But people of all ages in Dawson City were able to retreat into the cozy corners of their childhoods thanks to the Blanket Fort art installation at the Yukon School of Visual Arts (SOVA) Gallery.

Blanket Fort was erected from May 28 to June 13 as part of the Confluence Series at the gallery.

Henry, Courtney Holmes and Carly Woolner, who are self-proclaimed blanket fort engineers, created the instilla-

The artists worked corroboratively to dye, screen print and sew dozens of sheets into a unique mosaic of patchwork that could fit approximately 60 people. They filled the fort with blankets and pillows to make visitors feel safe and comfort-

"Usually people come to art shows, they come in, they drink their glass of wine, they look at all the paintings and then they leave in like twenty minutes," Henry explained.

However, at Blanket Fort he said that most people stayed night. For example, at the opening night he says there was someone who even fell asleep in the corner bundled up.

Woolner points to childhood nostalgia as the beauty behind Blanket Fort and the fact that it is a space that makes people

> Over the past few weeks, Blanket Fort was a venue for concerts, the screening of the movie The Last Unicorn and other hangout adults could act like children and escape from the realities of grown-up life.

On Thursday, June 11 one of the many artists that performed at Blanket Fort was Dana Hart, with pieces from her solo project Alex and Emma.

Hart says Blanket Fort was special because it gave local musicians, who may hesitant to share their music in public, a comfortable space to do it in.

Hart, who also attended shows in addition to performing, says that a "magical part" of the experience was that audience members felt as though they were in a sleep over blanket fort, like when they were young.

"Audience members commented that it felt like the artists were all sharing their darkest secrets, like children in a blanket fort," she explains.

Blanket Fort took three weeks to create. The artists say the biggest challenge was "getting sheets that weren't ugly" because there is an abundance of plain white sheets in Dawson. However, being able to create their own designs on the sheets gave the Fort an original personalized atmosphere.

"I think it really overall contributes to the Fort," Holmes

"It gives it more character."

The artists do not plan to disassemble the fort after the exhibition is over. They hope to pitch the Fort again in Dawson at a later date- maybe during the cold winter months.

Freight truck blocks Klondike Highway

People driving the Klondike Highway just north of the Dempster Corner on Wednesday evening (June 3) were forced to take a detour through the old Klondike River Lodge yard to get around the long Manitoulin Transport truck that had missed the turn back onto the highway after stopping in the yard to gas up at the AFD cardlock there.

The driver had put warning pylons on the highway on either side of his rig and was directing traffic to go through the yard, but there was no way he was getting out of that predicament without help.

While less serious than when the Ventures West LNG tanker flipped closer to town last October, this accident appears to have been caused by missing a turn in pretty much the same way with an extra long load.

New recipients inducted into the Yukon Transportation Hall of Fame

Story & photos by Dan Davidson

The 2015 Pioneer of the Year, Person of the Year, and Order of Polaris awards were presented on June 2 to inductees and their families at the annual Transportation Hall of Fame Awards ceremony.

Emcee Janna Powell, a member of the selection committee, welcomed the full house at the Transportation Museum and reflected on the history of transportation in the territory.

"It is wonderful that we are all gathered here tonight to celebrate and honour this year's inductees... Each year new inductees are honoured and their stories of innovation, persistence, adventure, and memorable events are told and relived."

As it happens, June 1 to 7 is National Transportation Week in Canada, and so this event is particularly appropriate at this time.

to Yukoners who have made outstanding contributions in this territory.

"We tend to forget the changes enormous and connections that happen in transportation developments. Think of the time prior to the Alaska Highway ... and which direction people looked to reach their destinations. They looked down river, up to mountain passes, up the rail tracks to Skagway. These days, it's safe to say that when people are looking Outside, they likely look east or west to the Alaska Highway or to the airports. This is such a huge change on how people experience their sense of place and geography."

Commissioner Doug Phillips presented the Order of Polaris award to the family of the late Ronald (Ron) Connelly.

The award's criteria state that it is given to "to individuals, groups or associations whose contributions to aviation include meritorious service in the Yukon. A nominee will have made a significant contribution and/or advancement to the aviation industry."

Connelly's career spanned 50 years as both a fixed-wing and helicopter pilot. He was the hands-on owner and operator of a number of aviation companies, including Connelly-Dawson Northern Great Airways. Airways, Trans North Turbo Air (TNTA) and Conair Ltd. TNTA and Conair still operate today.

Connelly's award was received by his children, Ms. R.J. Connelly-Lundquist and Mr. Shawn Connelly, who spoke movingly of their father's accomplishments.

Minister of Highways and Public Works Scott Kent was the presenter for the other two awards.

"Each year during National Transportation Week the pays tribute to individuals who have significantly contributed Yukon's industry," Kent said. "Whether their work was linked to roadways, airways or waterways, these awards honour the hard work, innovation, persistence and frontier spirit of some remarkable individuals and the legacy they created in Yukon."

The Transportation Pioneer of the Year Award criteria state that the award is given to a person or persons who "have made a major contribution affecting or advancing the transportation industry, or a closely related activity connected with the movement of goods and/or people in the Yukon."

The Pioneer of the Year award was presented to Ben Warnsby and Mike Stutter, who operated the Brainstorm Freighting Services 1961 to 1974. Their riverboat, Brainstorm, carried goods and "Tonight," Powell said, "is supplies to Old Crow following the perfect time to pay tribute approximately 700 miles of the Yukon and Porcupine rivers. It also carried freight on the upper Yukon River.

Both Warnsby and Stutter spoke with some enthusiasm of the years they spent as partners in a number of enterprises, and reminded the audience that there were two owners of the riverboat prior to them, though they were the ones who expanded it and made it more of a business.

The final presentation was the Transportation Person of the Year Award. It was presented to Rolf Hougen, who was instrumental in the transition of the White Pass and Yukon Route Railroad from a carrier of goods to a summer tourist service. He Transportation Hall of Fame was also involved in protecting and preserving the Casca and sternwheelers. Whitehorse transportation These iconic vessels were destroyed by fire in June 1974.

In recounting some of his efforts in preserving historic and iconic routes and structures in the territory, Hougen spoke with some heat about the town council decision in the 1970s that contributed to the burning of the Casca and Whitehorse sternwheelers.

His group had worked at restoring the boats and had asked the town council of the day to add them to their night watch patrols. Town council refused. While the boats had a fence around them, intruders dug under the fence, stayed on board the boats, lit a fire for warmth and started the fire which destroyed both historic Hougen lamented that he had not been able to bring the White Pass and Yukon Route tourist train all the way to Whitehorse and that the healthy revenue from this enterprise goes mostly to companies from Outside.

The evening ended with lots of photo opportunities and a buffet table of snacks in the Bush Pilot

Coming up in June

Summer's here, and with it the Library's seasonal extended hours. From June 9 until August 1 we'll have longer hours, as well as being open for half the day on Saturday.

The hours of operation will be: Noon - 6:30 p.m. Monday Tuesday 9 a.m. - 6:30 p.m. Wednesday 9 a.m. - 6:30 p.m. 9 a.m. - 6:30 p.m. Thursday Friday 9 a.m. - 6:30 p.m. Saturday Noon - 4:00 p.m.

We're also providing special summer children's programs. On Tuesday, Thursdays, and Fridays from June 16 through July 31 from 1 to 3 p.m., our summer student Cody is hosting Drop-In Sessions for kids approximately 4 to 7 years of age. The sessions will feature stories, crafts, and games. There is no charge, but parents must be present.

In addition, the Library will also be offering a free Comic Workshop with artist Jon Vanneste. Open to all ages, these five fun lessons will teach participants a new way to write by drawing.

Visitors to Dawson are always welcome at the Library. In addition to our selection of books and periodicals, free internet terminals and WiFi access are also available. If you want to know more about the Klondike, we've got some great books for you. In addition to our permanent Northern Collection, we've set up a special temporary display of books of interest. You'll find works chronicling the Gold Rush and the people who lived through it, describing northern geography and wildlife, or detailing the history and culture of the local Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in first nation. And, of course, we have a great selection from those famous literary Dawsonites, Jack London, Robert Service, and Pierre Berton.

Bear escorted unharmed from downtown Dawson

By Dan Davidson

Sometimes a bear that has wandered into a place that it shouldn't be in makes out all right. That was the case with the black bear that was found wandering the area just below the Front Street dyke in Dawson on Monday, June 8.

"We got a call mid-morning on Monday," said Conservation Officer Torrie Hunter, "that there was a bear at the Commissioner's Residence.

"We went over and talked to some of the guys working at the well sites here. They said that this bear came up on the dyke. It was limping a little bit, but it went down towards the river.

Shy Sheier shines at reading

Coping with the death of a parent is never easy, but current Berton House Writer-in-Residence Jacob Scheier was able to ultimately deal with the trauma by integrating it into his art. At his recent reading at the Dawson City Community Library, his mother's passing, and spiritual echoes emanating from it, featured prominently in the literary offerings.

The first piece Scheier read was a piece of creative nonfiction called The Rabbi. This personal essay was published in Brick Magazine in the fall of 2014, but describes Scheier's experiences over a decade earlier making the funeral arrangements for his mother. In the article he relates the helplessness and frustration he felt in having to decide — under some pressure from the presiding rabbi on the degree of religiosity to bestow on the deceased.

In the end he opted for an orthodox service, although his mother was a communist who had given Scheier a non-Jewish upbringing. While Scheier confided to the audience of about 14 people that he now regrets giving a secular feminist an orthodox funeral, he does wish in retrospect that he had followed the tradition of "sitting Shiva" the Jewish custom of welcoming callers to the mourner's home.

"There is a useful grounding in ritual," he noted, even for someone whose upbringing was lacking in religious tradition.

Writing about the death and funeral helped Scheier sort through the experience by reflecting on it.

"There are two persona involved — the individual going through it, and the author looking back," he observed.

He has continued to draw on the experience not only for his writing, but also for a workshop he now regularly offers (including one recently held here in Dawson) called Writing About

One aspect of the experience he is still wrestling with, however, is the larger issue of reconciling Jewish religion with his own secular upbringing. He did not, for example, discount the possibility that he might explore something like Reformed Judaism in the future.

"It's a complicated relationship," he conceded.

"It's bad for worrying, great for writing,"

When one audience member commented on apparent negativism concerning the Judaic faith in Scheier's essay, the author disagreed that it was his intent, saying the article was more "a reflection on one rabbi's imposing of his view rather than widespread condemnation of re-

While most of Scheier's contemporary writing, including his output while at Berton House, has been creative nonfiction — often delving into the political, historical, and personal heritage of his "Pinko-Jewish" identity — it is in poetry that he has garnered the greatest literary fame, including the Governor General's Award for Poetry in 2008 for his book More to lecture by reading a selection of his poems.

While giving introductions or commenting to the audience, Scheier sometimes seemed unsure and almost painfully shy, but once he starts reading he becomes a fine instrument for his impressive work. Those lisand moved. His eclectic selection included Elegy to Jumbo (describing the death of the legendary circus elephant in a train collision), Letter from Brooklyn, the title poem from his most recent book of verse, Single Man's Song (his answer to Al Purdy's Married Man's Song), At 15, a sonnet inspired by Elizabeth Buchinksky's remembrances of Irving Layton), To My Beard (a poetic coming-of-age story), and The Illusion Theorist of Colour Describes a Landscape (a "semifound poem" repurposing scientific text on colour theory).

He concluded the reading with My Mother Dies in Reverse, an imaginative, time-warped, poetic tearjerker, again dealing with the subject of his mother's

"We'll see," he mused.

History Hunter: The two worlds of Eskimo Welzl

By Michael Gates Yukon News, Friday, April 24 Used with permission

In Dawson Jan Welzl was viewed as an eccentric trying to devise a perpetual motion machine. To the people from his homeland, he is a folk hero who symbolizes adventure and personal freedom.

Everybody who visits the Klondike should see its iconic attractions: The Discovery Claim on Bonanza Creek, and in Dawson City, Robert Service Cabin, Jack London's cabin, even to a certain extent the Berton

But there is another lesser known attraction in the public cemetery on the hill above town - the grave of Jan Welzl. Depending on where you come from, he's either a hero, or an

Jan Welzl, a native of what is now called the Czech Republic, resided in Dawson City from 1929 until his death in 1948. He was an aging indigent whose presence in the gold rush city was not so out of place as it might have been elsewhere. Dawson City had a large population of aging men - relics from the gold rush decades before. He was just another one of them.

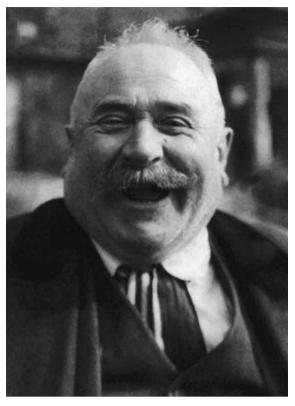

People remembered him as a friendly, rotund gentleman with abushy walrus moustache; a pipe was often clenched between his teeth. He was unconventional and an inventor who, from his first arrival in Dawson, was at work making one contrivance or another, chasing the Holy Grail of inventors - the perpetual motion machine. Locally, he was known as "the perpetual motion man."

One elder of Dawson City told me that when he was young, his mother would bake pies which he was then sent to deliver to the septuagenarian. In fact, the kids would flock to his cabin at the corner of King Street and Fifth Avenue to peer through the window at his marvellous device, or listen to his stories.

His cabin was always filled to overflowing with one of ingenious contraptions. As described by one visitor: "There in the centre of the room, occupying the majority of space, stood a large wheel, innumerable cogs and many levers - mostly all of wood. 'Eet is my latest invention," said Welzl. "Eet ees a pomp for da mine ... you th'ink eet vork, no? ... maybe I make lotsa monee und gedt a patent, no?" Sadly, he died shortly after this encounter.

He was buried in the public cemetery and his burial site was almost forgotten until some of his countrymen sought and located it (although there is controversy over its location).

But Welzl had a reputation that spread across the globe and included a bestselling book. In fact, he is something of a national hero back in his homeland.

Little is known about Welzl, who, back home, was known as 'Eskimo Welzl." Some say his birthplace was Hohenstaat, but he was likely born in 1868 in the town of Zabreh, in Moravia, a country that was engulfed in the course of history and absorbed into what, after World War I, became known as Czechoslovakia.

One account states that he apprenticed for a short time as a watchmaker; another says it was as a machinist. He may have done military service before he went on his famed travels through the polar regions. In 1924, as a crew member of a small polar ship named Seven Sisters, he was shipwrecked on the Pacific Coast of the United States. Lacking identification, he was deported to Europe, where, in order to raise money, he gave lectures and sold articles to newspapers about his exploits in the North.

He thus attracted the attention of two journalists, who over a period of two months, conducted an extended interview with him. They took meticulous notes and paid him a small sum of money in exchange for signing over the publishing rights to his story. Three years after he arrived in Dawson City, a book under his name, titled Thirty Years in the Golden North was published in the United States. Selected by America.

preposterous detailing facts about the North. I reviewed the section that describes his journey over the Chilkoot Trail and down the Yukon River. They are more fiction than fact.

Take for example the funicular railroad that carried gold rush stampeders to the foot of the Chilkoot Pass (was something are considered to be against lost in translation?), or the the purposes of the state. The White Pass railroad that was not completed until 1906 (it was 1900). Or how about the net the Mounted Police stretched across the Yukon River below Five Finger Rapid to catch all the drowned corpses that floated mastered never geography: the White River flows into the Yukon below Lake Laberge; the MacMillan enters the Yukon at Fort Selkirk, and the Sixtymile flows into the Yukon below Dawson. And be careful of the skunks that are found in the forests beside the river!

Reviewing the book in 1932, famed Arctic explorer Vilhjalmur Stefansson couldn't decide whether the book was a parody of exploration literature, or complete fabrication.

Welzl vacillated between trying to claim a larger share of the royalties and disowning the book entirely, but in the end, he had to settle for the less than $100 he received when he relinquished his rights to the volume. In the eyes of Dawsonites, he remained nothing more than one of the many oddball hermits who occupied the Klondike in the decades after the gold rush.

Back home in Czechoslovakia, he was not forgotten. He was warmly welcomed during a visit to his homeland in 1924, where the Book of the Month Club, it he was "received in audience" became a best seller in North by Thomas Masaryk, the liberal president of the new republic. The book was and still is Welzl's life became associated shelved as non-fiction, yet it with the values of social justice contains some of the most and freedom of the individual assertions embraced by the Masaryk regime.

> After the communist takeover of Czechoslovakia in 1948, Welzl's books were banned. According to Rachel Taber, a student who studied Welzl "The sentiments in 1987, expressed in the stories regarding individual freedom communist government does not consider Welzl to be the model of a good Czech citizen."

A short-lived liberalization of Czechoslovakia occurred in 1968. Welzl again served as a symbol of individual liberty. The return to hardcore communism once again made his work a victim of censorship. When my wife Kathy hosted a Czech diplomat visiting Dawson City in the 1970s, he acknowledged both the existence of the man, and his unfavourable standing with the communist government.

And that's how it remained until the end of communist rule in 1989. Jan Welzl is once again in favour. Tourists from his homeland flock to his Dawson City gravesite and what it symbolizes for them. In the end, it is not the factual accuracy of his narratives that matters to them as much as what he represents.

In 1998, asteroid "15425 Welzl" was discovered by Czech astronomer Petr Pravec and named in honour of the wandering eccentric of Dawson. Every year, in his home town of Zabreh, where a large statue of Welzl is prominently displayed, participants with suitcases compete in a run in remembrance of the Czech wanderer.

Coming up at KIAC!

Her voice dances like a flame in a dark room: fierce, illuminating and warmly present. Dana Sipos' approach as a vocalist, songwriter and multiinstrumentalist grew out of formative years in Yellowknife. Over the years, her efforts as an artist have earned her a place as a musicianin-residence at the Banff Centre, a record deal with an indie Nashville label (Muddy Roots Recordings) and time creatively spent travelling to shows by bicycle, train, tall ship, and canoe.

"He looked me in the eye" is a lyric to a Sipos song that accurately describes the effect of her music. It speaks straight to the audience, but with a tone like an old friend who knows how to be both kind and tell you just what you need to be hear. Her strumming style falls steady as rain and creates a gentle backdrop for her earthy vocals that challenge routine conceptions of the daily experiences that alter our lives but often go unnoticed. Sipos leaves one longing for her to bravely keep telling the stories that others are too timid to voice.

Her new album Roll Up the Night Sky will be shared this July 3rd @ 7:30 pm in KIAC Ballroom along with artists Cud Eastbound and Joey O'Neil.

Their performances will be a part of the Northern Exposure Summer Concert Series run by KIAC. It aims to highlight Yukon artists, throughout the summer, with a dash of out-ofprovince guests. Keep informed about the Northern Exposure series by visiting: www.kiac.ca/calendarofevents/

Wesley Hardisty

He's performed for Prince William and Duchess Kate Middleton. He played the 2010 Olympics. He won the 2012 Aboriginal Peoples Choice Music Award for "Best Fiddle Album". He's a young fiddling sensation from Canada's Northwest Territories ready to rock the world!

Largely self taught, Hardisty took up the fiddle at age thirteen in his northern hometown of Fort Simpson, NWT. He moved to Salt Spring Island at age 15, attending the prestigious Gulf Islands School of Performing Arts. Wesley has come full circle and is now teaching with the Kole Crook Fiddle Association. He loves teaching Aboriginal youth and being a positive role model.

Hardisty's unique blend of rock, folk, Celtic and traditional Metis music is compelling and emotional and will be well received here in Dawson City.

In many ways, Hardisty represents and occupies different worlds through his music. With a blend of the traditional and contemporary so seamless the listener feels time is melting together, Hardisty is a unique young artist with an ear in the past. Though he is inspired in part by contemporary rock n' roll artists, such as Angus Young of AC/DC, whose energetic stage presence inspires Wesley, and Johnny Cash, whose "Folsom Prison Blues" is a cover highlight of Hardisty's act, the young fiddler is deeply connected to the northern culture and fiddle traditions of his homeland too.

If he can impress royalty, surely Wesley Hardisty can knock your socks off too, at the 2015 Dawson City Music Festival!

The Renaldo Domino Experience

Do you miss Soul Sunday? If so, DCMF has something exciting in store for you!

Named for a voice that was sweet like Domino sugar, Renaldo Domino is one of the unsung heroes of Chicago soul. Born Renaldo Jones in "The Valley," around 49th & Forestville, Domino was already on the star track by the time he got his drivers license. He linked up with the Magnificents, and manager William "Sandy" Johnson, who would stay with him throughout his career, and had his first record deal before his high school graduation.

Domino's singles on the Mercury imprints Blue Rock and Smash did fine, but by major label standards he was a flop and was promptly dropped. Clearly representing paramount talent, Sandy had little trouble convincing Wright and Bedno to sign Domino and put the full weight of their influence behind him. Though the label credits Sandy as producer, Richard Pegue was hired on to infuse Domino's street corner style with an uptown sensibility.

Some of his work was mysteriously shelved and was unavailable until now. Despite steady radio play and constant performing, Domino failed to catch on outside Chicago.... But we have a feeling Dawson will fall in love with him.
