Commissioner's Ball sold out for the 117th birthday bash

Story & photos by Dan Davidson

As much as those who are attending the Commissioner's Ball anticipate the event, there are also dozens of people who just look forward to viewing the spectacle from the sidelines. Such was the case on June 13 between 6:30 and 7 p.m. when dozens of folks staked out their claims on the available step seating next to the Old Post Office and waited for the folks in their finery to arrive.

They did not disappoint. They arrived singly, in couples and in groups, often pausing to allow the appreciative crowd to snap pictures.

Among the arrivals were Mayor Wayne Potoroka and his wife, Mindy. Seamstress Debbie Winston, who has designed many a gown and outfitted many other guests over the years, was on Commissioner Doug Phillips, his wife Dale Stokes and his two RCMP aides stepped across the street to explain to some foreign visitors just what his role was in the governing of the Yukon.

Saying that his job was similar to that of the Governor General of Canada or the Lieutenant Governors of the provinces didn't help much for the Americans, whose governors are elected, so he expanded.

"I read the Speech from the Throne, sign the bills into law and my job is primarily ceremonial. I get to travel around the Yukon, giving out awards to various Yukoners who have done wonderful things to make their community better."

One of the sad things about this Commissioner's Day is that there were no awards to be given out. Not, Phillips commented later, that there were no worthy recipients, but because for some unknown reason, no one was nominated. He does hope that will not happen again next year.

After mingling with the 125 guests inside the Palace Grand Theatre, Diamond Tooth Gertie and her Dancing Girls came out to remind the watchers that they wouldn't need an invitation to come and visit at Gerties later that night, and that the entrance fee was much less than the price of a Ball ticket.

Just before things got fully under way inside, all 125 guests assembled in front of the theatre, one of the best man-made backdrops in the Yukon, to pose for the traditional full costume photo, both for the official photographer and for the watchers.

Back inside, emcee Gabriella Sgaga introduced the Commissioner's many special guests: Justice Ron Veale and his wife; Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Chief Roberta Joseph; RCMP Chief Super. Peter Clark; Mayor Wayne Potoroka; former Yukon Commissioner Geraldine Van Bibber; Rendezvous Oueen Shirley Chua-Tan; and Mr. and Mrs. Yukon, Ed and Donna Isaac.

Territorial politicians were conspicuous by their absence this year, on a date which was precisely 117 years after the Yukon became a separate territory on June 13, 1898. The government was represented by the Honourable David Lawton, the Speaker of the House. Local MLA Sandy Silver was engaged in a Liberal Party fund raising event at the Dawson City Golf Course (having been unable to book any other Saturday evening until September).Former Member of Parliament Larry Bagnell and

"Happy 117th Birthday, Yukon," said Commissioner Phillips. "I'm honoured and privileged to be here on the traditional territory of the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in and I'm pleased that so many people could come to the Ball tonight. This is a sell out tonight and we're very pleased about that.

'We come here every year to celebrate Yukon's birthday and it was 117 years ago - today, actually - that the Yukon Act of 1898 established the Yukon as a territory. Of course, Dawson City was named the official capital of the new territory and so there is no better place, on a most glorious day, to celebrate than in this beautiful Palace Grand Theatre.

"This is not the only anniversary happening here. It was 25 years ago today that two of our guests got married. Dale Cooper and Grant Hartwick are here with their friends tonight. They met here in Dawson City and they've returned tonight with their family and friends to celebrate.

"It's also an honour to have with us today some special guests, Doug Black and his wife, Diane. Doug is a relative of George Black, a former Commissioner of the territory and Member of Parliament for Yukon. It's great to have some of his relatives here today to share this event with us."

Phillips gave the audience a run down of his very busy year, which included visits to almost every school and community to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Canadian flag.

His travels included a trip to Dawson in February.

"I have to say, the weather today is a lot better than it was in February. We had the opportunity to watch the Quest when it 35 or 40 below. It was exciting portion of the evening. to see those incredible mushers who come through Dawson City every year during the Yukon Quest."

Phillips spoke of his office's relocation to historic Taylor House in Whitehorse and invited people to attend the official dedication by the Governor General of Canada, David Johnston, on July 6.

The evening was catered by Aloha Food and Events, while volunteers from CFYT-fm managed the cash bar as a fundraiser. Part of the evening's fee included a complimentary photo by Peabody's Photo Parlour. There were also a number of door prizes to be drawn, including free passage on Air North to anywhere the airline flies.

As part of the Commissioner's ongoing Youth Showcase, there were performances by Emma Kaiser (on harp) and individually on piano and vocals by the Ross sisters, Sophia and Emily.

This is another one of those Junes when people who hoped to see a dramatic Midnight Sun were doomed to be disappointed.

The day itself was promising. !t was warm enough by mid-morning that St. Paul's Anglican Church had no need of the auxiliary heaters we've been using instead of the big wood stove since we moved into the Procathedral (the big church) from the Richard Martin Chapel for our summer Sundays.

In fact, by the time I headed off to the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre for Aboriginal Day celebrations, the sun was very bright and it was hot out. It was pretty much like that for the next two hours.

There was a brief span during the prayer circle when the circling clouds dimmed the sun and a pre-rain breeze sprang up, making the crowd glance apprehensively at the sky, and causing the volunteer workers to run around taping down the loose coverings on all the tables.

But it passed, and the rest of the afternoon was fine. I spent much of it sitting in my summer office (our front veranda) sorting pictures for stories I needed to write for the Monday and Tuesday Whitehorse Star, and finishing off a book for a future Bookends column.

June can be tricky in Dawson. There's a roving weather pattern that circles around the bowl we live in between the hills on either side of the Yukon River. Typically a breeze that may become a wind will blow it from the north and kick up little dust storms all along Front Street.

That expensive brownishgrey French paving material that the government imported nearly half a dozen years ago now seems to be holding up quite well, but anyone who thought it would cut down on the Front Street dirt and dust was mistaken.

We truck the stuff onto that street from everywhere else in town and it drops from our vehicles to wait for the afternoon wind to swirl it around.

The breezes were quite pleasant at ground level on Sunday, easing the +30 temperatures quite nicely, but higher up they were bringing in clouds from one direction and forest fire haze from another.

Most summers it seems a lot of the haze comes up the river from Alaska, but this year it's hard to say. The Wildland Fire reports tell of fires in the Mayo region, not that far from here as the crow flies, and with the Tintina Trench to funnel the smoke our way if the wind is right.

Then there was that massive fire over near Beaver Creek, which, while it is a long day's drive in either direction, is not that far from the White River, which feeds into the Yukon not far from Dawson. As the raven flies, it's a short trip; also as the smoke drifts.

Between the two sets of occluding substances, there wasn't much of anything in the way of direct sunlight to be seen. Lots of indirect lighting, that interior decorator's dream light, but hardly a sign of Old Sol.

When I checked out our front door shortly after midnight, there was an oval rift in sky to the west. Was it the smoke or the clouds that had parted just a little bit? I couldn't tell, and the thing looked disturbingly like a sideways variation of the Eye of Sauron.

Those up on the Midnight Dome wouldn't have seen any more than I did. Even if they waited until the actual midnight, which is 2 a.m. in the summer, there wouldn't have been much to see.

Three nights later, with more smoke haze and less cloud, the sun was blood red at midnight, pretty enough in a way, but far from a cheerful sign.

We want to hear from you!

The Yukon's birthday was celebrated on the exact day at the Commissioner's Tea

"What a beautiful day," said emcee Gabriella Sgaga, as the guests crowded into the tables and chairs at the Commissioner's Tea, and settled back to enjoy the sharply focussed sunshine, ameliorated by a gentle breeze.

The Tea is held annually at the Commissioner's Residence, using the landscaped lawns and the spacious veranda to seat the guests. This year's edition of the Tea was a little later that most years, because this year the territory's actual birthday, June 13, fell on a Saturday.

By further coincidence, a relative of George and Martha Black, who were the last couple to occupy the Residence when George was the Commissioner, was in the crowd. Doug and Diane Black came from Toronto to make a donation to the Dawson City Museum.

As Sgaga explained to her audience, many of whom were visitors to the territory, this event is named for the Commissioner, but it is actually put on by the ladies of the IODE, the staff of Parks Canada and about 40 volunteers who provided the baked goods, brewed the tea, stirred the lemonade and acted as servers to the crowd. Volunteers provided 1,200 sweets, at least 1,000 tea sandwiches.

"I have a strong attachments to the Dawson chapter," said IODE president Janice Cliff, "because of its roots in our community, its strong ties to the Klondike and its founder, Martha Black. I can say with utter certainty that we've had a very busy year, as usual.

"Dawson's a very generous community and a community entrenched with volunteer activities. We have 20 active members and we rely on an outreach of effort from our community for all the things that we do.

"Our three biggest fundraising efforts are the Ice Pool Lottery -I'm sure you've heard of it – our Senior Christmas Cheer Drive, and the Commissioner's Tea.

"The ice guessing contest has been run by the IODE since 1940. The river break up is the signal of leaving eight months of winter, and this year a local resident won the contest with a guess that was off by one minute and twenty-five seconds."

The Fire Department assists in elivering goodies to the town's 81 seniors close to Christmas, and Parks Canada provides the venue and the lovely gardens for

This year the contents of the donation jar on the table at the receiving line will be given to the Yukon Girls' Rock Camp, which will be held here in July by the Dawson City Music Festival.

David Rohatensky, Parks Canada's Field Superintendent for the Klondike National Historic Sites, addressed the crowd briefly.

"Across the country, Canada's national historic sites enable Canadians to experience their rich history and heritage in many unique ways. So ... it brings me great pleasure to see this nationally significant setting being used for this very, very important event and other community events. These sites are your

"I would encourage everyone, whether Dawson is your home or you're visiting for the first time or repeat times, to take the opportunity to explore other parts of the Klondike National Historic Site. If you're travelling across Canada, visit other parks and historic sites and connect with your country that way.

"The Commissioner's Tea is celebrate and recognize excellence in the Yukon. It's an opportunity, as well, to reflect on the very interesting history of the Yukon Territory and the very important role of the office of the Commissioner, both past and present.

Rohatensky emphasized the role of the IODE, an organization that goes back to 1900 in Canada and 1913 in Dawson, four years before it was recognized by the Canadian Parliament, and issued a bit of a recruitment speech as he concluded.

This was to have been Commissioner Doug Phillips last Tea, but his term has been extended for another two years. In his role as a federal appointee, Phillips said he was taking credit for the fine weather. He opened his remarks by honouring the Edmonton police officer, Constable Daniel Woodall, who was killed in the line of duty earlier in the

"It was 117 years ago today," he continued, "June 13, 1898, that the Yukon was established as a separate territory. With the passing of the Yukon Act in Dawson City, it was designated as the capital and the office of the Commissioner of the territory. It was established here to oversee all the affairs of the Yukon territory, so there is no better place to celebrate this birthday on the 13th of June this year, than with you here in Dawson

After 1916 the building served an annual event that helps us a number of different purposes and ran down quite a bit until it was acquired by Parks in 1973. It took somewhat more than 20 years to restore the building to something of its former grandeur in time for the Gold Rush Centennial celebrations of 1996-

> Phillips thanked Parks for doing a marvelous job.

> He admitted quite frankly that he couldn't really take credit for the Tea that bears the name of his office, that without the IODE, Parks and many volunteers, it would not be happening

> "Each and every year they put in hundreds of hours of work in preparing for the Tea and many, many hours preparing all the goodies that we're going to have today."

Phillips continued his custom of having young people perform at the Tea, and other Commissioner's events, introducing four young women as part of the Commissioner's Youth Show-pieces of music on her Celtic and the afternoon came to an harp, accompanying her vocals end with a series of free tours of on one song and performing an instrumental piece as well.

Local singer-songwriter Tori

Holmes presented a song of her own on vocals and guitar, a song she had written in honour of her

Parks Canada's own Fred Ossen provided a verse by Robert Service, who was a guest at the residence during his years here. His choice for a reading was 'The Joy of Little Things", a kind of prayer which concludes,

"So give to me, I only beg, A little roof to call my own, / A little cider in the keg, / A little meat upon the bone; / A little garden by the sea, / A little boat that dips and swings . . . / Take wealth, take fame, but leave to me, / O Lord of Life, just Little Things."

Youth performances continued with solo vocal and piano performances by the Ross sisters, Sofia and Emily. While they were announced as doing a duet, elder sister Emily said they have tried that and that they couldn't get along well enough to manage it, so the crowd got two solo performances.

There followed the cutting Emma Kaiser presented two of the cake by Phillips and Cliff the restored ground floor of the Residence.

Jacob Scheier: Moving from poetry to prose

Jacob Scheier is a Torontopoet, essayist journalist, who has also lived in Istanbul, New York City and Brandon, Manitoba. He won the 2008 Governor General's Award for poetry (for More to Keep Us Warm) and has since published a second volume, Letter from Brooklyn.

Lately he has been paying more attention to prose, producing articles, essays and creative non-fiction. With John Tarleton, he was the co-winner of 2009 New York Independent being raised by a writer gave long as you can and just explore, Media Alliance award for best feature article, "The Anti-Bloomberg: Can I Get an Amen?" He has also published a nonfiction e-book, My Never-Ending Acid Trip: Why I Still Hallucinate Years After Taking LSD, in 2013.

He was the most recent Berton writer-in-residence, House where he worked on writing about the experience of being places where such roots are not common.

"In my recent poetry collection," he says, "I wanted recent poetry to bridge the divide, or create a dialectic, between the historical and personal, examining how my radical American Jewish heritage shaped my experiences of grief and love and so on – and how the political and historical shaped who my parents were, among other family members.

"More recently I've been writing personal essays that extend some of that content from my last book of poems. These essays tend to centre around the question of secular Jewish identity – how is a Jewish identity formed in the absence of belief and practice.'

He's not sure exactly what led though he has some thoughts about his influences.

"I grew up in a literary household, raised by the late poet and critic Libby Scheier. I to be a writer—in many ways be firsthand inspired me to try (and ultimately fail) to find a me permission to have a literary life; it normalized it. And I'm grateful for that.

"What led me to writing itself though was an embarrassing combination of teenage angst and nihilistic song lyrics - most notably those of Trent Reznor.

"I wrote poems/songs in this kind of melodramatic angstridden style - but I guess that was a secular Jewish person in the influence - what inspired me was just wanting to make a record of a time in my life where nearly every thought, book and experience was new - it was all too much not to make some kind of record of and to express the overflow of thoughts and feelings I was having. And that became a compulsion I think. My artistic tastes matured and my sensibility, I think, matured, but not this sense that I had to keep a record - that nothing was really happening or meant anything at least, unless I wrote it down."

> He sets aside a couple of hours every morning to write and tries to shut down the editorial side of his mind while he is doing this - to just let the words flow.

That advice to young writers or beginning writers goes with him to embrace life as a writer, some thoughts about literary

"I think, especially when it comes to poetry but other genres as well, there is a tendency to want to fit oneself into a am not sure that inspired me certain school and, or tradition of writing - 'am I surrealist or seeing how difficult a life it can a realist, a formalist or a free Dawson he did find a few Jewish verse poet?' etc, etc.

"My advice is to put such more lucrative occupation—but concerns out of your head for as read and write in variety of styles; don't pin yourself down too early to being this or that kind of writer. Actually, probably best to never worry what kind of writer you are."

This is advice he has given to workshops in several Toronto high schools, including the Catholic school where he was the weekly writer-in-residence a few years ago. Those who were in his writing group at the annual Young Authors Conference (April 23 and 24) heard more of this advice.

His trip to the Yukon is one that he hoped would light up his muse, but, for this interview, done just as he arrived in late March, he was not sure what to

"I really have no idea – which is pretty exciting. I want to write an essay about the experience of being a Jewish person in places that have no or virtually no Jewish community – I've lived in a couple other places in Canada, briefly, that this is true of.

"When I am living or visiting somewhere where there is no synagogue, no manischevitz (kosher grocery store), etc, etc... I suddenly crave my culture, which I all but ignore when I am in Toronto, and I find that very curious. So I hope while I am in the Yukon to uncover why I seem to only care about being a Jew in places where it is really difficult to be a Jew."

LIBRARY MOVIE REVIEWS

with Chris Collin

Taking Lives

1 hour, 49 mines; action/crime/thriller Starring: Angeline Jolie, Ethan Hawke, Kiefer Sutherland

What do you get when you mix top actors with a great story? Not always a good movie!

Taking Lives certainly has the actors. Angeline Jolie features prominently in this one. She plays the part of an FBI special agent - a specialist in profiling criminals to gain information that might lead to their capture. These profilers are often people without a lot of character and Jolie plays this part very well. She seems almost wooden and odd at first, but opens up as the movie progresses. She is actually acting very well to do this and it shows.

And, she is with a very talented cast. The story takes place in and around Montreal, but instead of using Canadian talent top actors from France are brought in to play the part of three Sûreté du Québec detectives. Olivier Martinez, and Tchéky Karyo are both fine actors, as is Jean-Hugues Anglade, who plays the chief detective. But, do we really need Frenchmen to play Quebecers? There are some Quebec actors playing lesser parts, but the producer of the movie seemed to be after the star qualities, perhaps for distribution in the USA.

The presence of Jolie's character is explained by an earlier exchange by one of the Quebec detectives to the USA. He calls for her assistance as an expert profiler, which upsets the two detectives in Montreal assigned to the case. One of them ends up liking her and working well with her, but the other does not, which sets up a nice conflict that lasts for much of the movie. They wonder what she can do that they can't, and when she shows them, the one detective is delighted, but, the other resents her efforts, even though they seem to be going in the

The bad guy is a troubled young man. He has an identical twin, but the mother doted on the other twin who disappears before the timing of the movie. Our twin finds that he cannot live as himself, so as he meets people, he takes over their lives, living as them. Of course, to do this, their elimination is necessary. He keeps a very low profile and moves around a lot, so his actions are not recognized until he is witnessed in the act of murder. Much of the movie is unravelling the personality of the killer to find that he is in fact a serial killer and has been doing this for years, with each victim becoming steadily older as the killer

This idea is actually one very clever for making into a thriller. We see the detectives unravelling the complicated actions of the killer, who we see snippets of. We are ahead of the police or are we? There are certainly twists and turns in this movie, and unexpected places that the story goes. All great tools to make an excellent move.

So, we have great actors, a great story, but, what happened? It just didn't work! It has great elements – Jolie is topless for a sex scene, which will certainly interest some. But, even that did not save this movie. It is not badly done, it just doesn't capture and hold one's interest they way that it should have. The end has a twist, which should have added excitement, but instead makes one ask, "say what?"

If you like thrillers, this movie would be good on a rainy afternoon, but don't line up for it! IMDB gives it 6.2, and I give it 2 stars out of 5.

300 Riders rumble into Dawson for the 22nd D2D gathering

Story & photos by Dan Davidson

The first thing to understand about the 22nd annual Dust to Dawson gathering is that it's not a (expletive deleted) rally. The online chatter related to the gathering is very clear about that.

"It is mostly about meeting old friends and making new friends in the friendly atmosphere of Dawson City, Yukon Territory," says the posting.

It's just a whole bunch of bikers who happen to be travelling around and end up in Dawson City. Promotion is all word of mouth with, of course, a bit of help from the Internet.

So they come, from everywhere in North America, it seems.

Look at the licence plates (the ones you can read through the accumulated dust and mud): Utah, Alaska (lots of those), California, Yukon, British Columbia, Oregon, New Brunswick, Florida, Saskatchewan, Indiana, Michigan, Texas, Wisconsin, South Dakota, Ontario.

There were some from the United Kingdom, but they stayed just long enough to say hello and moved on during the second day of the two day event.

two days - June 18 and 19 -

They come in a variety of sizes from all over the continent.

seems like a long way to travel Run tour of the Gold Fields. to say hello, but it seems the ride itself is the biggest attraction for many of this group.

The group, according to Dick Van Nostrand (immortalized as "the Dick" in the literature) amounted to 300 bikers this year. 260 of them signed up for the banquet dinner in the Art Coming all this distance for and Margaret Fry Arena. Lots of them enjoyed the 60 mile Poker

In its early days, Dick and Joann Van Nostrand owned the Downtown Hotel and the bikers assembled there and played biker games in the cordoned off street. The hotel's changed hands a few times since then. and the center of the action has moved up the street to the Triple I compound, an enclosed space between that establishment's two main buildings.

Most of the games seem devoted to controlling a heavy piece of machinery at a very low speed, while doing something guaranteed to put you off balance: riding to a fixed mark while wearing a black out hood and listening to the crowd shouting directions (or not); dropping bouncy tennis balls into a series of graduated containers without having them bounce out; positioning a rider so he or she can bite a bit off a hotdog suspended overhead as you drive by.

Most of the itinerary is up to the individual rider, but the organizers do post some sugges-

Black's great ephew donates flask to Museum

Doug Black recalls meeting his famous Great Uncle George once in the 1950s, when Doug was just a boy in Montreal. He didn't understand just why George Black was famous, but it had something to do with the Yukon.

In June, during the weekend of the Commissioner's Tea and Ball, Doug and Diane Black learned a lot more about the family history.

A few years ago, the Blacks came into contact with Mike and Kathy Gates, who have been collecting material for a book Kathy is writing about George Black, and this summer the Blacks, who live in Toronto, finally got curious enough to come North, accompanied by their friends, Malcolm and Norma Campbell.

Dawson was the last big stop on their circle loop tour, and they had come here to make a donation, a flask which George Black, our former Commissioner, former Member of Parliament and one time Speaker of the House of Commons, used to carry with him.

The flask carries the initials "G.B." on the top and "George Black, Dawson, Yukon", on one

Black had a long run as an MP, interrupted by a nervous breakdown in the mid-1930s, during which time his wife, Martha, served in his stead and also ran in and won an election before her husband was able to return to politics in 1940.

of 1949 and was defeated in a comeback attempt in 1953 so, by the time young Doug met him, his glory days were behind him.

The Blacks made the formal presentation of the flask to the Dawson City Museum's Acting Director, Alex Somerville, in the former legislative chambers/ court room on the second floor of the museum.

Then Somerville treated them to a tour of the Lind Storage Facility, where they saw a number of other Black related artifacts: several canes, a number of silver spoons and one of the desks Black used in his days there.

Doug indicated that he had once had several engraved pocket watches that belonged to his great uncle, but they were stolen when the family's home was broken into a few years ago.

"My grandfather was George's brother," he explained. "I met George once, I think I was about ten years old at the time. He came to our house and had dinner with my mom and dad.

"George and Martha used to send their writings, their little books. My dad worked for the Montreal Star and he had some connections with publishers. They were trying to get my dad to publish their books. There were a lot of rejections in some of the papers that I did read about it. I think there were a few books that were published but a lot were rejected.

"We had all sorts of this, like, onion paper, all typed out. These were parts of the books and

He did not run in the election books that they were writing about, but you know, it didn't mean much to us then.

> "My dad died in 1966, the year after George did, but I think the last time I saw him was in 1956-

> The Blacks greatly enjoyed their trip to the territory, which took place during that splendid weather the Yukon enjoyed in

> "We haven't had a bad day yet," said Doug, 'and we left on May 20, taking the cruise up from Vancouver."

> "We just found this," he said with reference to the flask, "and we were talking to Mike and Kathy over the last three years and planning this trip. They suggested that we donate this to the museum. So instead of mailing it we said we'd come up and do it personally."

> Black regrets not getting more information about George from his mother, who passed away four years ago. He says she knew a lot more about him.

"If I knew what I know now I would probably have put those watches in a vault."

Michael Gates said that the Blacks also seem to have some manuscript papers that fill in some of the gaps in the copies of George Black's incomplete memoirs that can be found in various places.

The Blacks attended both the Tea and the Ball the next day and Commissioner Phillips made sure they were introduced to the crowds at both events.

Chief Joseph calls for National Aboriginal Day to be made a statutory holiday

Lunch got under way at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre on June 21, as the Hän Singers and Dancers left the open air stage area following their welcome songs. Chief Roberta Joseph took the microphone after the opening prayer by elder Percy Henry to explain the concept of Aboriginal Day to the crowd, which included a fair number of tourists.

The day was first celebrated in 1996, after it was proclaimed that year by then Governor General Roméo LeBlanc, to be celebrated on June 21 annually. This followed a discussion of more than a decade's length, which had begun as far back as 1982, when the celebratory day was called for by the National Indian Brotherhood (now the Assembly of First Nations).

1995 the idea was mentioned again in the report of the Royal Commission on Aboriginal Peoples. Also in 1995, the Sacred Assembly, a national conference of Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal people chaired by Elijah Harper, repeated the

It was affirmed the next year. "This is a day that we should all be proud of - all Canadians." Joseph said, "a day to celebrate the rich culture and heritage of aboriginal people and their contributions to the modern day social order that we have today.

"Most aboriginal governments and organizations across this vast land, including in Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in traditional territories, establish the celebration as a statutory holiday.

"Two governments in the North, the Northwest Territories and Nunavut ... established a statutory holiday. Not every province, nor the Yukon, has established National Aboriginal

Day as a statutory holiday.

"We believe this day should be a statutory holiday across Canada, so that all Canadians will be free to experience the celebration of our culture, dances and values and to receive a clearer understanding of who we are, the first peoples of this

"June 21 has significant values to our people. It is a new solstice, a new season of richness and harvest and teachings, bondings, gatherings and celebrations.

traditional territory we are venturing back to the selfgovernance that our people once had over a century ago. We are an integral part of the society that we reside in. For example the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in, along with the City of Dawson, made a joint proclamation last week that June 21 is National Aboriginal Day in Tr'ondëk and call this place home." Hwëch'in traditional territory and in Dawson City."

While the local First Nation has made much progress in education economics, cultural revival, Joseph felt that indigenous cultures across the nation could only benefit from having National Aboriginal Day designated as a statutory holiday.

Just before emcee Debbie Nagano called MLA Sandy Silver to the mic, she let the crowd know that two film crews, one from China and the other from Yukon Tourism, were filming and wandering the grounds.

Silver noted that it was not at all unusual for the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in to be sharing this day with everyone.

"The Hän people have a long history of sharing," he said. "It's part of who they are. It's part of the reason why people like me can live here and call this remote part of Canada our home."

Twenty years ago, Silver came to Dawson to teach, intending, he said, to see the North, pay off his student loan debt and return to Nova Scotia. He does go there from time to time, but it's only to visit now.

The warmth that I received from the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in people made minus 50 feel like a breeze, made me want to stay

Following Silver's speech, elder Clara Van Bibber led the assemblage in a large prayer circle and smudging ceremony around the sacred fire.

Touching bases at Bourbon & BBQ

On the evening of June 25, the Yukon Liquor Corporation presented a tasting of 12 bourbons at the Red Feather Saloon.

This event was co-hosted by the Klondike Institute of Arts very close behind. & Culture, as a fundraiser for a badly needed new HVAC system. place was the Triple J Hotel, We are estimating a $1,200 profit from the night.

A "flavoured" highlight of the evening was the BBQ wing contest by the following KIAC sponsors: Aurora Inn, Downtown Hotel, Eldorado Hotel, Klondike Kate's Restaurant, Triple J Hotel and the Westmark Dawson.

Approximately 40 guests enjoyed the wings, blue cheese coleslaw, fantastic focaccia sponsored by Cheechakos Bakeshop and delicious bourbon desserts made by Shelley Hakonson.

It was obvious to the organizers how delicious the BBQ sauces were when the contest count was completed and votes were neck and neck in the running with only one vote separating the first, second and third winners with the remaining entries

Terry's Fish and Chips gets a second chance

BY TIMOTHY SAWA

You'd never expect fish and chips to cause so much trouble.

But a recent decision by Dawson City Council to re-grant a business license to Terry's Fish and Chips has caused somewhat of a rift among the town's politicians.

"In my opinion I believe that it establishes a very dangerous precedent," said Mayor Art Webster about the granting of the license.

On March 24 of this year, as a result of an "unclear" application, Terry Kenzie, the owner and operator of the restaurant on the outskirts of Dawson City, was issued a business license. Her restaurant is located on a placer claim, a fact that was missed by city council at the

It's against federal legislation and YTG policy for "non-minerlike" activity to be taking place on a placer claim, and this message came loud and clear from the Federal Govern-

"We reiterate that the owner of a placer right cannot give permission to someone to occupy the surface for any other purpose than placer mining," wrote Marion Dejean, the Mining Recorder for the Dawson City District, in a letter to the 13 people involved with the claim. "Consequently, we will be informing the Yukon Territorial Government Lands Branch that non-minerlike activity is taking place on a placer claim in the Klondike Valley.'

On May 9, heeding the advice of Dejean, city council revoked Kenzie's license.

But now the city has reversed that decision.

Kenzie, after assembling 134 signatures in support of her plea for a license, approached council on June

Surprisingly, among Kenzie's supporters at the council meeting that made the precedent setting decision, was Dawson City's MLA, David Millar. "I'd like to make it clear that I am here as an MLA, and I do support Terry (Kenzie) in this endeavor. I am not here representing the Yukon Territorial Government," he told council.

But Mayor Webster insisted that city council would not ignore federal legislation and YTG policy. "It's not city council's decision," he said pointing at the letter from Dejean.

Kenzie and Millar, however, would not take no for an answer. "I honestly believe that if city council wants to resolve this issue they can resolve this issue," said Millar.

Dawson man accused of murder

Families pull together to deal with tragedy

BY COREEN LARSON

A Dawson man has been charged in connection with the death of Richard "Chip" Semple.

Joseph William Henry, 32, will appear in Whitehorse court facing charges of second-degree murder in the fall.

Semple, 47, was found suffering from severe head injuries along the dyke on Front Street in th hours of Saturday, June 10th.

Semple was later transported to Whitehorse General Hospital where he slipped into a coma and passed away late Sunday night.

Police suspected foul play and furthered their investigation after reports from eye-witnesses.

Some witnesses came forward who saw the accused and the victim up there that night," said Dawson RCMP Cpl. Gary Few details of the investigation are being released by the RCMP until the accused stands trial.

The Semple and Henry family have known each other for years and are working together to deal with Chip's death.

"We're not blaming anyone," said Chip's sister, Peggy Kormendy." It's in the RCMPs hands now and I don't listen to what other people say about it."

Kormendy said that although her family is hurt by the loss, they don't want to hurt anyone else.

"We were brought up like brothers and sisters and we are like family. That is the way it's always been and will always be."

DAWSON CITY MUSIC FESTIVAL

Over the coming weeks the Sun will feature a number of artists appearing at the 37th annual Dawson City Music Festival, taking place July 24-26. To see this year's complete line-up and buy your tickets visit www.dcmf.com.

Declean O'Donovan

Listen: www.declanodonovan.com

Declan O'Donovan is a singer, songwriter, and pianist from Whitehorse, YT. His music is influenced by the sounds of Americana, blues, folk and roots, drawing inspiration from artists such as Bob Dylan and Randy Newman. Informed by adept piano playing, an evocative voice, and skillful songwriting, O'Donovan's music is at times dark, consistently poignant, and often underscored with twists of wicked humour.

As a long time Yukoner, Declan has performed throughout the territory numerous times over the years. If by chance you've never seen him play, we highly recommend it. Through regular touring over the last two years, Declan has performed across Canada and into the US including major music festivals such as Roots and Blues Festival in Salmon Arm, BC; Canadian Music Week in Toronto, ON; and Breakout West in Calgary, AB which included a featured performance at the Western Canadian Music Awards Gala.

Recently Declan O'Donovan also received a 2014 Maple Blues nomination for Best New Artist of the Year. This will be Declan's first performance at DCMF, and the audience is sure be charmed by O'Donovan's earnest, relevant, and rich cadre of songs.

Listen: www.sarahmacdougall.com

Described by the Belgian magazine Rootstime as "one of the greatest talents of our era", listed as the "2nd best gig" by the major UK newspaper The Independent, becoming the #1 most played artist on Canadian Galaxie Folk/ Roots radio-- Western Canadian Music Award winning artist Sarah MacDougallisearninginternational accolades and listeners thanks to her honest and poetic songs, passionate performances, and unique voice.

MacDougall's songs are about identity, love, fear, hope, growing up, rootlessness, and forgiveness. They are written from the point of view of the hopeful outsider, trying to figure out their place and make sense of the world. Grand Canyon (released in 2015) sees Sarah challenging herself and pushing new boundaries musically and sonically, and it is an album that will surely see Sarah reach new levels in her career. An enchanting performer with enduring warmth and energy, MacDougall's powerful music transcends time and place.

Sarah has played festivals such as Iceland Airwaves, Winnipeg Folk Festival, and The Great Escape, and she will continue to tour throughout 2015. Born in Sweden and currently based in Whitehorse, Yukon, Sarah is certainly at home in the north. She is participating as a youth leader at DCMF's first ever Girls Rock Camp.

Coming up at KIAC: Looking Back at Possible Futures

By Deirdre Mulcahy

Each year a creative experiment exists between the ODD Gallery and the KIAC Artist in Residence program: two artists come to Dawson, are given six weeks, a dynamic concept and the opportunity for their work to culminate in a month long exhibit. The result has always been exhilarating and is the reason The Natural & The Manufactured project has been continuing for over 10 years.

The project invites artists to explore the role cultural and economic values play in our environment to reinterpret what is possible for our social and physical landscape. As it is each year, there will be two artists and two projects, with one exhibit displayed inside and one outside. This year the project welcomes artists from across the country:

While many find themselves transfixed by the latest available technological advancements Colin's interest lies in "the remnants left behind in the wake of our industrial pursuits" and in "the rise and fall of industrial economies". His work explores the world once imagined right here in our landscape.

Kevin Murphy will be creating an indoor installation exploring the 1955 phenomena where the Quaker Oats Company promised 21 million households the claim to "Gold Rush Land" which offered, in exchange for a cereal outside of Dawson. Both artists will be presenting their exhibits at the start of the Arts Fest weekend. The opening will be held at KIAC and will include both artist talks and a reception. The Natural & The Manufactured project will also include a commissioned post-exhibit text and a guest lecture. Sharon Rowse's "Klondike Era Mystery" series is just a tad deceptive in terms of its marketing strategy. John Lansdowne Granville and his partner, Sam Scott, actually live in Goldrush era Vancouver, having settled there after their adventures in the Klondike. In the first book, The Silk Train Murders, Granville rescued himself from the down at the heels life he had fallen into after his time in the Yukon when Scott was falsely arrested for murder and nearly hung.

Granville, ne'er do well son of the British aristocracy, transformed himself into a private detective in order to save his former mining partner, and that led the pair into the new partnership which is well established by the time this story

It's December 30, 1899, when the pair sit down with Marty Cole, a grimy old miner who spins them the tale of a lost mine in the southern BC wilderness, near a place called Pitt Lake. His claim is that he wants to find the mine and turn it over to a descendant of the man who made the partial map he shows the partners. He promises them a share of the profit from the working mine if they will help him find it.

Granville and Scott are still on the trail of a missing infant, but that trail has gone cold while they wait for more information from the USA, so they decide to take this on while they wait.

It's not a job that's supposed to take very long. They decide to take Trent Davis, their young apprentice, with them. It's a good choice, as it turns out, for while the pair are experienced in the wilderness, Trent actually grew up in the bush, and turns out to be even more of an asset than they would have thought.

Side plots abound. In the first book Granville became acquainted with a young woman named Emily Turner, who turned out to be a fountain of information on that first case. Emily's family is as Victorian upper middle class as can be, and the only way the pair of them can manage to consult with each other is for them to pretend to be engaged. This is actually a condition which would please them both if it were real, but they spend much of their time dancing around the potential relationship, both pretending it's all very much business-like.

Emily has, in fact, enrolled in a business school, to learn typewriting, the very sort of school my mother and her sisters would sign up for in the late 1930s, when computers were still a glimmer in Alan Turing's eye. Her family is not happy with such a working class decision, but Emily plugs away at it, even though she really has to struggle with the machine.

The other thing impeding her progress is that she keeps getting involved in both of Granville's cases, snooping around the city with her friend, Clara, whose interest is certainly enhanced by the involvement of the young reporter, Tim O'Hearn.

While they pursue their line of investigation, Granville's party is ambushed in the woods and their client is killed, while Scott is badly injured. They are assisted in nursing him back to health by an Indian (this is 1899 after all) healer of the Katzie (Salish) tribe, and in the process meet an amateur anthropologist who is studying the local customs and is a fount of knowledge.

In due time Granville and his team make their way to Denver, still searching for the missing child. They are ambushed there as well, though they come out of it without being injured at all. In the end they break up a baby farm and find Sarah, the missing child.

Back home, there is still a lot of tidying up to do. Mostly it's a question of locating Mary Pearson, who seems to be the rightful heir of Cole's map. Emily's work on this side of the story is crucial to their success. Wrapping up this mystery and the murders associated with it move the story along to a rather surprising conclusion..

I found this second book an improvement on the first, with more development of the two central characters, Granville and Emily. The narrative follows their points of view, which does end to make the supporting cast seem a bit like set decoration, but that's not uncommon in this type of mystery.

Rowse has recently released a third volume in this series, The Missing Heir Murders, and seems to be alternating these books with a series set in modern times and featuring a female sleuth named Barbara O'Grady.

I've been reading Rowse's mysteries in e-book form and I do hope the next one is converted a bit better. It's disconcerting to see a word printed in italics and then find (italics) right after it as if someone messed up the formatting.

In terms of historical accuracy, I haven't really noticed any howlers in these books, but Rowse's website (http://www. sharonrowse.com/historical-research/) invites you to check, with a listing of books she consulted in order to create her settings, as well as references about the Salish people and their healing practices.
