Annual funding announced for arts organizations

WHITEHORSE (July 20, 2015) —Twenty organizations will share $668,000 in support this year from the Yukon government's Arts Operating Funds.

Funding will be distributed to 15 arts organizations in support of their year-round work in theatre, film, dance, music and visual art. A further five organizations will receive funding for established annual arts events.

"The collective impact of these groups' creative activities and events on Yukon's economy and quality of life is immense," Minister of Tourism and Culture workshops. Funding will also Elaine Taylor said. "The Yukon government is proud to support these important organizations and continue its investment in Yukon's creative economy."

Last year, groups funded by Arts Operating Funds generated is very excited to receive an almost $2 million through ticket sales, earned revenue and fundraising. Together, they mounted over 700 events in Yukon that drew 74,000 people. Volunteers contributed over 30,000 hours of their time.

The Dawson City Music Festival Association received funds for its Yukon Girls Rock Camp. The camp, for girls aged eight to 15 years, will offer unique programming that combines music education and performance with empowerment and social justice workshops led by positive role models.

"With the support of Arts Fund, the Dawson City Music Festival will be able to offer hands-on music programming through Girls Rock Camp," association executive director

Emily Farrell said. "The Arts Fund will enable Girls Rock Camp to access necessary resources such as instruments and instructors, and will ensure that the camp is an accessible and well-rounded experience for girls in Dawson and rural Yukon."

The Arts Fund fosters the creative development of the arts in Yukon by supporting collectives, organisations, industry associations and other eligible groups in activities related to the literary, visual or performing arts.

Arts Fund application deadlines are the 15th of March, June, September and December.

OPINION

Uffish Thoughts: Adventures on our dusty summer roads

The Dept. of Highways has been out working on the roads lately. The improvements will no doubt make things better in the long term, but for right now they're creating conditions that are slowing traffic and are sometimes downright dangerous.

I don't mind the slowing traffic part too much, but some other features call for greater care on the road.

Driving to Faro on July 16 we encountered a number of pilot car situations. I'm happy to follow their lead and instructions, but we were truly puzzled by the reactions of some other people. A lot of these detours involve driving in the left lane instead of the right (which has been torn up, or has freshly spread tar), and keeping your speed down, especially if you're in a large RV or towing a trailer, as we were.

Following at a safe distance behind the motor home in front of me, driving on loose gravel about five vehicles back of the pilot truck, I was surprised by a "get-out-of-the-way" horn blast from a fast moving belly dumper that was part of the road operation. As I veered right over the windrow (not really recommended) it sailed by on my left spewing dust and rocks in its wake.

Perhaps encouraged by its example, two compact sedans did the same thing a half minute or so later, tucking themselves into the moving line about two RVs ahead of us. This is potentially dangerous manoeuvring, and I'm just sorry we were too startled to take down licence numbers.

Granted that these line-ups cause delays and everyone does want to get through them as quickly as safely possible, it is very clear that the normal speed limits do not apply on recently laid loose gravel when you're following a pilot vehicle.

Normal speeds are also inadvisable when the highway is dry and dusty after the gravel has been spread on new patches of BST surfacing. Heading back to Dawson on Sunday we encountered a number of stretches where the dust from vehicles in front of us was so thick that it was all you could see of them. Common sense says that you need to hang back enough to maintain a clear line of sight and give yourself room to stop if you need to.

The truck/fifth wheel rig in front of us was erratic. Granted that there were some bumps potholes, but nothing that was a real problem if you were alert and not going too fast. When towing, I'm somewhere between 80 and 90 a lot of the time, and that driver seemed to be as well, but he was trying to avoid every single rough spot on the road, swerving right and left to miss them, and sometimes sending the rear end of his rig out over the ditch to the right.

After this had happened four or five times, I dropped back a couple of lengths for safety's sake. About five minutes later a smaller motor home dragged itself past us and dropped into that slot, seriously tailgating the larger rig, until it was able to pull out and pass while going up a hill with a blind corner at the top.

We did run across one actual accident on the homeward trek. It was on one of those dusty stretches and featured a convoy of several large motor homes seeking to help one of their number who had slid off the soft shoulder and was caught off the road leaning into some bushes at an angle that it clearly wasn't going to get out of without assistance.

I suspect the driver had encountered an oncoming cloud of dust and had moved a little too far to the right, in toward the side of the hill, to make way for whatever was hiding in it.

They were okay. It appeared to be a gentle slide, something they could probably be pulled out off without much damage. Their convoy mates had stopped fore and aft and were safely directing traffic from either direction. They had sent for or called for help, but they were not far past Moose Creek, heading towards Dawson, and it was going to be some time before anyone could get to them.

We got home safely, thanks.

It was going to take these folks a while to move on.

Community Development Fund contributes to projects promoting community well-being WHITEHORSE (July 23, 2015) — The Government of Yukon has awarded more than $103,000 to eight Yukon community organizations for projects that support healthy communities.

"Through Community Development Fund support, these projects will provide Yukoners with better access to improved programs and services," Minister of Economic Development Stacey Hassard said. "The Yukon government is pleased to work with these organizations as they contribute to Yukon communities and way of life."

Among the recipients is the Yukon Council on Aging, which will use the funding to modernize their website to enhance its accessibility and to incorporate a more userfriendly design.

"Working with seniors' organizations, the Yukon Council on Aging spearheads the sharing of information of interest to seniors in Yukon," said Yukon Council on Aging president Connie Dublenko. "This project will help us achieve our goal of encouraging respect for the contributions senior citizens have made, and of understanding the aspirations and issues of concern in the lives of Yukon seniors."

The Association of Yukon Fire Chiefs will access the Community Development Fund to provide training and education tools to firefighters that will focus on community safety and property conservation.

"The Association of Yukon Fire Chiefs is grateful and excited to receive CDF support," said Association of Yukon Fire Chiefs president Jim Regimbal. "The funding will help us achieve our primary goals of life safety and preservation of property by providing Yukon fire chiefs and senior fire officers with the additional training and educational tools needed to protect their communities."

This grant offers $15,000 to provide training and education tools so that Yukon fire chiefs and senior fire officers can effectively train firefighters and provide life safety and property conservation to the communities they protect. The project will create 320 hours of employment for two people.

The Copperridge Neighbourhood Association was awarded funds to build a playground, install accessible benches and improve landscaping at Lazulite Park.

"The support from the CDF is going to help our neighbourhood establish Lazulite Park as a vibrant part of our community," Copperridge Neighbourhood Association director Damien Burns said. "We want to ensure the park is an important hub for families and residents of all ages in Copper Ridge."

The Community Development Fund will provide over 1,100 hours of employment to about 24 people through these projects.

Dawson City & Haines Junction Team Up for Soccer Gold!

Submitted by Dawson City Minor Soccer

The Dawson City Minor Soccer 16 & under team joined forces with 4 players from Haines Junction to compete in the 2015 Yukon Soccer Championships in Whitehorse. It can be difficult for the communities to get enough kids of the appropriate age together to compete for full field. However, this newly formed alliance with Haines Junction (referred to as the DCHI FC) has been very successful - this group of athletes have won the silver medal the last two years. This year it was time for gold!

DCHJ FC won all three of their round robin games, giving them a bye for the first playoff round Sunday morning. The gold medal match was played Sunday afternoon, on a hot, smoky day at Vanier High School. Dawson - HJ took an early lead in the game, with three goals in the first half. The first, scored from a volley outside the 18 yard box by Sam Crocker, got the team on the score board. The second goal was sheer determination from Ben Lorenz as he pressured the opposition's defense, gaining control of the ball and capitalizing on his opportunity, he made no mistake hitting the back of the net. The winning goal from Ethan Gaw was a blast from mid-field that sailed through the air and caught the corner of the goal to put his team up by three. In the second half the Whitehorse team scored on a free kick to net their first goal and then later in the half they were awarded a penalty shot to come within a goal of the lead. The DCHJ team continued to dominate and kept them from finishing their comeback, earning the team the

The team's defense was solid over the weekend, with Aliyah Nyland and Teresa Procee playing strong through the middle, and Sam Crocker and Austin Franks holding off the offence down the wings. These kids never gave up and were relentless as they shut down the opposition only allowing two goals in the first three games. Eleven year old Callum Weir (HJ) was solid in net impressing the spectators with his diving saves and his strong presence in the goal area.

The mid-field was made up of Ethan Gaw and Dawson Weir

(HJ) holding the middle, with Kacie Hastings, Josh Dulac (HJ) and Trevor Jones (HJ) on the outside. These players controlled the games with their strong ball control.

The DCHJ team had a very fast forward line with Sarah Nyland, Ben Lorenz and Jack Amos who dominated the wings as they outran the opposition's defense creating a number of scoring opportunities.

This is a highlight of the season for these players, several of the kids play with the Yukon Strikers teams, representing the Yukon at outside tournaments, but only twice a year they get to play together co-ed and represent the community.

Trash Talk: News from the Garbage Man

By Tim Taylor

I am your friendly neighborhood garbage man and I would like to inform you of Dawson's Waste Management program. I work for Edgar Blattler, who is contracted by the city to pick up residential and commercial garbage and cardboard. I am also on the board of directors for Conservation Klondike Society (CKS), who is also partnered with the city as part of the Waste Management program.

I would have never imagined the satisfaction I get being the garbage man. I thrive at being outside all day in all adverse weather. The garbage truck was custom-made so one person can drive and pick up garbage. Because of this, I am in and out of the truck all day, hefting bags and cardboard keeping me in great physical shape. As a former teacher at Robert Service School, this job has taught me so much about waste management, the good initiatives being done and the things that need to be changed. As an educator, I would like to bring your attention to certain projects pertaining to our landfill, garbage pick-up and recycling initiatives.

Quigley Land Fill

The city recently received permission from the Yukon government to continue using the Quigley landfill for another 10 years. But we need to decrease how much waste we put into the landfill or a new landfill will have to found; maybe up the Dempster...maybe somewhere closer.

I see first-hand what goes into the landfill as I bring on average 3 loads of garbage to the dump 4 days a week. I know the residences who are really conscious of what they put in garbage bags and residences who don't know or don't care about what they throw out. I like to believe it is only about educating the public that more people will be aware of what they throw out. The "out of sight out of mind" philosophy can no longer be sustained. We all need to take responsibility for our waste and recognize the need to keep Dawson City clean, green and healthy. Before I was the garbage man, I recognize that I did not do as thorough a job of recycling that I do now. I also did not know about the weekly routine for garbage pick-up and what the garbage man picks up and does not pick up. Well, I am here to inform you about that right now:

Garbage Pick Up

Every Monday, I pick up garbage from Front Street all the way up to the south side of 5th Avenue. Wednesdays I pick up residential garbage from 5th avenue all the way up to 8th avenue. I don't pick up recycling. Presently, it is up to each resident to sort their recycling and bring it to the recycling depot in town or the recycling centre at the dump. CKS started a pilot project for picking up recycling and we will hopefully have a citywide pick up for recycling in the near future. All other discarded material such as furniture, electronics, construction material, household items, etc, I do not pick up.

CKS's Initiatives

CKS has been an amazing recycling centre that constantly seeks new and more efficient initiatives. The greatest example of this is the city and CKS partnering to build a larger and more efficient recycling centre in Callison Subdivision. This would take all recycling materials out of the Quigley landfill, which would extend the landfill's life span. This new facility would have a cardboard bailer, a bottle crusher, a construction section, recycling for plastics, tin and metal and a compost program. The completion of this centre will take at least a year, however in the mean time, CKS and the town of Dawson City will continue to inform the public what can be done to help in decreasing the waste in our landfill.

Another exciting new initiative from CKS was the start of cardboard recycling which began this July! Instead of picking up cardboard and taking it to the dump to burn, it will now be crushed by a bailer and transported down to Whitehorse to be recycled. Please help CKS in this new initiative by flattening your cardboard boxes and placing them next to your garbage bags in your bin or alongside it.

CKS also has an amazing program for refundables. Refundables are pop bans, beer cans, beer bottles, liquor bottles, water bottles, juice bottles and cans that are redeemable for money. Most cans/bottles are 5 cents, but bigger liquor bottles are 25 cents. These refundables add up and if you don't want to refund your cans, CKS is only too happy to count and give you back money for them. Bring them to the recycling depot either in town or at the dump. I am astounded how many people put their cans and bottles in garbage bags and just throw them out. On average, I pick up between 400-600 refundable cans/bottles per week that I bring in to CKS. There was a federal audit done last month at the landfill. They informed me that aluminum from cans is what they saw most in the landfill!!!! Please, if you don't want to bring in your refundables, leave them in a box or a clear bag so I know what it is.

Compost Confusion Addressed!

The Town of Dawson City does have a compost program but it needs to be re-organized. For now, there are 3 city compost bins: one at the arena next to the green garbage bin, one at the bottom of the Dome, next to the baseball field and one in the Dredge Pond sub-division. Happy Marmot has the contract for picking up the compost and bringing it to the Schmitt Compost cage, located at the Quigley Landfill. Unfortunately, the compost pile has not been sifted or properly maintained to use for gardens, although CKS is finding out what else we can use it for. Please continue to compost since it is still better to have all our compost in a separate area than in the landfill. Believe it or not, statistics show that 50% of the landfill is compostable food

So to recap:

- 1. A new recycling centre will be built in Callison in the next year.
- 2. Cardboard is now being bailed and sent down to Whitehorse for recycling. No more burning of cardboard!!!!
- 3. Your residential garbage and flattened cardboard is picked up Monday, Wednesday or Friday depending on where you live.
- 4. I do not pick up furniture, electronics, construction material, household items, hazardous waste, etc. If it is not in a bag or if it is extremely heavy, I won't take it.
- 5. Tuesdays and Thursdays I only pick up cardboard from businesses.
- 6. Please do not put your recyclables in your garbage bags. Please sort your recycling and bring it to the recycling depot.
- 7. Compost bins are available at the arena, the Dome and at the Dredge Pond sub-division. You must use compostable plastic bags. These can be bought at the General Store or Bonanza Market.

Phew! That was a lot of information! Sorry for the overload, but there are so many pieces of the puzzle when it comes to the Waste Management Program. So next time you see me in the garbage truck, hail me down to ask about the Waste Management Program or any other questions pertaining to "News from the Garbage Man!"

History Hunter: The Black family returns to the Klondike

by Michael Gates, Yukon News, Friday June 19,

A hundred years after the Yukon's commissioner, George Black and his wife Martha entertained in the Yukon's most elegant mansion, their presence was again felt at the Commissioner's Tea. Doug Black, great nephew of former commissioner George Black, and his wife Diane were among the 200 to share in the festivities which took place on the lawn of the commissioner's residence on Saturday afternoon, June 13.

Accompanied by longtime friends and traveling companions Malcolm and Norma Campbell, the Blacks were at the end of a month-long tour that took them deep into Alaska and the Yukon. This trip was particularly important for Doug, who is the last member of the family line to carry the Black name.

A century ago, like today, social functions at the commissioner's residence were an important part of community life. In 1912, when George Black, the newly appointed commissioner of the Yukon, arrived in Dawson City, then the capital of the Yukon, he and his wife Martha threw a big party. At the time, the commissioner was the senior official in the territorial administration.

The doors of the residence, then referred to as Government House, were flung open and everyone, from the social elite to the hoi polloi were welcomed. Hundreds accepted the invitation, and were entertained in the colourfully decorated interior on April 10, 1912. After being introduced to the new commissioner and his party, guests circulated throughout the building.

John Dines and his orchestra were set up on the landing of the grand staircase. Guests played cards on the second floor, and billiards on the third. Others smoked cigars and exchanged stories while consuming the delicacies and dipping into the punchbowl located in front of the grand staircase.

They danced until two o'clock in the morning, and then played cards until the stragglers left for their homes in the early hours. One observer noted that... "People were there in all kinds of clothes, from the handsome gowns sent over from Paris to the wives of the millionaires, to the worn, shabby outfits of those less fortunate. It didn't make any difference to the governor or his good wife."

Four years later, on July 20, 1916, the Imperial Order, Daughters of the Empire (now referred to simply as IODE) sponsored the Alexandra Rose Day Festival to raise money for the war effort. (The IODE are still instrumental in presenting the Commissioner's Tea a century later.) It began in the afternoon but continued late into the northern summer twilight. Again the orchestra was playing, but this time it was outside on the verandah.

On the lawn, ice cream, cake and sandwiches were served to the guests, many of whom were visitors who had just arrived on the steamer Selkirk. Others played "Swat the Kaiser" at 25 cents for three tennis balls. For that, contestants got to throw their projectiles at likenesses of the German crown prince. A direct hit earned the winner a cigar or other prize.

Everyone sported decorative wild roses they had purchased to support the war effort. Mrs. Black played the hostess, "charmingly gowned in white, and wearing a most becoming picture hat trimmed in Alexandra roses." Despite being weak and pale from recent surgery, George Black circulated through the assembled crowd throughout

In Dawson City, my wife Kathy and I joined the modern-day Blacks, and acted as tour guides, escorting them to various sights and visiting special attractions. They stayed in Dawson for five days, but later admitted that they could have stayed even longer.

They stood on the Dome overlooking the Klondike spectacular view. They panned for gold at Claim 33, then visited a working mine. Special tours were provided of the commissioner's residence, which George and Martha Black occupied for four years, as well as the residence on Fifth Avenue where they lived during the years that George was member of Parliament. George Black was important to the territory both socially and politically for half a century.

On Friday afternoon, Doug Black made a donation of his great uncle's cocktail shaker to the Dawson City Museum. Acting Director Alex Somerville graciously accepted the artifact on behalf of the museum.

Somerville then took the Blacks and the Campbells into the museum storage to show them other artifacts associated with George Black, including a collection of walking sticks recently donated to the museum, a set of silverware and a pair of decorative snowshoes. As a special treat, he opened up the storage shelves and pointed to the desk that George Black occupied when he was a member of the territorial assembly between 1905 and

The modern Blacks were recognized during the proceedings at the Commissioner's Tea, where they were greeted by Yukon Commissioner Doug Phillips and his wife Dale Stokes, and by Chief Justice Ron Veale and his wife, Catherine. They chatted at some length with former member of Parliament Larry Bagnell and his wife, Melissa Craig, after which Diane Black circulated around the grounds of the commissioner's residence, meeting people and making friends with everyone.

In the evening, the Black party were acknowledged at the Commissioner's Ball in the Palace Grand Theatre, where Dawson Mayor Wayne Potoroka chatted with Doug Black, at one point placing the gold-laden chain of office around his neck.

A scrumptious meal was served. Guests at the ball were then entertained by a short address from the commissioner and youth performances by Emma Kaiser on harp, and sisters Sophia and Emily Ross. Dancing to the music of Hank Karr and the Canucks followed.

Back in Whitehorse, Doug reminisced about George and Martha Black visiting his parents in Montreal in the mid 1950s, when he was a young lad of 10. He remembers they went out for dinner, which was a rare occasion, and that George was a "fun guy," who got along well with his parents. It was obvious that they lived life to the fullest. But the significance of that visit and of the special guests did not impress the 10-yearold, and he confessed that he learned more about George Black during his recent visit to Dawson City. Diane Black reinforced that, stating that it was important for Doug to get in touch with his history, to see the places and hear the stories connected with his illustrious relative.

A French novelist visited the Source of her Inspiration

Suppose you had written a novel in which a certain part of the world played a major part. You had done your research carefully and you were convinced that you had done justice to the facts of history and geography. But you were intrigued by the place about which you had read and seen so much and decided that you needed to see it at last, before the book was published.

That is exactly the situation that brought Anne-Marie Garat an her travelling companions, Genevieve Houssay, Karine Henry, and Bernard Lajot to Dawson City in the middle of July.

Anne-Marie Garat is a French novelist. Well known in her native land, she has been the recipient of such awards as the Prix Femina and the Marguerite Audoux award for her novels. In addition to writing, she has taught cinema and photography at the Université de Paris.

Beginning in 1984, she has produced a series of novels connected by her examination of the strands of history that were woven through the 20th century between the First and Second World Wars, with some material attached to these narratives at either end.

Her work is described on various websites as being psychological in nature and featuring strong female characters.

Her latest novel, La Source, will be launched in France at Karine Henry's independent book store, Comme Un Roman, in Paris, this coming August.

The book spans the entire length of the century about which Garat's books have been concerned. Lottie, an old woman in her nineties, tells her life story to a professor named Mauduit, who has actually come there to obtain permission for his sociology students to delve into the archives of this small village.

What he discovers in Lottie, is a complex life story that actually begins in Dawson City, for she is the mixed-blood daughter of a French Gold Rush lumber merchant and a Hän woman. Transported to France at an early age in 1904, she had been abandoned by her father and had lived out her life there.

She is able to show Mauduit a document, which establishes that this man, known by the surname of One Ear, as her father.

Part of the story involves a trip from the area of Ardenne to Dawson City, where some of the facts of Lottie's past are finally made clear to her.

'The novel explains this story," said Garat, "what happened between this one man, who is the father, and the Hän woman, nearly a century ago."

In addition to the paternity document, there is a photograph of the man, holding the baby, in front of a log cabin in Dawson. Finally, Lottie has a snow globe that contains a model of this little cabin, with snow on the roof and a tree out front.

In their search for the facts the travellers spend some time in Whitehorse with a stampeder who once owned a hotel in Dawson and is able to tell them a lot about the Gold Rush as well as some of the personal history of Lottie's parents.

Some of the promotional material about the book indicates that there may be a bit of a murder mystery wrapped up with the history.

"My friends, who are with me, they said 'we have to go to Dawson now'. We want to look if the reality is the same thing I described and imagined."

So they came to Whitehorse, rented a car for the trip to Dawson, and planned to stay several days in the middle of the month. Their rented SUV was to take them to Tombstone and up Bonanza Creek. They had been to the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre and were most impressed by the offering there. They planned to see Dredge No. 4 and take all the Parks Tours that were offered in French.

They were eager to talk, but their English was marginal (though better than this reporter's French) and the conversation was often a case of all four visitors searching for the right words to convey their enthusiasm for everything they had seen and to ask a lot of questions.

Garat and Henry (who was intrigued by the number of people here with that same last name) made it clear that they were most impressed with the town and the ambiance that they said they had begun to feel as soon as they arrived. In spite of the language barrier they felt welcome here.

They were impressed that the town felt both alive and historical, and were totally in tune with Pierre Berton's description of Dawson as a "living historical community". They had all seen the film "City of Gold" on the National Film Board's website.

"Our feeling, after 24 hours," said Garat, "is that Dawson is really a living city. It's not in the past, but the past is very present, not as a museum."

"It's easy to enter in the reality of the place," said

Henry, "the humanity of the place. We can feel the personality of the town and spirit, because there is a spirit. It's very realistic here."

From Dawson their plan was to drive the Top of the World/Taylor Highway, and then down the Alaska Highway to Haines Junction. From there they were scheduled to drive to Haines, take the ferry to Skagway and then drive back to Whitehorse.

Dealing with grief has been a major theme in Jacob Scheier's writing over the last number of years, particularly in his poetry, and he has developed this interest further by offering workshop sessions in dealing with grief through writing.

His Governor General's Award winning collection of poems. More to Keep Us Warm, was inspired by the death of his mother, the poet Libby Scheier, in 2002, though it took him a number of years to process the experience.

By 2005 he had checked himself into a Toronto psych ward in hopes of finding some relief from his deep depression, a problem further complicated by a rare psychiatric disorder called hallucinogen persisting perception disorder, or HPPD.

This latter problem was, as he has admitted in his e-book memoir, the end result of rigorous experimenting with recreational drugs in his teen years. He specifies at least 200 hits of acid and more than 60 tablets of ecstasy in his memoir, My Never-Ending Acid Trip: Why I Still Hallucinate Years After Taking LSD.

He has this problem under control now, largely as a result of an old fashioned classical "talking cure", which he discovered after finding that pharmacological interventions were making him worse.

So – talking and writing about grief and related problems comes naturally to him. In addition to a well-received public reading at the Dawson Community Library, he offered a grief workshop session.

The evening session drew a small number of attendees, mostly women, which he says is "the usual demographic" for this sort of thing.

He was also invited to hold a larger session, a entire weekend, for Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in elders at the R22, or Land of Plenty, retreat out on the North Fork Road off the Dempster Highway. He says that was very satisfying and enriching.

"It was a very special experience," he said, "and I felt very grateful that they were willing to trust me and open up to me the way they did."

Scheier's experience with Berton House tends to confirm that the place is just generally known as a good program in the literary community. He can't recall when he first heard of it, but it had been in his awareness for several years.

His spring residency was his second attempt to apply here. He's very happy that Pierre Berton's rules for the place are clear: the resident doesn't necessarily have to finish the project he or she came to do, and may, in fact, produce nothing at all.

Jacob Scheier's Toronto friends would have found it hard to believe he was basking in +36 warmth on a Dawson City evening in mid June.

"Thank god for that," said Scheier, interviewed a few days before ending his residency in mid-June. His last week or so had been a bit rough for him, as he also suffers from a number of physical illnesses, but he was in good spirits and not really looking forward to leaving. In fact, he changed his departure plans several times in the last week, moving from flying Air North to taking the Husky Bus and finally getting a ride with a friend.

His actual project was to investigate the reality of the Jewish experience in a place where there wasn't much actual Jewishness to be found. Growing up with parents who were practicing Marxists and non-practicing Jews, he has no particular attachment to the faith and the culture when he is at home in Toronto, but he has found that when he leaves his regular haunts, his Jewish heritage somehow seems more important.

We had visited Dawson's Jewish graveyard on Mary McLeod Road early on in his stay, slogging through the snow to get there. He visited the site a number of times after the snow was gone, and made a point to contact every person of Jewish background that he could find while he was here.

"I envisioned a kind of personal essay hybrid piece of writing on what it means to me to be a Jewish person in communities that have very few other Jewish people."

This idea had come to him while teaching at a university in Brandon, Manitoba, and firmed up while doing a residency in St. Thomas, Ontario.

"In Toronto, where there's a very large Jewish community, I'm very secular," he said. "I don't practice in any way. In those other places, I somehow had a stronger awareness of this identity; it had more meaning."

Finding that there had been a Jewish presence in the territory during the Gold Rush, and that there was less now, stimulated part of his thinking. Considering how hard it would have been for those early miners to even consider following strict kosher dietary rules was another strand.

"I mean, basically, if you came here then, you were deciding not to follow those rules," he said.

"I have a lot of material now. research and interviews, but it's nowhere near being finished. I have the components, but the focus has shifted."

Whereas he had been planning to look at the Jewish Yukoners' experience, he's found that it's too broad, too individualistic, which is rather an odd thing to say about an ethnic culture that has survived by having a lot of rules to follow.

"As this time is ending, I've finally figured out what it was that I was writing about, which was more about me. It's me who's obsessed with the question, not other people.

"A lot of it has to do with my upbringing. I was raised by Marxist-Leninists. There was the odd menorah lighting as well as the odd Christmas tree decorating – maybe kind of to fit in, but I'm not even sure about that."

His mother did go through a spiritual period when Scheier was a teenager. He rejected it at the time, but her death left him with a lot of unresolved issues, a lot of ambiguity that he's trying to work through.

He likens it somewhat to the exile experience of the Jewish people, that seemed to strengthen the sense of identity when they were removed from the land.

"I've moved around a lot." he said.

His three months in the Yukon may not have given him the answers he thought he might find here, but he feels that it has helped him to refine the questions.

Another moving experience ends well in Dawson

Story & Photos By Dan Davidson

There was a small crowd at the corner of Seventh Ave. and Queen St. on Saturday, June 26, as Lachappelle House inched its way up Eighth Avenue and began the painstaking process of rounding that tight corner and coming down that steep hill on Queen Street to find its new foundation pad.

The crowd was mostly locals who had been hearing Jeremy Lancaster getting the new site ready for several days. Some of them had also seen the dump truck precariously balanced its side when it tipped after another driver misjudged the angle and the weight while dumping the load of foundation gravel. Fortunately he wasn't hurt and there was no serious damage to the truck.

With gestures and barely audible shouted detections Donnie Flynn and his crew coaxed the house around the bend just where the telephone lines and other cables run down from the satellite reception dishes further up the hill. They avoided those lines and the power lines that run along Eighth and take this same corner.

They even managed to avoid the birch tree that Lancaster wanted to preserve for the view out his front windows once the long empty house is habitable again.

Moving buildings always attract spectators. I recall a late May evening when a Saturday graduation banquet was somewhat upstaged by another crew relocating the former youth centre to its present spot next to the former federal building and post office, both just across the street from the Robert Service School (RSS).

Sadly, both of these buildings remain empty hulks, blemishes on an otherwise attractive streetscape.

This isn't the case with most of Dawson's relocated buildings. The old fire hall turned into the attractive Ray of Sunshine, which serves as our purveyor of non-prescription medicines, toiletries and sundry goods.

Pieces of the original RSS were moved and became YTG's Property Management HQ, the Robert Service wing of the Westmark Hotel, and Jim Williams' tidy looking carpentry shop in the North End of town.

The Gold Village Chinese Restaurant at the corner of Craig and Fifth was moved down Fifth Avenue to make way for the Westmark's expansion on the east side of Fifth and, while its location isn't the best one for a busy eatery, it still serves a good purpose after some three name changes that I can think of.

One of the biggest moves was the shifting of the Fire Hall/City Hall from its location between the recreation centre and St. Mary's Catholic Church to its current spot on Front Street, within sight of the ferry landing. That was quite a day. The building had to move past the school to get to the end of the avenue, and we basically shut classes down and watched it go by from the front entrance steps and the boardwalk.

English is a pretty good subject to be teaching when events like this happen. I had my class write their own accounts of the move, making sure to appeal to all five senses and get lots of descriptive details.

The new site, which had formerly held some oil storage tanks, proved to have remediation problems that increased the cost of the project, and city hall had to work out of the second floor of the condemned former liquor store (now the Yukon School of Visual Arts - but that's another story) until the refurbished building was ready.

The new location was a pretty barren site when the town offices were finally able to move in, but now there is a park with some kids' toys, benches, flagpoles, and the newly opened annex to the fire department's museum. It's really quite a pleasant spot these days.

Our own house made an even longer journey, brought to this site from the asbestos mining town of Clinton Creek, more than 100 km away. Originally a modular bungalow, we've altered it beyond recognition, to the point where tourists walking by stop to take pictures of the two story house with the nice veranda.

Lachappelle House, or should I now say Lancaster House, will eventually inspire people to do the same, once it is restored to something like its former grandeur.

Jeremy Lancaster's "new" house finds its parking place with a lot of help.

Golfers enjoyed a fine weekend in Faro

The 18th Annual Faro Golf Tournament concluded with a banquet in the big blue and white tent at the club on the evening of July 18.

The tournament began on Thursday and attracted 29 four-person teams from all over the territory.

At least 250 people attended the banquet, which featured a sumptuous meal and more awards and door prizes than could easily be kept track of, even some that were for nongolfers who just came for the meal and camaraderie.

The Faro club is unique in that it snakes it way through most of the town site, using just about every available bit of green space to make up its nine holes. In its early years, prior to the 1985 mine closure (the first one), Faro was surrounded by blackened trees, the legacy of the fire that struck the town and its environs before the town and mine really got started.

Nowadays, however, the place is lush with greenery, and the course, which began to be developed in 1997, contributes to that impression.

The John Connelly Campground in town was fully booked for the weekend, and the overflow site along Lorna Blvd flew a May town site flag, indicating who was staying there.

In keeping with the fun spirit of the weekend, some of the golfers came in costumes, and the prizes for those teams were among the last given out that evening.

TWENTY YEARS AGO IN THE SUN

into Cameron's home is something like walking into a museum. You half expect someone to be charging admission at the door.

His Order of Canada award looms over a number of other awards and plaques on his kitchen wall. Tattered framed black-and-whites of burly men on horses decorate his living room. A letter from the Governor General of Canada wishing he and his wife Martha well on their diamond anniversary sits framed next to a row of RCMP medals.

Ninety-five-year-old G.I. "Cam" Cameron is somewhat of an important artifact himself. "I guess I'm older than all of this stuff," he says grin-

Mr. Cameron is the oldest living member of the Yukon RCMP. And, with the celebration of the RCMP's 100th year in the Yukon, he has been thrust into their self-constructed spotlight.

YAC leaves Dawson

BY TIMOTHY SAWA

There seems to be more than one reason why the Yukon Anniversaries Commission is leaving Dawson City. And it's who you ask that determines which reason you

After nearly two years in

Dawson City it was decided unanimously at the group's June 19 AGM, according to Marvin Taylor, the Chair of YAC's board of directors, to move its offices to White-

Taylor said it was purely a decision of convenience.

The group, funded by the Yukon

Territorial Government was developed to serve the entire territory in the celebration of the centennials, he said, and it just did not make sense to be based in Dawson.

"So very ineffective, so very inefficient," Taylor said about the office in Dawson. "Also, all the departments we have to deal with are here(in Whitehorse) and most of the executive board is here too." But Dawson City's representative on the YAC board, Boyd Gillis, said it was far more complicated than

Gillis, also the chairperson for the Klondyke Centennial Society, Dawson City's own planning group formed to deal with the centennials, said the two groups just couldn't

According to Gillis the tension between the societies was a factor in the decision to relocate.

"There were some innuendoes too," he said. "I still strongly feel ♦ See 'Political' on page 2

Coming up at KIAC: The tradition lives on

By Deirdre Mulcahy

This year marks the 4th edition of the Dawson Daily News Print & Publishing Symposium, happening August 13th and 14th, during the bustling Yukon Riverside Arts Festival weekend. It's an event that highlights the history and future of print using traditional tools to explore old & contemporary methods. It will involve artist talks, open studios, interactive demonstrations, and publication projects featuring artists from across Canada, such as Todd Stewart (Montreal, QC), Emily Davidson (Halifax, NS) and Peter Braune (Granville Island, BC).

During the symposium there will also be four workshops, two on each day of the weekend, that allow you to explore printmaking with established artists John Steins and Joyce Majiski. The workshops will be drop-in style and offered at the cost of materials. It's an event made possible by the Dawson City Community Library, the Klondike Institute of Art & Culture, and Parks Canada with the financial support of the Yukon Arts Fund.

The creative pre-event "Dawson Daily News Postcard Story Competition" challenges storytellers to grab a postcard, 150 words and write a story on the theme of "Gone Wild". The competition offers the prize of $250 (that's more than a dollar a word) and the winner's postcard will be read at the sympo-

For further information on both the symposium and the competition check out http://www.kiac.ca/artsfestival/print-symposium/ and be sure to look out for the program for 15th Annual Yukon Riverside Arts Festival, happening August 13th-16th, 2015.

Pillars of Success: Success Is a Discipline

by Mo Caley-Verdonk

What does 'success' mean to you? For many, it's about accomplishing something in one steady stream--or as I like to say, going from A to Z in one step.

There's a mystique around 'being successful'. When you look at people who are achieving their goals and contributing fully to the world around them, it's tempting to believe a secret superpower is responsible. Or that there's some kind of 'success gene' at work.

But the truth is, success isn't one big life-changing moment. We have grown accustomed to seeing movies and reading articles about high-performers who have achieved amazing things, and they all seem to have this ONE moment when EVERYTHING changed.

The truth is, that's just storytelling. Real life doesn't have set beginnings and endings, with a major climax and breakthrough in Act II. In real life, success isn't one superstar moment. It's a path, a journey, a habit, and indeed, a few simple disciplines.

What are the disciplines of success?

- Setting goals.
- · Creating a plan.
- Training yourself to take action again and again.
- Course-correcting along the way.
- Facing your fears—and continuing to press on.
- Celebrating your progress, however small. And,
- Being grateful for all that you already have and have already achieved.

So, I invite you to take a moment to ask yourself: what are your disciplines of success? What habits can you develop (or what steps can you take) to help you create even more success in your life?

Now...Practice Winning Everyday

Have you ever wondered about the beginning of a habit? Because each new habit, each change of perspective, and every goal you set and achieve can be the difference between a life of mediocrity... and a life of success.

The truth is, life is full of choices and when I gently remind myself that I don't need to know all the details, I'm much more likely to experience success. Indeed, life is full of choices. Every one of these choices supports a pattern, and over time, those patterns become habits.

When you choose to give up, compromise your integrity and make choices you don't feel 100% good about, you are setting yourself up for failure. If you do that enough times, failure becomes a habit, and habits are hard to break.

On the other hand, when you choose to persevere, stay true to your intentions and make choices that support your growth, you create instant victories for yourself. When you repeat those choices every day, you establish positive patterns, and before long, winning becomes your way of life.

You don't have to push yourself like an Olympic athlete, or restrict your diet and activities to the point of misery. All you have to do to develop the lifestyle of a winner is to write down your goals and choose to move toward them. Remember, success is a discipline! Every day you can make choices that will help you achieve your goals. Every day you can take one step toward success.

Every day you can choose to be a winner. I love this quote by Henry Ford "If you think you can, you can. If you think you can't, you can't. Both are true."

What's your familiar?

 You want to make winning choices and are trying, but it just seems so difficult

- You don't know if you're worth it, or deserving of achieving success
- You're not even totally sure what success really is
- You ignore the topic of success and goal setting altogether, don't discuss it, don't think about it, divert the conversation whenever someone brings it up
- Your critical voice and your past failures keep getting in the way
- You procrastinate, selfsabotage and live half the live you know you were meant to live

Do any of these sound like you? If so, then you have two choices:

A. Stay stuck

B. Do something to change these familiar beliefs, these patterns of self-sabotage, and break free of the bonds that have been holding you back for way too long.

Yes, it is that simple.

And YES it is possible to make winning choices every day!

What will you do to be a winner today?

Please take the time to celebrate your wins! Not only will this help you feel great (maybe a little awkward at first) acknowledging and celebrating will help to build the 'winner' momentum. This is such an important piece of the puzzle.

For the past several years I've been living life in the winner's momentum--and it's not always felt comfortable. I've definitely experienced some awkwardness and frustrations along the way. Since discovering a way to reconnect with my winning side -- my confident and fearlessly determined side -- my willingness to step out of my comfort zone and take leaps of faith has increased.

Without doubt, I've been stepping into the unknown, feeling wobbly and uncertain at times while continuing to make choices that help me to achieve my goals and live a fulfilling and vibrant life.

And, I'm passionate about sharing this wealth of practice and knowledge with others.

GOOD NEWS!

I have developed programs that are structured on RESULTS and sustainable CHANGE -- I was fed up with chasing promises and it wasn't until I discovered a couple of key practices, and consistently used them that my life changed.

If you're someone who is tired of being stuck in a rut and are ready to discover the best way to increase your energy, reduce your stress and have more fun and fulfillment in your life, then I'm excited to hear from you!

Let winning become your way of life!

To Your Success,

Mo

Visual, literary and performing artists receive Advanced Artist Awards

WHITEHORSE (July 21, 2015) —Eleven established Yukon artists are sharing $75,000 through the Yukon government's Advanced Artist Award. Projects supported through this fund include arts research, artistic skills development and the creation of new work in a wide range of creative media.

"The support provided to artists through the Advanced Artist Award is important to Yukon government, to the arts community and to Yukon as a whole," Minister of Tourism and Culture Elaine Taylor said. "The innovative work produced by these artists forms the basis for the wide array of creative cultural activity available that is enjoyed by both locals and visitors in Yukon."

Filmmaker Dennis Allen will use his $10,000 award to write a screenplay of the original story The Ballad of Sonny Crow, a fictional account of a long-forgotten songwriter whose song falls into the wrong hands.

"I want to thank the Advanced Artist Awards jury and staff for giving me the opportunity to tell this very personal and meaningful story," Allen said.

Writer Christina Brobby is working on a memoir about her experience finding her birth family entitled Who Do You Think You Are? An award of $5,000 will enable her to continue working with her editor and attend a writing residency to develop the next draft of her manuscript.

"I am thrilled to be a recipient of the Advanced Artist Award; it gives me the means to take my manuscript to the next level," Brobby said. "Thank you to the jury members for their support and for taking time out of their busy lives to read my application."

Sarah McHugh will receive $5,000 to expand a traditional garment sewing practice by making two extra-large coats (male and female styles) using traditional beaver and sealskin.

The Advanced Artist Award helps senior-level artists with innovative projects, travel or educational activities that contribute to their personal artistic development and to their community. The award aims to encourage artistic creativity, skills, work and talent.

The award is funded by Lotteries Yukon and is administered by the Department of Tourism and Culture. Submissions are adjudicated by a jury of professional visual, literary and performing artists. There are two intakes each year for Advanced Artist Award applications; the next deadline is October 1.
