Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Told By Miners to Move Neighborhood

The Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Subdivision, shot from Crocus Bluff in 2014. There have been additional buildings since then, as well as extensive site preparation for a planned addition.

A pair of miners have demanded that the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in (TH) First Nation remove families, homes and infrastructure from the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Subdivision in order that the area can be mined.

Since 2001 the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in have been establishing a substantial subdivision in their residential settlement lands just north of the Ogilvie Bridge over the Klondike River. The Tr'ondëk Subdivision is part of the Land Claims settlement classified as C-4, and so the subdivision tends to be locally known as C-4. This is quite ironic, since the growth in the number of homes in the area has been nothing short of explosive over the 15 year period.

There are currently 31 buildings on the site, a mixture of single family and multi-family dwellings that house some 40 families. Aside from the buildings there is of course, the sewer, water and power infrastructure, and the landscaping associated with people's homes.

In addition, TH spent last summer preparing the ground and laying in the infrastructure for a planned expansion of the subdivision. The area is also the site of various storage and work buildings at the south end of the lot.

In late June of this year, TH was issued a July 15 deadline by the claim holders, Michel Vincent and Mike Heydorf, to remove all buildings, power lines, sewer and water lines, survey stakes and any other possessions from C-4.

TH advised the claim holders they would have to conform to the provisions of the Yukon's mining legislation, including requirements to provide security and compensation, before any mining activities could be undertaken.

Just where all those buildings could be relocated until after the mining was completed, and where the people who reside in them could live, in a town that is chronically short of housing, are among the more obvious issues.

In mid-August, TH was notified that the Yukon Surface Rights Board had received an application requesting an "order" that would compel the First Nation to comply with the request to vacate the land.

Just how such a demand will be viewed when it bumps up against the Umbrella Final Agreement and the local Claims Final Agreement is another major issue.

The First Nation does not intend to cooperate with this demand, should the Surface Right accede to this request by the miners. Chief Robert Joseph cites this as just another reason why the territory's mining legislation needs to be brought up to date.

"We are optimistic we'll succeed in saving our residential neighborhood and retain our settlement land that we fought so hard for," said Chief Joseph.

"But the fact this conflict exists in the first place is yet another indication we need renewed mining legislation and regulations that reflect modern values." Chief Joseph also noted the Klondike Plateau is covered in mining claims. Other residents could find themselves in this situation."

The area was historically mined in the early 1900s, with construction of the neighborhood beginning in 2001. TH has invested an estimated $10-$15 million dollars in planning, development, and construction of the subdivision over the last 15 years, after rebuilding the land in question from the tailings that were left from the mining era. More housing construction was planned for next summer.

Miners' ultimatum was avoidable, chief says By Chuck Tobin on September

By Chuck Tobin on September 16, 2016 Originally in the Whitehorse Star

Used with permission

It's up to the Yukon government to resolve two major disputes over land use in Dawson City, says Chief Roberta Joseph of the Tr'ondek Hwech'in.

The chief said in an interview Wednesday the evolving conflict between a 15-year-old C-4 subdivision development by the First Nation and two placer miners who want to mine their placer claims beneath the subdivision should never have happened in the first place.

It's a matter that should have been flushed out by territorial and federal negotiators back in days of land claim negotiations, the chief suggested.

She said failing that, the Yukon government did have an obligation under the 2001 Devolution Transfer Agreement to update territorial legislation so that it would be consistent with land claim agreements.

That hasn't happened, and it should have, she said.

Joseph said dealing with outdated mining legislation is part of the issue surrounding the conflict between the subdivision development and the interests of the placer miners

The miners have asked the Yukon's Surface Rights Board to order the removal of the subdivision and all associated infrastructure to allow mining to proceed.

Under the land claim process, the right to access and mine existing claims was protected, the miners point out in the application to the board.

The board's chair has informed the miners their application is incomplete, and he's given them until the end of October to provide the additional information required.

The chief said when the First Nation selected the parcel of Category B settlement land – ownership of surface rights only – it knew there were claims beneath.

The First Nation also knew it had the right to develop a subdivision on the land, and that's exactly what it did for the benefit of the First Nation, its citizens and Dawson City as a whole, she said.

Joseph said it's hard to imagine that they're even having to address this issue within the community of Dawson, and that this matter has not been resolved in the past 15 years, when the conflict first arose.

The Yukon government needs to address the issue of conflicting legislation, she

Farr sprints into Klondike race as Yukon NDP candidate

DAWSON CITY (September 15, 2016) City of Dawson council member and former Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in First Nation's deputy chief Jay Farr has been nominated as the Yukon NDP's candidate to run in the riding of Klondike. Farr's political experience and deep roots in the community will make Klondike one of the most watched races in this fall's election.

Members of the Klondike NDP acclaimed Farr at a meeting at the Legion Hall tonight where the enthusiasm for Farr's candidacy was apparent among the attendees.

Farr has worked hard to represent the citizens of TH and Dawson as an elected official and feels ready to take that to the next level by becoming an MLA under Premier Liz Hanson.

"I have been impressed and encouraged by the Yukon NDP's strong and measured approach to the issues: the environment, government to government relations, and most recently, the mining debacle at C4" said Farr. "As a Yukon NDP MLA, I want to be a part of positive new government that will work with partners like municipalities and First Nation governments to put forward solutions to these problems."

"The Yukon NDP has long been a leader in the territory, as the only party that has unequivocally supported the Final Recommended Peel Watershed Land Use Plan from day one and has taken a principled position against the use of hydraulic fracturing in the territory."

Party leader Liz Hanson was pleased to add yet another strong candidate to the Yukon NDP roster. "Jay brings a depth of experience as an elected official, and with such deep roots in the community, he'll make an excellent representative for all residents of the Klondike."

Brad Whitelaw acclaimed as candidate for Klondike

DAWSON CITY (September 15, 2016) Brad Whitelaw has been acclaimed as the Yukon Party candidate for the riding of Klondike in the upcoming territorial election.

"I'm honoured and excited to have the chance to be able to represent the residents of Klondike," Whitelaw said. "I look forward to hearing everyone's priorities for the future. I feel that my many years spent in business in our community have given me a solid understanding of Dawson's economy and challenges."

Brad owns the Triple J Hotel as well as owns and operates the Klondike Spirit. He is a member of the Canadian Rangers and has volunteered in many different capacities over the years. He is the proud father of two daughters who he raised in Dawson City.

Joseph said in another brewing controversy over a placer mining proposal on 34 claims between the Dome Road subdivision and the Klondike River, the situation should have also been addressed years ago.

The application is currently before the Yukon Environmental and Socioeconomic Assessment Board.

The Tr'ondek Hwech'in, the City of Dawson, and several community members have provided submissions to the assessment board opposing the project, with particular concern about the potential impact on the network of established cross-country ski trails.

There's also the general concern of having industrial activity in close proximity to the Dome Road country residential subdivision, which includes lots owned by the Tr'ondek Hwech'in, and what the proposal means for the subdivision's future expansion.

The miner and his agent have indicated the claims are legally registered, they have a right to mine them and some of them have been mined in recent years.

If any ski trails are destroyed by future mining and exploration, they've said they are willing to work with the local ski club to rough in alternate trails.

They note the claims were there before the ski trails, and in fact the ski trails are built on old exploration trails.

The claims were also well established before the City of Dawson expanded its municipal boundaries to include the area, they point out.

The chief said the conflict is another example of how a proactive territorial government could have avoided the standoff.

Before approving the municipal boundary expansion, the government should have expropriated the claims, paid the miners for their lost opportunity and revenue, and that would have been that, Joseph said.

The chief said the trails are important to the residents. Residents who live within the city boundaries, who have invested in their community, their properties and their homes, expect to live in peace and comfort, she said.

"It's not fair that the residents of today have to deal with that, and the community as a whole."

Joseph said outdated mining legislation needs modernizing to provide for the needs of today's communities.

Funding announced for new, affordable housing in downtown Dawson

Joint news release: YTG and Government of Canada

DAWSON (September 9, 2016) —The Klondike Development Organization has been awarded $900,000 in financial support from the Government of Canada and Yukon Housing Corporation for the construction of an 8-unit affordable housing project in downtown Dawson.

The new development will be a two-storey building that will include six one-bedroom units of approximately 480 square feet in size, and two two-bedroom units of approximately 600 square feet in size.

"Our government remains committed to making significant investments in affordable housing, strengthening Canadian communities and helping create jobs and grow the middle class," Member of Parliament for Yukon Larry Bagnell said, on behalf of the Honourable Jean-Yves Duclos, Minister of Families, Children and Social Development and Minister Responsible for Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation. "With our partners, we are providing an affordable place for individuals and families to live and grow, and building a strong foundation for a sustainable economic future. Congratulations to everyone involved in this new development."

"The Yukon government's investment in this project will improve affordable housing options in Dawson," Minister responsible for Yukon Housing Corporation Stacey Hassard said. "The Yukon Housing Corporation values federal support to improve the availability and quality of affordable housing projects for Yukoners. This project will result in economic stimulus, support local business, provide employment and fill a significant housing need."

This funding is being provided through the Municipal Matching Grant Program and the Affordable Rental Construction Program. These programs are supported by funding from the Yukon Housing Corporation and Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, under the Investment in Affordable Housing and the Social Infrastructure Fund.

"This financing is welcome and will help us realize our vision of locally built and community owned housing, so that all our residents can contribute to Dawson's growing economy," Klondike Development Organization president Brian Stethem said.

CMHC has been helping Canadians meet their housing needs for more than 70 years. As Canada's authority on housing, CMHC contributes to the stability of the housing market and financial system, provides support for Canadians in housing need, and offers unbiased housing research and advice to Canadian governments, consumers and the housing industry. Prudent risk management, strong corporate governance and transparency are cornerstones of CMHC's operations.

The Yukon Housing
Corporation was established in 1972 under the Housing Corporation Act. Yukon Housing Corporation has a broad mandate to address the housing needs of Yukoners, and develops and administers a variety of programs and services that supports this mandate, including loans, grants, building science research, education programs, staff housing, and social housing.

The conflict involving the C-4 subdivision and the area below Dome Road subdivision are certainly not the only conflicts involving Tr'ondek Hwech'in settlement land and mining claims, she noted.

The chief said while it is hard in reality to imagine the Surface Rights Board ordering the removal of the C-4 subdivision, the fact there is an application before the board is very much real.

The First Nation will now wait to see how the miners respond to the request for additional information before deciding how to proceed, she

The Tr'ondek Hwech'in lawyer has already sent a letter to the miners pointing out under the legislation, if miners want to access claims beneath property owned by a third party, they'll need to post adequate security and compensation.

Joseph said if the Surface Rights Board decides the miners have a right to mine, the security will be significant.

The matter of the C-4 subdivision along the Klondike Highway heading into Dawson first went to the board in 2002, though the parties never did pursue the issue to the hearing stage.

There was never a resolution. Documentation indicates while the First Nation was offering $10,000 to buy out the mining rights, the miners wanted $80,000.

Under the legislation, an order by the Surface Rights Board has the same authority as an order by the Yukon Supreme Court.

Uffish Thoughts: The C-4 Situation Demands More Forward Thinking

So, I'm somewhat more than halfway home from a trip to the Maritimes, stopping off to visit my cousin in Calgary, when this press release arrives in my mail from the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in.

The contents are amazing. Two miners with claims staked on land that includes the area currently occupied by the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Subdivision (usually referred to here as C-4, which I have been told is a Land Claims designation for settlement land) have decided it's time to start mining.

TH has been told it's required to remove the buildings, the sewer and water lines, the power poles and fire hydrants in order to facilitate this demand. Should that include all the backfill that was used to replace the gravel tailings piles, which would have made for poor building foundations?

No mention is made of where the buildings should be warehoused in the interim, or where the people living in them should be relocated in a town which is already short of housing stock

My reaction to reading this is so obvious that my relatives ask me what is wrong. I try to explain it to them and they are flabbergasted. It makes no sense to them at all.

Happily, as the days go by, it appears that this part of the miners' demands makes no sense to a lot of people.

The former executive director of the Klondike Placer Miners Association, Randy Clarkson, is quoted in the Yukon News as saying that any relocation of those 31 houses would be unlikely.

Mike McDougall, the current president of the KPMA, is quoted in the Whitehorse Star as saying: "Dozens of families have made the lands in question their homes for many years now. It is preposterous to suggest that they should have to move after how much has transpired, or how little as the case may be."

Opposition politicians have weighed in with their opinions, blaming the current government, which has so far declined to comment on the matter.

The appropriate regulatory body, the Surface Rights Board, has told the miners there are some very important issues they have not addressed in their project request, and has given them until sometime in October to provide that information.

That means the issue will certainly be reactivated in the middle of the coming territorial election campaign, which should make for an interesting public debate.

Since the claims were staked in 1988, before the boundaries of the City of Dawson were expanded, before the local Final Land Claim Agreement was signed, and before TH began to flatten and excavate the tailings piles that used to be in that location in preparation for building the first lot of homes, the claims are grandfathered under the existing legislation and some manner of compensation will have to be decided upon.

The problem should never have got this far along. As with the Slinky Mine situation on the bench beside the Dome Road (more or less across the highway from C-4) steps should have been taken to extinguish these claims two decades ago. It seems obvious that some sort of compensation would have been required, but I can't think that it's reasonable to expect that to be in the realm of the "might have beens" that mining the area might have produced.

Figure out what the claim holder has spent on the claim to date, including fees and assessment costs, add some percentage to that amount and call it quits. Or perhaps grant them the use of a claim in another location.

And, for Pete's sake, if you solve a problem on one side of a hill by tossing in a free road building project, as happened in the case of the Slinky Mine, make it part of the deal that the claims on the other side of the hill go away too, so that you don't have a variation of the same problem before the first one has even been settled.

I'll go out on a bit of a limb here and suggest that, just as allowing new staking to occur within municipal boundaries is a bad idea, not finding a way of extinguishing grandfathered claims is equally bad. As communities grow, it is inevitable that their boundaries will expand, and that these land use conflicts will continue to occur. As part of planning for the future, this potential for disharmony needs to be considered. Just ignoring the problem and hoping it will go away hasn't worked so far.

LETTER: Thanks for your trails support

Greetings all,

Thank you to all of you who wrote in comments and concerns about the potential damage to ski trails and quality of life for Dawsonites should this proposal go ahead as planned. Because of you and excellent submissions from the City of Dawson, Tr'ondek Hwech''in and Whitehorse Cross Country Ski Club among others, YESAB's Dawson office has issued an information request asking the proponent to provide more details on how he intends to address the loss of existing ski trails. To quote:

"Please provide a detailed plan that clearly outlines how the proposed development of new trails will effectively mitigate impacts from the loss of the existing trails," it reads.

"Your response must include consideration of comments submitted during SVI (seeking views and information) that pertain to this value, and will address issues such as forest retention, wind buffers, trail slope, noise impacts, safety, summer and winter use, as well as timelines for mining and new trail development."

The assessment board has given Darrell Carey, the proponent, until Oct. 11 to either submit the information or tell staff when he plans to submit it. If you would like to keep informed on this process go to www.yesabregistry.ca.

One step at a time but this is good news!

There's lots of blame to be shared for the C-4 situation

Recently there has been much wringing of hands and cries of "Something must be done!" regarding overlapping land tenure issues among mineral claim holders and First Nation settlement land.

Recently there has been much wringing of hands and cries of "Something must be done!" regarding overlapping land tenure issues among mineral claim holders and First Nation settlement land.

So much so, that it makes me wonder if there is an election looming.

Calls have been made to update Yukon's "century-old" mining legislation, but our legislation is not at fault here.

In fact, our legislation has constantly been updated throughout the years, making it among the most progressive in the world, involving state-of-the-art environmental screening and reclamation techniques and ensuring community and First Nation input

Furthermore, our current cutting-edge legislation already allows for a process to resolve these disputes.

But more on that in a moment. There has also been criticism that "the government" hasn't done anything to resolve this

Perhaps the Yukon Party government could have done something to address this conflict over their last three terms in power.

But neither the claim holders nor the First Nation actively lobbied them to intervene.

The Yukon government did not address this matter when it was first raised in 2002 under the Liberal party government either.

Nor did the New Democratic Party government address it in 1998 when the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Final Agreement was signed and the potential for this conflict was formalized.

Furthermore, the First Nation

did not pursue a settlement with the claim holders prior to proceeding with investing millions of dollars in their residential development.

And the claim holders have done nothing to conclude their negotiations with the First Nation since they were last initiated – 14 years ago.

So if there is an appetite to place blame somewhere, there are ample parties to share it.

The origins of this conflict go back to the land selections and negotiations that preceded the signing of the historic Umbrella Final Agreement (UFA), and yet the federal government's negotiators chose not to address it then either.

However, the potential for such conflict to arise was recognized then, and that is why the Yukon Surface Rights Board was created, enshrined in the UFA.

The board was created to address these very issues and the current conflict is before them for their consideration.

Dozens of families have made the lands in question their homes for many years now. It is preposterous to suggest that they should have to move after how much has transpired, or how little as the case may be.

But the claims in question were staked in 1988, 10 years before the land claim agreement was signed, and have been kept in good standing since.

While it may be an inconvenient truth for some, that means there is likely some compensation in order for the claim holders who are unable to access their legally acquired interests.

Just how much compensation is among the matters to be considered by the Surface Rights Board.

I suggest the politicos and pundits do their job and focus their energy on providing the health care, education and employment opportunities our children require to succeed, and let the Surface Rights Board and the UFA do theirs.

They say Charlie Phillips was the last to leave,
But I know that isn't true.
Folks here believe what they want to believe,
And they're ready to grieve on cue.

I know Charlie Phillips was the first to set sail,
And not just because he left me.
His mum back in England knows good and well
The first time that he crossed the sea.

For winter patrols he took off for the snow; In spring it was the Chisana Trail. He'd mount his horse and away he'd go-No need to forward his mail.

There was Moose Lodge and poker and the other girl,
But I thought that he loved me the best.
I learned I was wrong when he got caught in the whirl,
And signed up for the War with the rest.

Others shipped out for training and battle, But the Mounties needed Charlie to stay. Finally, in March, he hopped off his saddle. He kissed me and stage-coached away.

One letter from Africa was all that I got.
One letter and nothing more.
And later I heard that he and Jack Watt
Were killed on distant shores.

They say Charlie Phillips was the first to die, And I think that's probably true. No need for the girl left behind to ask why. He was Yukon, through and through.

Demolition of mcdonald lodge disappointing but not surprising

By Sandy Silver, Klondike

It is disappointing, but not a surprise, to see the Yukon Party issue a tender in the last days of its mandate to demolish the old McDonald Lodge. It is another example of the government saying one thing and then doing another.

On May 8th, 2013, I introduced the following motion in the Legislative Assembly:

"THAT this House urges the Government of Yukon to work with non-governmental organizations and the private sector in Dawson City to investigate the possibility of turning the existing McDonald Lodge into social housing."

With minor amendments, it was supported by all members of the assembly. The government even agreed to look into the possibility of using the building for other purposes. Three years later we see the commitments of that day were soon forgotten.

I've had several conversations with a local contractor who is quite familiar with the building and he thought it was salvageable under the right circumstances. Conversations about how much work would cost or what could be done never got off the ground because the government wasn't interested. The community of Dawson has always wanted to use it for something else, but this government seemed hell-bent on tearing it down, and with a tender soon being awarded, it seems that will happen shortly.

At the end of the day, I have been advocating since 2013 for the government to turn it over to the city or an NGO to refurbish. A Liberal government would be prepared to work with the City of Dawson to hand the building over to them and get to work on a new daycare, affordable housing or a student residence."

Klondike Placer Miners' Association partners with Ducks Unlimited Canada on wetlands reclamation research

KPMA Press Release

Dawson City - Mike McDougall, President of the Klondike Placer Miners' Association (KPMA) is pleased to announce a wetland reclamation research program to be undertaken in partnership with Ducks Unlimited Canada (DUC).

The $120,000 project is being jointly funded by Ducks Unlimited Canada, Environment & Climate Change Canada, the Yukon Government department of Energy, Mines & Resources and the Klondike Placer Miners' Association.

The objective of the program is to optimize existing wetland reclamation best management practices in order to increase the abundance and diversity of plants and animals in reclaimed wetlands. Desktop work with aerial photos and satellite imagery has already begun this season and land and helicopter based field work will commence in April 2017. An updated guide of best management practices for placer mined wetland reclamation is due to be published in early 2018.

"We at the KPMA are very pleased to partner with Ducks Unlimited Canada in this ground breaking research project and to continue our commitment to environmentally sustainable placer mining in the Yukon" said Mr. McDougall. "We welcome the opportunity to demonstrate to assessors, regulators and First Nations the benefits of utilizing best management practices for wetlands reclamation towards increasing the abundance and diversity of wildlife in the region."

The KPMA sponsored field and literature research in wetland reclamation practices previously in 2014 and 2015, and published a best management practices guide for reclaiming Yukon placer mined wetlands. The earlier research was undertaken by Anne Michon (MSc) and Randy Clarkson (P.Eng.) and forms a solid scientific basis for wetland reclamation work.

The Un-Comfort Zone: Tick-Tock... Talent, Opportunity, and Stuff

By Robert Evans Wilson, Jr.

Recently I watched the motion picture Underdogs. It is a formulaic, feel-good movie, about a losing high school football team that is motivated by a new coach to win a championship.

The coach teaches them the skills necessary to succeed, yet they still don't win any games. He realizes that what they lack is the hunger to win. So, he says to them, "My playing days are long past. These games are for you; and they are precious, because once you're done, you're done forever."

I thought of the precious few baseball games I played; how I wished I could have played more; and how the moments I remember and talk about the most were those games we won. I said aloud to the television screen, "You tell 'em, Coach!"

The coach played the Scarcity Card, and to me those were very moving words. I've lived long enough to have experienced regret, but I wondered if scarcity would motivate a high school kid who still has so much life in front

For people like me, who are more in touch with their mortality, it has become popular to write out a "bucket list" of things we want to do or accomplish. We are frequently reminded to live as if today is our last. However as a motivational mantra that saying has become cliche. The problem with overstated wisdom is that it loses its impact. Add to that the fact that most people don't believe - or don't want to consider - that they will die any time

Nevertheless, rock band, Nickelback puts this idea to music in their song If Today Was Your Last Day:

If today was your last day / and tomorrow was too late... / Would you live each moment like your last / So do whatever it takes / 'Cause you can't rewind a moment in this life.

I like their metaphor that there is no "rewind" in life. If you could actually know that today was your last day, obviously you wouldn't waste it. But, even if you did know, there's not a heck of a lot you could do in 24 hours.

I frequently encourage people to take more risks, or to take bold action, because I have personally found that doing so brings many benefits. I know that if people could genuinely perceive life as limited that they would take more risks. The trick is to pretend that it's your last day (which becomes easier the older you get) by consciously making an effort to cross off the items on your bucket list.

When scarcity is believable, we respond to it. Back in 1973, Johnny Carson, as the host of The Tonight Show, caused a run on toilet paper. He joked, "You know, we've got all sorts of shortages these days. But have you heard the latest? I'm not kidding. I saw it in the papers. There's a shortage of toilet paper." So many people heard it, believed it, and reacted to it that within a day, toilet paper disappeared from the shelves of supermarkets creating an actual shortage. Carson explained to his audience that it was all a joke, but the rumor continued, and it took weeks for toilet paper supplies to return to normal.

Advertisers love to use scarcity. That's why you so often hear advertising phrases such as "limited time offer" or "limited supplies available." It creates a sense of urgency, and a waiting list of people who we are moved to act.

Scarcity will move us when we're afraid we won't be able to get something we need (bread and milk when it snows), or when we fear we will miss out on an opportunity (Have you noticed how investors have rushed from stocks, to real estate, to gold, then back to stocks?). It also moves us when we want the exclusivity of owning something others can't.

The big curse of the starving artist is that he knows his work will become more valuable after he dies. Exactly when he no longer needs it.

Some companies have learned to get around this problem by intentionally limiting the release of their products to create a sense of scarcity. This is true for diamonds which are not rare gems as most of us believe. Instead they are a tightly controlled commodity which artificially drives up their

Italian auto-maker, Ferrari creates notoriety and demand by limiting their production to 7000 cars per year. This number increases the cache of owning one; and generates want to buy one.

"Use it or lose it," is another cliched nugget of wisdom that warns us not to waste precious talents, possessions, or opportunities. Again, advertisers love to remind us of what we stand to lose (think insurance ads), because it motivates us to buy.

All in all, I believe scarcity is a good thing. It teaches us to be productive and efficient with our time and resources; and hopefully guide us to end up with no regrets.

Mcdonald lodge more valuable to dawson city as student residence than rubble

By Liz Hanson, Yukon NDP Leader

The Yukon Government should put a halt on the demolition of McDonald Lodge until it has worked with the Yukon School of Visual Arts (SOVA) to explore the possibility of re-purposing it as a student residence.

The Klondike, and the people who live there, have a unique history. From the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in first peoples to the dreamers seeking their fortunes during the Gold Rush, the Dawson City area has nurtured, and sometimes forced, a spirit of ingenuity and creativity.

Nowhere is this more apparent than in the creation of Klondike Institute of Art and Culture (KIAC) and SOVA.

Almost twenty years ago, a group of local artists formed the Dawson City Arts Society (DCAS), a non-profit organization that sought to enrich the community's quality of life and create an art-based economy in Yukon. The society envisioned the opening of an art centre for the teaching, performance and exhibition of visual, performing, media and literary arts. Building on the history and success of largely volunteer-driven events like the Dawson City Music Festival they decided that art education based in Dawson City was an idea whose time had come. In 2007 the Yukon School of Visual Arts opened in Dawson City.

And in true Dawson fashion, they decided to resurrect several old and long-neglected buildings to become the core of what is now SOVA. SOVA has been clear over the past few years that one of the key challenges to the success and growth of its acclaimed arts program is the lack of affordable housing for students attracted to Dawson from across Canada.

In our community meetings in Dawson this issue has arisen time and again. When the decision was made to replace Mc-Donald Lodge, the Yukon NDP along with Dawson City citizens asked the Yukon government to consider repurposing the old McDonald Lodge for use as a student residence. Anyone who has ever visited the old lodge realizes that potential it holds for that purpose.

Despite committing to examining the potential of converting the old McDonald Lodge into housing units for SOVA, the Department of Highways and Public Works did not look at options for renovations and the Yukon government now plans to tear it down.

What is so different in 2016 from the fall of 1998, when the DCAS obtained the historic Odd Fellows Hall in Dawson City? Why is the Yukon Party government unwilling to work with the board of KIAC, the other community associations, and the private sector? Why not work with the community to encourage the same enthusiastic volunteer participation that resulted in the major renovations that successfully resurrected neglected structures?

The Yukon government can either be a partner to the ongoing success of KIAC and SOVA, or it can create a barrier to that success by removing the potential for a place for students to live while studying and living in Dawson City. A Yukon NDP government would work with - and not against - the community by exploring all options.

In the interest of good government and good, evidencebased decision-making, we call on the government to halt any action towards demolition of McDonald Lodge until all options have been considered.

The Dawson Legacy is recalled in Pictou

Story by Dan Davidson

The town of Pictou, Nova Scotia, honours the Dawsons, father and son, with a memorial located along one of its residential streets. George Mercer Dawson, after whom Dawson City was named, was born in this seaside community, The bilingual bronze plaque lists his major achievements and includes a mention of the town of Dawson. His father, John William, best known by his middle name, was also born here. A former elementary school, now replaced, once bore his name, as he was once the Supt. of Education, for the province before moving on to his better known work at McGill University. The replacement school could not be given the same name due to a law in the province which forbids the practice of naming public schools after famous people.

Given the Yukon's own problems with naming buildings (who recalls Jeckell Junior High?) and Nova Scotia's current issues with the mixed legacies of a chap named Cornwallis, it is perhaps easy to see how such laws are passed.

Betty Davidson used to walk past this school daily during her high school years at Pictou Academv.

Recipients of second Mental Wellness Innovation Fund Award named

YTG Press Release

WHITEHORSE (September 14, 2016) —The Government of Yukon and its First Nations partners are awarding a further $390,000 in Mental Wellness Innovation Fund support to 10 community projects.

"This second intake of the Mental Wellness Innovation Fund has been very successful," Minister of Health and Social Services Mike Nixon said. "The projects we are funding will focus on the needs of people across their lifespan and on building capacity in the communities, and I look forward to seeing the results."

Ten of the 25 applicants to the second intake of the innovation fund will receive funding.

Additionally, another four projects focusing on workforce capacity-building will receive funding from the Department of Health and Social Services. All proposals were reviewed by a committee consisting of representatives from the Council of Yukon First Nations, Kwanlin Dün First Nation and the Yukon government.

"Mental health is a huge priority for First Nations in Yukon," Council of Yukon First Nations Grand Chief Peter Johnston said. "These important funds will help address mental health issues facing First Nations and support capacity development in each community to better serve our people."

The Mental Wellness Innovation Fund was identified as part of Forward Together: the Yukon Mental Wellness Strategy 2016-2026. The first funding period ended June 30, with 33 applications submitted for consideration. Twelve projects received a total of $620,000 in funding.

"Kwanlin Dün First Nation believes the Yukon-wide Mental Health Strategy must support land-based, culturally relevant healing that reflects the needs of Indigenous people," Kwanlin Dün First Nation acting Chief Alicia Vance said. "Kwanlin Dün will continue to support initiatives that meet the mental wellness needs of Yukon communities and our citizens."

The fund is intended to: allow organizations to test out new models of delivering services that promote wellness; build capacity in Yukon to deliver effective services; learn from promising and emerging practices that promote wellness; increase coordination and collaboration among care providers; and allow communities to take action on issues of particular priority in their community.

Attached is a list of the 10 recipients of the Mental Wellness Innovation Fund.

Yukon Mining: Where we're at

The Mining Recorder and Inspections staff on the eve of the long Labour Day weekend, a well-deserved rest for busy gold rush victims. Very happy crew! Thanks, everyone!

Story and Photos By Josée Bonhomme

To get a clear picture of the level of activity throughout the Yukon, for both Placer and Quartz Act regulated grants, the Mining Recorders' figures were tabulated for June and July 2014-2015, and this year for June, July and August in the Dawson, Mayo and Whitehorse Mining Districts. The numbers paint a vivid picture of the ongoing boom.

The number of Quartz claims for this year is encouraging, after a lull since the 2008-2010 staking bonanza. Placer claims keep up their exponential growth as more and more attention is turned to Yukon gold with exposure to millions on two major TV networks. The Mining Recorders' offices are always busy places, at times with line-ups of claim stakers waiting their turn to fill out official forms.

In some instances, the children (and grandchildren) of miners are now recording their own claims and making their own plans. They have been taught well by their parents, and the tradition of family operations takes on a new impetus. On some claims, three generations are at work. Albertans bring their children here to counteract their economic downturn and teach valuable and eclectic life skills. Busy teenagers don't get into drugs and sleep soundly at night, even in broad daylight.

Mining Inspectors who are tasked with guidance and compliance monitoring have also been challenged with a busy roster and many clients in remote operations. The claims are migrating further afield, higher up the mountains where scant trails provide access to new developments. They deal with a wide range of issues, from claim staking to water quality.

Their dedication is important, and their work demands constant training. Changing conditions with ever-constricting rules and regulations, environmental concern, First Nations issues and general policies, apt to change daily, not to mention the reporting function with the dreaded paperwork ad infinitum; their task is not easy.

The administration of mining permits, with environmental and socio-economic assessments, is an industry all to itself. A look at the numbers of applications handled over the past three years, including this year up to end of August, shows a hectic pace for those offices (see below).

In the midst of the boom, an atmosphere of respect and a constant practice of consultation exists amongst the parties directly engaged in permitting. Some distortions may appear along the way of the minimum six-month-long rigorous process. At the present time, the Yukon is not a "happy place". To counteract the litigious atmosphere, we have no choice but to balance the anger and carry out our tasks valiantly in a mindful and considerate way; this eliminates the propensity for yelling, screaming, and thumping fists on fragile desks.

Media reports verging on the sensational without the due diligence step of studying both sides of a story is almost inspiring. We are now seeing newspapers behaving as TV producers, using the busy mining industry as a tennis ball. Actually, watching the Yukon function lately is like spectating at a tennis tournament.

The ball goes back and forth, left to right, right to left, with little skill on the part of illustrious players except for the odd curve ball. Many balls fly off the courts into the wilderness of chaos. Meanwhile the industry, as far as placer miners are concerned, continues to improve its methods, its cost controls, its mechanical maintenance and operating skills, more efficient wash plants and better reclamation techniques. Miners still take pride in showing off a well done final reclamation effort, and they know the costs of those works. It is still considered a cost of doing business by the more experienced, long-time miners.

Safety is always No. 1, with a developing phenomenon where so many workers are now dressed in bright safety orange shirts, vests, coats, coveralls, with yellow reflective stripes that demand notice, and a place of importance. Yellow on black is also very fashionable. Yellow on pink screams a little loudly and may annoy some people. A well-dressed truck has an orange flag on a long pole to signal the rear limits of the vehicle (to the driver?).

The Workers' Compensation Board remained silent on their statistics, not realizing how important this feedback is for industry, in gauging how well they are doing on the Occupational Health and Safety front. The Klondike Placer Miners' Association (KPMA) did good work on their second edition of the Introductory Safety Guidebook for Yukon Placer Mining. It allows individual operators to add their specific information in a large binder designed for that purpose.

Jonas Smith, Director of the KPMA, summarizes this year's activities.

"It has been a good season for Yukon placer mining. The price of gold is up, fuel costs are down and the US exchange rate is favorable. The KPMA was successful in completing some much needed work on the gold roads this season in partnership with the Yukon Government, and are working together on various wetlandsfocused scientific studies. We look forward to continuing our work with YG on the roads and wetlands in the coming seasons. The KPMA is also working with the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in First Nation on the UNESCO World Heritage nomination to recognize the cultural significance of on-going placer mining in the Klondike.'

The hard rock people are stuck between a rock and a hard place (pun intended). Victoria Gold are victorious, having worked with the local First Nation of Nacho Nyak Dun for years, with an important historical (rich) deposit at Dublin Gulch. The Casino mine, in contrast, is going through

"the crusher", or worse, the rock reject. They have now filed some 24,000 pages of proposals, engineering studies, drawings, everything. It seems the Yukon is not able to assess their project. Yet, they have one of the most experienced crews in the world for a project of that magnitude.

The Kaminak-GoldCorp love story at the Coffee Creek deposit certainly put a smile on many faces, this is an important development in the remote region. The Wels prospect at Wellesley Lake, east of Beaver Creek, is raising eyebrows.

The Minto copper mine is scaling down its operations for closure in May, 2017 at the latest. Some 50 jobs will be lost as a result. New projects may absorb the tremor to the Yukon's economy.

The current sensational story on the C-4 subdivision controversy stems back to land claims negotiations, different government agencies, many people no longer existing, and a history that is lost. Not to mention all the disappeared maps that document the tenure history in that area. Then again, when nothing happens, it is easy to conveniently "forget". This is a regrettable story of reverse non-consultation going back nearly 20 years. At this time, the Chief of the concerned First Nation is suing the government over non-consultation on mining matters and vows to open up the mining Acts. This is the irony guiding the Yukon, the tennis ball keeps volleying in syncopated rhythms, and often goes out of the court.

There are other examples of this conflict and non-consultation in the Dawson District. Those have not achieved full recognition. The statement used by Dan Davidson (Sept. 9th issue of the Star) were based on a press release issued by Wayne Potoroka on Sept. 8th, Communications Officer with Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in and also Mayor of Dawson City. A comment attributed to Chief Roberta Joseph, that "...other citizens could find themselves in this situation" [for being asked to vacate ignored grandfathered mineral rights] is flawed, misleading. To escalate conflict, rather than lifying and finding solutions, is easier. Studying hidden history may be painstaking, it is a must in the Yukon.

Grandfathered rights seem to be an incomprehensible principle of Law in the Yukon. Ensconced in the wording of specific agreements and the Umbrella Final Agreement (UFA), are the rights of Yukon miners. Without them, there would be no Yukon on the map; we would still be in the North-West Territories, as trappers, fishers, hunters and gatherers. The land would still be under the tutelage of the Hudson Bay Co. We would be hard-working people with short, brutish lives (as we experience today). The more things change, the more they stay the same.

"Grandfathered" is not defined in the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Specific Final Agreement, mirrored off the UFA. The on-line Oxford dictionary defines the concept of grandfathered rights as follows: "1.1 The person who founded or originated something: Exempt (someone or something) from a new law or regulation (Free from an obligation or liability imposed on others). Tim Koepke, BCLS, CLS, Chief Negotiator for the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, (there"s another oxymoron) defined grandfathered rights upon trepidating enquiry in 2012 as, "...existing rights before a new agreement is ratified. All rights stay in place, as is/are, before signing of any new agreement." That is clear enough.

Chapter 2 of all agreements is very interesting. This seems to be missed by many people. Under Certainty, it reads: "... that the Yukon First Nation and all persons who are eligible... cede, release and surrender to Her Majesty the Queen in Right of Canada, all their aboriginal claims, rights, titles and interests, in and to, (a) Non-Settlement Land, and all other land and water... (b) the Mines and Minerals within all Settlement Lands and (c) Fee Simple Settlement Land."

The Clause is specified in all signed agreements, and now the Law is being tested, on both sides. The permit consultants are being bombarded, as middle-persons. We carry on, we have families to feed (our clients'). Those teenagers are amazingly hungry!

The new trend seen in hard rock and placer permitting is the concern over threatened and endangered wildlife species. There is a belief that the most endangered species in the Yukon might be the prospecting industry, and miners struggling along a treacherous permitting

Invitation to Tender

Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Natural Resource Department has received an offer of decked timber from Yukon Forest Management Branch as per our legislated 500m3/year community use provision in the Forest Resources Act. The 69 decks of timber are located 5.7km up Bonanza Creek Road along the Bonanza Creek II Forest Service Road near Dawson City, Yukon. The timber was harvested in 2015 as incidental during the construction of the road.

The key goals of this project are to remove the decked timber from its current location and bring it to the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Settlement Land R-22 Land of Plenty Camp (53km travel one way).

The intention of this Invitation to Tender is to receive a bid from a local employer and to determine how much time this contract will take.

Tendering process will close Wednesday, September 28, 2016 at noon.

For more information, visit www.trondek.ca under "Jobs" for the complete tender document. Contact Kay Linley, Land and Resources Manager if you have additional questions at 993-7100 ext. 160.

Washing your hands will also help prevent the spread of infectious deseases to others.

Even if your hands appear to be clean, they may carry micro-organisms (germs) that are picked up from shared objects like doorknobs, handrails, keyboards, and other equipment at home and the workplace.

Wash your hands with warm water and soap for at least 20 seconds (the time it takes to sing Happy Birthday). Be sure to lather the front and backs of your hands, between your fingers and under your nails. Dry your hands with a paper towel or a clean towel, then use the paper towel to turn off the tap.

We at Victoria Gold encourage you to 'think safety' and use a tissue or raise your arm to your face when you cough or sneeze to avoid spreading germs to your hands and to others so that we may all remain healthy and enjoy a cold-free season.

Victoria Gold Corp. plans to construct, operate, and close the Eagle Gold Project located northeast of Mayo, in the Dublin Gulch claims region. The Company understands that health and safety is an essential part of our success and is committed to protecting the health and safety of all our workers.

THE GOLD IS HERE!

Klondike Fever Strikes World Goldpanning Championships

BY DAN DAVIDSON Sun Stall

To get a sense of the how the World Goldpanning Championships are viewed by non-Yukoners, you have to watch the visiting teams.

Picking out the Europeans isn't too hard. While there are exceptions to this rule, the average European panner wears a distinctive battered hat, of every type from bowler to bush gear, but liberally encrusted with pins from all the events they have attended. There's more gold on the brims of some hats then they will ever find during the panning. Some Yukoners do this too, but it seems the norm among our guests.

The number of pins attests to the fact that many of the people here actually follow a panning circuit that takes them all over Europe and, in some cases, to other parts of the world, Australia being one of these.

The second clear indication is the vest, generally some neutral earth tone colour and festooned with pockets. Some officials and photographers wear these as well, but it's practically a uniform for Europeans.

Pants range from blue jeans to canvas, but they are often so concealed by footwear as to be unnoticed. While onlookers seem to favour some form of hiking boot, as contrasted with Yukoners who wear mostly sneakers, the types of foot wear that are worn to pan vary widely.

Panners go to into the 30 troughs bare foot, with pants rolled up, or protected by rubbers that range from mid-calf to high-thigh. One man broiled in the afternoon heat encased in a rubber boot body suit that ended half way up his chest. Not all panners actually get in the water. Quite a few pan from the boardwalk and simply endure the splashes without any protection.

Pans come in many shapes and sizes, although there is a maximum size, as evidenced by the presence of a tape measure in the hands of head judge Michael Gates. The traditional Yukon gold pan is probably the most common shape: flat metal, slightly rusted and weathered by years of use. Some favour the plastic version of the same pan. Other plastic pans have concentric riffles on the rim to help catch the

Another common pan looks like a stereotypical oriental hat turned inside out, an inverted metal cone, pan size and coming to a point. The Czech winner of the ladies' open tells us that this is a scientific pan based on the use of centrifugal force and widely used in the Czech Republic. Maybe that's why they took all the top spots in the competition.

They move differently too. While the old style pan was people wagging from side to side as they shake out the dirt, these other pans inspire a circular motion, a sort of swivel which seems to be quite effective. The gold, seeking the lowest point in the pan, gravitates to the center of the cone.

You would expect pans to stop at metal and plastic, but one of the judges, Harold Shannon, described two wooden pans he had seen during the week. One was seemingly made of common wood. It was quite thick, as might be expected. The other had been turned from a high quality wood that looked exotic.

One thing you don't do to pan is dress up, as proven by the contestant known as "the Lady in Red". Folklore has it that she told someone before starting that she wasn't much of a panner but she intended to put on a good show. Her low cut red dress guaranteed that her upper torso, which was described by a gentleman as well endowed, was in fact on display for most of her effort. Cheers arose from whichever part of the gallery she turned to face as she struggled with her pan full of gravel. Or, as someone else put it, "The pigs oinked."

Aside from the excitement involved with the contest, panners were turned on simply to be in the Klondike.

They filmed the ravens hovering in the up drafts off the slide. They wandered the streets in cameraarmed bands, snapping every old building in sight. Giovanni Castellarin, head of the local committee, says that the only thing they seemed disappointed with was that they couldn't rush right out to the creeks and start panning for real gold.

Some local miners did allow a limited amount of panning on their active claims, but letting 325 panners loose on the creeks was a bit more than anyone could reasonably expect. The visitors were certainly impressed by the land and the coexistence of mining and nature.

"They love this country," says Castellarin."They're telling us that we've done a tremendous job ... that after 100 years we still have it and we've taken care of it. Especially talking to the people from the US. You can still feel it. We didn't destroy it. We didn't rip everything out and walk away."

That's part of what impresses our visitors, and it is something we can maintain for years to come.

THE KLONDIKE SUN THANKS THE WORLD GOLDPANNING VOLUNTEERS FOR PUTTING ON SUCH A GREAT SHOW

Lions Undefeated in West Coast Soccer Tournament

Story and Photos Submitted

The Dawson City Lions u11 all girls soccer team roared to an undefeated record over the Labour Day long weekend at the West Coast Cup soccer tournament in Maple Ridge BC.

The squad was made up of 11 players from Dawson, two from Whitehorse and one from Victoria, B.C.

"We had never played together as a full team. So we had to have some practices in Langley where we stayed in order to figure out who is going to play where," said Coach Johnny Nunan. "I kind of stepped up the program a bit once there and the girls responded in a way I only could have dreamed of. They went out with an attitude in each game that it was up to them to settle things on the pitch."

League tournament with a 1-1 tie against the Maple Ridge Celtics U13 squad. "They scored on us in the first half but the girls just kept on working. In the early parts of the second half, they just got the gears going and we scored and out chanced them about 6 to 1 in that half. It was amazing to see this team move into the next level," said Nunan. "Awesome. Just awesome Dawson!"

The next game was a 7-0 win over Maple Ridge FC Peacocks (U12), followed by an 8-0 win over the Maple Ridge Peacocks (U12) and another 8-0 win over the Maple Ridge Strikers (U13). "After our fourth match some of the girls wanted to just keep playing. They were sad it was over," said Nunan.

No matter what position the kids played they just tried their best added Nunan. "A lot of what we worked on was spacing and listening skills where the kids needed to develop an ear to listen to their coach and not the people on the sideline. That's a tough one to learn because they all learn their parents' ear from an early age. You have to coach that out of them so they understand that there is coaching going on. By the end though, I think I could have gotten most of the kids to clean up their room!"

The girls also had to learn about sports-personship.

"When the goals went our way, I had to try and teach the team it makes no difference between a 6-0 match or a 12-0 match. With team sports, you win, tie or loose as a team and a 1-0 win is the same as a 8-0 win in that you win with grace no matter what the score is."

The first tournament of its kind for these girls would not have been possible without the help of Paulette Michaud, Lynette Peterson and Heather Peake from Whitehorse.

"There are a lot of logistics to figure out when a team travels like this," said Nunan. "Feeding this group of Hobbits is a full time job and without Paulette, Lynette and Heather, I would have been a lone salmon swimming somewhere in a back eddy."

Nunan added that the trip would not have been possible without the entire community stepping in and supporting the girls fundraising efforts. "Arctic Inland and Wes Peterson donated the jerseys, Mark and June Mather allowed the team over several weekends to bag groceries. The Triple J, The Golf Course, the Downtown, the Westmark Dawson....there were 17 or so in total. It just shows it takes a community to raise a soccer team!"

Coach Nunan wanted the kids to also learn that the hard work of fundraising was rewarded by the trip. "This trip was about the kids learning to earn their way and not just putting their hand out to mom and dad and asking for money to go. And I tell you, it worked. The girls came together and figured out what it meant to earn a trip, from that they then figured out how to be a team, how to come together and travel together, eat together, have days off together. The kids were amazing. Every one of them was a superstar."

Nunan explains that team sports is so much more than what goes on on the pitch. "In team sports, there is the skill and technical side which takes so much attention from the other pillars of team sports. The girls learned the physiological side - how to prepare for a match - but they also learned about the social side, to get along with each other and enjoy each other, enjoy themselves as a team. And to me, that's the reward."

The squad were also treated to a Vancouver Whitecaps match and a Canada versus El Salvador FIFA World Cup qualifying match. The team even had a pre match tour of the Whitecaps locker room. Nunan says they just ate it up.

"Teagn Ewing wants to play for Canada. Actually I think at least half the team wants to play for Canada," said Nunan.

Best combo. Ever.

Strategies for coping with the devastating loss of a friend

Story by Faith Wood, Troy Media

I recently found out (on Facebook of all places) that a dear friend had passed away suddenly. I was in shock. Had it been April Fool's Day, I might have believed it was someone's inappropriate joke. But it wasn't.

I didn't know what to say or what to feel. I was numb.

One of my first thoughts was that I am a terrible friend. How could I have missed so many opportunities to connect by phone or in person during one of my many work trips to her area?

This friend supported me through all my varied adventures the past 20 years. She advocated for projects, colluded, created and pushed me to be better than I thought I could be. Anne was probably the person who most encouraged me to write for newspapers and even my first books.

She was a wonderful storyteller and her life was cut short - a tragedy to her community and her family.

My shock and dismay got me pondering the value we place on friendships and the efforts we make to ensure these friends know how much they have added to our lives.

I felt so selfish, but I think this is a pretty common first response to the sudden death of a friend.

Humans are wired to be social. We want to be around other people. Sadly, we often get so caught up in the trials and tribulations of daily life that we forget how short life really is. We think there will always be plenty of time to connect and stay close. When this turns out to be untrue, we find ourselves in an inner conflict - the should have, could have stories all compete for attention.

When someone dies, a whole web of people who had different relationships with that person are affected. The news ripples through our 'tribes' and the loss is often more widespread than we recognize. Even people who didn't have a direct relationship with the deceased are affected either because they feel for (and with) the people who had a close relationship or because, at the end of the day, the tragedy and permanence of death shocks and likely scares us all.

When someone dies suddenly, there are a lot of emotions going on. The loss of a loved one is one of the most difficult times in our lives.

So if you face something similar, here are a few tips to help you navigate through the moment and reduce the inner conflicts:

Pause and reflect on all those fabulous experiences together. Embracing those memories will help you move through the grief process.

Write down a few special memories. You may even consider posting them to share with family members.

Even if you don't know what to say, rather than crossing the street or walking out of the room, make a point of saying something as simple as, "I'm sorry to hear what has happened." Or text them or send a card. Nothing can make the situation better. It's about helping the family recognize how many lives their loved one touched.

Don't be afraid to attend the memorial service. It will be good for you and the family no matter how long it has been since you saw them in person.

Be proactive about reducing your stress. Take a walk. Eat nutritiously. Release your emotions - cry (at commercials, songs, movies) or watch comedy in an effort to refocus your internal energy.

It doesn't matter how old our friends get, or how young they are when we lose them, the fact is that we miss them when they are gone.

Recalling the positive impact on our lives will help to keep the memories alive.

PUBLIC NOTICE: LOOSE DOGS

This is to inform the public of the current Bylaws regarding loose dogs

Animal Care and Control Bylaw #12-28 states;

5.01 No Owner of an Animal shall permit such Animal to run At Large and where such Animal is found running At Large, it shall be deemed to be doing so with the consent of the Owner.

"AT LARGE" means an Animal being off the Property of its Owner and not under the Owner's Immediate Control.

"IMMEDIATE CONTROL" means to have an Animal on the Owner's Property securely confined by a fence, pen or building; and to have an Animal off of the Owner's Property on a Leash held firmly by the Owner, and kept within one (1) meter of the Owner when other people are nearby.

5.02 No Owner of an Animal shall permit such Animal to be upon any public or private Property within the municipal boundaries of the City, without the Property owner's consent, unless such Animal is on a Leash held at all times by the Owner. The Animal shall be confined by the Owner holding the Leash within a one (1) meter radius when other persons are in the immediate vicinity of the Animal.

"LEASH" means a restrictive device, which may include a spool type Leash, adequate to control the Animal on which it is attached, and which shall be of a maximum length of four (4) meters.

The purposes of these Bylaws are to protect the safety of people, as well as dogs and other animals, and will be regulated all hours of the day, all days of the week. The City of Dawson sincerely thanks you for your cooperation.
