Second Annual Girls' Rock Camp Doubles in Size

If you had just six days to get ready, and you had never done any of the things you would have to do before, could you learn the rudiments of playing an instrument, form a band with four other people, write a song together and get it ready to perform in front of a large audience at the Dawson City Music festival.

That's what 23 girls, aged from 8 to 18, brought together in Dawson City from Old Crow, Pelly Crossing, Faro, Whitehorse and, of course, Dawson, had to do to succeed in the second annual Girls' Rock Camp.

Aside from just learning to perform, workshops for the girls included such topics as creating Band Merch, Poster Design, DIY Event Planning, Stage Presence, Women in Media, Mental Health and Wellness, Zines & Art, Glam & Attitude Photo Shoot, Costuming, Recording & Making a Scene.

By Saturday afternoon, the second day of the Dawson City Music festival, the five bands were ready, decked out to perform on guitar, bass, drums and keyboards, and sporting group names like Northern Girls, Sonic Boom, The Shy Five, The Vibes and Midnight Wolves.

The benches and bleachers were packed for their performances, as they opened with the camp theme song, performed their own new tunes and closed with a final mass group number, including their adult mentors in the mix.

"The Girls Rock Camp performance on the main stage Saturday afternoon was an absolute highlight for me personally," said festival producer Emily Ferrell.

"I think Rock Camp is doing very important things for young women in the territory and putting all that good stuff on stage is so rewarding and so fun to see."

"Rock Camp was twice as big this year," said assistant producer Devon Berquist, who helped to introduce the idea here last year.

It's a movement that has sprung up across North America, and has migrated here to Dawson with a little help from the folks in Alaska, who have a bit more experience with the program.

Yukon dedicated to full participation in National Inquiry

YTG Press Release

WHITEHORSE (August 3, 2016) —The co-chairs of Yukon's advisory committee on Missing and Murdered Aboriginal Women and Girls welcome today's announcement on the National Inquiry into Missing and Murdered Aboriginal Women and Girls and remain committed to working in partnership with governments and organizations across Canada to ensure that the inquiry is truly national in scope and reflects the realities of Yukon.

"The prevalence of violence against Indigenous women and girls is a national tragedy that requires a collective approach involving multiple stakeholders," Minister responsible for the Women's Directorate Elaine Taylor said. "Building on the work of the Yukon Regional Roundtable on Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls, today's long-awaited announcement represents another important step towards finding answers and solutions to this grave issue."

Minister Taylor, Kwanlin Dün First Nation Chief Doris Bill and Yukon Aboriginal Women's Council president Doris Anderson co-chaired a Yukon Regional Roundtable on Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls in February 2016. The co-chairs also led a Yukon delegation to the National Roundtable that same month. From these two events, collaborative work continues to create Yukon-made solutions to the high levels of violence against Indigenous women and girls.

"Like so many Canadians, we are pleased that Canada will hold a national inquiry into what has happened to our stolen women and girls. Yukon is prepared and we will be fully engaged in the long-awaited federal inquiry. We must prevent these tragedies from continuing and provide the families with some measure of peace," Bill said.

"As the inquiry commissioners listen to the testimonies from the families of missing and murdered women and girls, we will continue to bring a strong and united voice in support of the families of Yukon's missing and murdered Indigenous women and girls. We will ensure that into Missing and Murdered the messages we heard at the Family Gathering, at the family meeting with Minister Bennett and at the Yukon Regional Roundtable are delivered, and we hope that this inquiry helps the process of healing continue," Anderson said.

Families and loved ones of missing and murdered Indigenous women and girls had an opportunity to participate in pre-inquiry consultations with Minister of Indigenous and Northern Affairs Carolyn Bennett in January 2016. The co-chairs also made a joint submission during the pre-inquiry process to ensure that the design of the inquiry is national in scope while recognizing the unique history, culture and realities of the North, and Yukon in particular.

"Violence prevention and ensuring the safety of Indigenous women and girls is an important issue facing all Canadians," Minister of Justice Brad Cathers said. "We look forward to supporting the work of the national inquiry and working collaboratively with Yukon families, Aboriginal women's groups and all levels of government."

Tales of a Southerner in the North

Story & Photos By Noémie Fortin

Before coming up north (and west), everyone I knew who ever came to Dawson told me all sorts of crazy stories about the many characters that shape the townscape in the manner of legends. Even though I did not believe them at first, (who would believe that some guys just started digging in the Pit parking lot to find gold?) I can now see how weirdly awesome this place is after only a week as a "Cheechako".

It all started about a year ago, back in Sherbrooke (QC), when I heard about an experiential learning opportunity at Bishop's University. The B.E.S.T. Project helps students learn outside the classroom and determine their career paths. As a third year student pursuing a double Honours in Fine Arts and Art History, I hoped to find an internship where I could learn more about curatorial work in contemporary art. After some research, I realized such a thing did not exist and went on to "create" one. With the help of my mentor in this project, I wrote a proposal to the ODD Gallery of the Klondike Institute of Art and Culture (KIAC) to come in Dawson City for three weeks and learn about curatorial work and gallery operations in a different setting.

So far, this story is pretty conventional: a student wants to develop her abilities in her field of studies, and asks her university for support. The unconventional part is the particular setting of this internship: a remote northern town with 1,500 citizens in the winter (a number that doubles during the summer); where the summer sun does not sleep; where the parties are endless and the wilderness is omnipresent; where the arts and crafts are appreciated and practiced by many. And on the corner of 2nd and Princess stands KIAC and its ODD Gallery: the place that has welcomed me to work and learn, absorbing myself in the lead-up to the two installations and guest lecture event that makes up The Natural & The Manufactured, 2016.

So, I did not really answer the question: Why Dawson? First, I strive to broaden my cultural horizons beyond the Quebec scene and gain a more comprehensive understanding of the Canadian and international art scenes, not to mention seeing how a contemporary art gallery works at the other end of the country. Next, I was intrigued by the KIAC outreach activities that engage public interest in contemporary arts. Also, the questions asked by The Natural & The Manufactured strongly resonate with ones I hope to develop through future professional endeavours: sitespecific and environmental art practices, and interactions between artists and communities. Plus, I was curious to see by myself if all these stories were true or if it was only part of the myth of the North!

The real adventure began on the plane to Whitehorse. As I was just coming back from a six month trip in Europe, I'm used to air travel, but not even a Ryanair flight in the world could have prepared me to the pleasant experience of flying Air North. I mean it is pretty unsettling the first time you have a good meal 35,000 ft in the air (salmon and wild rice, for free?!). After spending my first evening in the Yukon visiting a sheep farm somewhere along Annie Lake Road, and sharing a sauna followed by a (quick) swim in the cold river with two Quebecers I met on the plane; I was on my way to Dawson City.

Lucky me, I got to Dawson right before the Moosehide Gathering. It turns out sitting at night around the sacred fire and waiting in lines for boat shuttles guarantees a person will meet awesome people. In only three days I shared a feast with many people, sitting with elders who had great stories; I learned basic beading techniques; I attended workshops about traditional medicine and craft work with sheep-horns; and so much more.

Around the sacred fire I also met two Swiss guys who had just arrived at Moosehide, after a two-week journey down the river from Whitehorse. Two days later, with a sign in hands and our thumbs up, we left Dawson for the wilderness of the Dempster Highway, going all the way to Tombstone. After crossing a river and hiking four hours in the tundra, we set up camp and had one of the most beautiful views I have ever seen.

In between all that, I experienced two epic nights at the Pit, went to Diamond Tooth Gerties for a good show and a bit of gambling, met many inspiring creative people, and had a poutine at Klondike Kate's that was as delicious as one at home.

According to the town's website: "Dawson is a magical place that is easy to love and difficult to leave." If everything goes as planned I will be leaving on August 16, but you can be sure you'll see me again.

Uffish Thoughts: In seach of a fibre-optic solution

By Dan Davidson

It has become an all too familiar story. I wake up in the morning, check my list of things to work on, find that one or more of them needs as little bit of Internet research, fire up the laptop after breakfast, and find that my chosen search engine is spinning mindlessly and taking me nowhere.

The house Wi-Fi signal is strong, so that means the modem isn't giving it anything to work with. Its lights are blinking, but there's nobody home. I reset it anyway, because the tech at the NWTel help line is going to ask me about that and other minor technical things that I can do in my sleep after years of practice.

If it's what I suspect it is, then a recorded message is going to confirm my suspicions after I call the help line number. Today, however, I get a different message, a very unhelpful apology that not even this service is available at this time.

I work on some material that I have at hand already and begin to make mental notes for this column.

Later on we all learn that it's another cut cable, that once again someone has failed to learn what they needed to avoid while doing construction or road work, and once again the entire North has been blacked out.

In a parody of Scrooge's rant about the poor, I find myself chanting, "Have they no maps? Have they no written directions? Have they not inquired about where it might not be safe to dig?"

Well, if they have, they didn't listen, didn't take notes and forgot to look at the maps.

I realize that a lot of these cables went into the ground before GPS technology became ubiquitous, but you'd think someone would have tagged these things by now.

There must be some sort of ground penetrating radar that could map out the line of the disturbed earth ahead of the arrival of the heavy equipment and stop the blade before it makes the unkindest cut of all.

At this point in I return to the notion I jotted on a Stickie (a virtual post-it note) earlier in the day.

Perhaps the answer lies in the recently burgeoning craze of Pokémon Go, that blend of real and virtual worlds in which smartphone users become even more mindlessly enslaved to their devices while in search of pocket monsters to capture at sites in the real world. If you've seen people talking or texting putting themselves in jeopardy or being oblivious to the world around them, apparently you ain't seen nuthin' until you've encountered a herd of Pokémon Go players.

They call this combination of the real and the virtual augmented reality, though some of the stupidity I've read about in the few short weeks that it's been available suggest that it might aptly be called Darwin's Revenge or the Silly Suicide Game.

Anyway, Pokémon creatures have an affinity for certain habitats, according to Wikipedia; there are water types and plant types, cemetery types (according to some stories) and memorial types.

Why not get the Niantic and Nintendo companies to design a Pokémon species with an affinity for underground cables? There could be different types for power lines, fibre-optic and old fashioned cables. Skilled players could be hired by construction companies to play the game in advance of the actual projects and mark the locations of the cables as GPS coordinates on Google Maps displays, uploading this information to the project foremen (forepersons? Has that happened yet?) and thus helping to avoid the inconvenience to customers that so many of us suffer with so often these days.

Oh well, at least we made it to the national news broadcasts. Hopefully the item didn't scare away any tourists.

An important multi-media exhibit, which is excellent in its message and quality, is now on at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre till September 15th. "Seeds of Change: Reconciliation" aims to engage the whole community and its international visitors in the acceptance and recognition of First Nations' children's experiences at residential schools, especially as it affected local Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in citizens, for the sake of advancing reconciliation in the community and the country. Much progress has been made in healing, conversing and understanding.

The Seeds of Change exhibit is an outreach and community engagement event. Work started on rectifying injustice about 20 years ago when the first complaints were filed in the Supreme Court (by Yukon First Nations/Taku River Tlingit citizens). The class action lawsuits were enabled, where thousands have been compensated for abusive treatment they received from authority figures, as children, across Canada.

In 2007, a related national exhibit hosted by Dänojà Zho exhibit "Where are the Children?" included a locally created scrapbook "Finding our Way Home". The scrapbook project is an account of Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in citizens' experience of residential school and was big step along the healing path. The project was a collaboration between the K'änächa group of Survivors, with support from Sharon Moore, Chris Clarke and many others. The book is available at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre for $25.00 - a very good value.

The original scrapbook is on display again after nine years. Voices of those who participated in the project reflect upon how far they have come since that time, inviting us to reflect as well.

Faye Chamberlain's piece, entitled "Cutting through Red Tape", with all its implied messages, is explosive.
The elegant dress was painstakingly crafted of red duct tape. A subtle lining made of bedsheets with a butterfly print is hidden underneath.

"The words on the back of the dress, on the fringes, are negative, dark energy, but the words on the front are all light-receiving positive energy. Underneath it all, we're free", Chamberlain explains with a proud smile.

Chamberlain is of Mi'kmak/ Acadian (Métis) descent and has lived in the Yukon for many years.

"I had three weeks to come up with the truth, a statement," she says of her work. "Glenda Bolt phoned, planted the seed and I went to work, I only had weekends available. It was a connection of big events in my life. My Mi'kmaq mom passed away in December, 2015. I sat with my experiences, the shared stories, and produced automatically and spontaneously. My genealogy research gave me confidence and a stronger sense of tradition."

She adds, "...it's important to recognize Bo Yeung's catalyst role in the exhibit. It was her vision that facilitated the displays and artists' contributions to represent our understanding of Reconciliation."

The dress Chamberlain designed is an art piece to look at for hours; it is so full of subtle meanings. It is decorated with traditional and thought-provoking accessories. A hand-out helps to grasp some concepts. It's good to sit in the chair(s), listen to 116 podcast hours of heartfelt honest stories, and to engage oneself in the process while admiring the red tape dress, with the mighty Yukon river as the backdrop.

Visitors can add their impressions and comments to a scroll that will later be offered the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in as a proof of mindful reconciliation by people from all over the world, along with local residents.

Glenda Bolt, the Dänojà Zho

Centre's Manager, explains:
"The exhibit runs through Sept.
15, but Faye Chamberlain's red tape dress will be sent to Whitehorse on Sept. 1 as part of a larger exhibition. It has been requested by the Yukon Aboriginal Curatorial Collective to be part of an exhibit from Sept. 28-30 with Yukon
College."

Bolt the co-curator of the exhibit, says it has been popular.

"People come two-three times, to get the full video and audio experiences."

Fran Morberg-Green is also a co-curator. Her own contribution to the exhibit, created with her husband Daniel Green, is the "Wishing Stones" sculpture, a thought-provoking and engaging piece. It is positive and simple, but strong in its purpose and meaning. It grounds one to the earth to understand and stabilize.,

"The exhibit has been received with open hearts," Bolt adds. "Comments we've had from visitors in the guest book have expressed gratitude for the positive learning experience. The Cultural Centre is here to celebrate and share the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in people's story.

"We aim to engage Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in citizens and the local Dawson population, but also international visitors from all over the world. Our message is well understood and received. We worked with the K'änächa group closely for the Seeds of Change exhibition, to make sure our message is authentic and relevant."

Drop your cell phone, turn off your computer, and give some thought to what "Reconciliation" means to you.

The original scrap book for the Finding our Way Home project (2009) is part of the Seeds of Change exhibit.

Midnight Dome Race Draws total of 61 participants

Story and Photos By Dan Davidson

It could be that the morning after the Friday night to 2 a.m. first evening of the Dawson City Music Festival isn't the best of times to hold the Air North Midnight Dome Race from downtown, at the corner of King Street and Third Avenue, to the top of the Midnight Dome, but that's the tradition here, and people do seem to respect it, just as they respect the 7.2 kilometre hike.

The walking group assembled beside the Old Post Office and Madame Tremblay's around 9:30, and if they set off up the hill a few minutes later than advertised, there is a slogan about Yukon Time that needs to be honoured sometimes, though perhaps not the way it's intended.

There were 14 of them, 10 women and 4 men, and Wendy Cairns looked like a winner from the very beginning of the trek up Mary McLeod Road.

She would cross the finish line at the top of that last steep stretch 1 hour and 1.58 minutes later, not that long after the fastest runner.

How could that be? Well, the runners started about half an hour after the walkers, and 47 of them hit the trail about 10:02. 15 year old Jack Amos of Dawson was in the front of the pack from the beginning and would eventually post the fastest time at the top of the hill, running the race in 35:24, making him the fastest in the race and in his 14-17 category, somewhat more than two minutes ahead of 24 year old Logan Boehmer, also of Dawson, running in the 18-39 category.

Jessica Kaiser, from Cochrane, Ontario, was the fastest woman, at 41:33, but it's impressive that 28 of the runners finished in under an hour.

Following Cairns in the walking group were Dawson's Isaac Dube (14 yrs) and Teresa Procee (15 yrs), Barbara Rimensberger (43 yrs) from Switzerland, and Ryan Stewart (37 yrs) from Burnaby. Other walkers hailed from Whitehorse, Abbotsford and Vancouver.

Following Amos and Boehmer in the overall runner results were Travis Cummings and Jessica Kaiser, both from Cochrane, followed by Michael Ross (Whitehorse), and Evan Bugden (Morden, MB). Other runners came from Kelowna, Switzerland, Regina, San Francisco, Kingston, ON, Vancouver, Prince George and Denmark.

Race officials also break down the results by category. Runners list as follows: Junior Male - Jack Amos; Junior Female - Sofia Bond (1:02:25); Open Male 18-39 – Logan Boehmer; Open Female 18-39 – Jessica Kaiser; Masters Male 40-54 – Jeff Bond (44:38); Masters Female 40-54 - Leyla Weston (1"02:46); Seniors Masters Male 55+ - Fredy Rimsberger (45:35).

The breakdown of Walkers is: Bantam Female under 13: Kimowin Lavallee, 11 (1:39:35); Junior Male 14-17: Isaak Dube (1:02:11); Junior Female 14 – 17: Teresa Procee (1:11:39); Open Male 18-39 -Ryan Stewart (1:18:23); Open Female 18-39 - Anne Cross, 33 (1:18:26); Masters Female 40 -54 - Wendy Cairns 50 (1:01:58); Senior Masters Female 55+ - Janet Helton-Johnson, 65, (1:32:27).

The rain, which plagued the weekend, held off for the duration of the run, though there was dense fog about 2/3 of the way up the road. The Dome was clear and sunny, but Dawson was completely obscured by low clouds most of the time and the only clear views were of the Yukon River going north.

Run Dawson posted results and thank yous on their Facebook page.

"Thanks to everyone who came out and participated in the 2016 Air North Midnight Dome Race. We had a good turnout, epic views from the top and the rain held off. Special thanks to the Canadian Rangers and Conservation Officer Kirby Meister and to all of our volunteers who are working and helping out with Musicfest and still made the time to make our race possible."

The Rangers and Junior Rangers patrol the route and look for stragglers. There are several rest and water stops along the route. This year, a black bear has been active within range of the Dome Road and so conservation officers were alert for potential prob-

"The top male and female finisher in the run and walk category will receive a free flight thanks to the generosity of Air North."

Month of August News,

Size doesn't matter. Colour doesn't matter. Making a difference matters.

Few will have the greatness to bend history itself, but each of us can work to change a small portion of events. It is from numberless diverse acts of courage and belief that human history is shaped.

"Each time a man stands up for an ideal, or acts to improve the lot of others, or strikes out against injustice, he sends forth a tiny ripple of hope, and crossing each other from a million different centers of energy and daring those ripples build a current which can sweep down the mightiest walls of oppression and resistance." ~Robert F. Kennedy

Mo's Message: Size Doesn't Matter; Impact Does

Recognized thought leaders - Martin Luther King Jr., Rick Hansen, Gandhi and Oprah are big names, big celebrities, big difference makers.

It is tempting to believe little ol' me couldn't make a worldly impact like they have. They are special. They are big. They are legendary. I couldn't possibly do what they have done.

There was only one Mother Teresa, one Nelson Mandela and only one you.

The truth is - ordinary people who make a difference don't need to be famous, lead an historic movement or have wealth to make an impact - they just see a need to do something.

Who are the difference makers?

Ordinary people who create positive change in the lives of others. Ordinary people who cause movement. Ordinary people who set an example.

Think of someone who makes a real difference in your life. Are they famous --- to you?

Think of ways you can make a difference. They don't need to be big, world-famous, or change the course of history. They just have to reflect your value, significance and influence.

Yes, I am only one. No, I can not do everything...but I can do one thing...I can make a difference.

DCMF Number 38 had some problems to overcome

This year's Dawson City Music Festival started out with a couple of major logistical problems well before the lineup was finalized.

The first one was the loss of the Minto Park Concession building to last September's fire. It had been the home of the performers' hospitality lounge for decades and it was gone. A new building was in the planning stages, but it was not going to be ready in time for this July's event. They ended up substituting another tent/canopy and that worked out well.

The second blow was the loss of a performance venue, as Parks Canada shut down the Palace Grand Theatre for some essential repairs and upgrades. Early on, this meant cancelling the pre-festival concert that has been the successful prelude to the festival for the last several years. No other place in town could handle that capacity of crowd.

There were other venues that could absorb some of the mini-concerts on Saturday and Sunday, and so St. Paul's Anglican Church and the Klondike Institute of Art and Culture (KIAC) Ballroom were pressed into extra service. Both are admirable venues, the latter usually reserved as an emergency backup when the weather shuts down the outdoor events at the Waterfront Park Gazebo.

Parks Canada still wanted to contribute to the event's success, so it made the big event tent behind the Commissioner's Residence available as a mess tent facility for feeding the performers.

Friday morning brought its own problems, courtesy of the weather. Performers who had risen in Whitehorse at 4:30 a.m. to catch the early Air North Flight didn't get to leave for Dawson until around 2 o'clock that afternoon. Friday sound checks were somewhat truncated prior to the evening Mainstage Tent opening, but the sound crew provided yeoman service and made everyone sound good.

It was clear (or perhaps "foggy" would be more apt) that the usual Gazebo opening mini-concert on Friday was not going to be possible. Mist was heavy, and hard rain was intermittent. KIAC was readied from early on in the day as the producers hoped that the three acts on the bill would arrive before the 4 p.m. starting time. They did.

It rained that night as well, which perhaps contributed to the fact that the Main Stage tent was already filling nicely when a lean but lively edition of the Hän Singers arrived on stage to sing the "Welcome Song" and some other tunes to begin the evening's lineup. Six other acts kept the tent jumping until 2 a.m., and who knows how many other people tuned into CFYT-fm radio or DCTV's Channel 12 to catch the music, which varied from indie-rock to old time blues-rock to World Music and rap.

On Saturday and Sunday there were eight workshop sessions (best described as semi-structured jam sessions), and 15 concerts by individual performers and groups, using all the previously mentioned locations plus the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre and, thankfully, the Gazebo, when it was dry enough, which it was, on both days, even though there was more rain in the evenings.

The Beer Garden, at the festival grounds, has had its own small stage for the last few years, and it was home to local performers from 5 to 7 both days.

Mini-concerts at KIAC and St. Paul's overlapped the first few acts on Main Stage each evening and then there was an additional surge at the tent after 10 on Saturday and 9:30 on Sunday.

"The tent was very busy all three nights," said assistant producer Devon Berquist. "People seemed to stay for the music and be engaged with the music."

The festival sold 900 tickets this year, and then provided quite a few more passes to the volunteers (70 names listed on the program) and sponsors (about 60 listed).

The festival gathered power slowly this year, but built up to a good head of steam.

"We were a little bit concerned at one point," said festival producer Emily Ferrell.
"Tickets sales were a little slower the week or two leading up to the festival, but they picked up certainly before."

Remembering the Jewish Factor in the History of the Gold Rush

In between the Yukon Order or Pioneers Cemetery and Dawson's New Public Cemetery, just off Mary McLeod Road, is a wooded path that leads to the small Jewish Cemetery, or Bet Chaim (House of Life). While there was Jewish population of nearly 200 in Dawson as late as 1902, there are only five graves in this small plot of land, and the only grave with a marker is that of Solomon Packer, who died in 1918.

It is known that several other members of the Baron de Hirsch Congregation are buried in the old Hillside Cemetery (also public) on the other side of the road stampeders made it to the Klondike during the Gold Rush, that's not a large number, but it was significant enough to make the Jewish Historical Society of Yukon want to find the site and restore it in 1998, during the last of the three Klondike Centennial years.

Given that 30 to 40 thousand

Jumping ahead to 2014, another organization, the Jewish Cultural Society of Yukon "decided that it was time to determine and document what sort of commerce, employment, and other activities the Jews of Dawson were involved in during the Gold Rush, and the significant impact of those people on North American society." (from a PowerPoint presentation).

Dr. Brent Slobodin was hired to take on that task, and his research has now spawned the three-panel display entitled "The Jewish Presence in the Klondike During the Gold Rush 1897-1918". This was launched in Whitehorse at the McBride Museum in early May and was on display during the North and the First World War conference. It went north with the Dawson Study Tour and is currently on display in the Courtroom at the Dawson City Museum, where it will spend the summer before going on tour.

The exhibit's purpose is to "invite viewers to learn more about a forgotten chapter of Yukon history as the exhibit demonstrates the Jewish presence during and after the Gold Rush, on the trail, in the gold fields, in Dawson City and beyond."

The exhibit includes the 7 foot by 31 inch panels, plus a DVD with four videos related to the 1998 graveyard project, and a 30 page book of stories, interviews and photographs.

Slobodin found that most of Dawson's Jews were not successful miners, but made their mark in commerce, being "involved primarily in the supply of goods and transportation to the gold fields" as one of the subheadings on the panels reads.

As the town diminished in size and new goldrush boomtowns beckoned, they moved on to other opportunities, playing key roles in the commercial histories of Fairbanks, Vancouver and Victoria, among other places.

Sid Grauman eventually opened the theatre in Los Angeles that still bears his name, the same Grauman's Chinese Theatre where the idea of memorializing the famous with foot and hand prints in concrete originated.

The exhibit was in the Dawson City Museum for most of May and June. It has been returned to Whitehorse for a brief stay, but will be returning to the Museum for the rest of the summer.

Finding a Klondike Focus for Her Art

By Dan Davidson

Priska Wettstein's photography display in the audio-visual room at the Dawson City Museum is the result of a love affair with the camera that began when her husband, Paul, bought her one back in 2008.

She was still living in her native Switzerland at the time and found that her favorite subjects were flowers.

"I used to go into flower shops ... and buy just one nice flower (to photograph)," she says, "but that's not possible here."

Well, not in the winter, in Dawson City, where the couple own and operate the Aurora Inn, and have lived since 2011.

While Priska concedes that there are lots of flowers and plants to photograph here during the summer, most of the year is not like that, and she's shifted her focus to scenes that the Klondike easily provides for the roving digital lens.

Winter scenes, the Aurora (of course), Dawson's iconic buildings and ravens are among her favorite subjects now.

There was a time when she would have liked to be an artist, and she's fulfilling that desire now by digitally manipulating the images she collects from around the town and elsewhere.

"I'm just hooked. So whenever I go for a walk, or drive out of town, or just need some time to myself, I grab my camera and just go."

She makes extensive use of Photoshop to alter colours and emphasize textures, building layers to come up with a finished product that she likes to think of as a photo/painting.

Indeed, some of the people who see her work, which decorates the inn along with other art, ask her whether the images are photographs or paintings.

The museum exhibit came about as a result of Glenda Bolt, the manager of the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre, suggesting the possibility to Alex Somerville, the museum's executive director. He approached Priska with the idea.

"Of course I said yes, but then I began to wonder what pictures to use, and were they good enough."

She designed the display herself. There are five groupings of images, each one anchored by a large photo, and bookended horizontally by smaller works in a variety of sizes. Visitors will see a flow of themes and colours that helps to tie the five images in each cluster together.

These images are all printed on a very light weight metal. They need no frames and are so light that their built in back hooks allow them to hang from a single finish nail.

The exhibit will be on display at the museum until the end of the Riverside Arts Festival in late August. Most of the same pictures are also on display at the inn, and Priska markets her images online at http://www.priskawettstein.com/

History Hunter: Taking the magical history tour on the Klondike Mines Railway

By Michael Gates, Yukon News, Friday April 20, 2012

Used with the author's permission

Master model maker Brian Pate is owner of his own Klondike Mines Railway in his North Vancouver home.

Under Brian Pate's experienced guidance, I eased the throttle and the locomotive began to chug up Dawson's Front Street rail line from the waterfront warehouse between King and Queen Street. Despite my trembling hands, I activated the bell and gave two blasts on the whistle to announce my departure from the downtown station. I didn't want to make any mistakes.

The train picked up steam as it moved down the avenue toward the bridge across the Klondike River. After stops in Klondike City, and at the mouth of Bonanza Creek, I directed it up Bonanza Creek valley. The 3.5 per cent grade meant hard work for the little narrow gauge locomotive and its two passenger cars. Finally, we reached the summit and pulled into the station at Sulphur Springs, just below King Solomon's Dome.

From Sulphur Springs, the train could have continued to Gold Run creek, and then on the long journey to the distant Sicamous Interchange.

Wait a minute - there is something strange about this; isn't Sicamous in British Columbia? The Klondike Mines Railway was never linked to British Columbia, and it never went to Gold Run Creek, so how is this possible?

In Brian Pate's basement in his North Vancouver home, anything is possible, and the railroad in question is one of his own design.

I can't remember when I first met Brian Pate, but at that time he was a researcher at the University of British Columbia, and a master model maker when he wasn't conducting research.

He volunteered to build a scale model of Dredge Number 4 on Bonanza Creek, as it looked during its operating life.

The dredge model took shape over several years. He obtained a complete set of blueprints, and inspected every nook and cranny of the monstrous machine during his family visits to Dawson City. He was always full of questions about the dredge, and quickly became as knowledgeable of its construction as just about anyone on the planet.

Brian spent thousands of hours constructing that model. He sent regular reports complete with photographs to chronicle his progress. Over a period of time, the superstructure of the little model grew, just as the original had a half-century before. The photos of the model in the progress were so life-like that you could imagine you were looking at the original dredge reincarnated.

Finally, it was completed. He entered the model in a competition in the United States, and walked away with the grand prize for his model, which, including the sculpted landscape that surrounds it, is at least a metre and a half long. The last time that I looked, the model was still on display in the Visitor Information Centre in Dawson City.

Brian has, for many years now, turned his skills toward making a model of the Klondike Mines Railroad, complete with landscape, panoramic backdrops and buildings. It fills a 400-square-foot section of his basement and operates on two levels that are connected by a spiral tunnel that is hidden within the framing of the track layout.

Instead of shutting down in 1913, as it did historically, this railroad survived through the lean years of the 1920s and 1930s, and then expanded during the Second World War. It linked up with another line, that of the Vancouver, Westminster and Yukon Railway. It is now 1949. Brian has adapted the historical landscape somewhat to accommodate both the space, and the concept of his layout.

In this remarkable layout, each locomotive produces lifelike sound effects to reflect the activities associated with their operation.

The buildings that he has reproduced in miniature along the rail line are as exquisitely detailed as his model of Dredge Number 4 and include the old Bank of Commerce on Front Street, an abbreviated fire hall and the dockside warehouse of the White Pass and Yukon Route. Farther along the right of way of the line, he has placed Joe Boyle's house, the gold room and a truncated machine shop, all buildings from Bear Creek. This placement would not have been possible in reality, but with his concept, Pate has incorporated intriguing structures and the history they represent into the imaginary rail line.

But his model railroad is more than a hobby. And it is no circular track on the living room floor; it is a complex construction with an important social component. Groups of as many as a dozen like-minded train enthusiasts will periodically join Brian in his grotto and run trains throughout his complex network just as they would have operated on a real railroad. There is a dispatcher. There are timetables. There is a freight crew with a switch list. They operate it for hours.

Brian will soon be flying to San Jose to attend a big model train meeting, where, he will select from three choices. He will then go down into somebody's basement with several other enthusiasts, and for eight hours they will operate the model railroad there just like the real thing.

His railroad is a work in progress. "There is nothing sadder than a railroad that has been finished," he says. "There is nothing to look forward to." Thus there are several blank spaces in his layout with the names of the proposed buildings pencilled in for future construction.

I have often been critical of people who take liberties with the facts for the sake of a good story when history can be just as interesting as fiction. Hollywood is often a target of my criticism in this regard. This is one case, however, where I find a studious yet whimsical application of historical fact yields fascinating results.

Basic 911 service now available across the Yukon

YTG Press Release

WHITEHORSE (July 28, 2016) —The expansion of Basic 911 service to rural communities is now complete with the activation of the 911 system across Yukon.

"I'm pleased to announce this service is now available across the territory, making it easier to call for help in an emergency," Minister of Community Services Currie Dixon said. "911 provides an easy-to-remember emergency number for Yukoners and a familiar number for visitors to the territory. My thanks to our partners in this initiative for their input and hard work in making this happen."

All calls to 911 are routed through the RCMP-managed public safety answering point (PSAP) in Whitehorse. The PSAP opened in February 2016, after the Yukon government invested $334,000 to relocate the former call centre. The Government of Canada provided an additional $142,000 through its cost-share commitment under the Territorial Police Services Agreement.

"Providing Basic 911 service across the territory fulfills a commitment we made to rural Yukon residents," Minister of Justice Brad Cathers said. "This is an important step in improving access to emergency services for all Yukoners."

From the 911 call centre, emergency calls are transferred according to the location of the call and nature of the emergency. Emergency response services in rural communities continue to be delivered by municipal and volunteer fire departments, volunteer emergency medical services, community nursing stations and the RCMP.

"The RCMP is pleased to be an integral part of the committed team of first responders in the Yukon," Acting Commanding Officer of the Yukon RCMP Superintendent Brian Jones said. "We are extremely proud of our employees and the work they have done in preparing for the 911 roll-out across the territory."

Parks as an gency

by Palma Berger

Parks Canada is so well known across Canada and even the world as having high standards of maintenance and preservation of not only the Parks system but also the Heritage of Canada. Taxpayers money has been used to preserve our history, our culture, what makes us Canadians, in short our heritage. Standards were high. Great care and pride taken by the employees. The City of Dawson in compliance with our historic heritage enacted bylaws that forced all residents to build to an historic code.

But rumbles came from Ottawa that there should be cut-backs, so the Yukon Parks worked to reorganize on a District basis in order to operate more efficiently. This was done with both management and employees working together and agreeing to these changes in the Yukon. Some sections were combined and vacant positions were not filled. They were really pleased to have saved 175,000.00. Ottawa was pleased.

Then came this year's budget, the great cutbacks were about to happen. Whatever went before did not matter. The Federal government had promised cutbacks, and Parks as part of Canadian Heritage Department was chosen as the first guinea-pig for employee takeover. Each region was given a criteria for positions that could be contracted out through employee takeover or other means. The Yukon section of Parks had by now had its regional office moved to Vancouver when Parks amalgamated with the Department of Canadian Heritage and became the so-called Pacific & Yukon Region.

Under this new agenda Parks operational side will be completely removed from the Department of Canadian Heritage and will be run by an 'Agency' who will administer our Heritage sites (and Parks) with their main focus being on having each site or 'component' pay its own way. This means in Dawson's short summert, our Parks section must pay its own way. One wonders where the emphasis will lie? Ensuring standards, maintenance, accurate interpretation and heritage/ cultural integrity are maintained or having each separate component pay its own way?

Summer in Dawson Mrs. Mary Hanulik sitting on the veranda amidst the flowers for which the Hanulik house is well known PHOTO BY PALMA BERGER

As part of Ottawa's plans to do this they propose that the asset maintenance section (maintenance crew, mechanic, janitors and groundkeepers) be disbanded. The employees of this section are to be given an opportunity to get together to form their own company and present their proposal to Parks. The employees have already been informed this new company should not expect to charge more than 85% of the present basic wage for their employees.

The employees figure it will cost about $100,000 to set up the new company what with purchasing vehicles, equipment, supplies, warehouse space, oh, yes, the costs of a book-keeper etc. Parks guarantee the new company a three year contract only and then it goes to public tender when that period is up.

The normal lump sum payment (Early Departure Incentive) received on dismissal will not be given, so the employees will have to go to the bank for a loan. It is unlikely that the bank would provide a loan for a new unproven company that has a guarantee hire of only three years.

This new 'company', to be appproved by Parks, must have a ratio of 50% + 1 of the laid-off employees. But whoever gains control of this company is under absolutely no obligation to retain the former employees on his payroll. They could fire them after a couple of months. As most maintenance is done in the summer, the jobs would quickly be filled by summer students.

That is the EMPLOYEE TAKEOVER POLICY as the employees understand it. The policy had been announced before it had been formulated. It changes quite often. They live in uncertainty. They were told earlier this year that those affected would be receiving a letter by mid-June that "their position is potentially affected." People waited with baited breath for THE letter. Who was going to get it? Nobody got it ... yet. It will come in October. Probably. Who is to be affected? The tour guides have two years to show their set-up is feasible. If it is not, it is likely these positions will be let to private tender. What about the curators?

This new 'company' will affect the community as we will have yet another contractor in the community to compete with existing contractors for jobs. The key word is 'compete'. This will change the fabric of our community. Having to compete means they will be concentrating their energies on hunting down jobs, whereas with the security of a government job they are free to donate their after work time to the many volunteer oraganizations in town; a much needed occupation.

But understand, Parks is not 'privatizing'. Sheila Copps has emphatically stated that. Although she could not make clear in a Peter Gzowski interview exactly what they're doing. Parks employees are confused too. They were told just recently that the most valuable asset of Parks is their employees. Some employees are very sceptical.

After the Yukon's original multiyear effort at reorganization, last year Parks sent all Yukon District employees a Deputy Minister's Distiction Award in the form of a Certificate, accompanied by a letter which read in part "...(you) made a remarkable contribution despite the fact that many of the decisions made have or will impact on your personal life." Some were unhappy because they had never before received letters of appreciation for creativity shown or long hours given freely, but they get a letter when they save money? One particularly unhappy young man received his after being told his job was eliminated.

This reorganization has already had 3 permanent Dawson jobs eliminated 2 full time jobs moved to Whitehorse, and the two vacant positions in Dawson were not filled. These jobs and other proposed job cuts will take 300,000 - 400,000 in wages out of the community. This will undoubtedly affect businesses. The National component of the union working for Parks employees states that "Morally and in all ways the Canadian Government has and must continue to have a responsibility to communities which border on National Parks and Historic

This new direction of Parks Canada will certainly affect not only the lives of the laid-off employees, but also the town that has been their home.

The Sun obtained funding in late 2009 from the City of Dawson, YTG's Heritage Branch and the Community Development Fund to conserve and archive early issues and make them available once again in the public domain. This is a great resource for students, writers and historians, and also for prospective tourists with an interest in Dawson City's life. Each month, we are re-printing our front pages from 20 years ago as a souvenir of our lively history. If you want to see page 2 and beyond, check out our website. Past issues are available there for download. Go to http://klondikesun.com. More will be added periodically when we have time!

Scots of the Yukon, Part 2: The Landmarks

By James A. McQuiston

Now, let's take a look at some landmarks.

Though located nearly 4,000 miles from Scotland, the Yukon River Valley became an exciting adventure for many men of Scottish descent. Rivers, mountains, airports, mineral belts and towns in the Yukon, in Alaska, and in nearby territories, still carry Scottish names.

There are important rivers helping the exploration of the Yukon Valley from Canada to Alaska, by the names of Stewart, Fraser, and Mackenzie. There are mountains with the names McKinley and Ogilvie, and a glacier called Muir. There were outposts like Fort Douglas, Fort McPherson and Fort Selkirk, and towns named Ogilvie, McGrath and Harper.

The McQuesten name, which began on the Isle of Skye, Scotland, carries on in landmarks along the Yukon at McQuesten River and McQuesten Lake, and in the community of McQuesten, home to McQuesten Lodge.

In Faro, Mayo and Whitehorse you'll find roads with some form of the name McQuesten. Then there are the McQuesten Airfield, the McQuesten Flats, and the McQuesten Mineral Belt, which is a geological area in the Yukon gold fields.

Arthur Harper was a partner of Captain Jack and his family had moved from Scotland to America by way of Northern Ireland. Harper's son Walter was the first known man to stand on the summit of Mount McKinley, the tallest mountain in North America. In 1896, a gold prospector named the peak in support of presidential candidate William McKinley, who became the American president the following year. The Native name for this mountain is Denali and, in 2015, this became the official name of the mountain.

What most people don't realize is that before it became known as Mount McKinley this summit was named Densmore's Mountain, after Frank Densmore, who had walked sixty-five miles of the mountain's slopes. The Densmore name comes from Dundemore in Fife, Scotland. So this highest mountain in North America actually has gone by two names of Scottish origin, Densmore and McKinley.

In addition, the Native names for both the Yukon and Klondike rivers were first recorded by Scots. Even the word "Iditarod," voted the most-recognizable word in Alaska, describes an area first made famous by James Beaton, whose father immigrated to America also from the Isle of Skye.

Two more Scots, William Ogilvie and John McGrath, were employed to establish the true boundary between Alaska and the Canadian Yukon. Jack McQuesten established towns, forts and trading posts along the border and was considered the expert on this border, as reported by the U.S. Labor Department. Jack provided supplies and information to both the Canadian and U.S. survey teams who finally made the border official.

Ogilvie, working for Canada, left behind the Canadian town of Ogilvie, and the Ogilvie Mountains. John McGrath, working for the United States, left behind the Alaskan town of McGrath, and the McGrath Gold Ogilvie credits another Scot, George Davidson, with establishing accurate surveying points along the Alaskan shoreline as a member of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey – points that Ogilvie then used to begin his own surveys to establish the Alaskan/Canadian border. It was for William Ogilvie that Captain Jack first wrote his book Recollections.

The Canadian side of the border extends as far west as it does through the efforts of Sir John Macdonald, the Scottishborn first Prime Minister of Canada. This was significant in that it kept the richness of the Klondike River and Dawson City on the Canadian side.

To be continued in future issues.

The RCMP Blotter

By Cst Katrina Harnett

Hello Dawson!! It's hard to believe we are already through July and (dare I say it) getting close to the end of the summer months! It has been a busy couple of months here, and you will likely notice that I haven't been as regular with the blotter article. But don't worry – once we are back to the routine of the fall I'll be up and at 'em again!

Speaking of fall, there's only a few weeks left to go, and our kids will be back in school! I'm sure there are many parents that are jumping with joy...I mean crying tears of sadness...that their littles will be back to the school routine!

To recap the summer a bit, June went by quickly and not without a number of activities taking place. The Dempster to Dawson City Solstice Race was an exceptionally successful event, bringing a large number of runners and their cheering squads to town. We also had a fantastic number of volunteers from our community that assisted with the event in a number of different capacities, and by supporting the participants and cheering on the runners. It always amazes me how the people in this community come together to support and volunteer for these events.

I hope everyone also had the chance to get out and enjoy Canada Day with the parade and the long list of activities held over the duration of the July long weekend. I unfortunately missed those festivities (I feel like I've been missing out on a fair number of events recently!!) but the photos indicate that the people in attendance were having a great time.

We also hosted many people both for MusicFest and the 2016 Moosehide Gathering. I have heard some fantastic stories about the different experiences people had at the Moosehide Gathering, and I know there are many photos being shared on Facebook that show what a wonderful gathering it was. I also heard that Cpl Myke was dancing up a storm at Moosehide...and clearly he did a very good job because it seemed to rain all of Moosehide Gathering weekend!!

Just before the Moosehide Gathering, I had the opportunity to go up river with Sgt Morin and Cpl Myke to check out the First Fish camp at Moosehide. It's a beautiful spot and the youth participating in the camp appeared to be having a great time there!

Next up this month we have our Discovery Days celebration. This I will be in town for (a first for the summer!) and I will be looking forward to seeing you all out to enjoy the parade and the weekend activities.

With the summer months and with more people coming to town for the holiday weekends and special events, we have seen an increase in public drinking and intoxication. I believe there is a general misconception that anything goes in Dawson, but that is not the case! We, like most towns and cities in Canada, have liquor laws that prevent consumption of liquor in a public place and that also prevent public intoxication. Under the Liquor Act, these types of offences can land you a fine anywhere between $200 and $500, or, if you're particularly lucky, a stay at the RCMP "hotel"! (PS: there is no housekeeping service at this hotel!) I know that with the summer weather, the long days and the freedom of summer vacation, people like to indulge in a few frothy beverages. However, sometimes one or two frothy bevvies can lead to one or two too many, which can result in Police attendance! I'm not trying to rain on anyone's parade with this information, but at the end of the day, it comes down to respect for our community and all the people that live here.

I usually try to close with some statistics but I'm going to keep you in suspense until my next article. I will say that we have seen quite an increase in calls for service, which is common over the summer months given the increase in population and the number of travellers through town.

Well, that's it for this time Dawson!! I will see you all out and about over the coming weekends as we enjoy the winddown of our summer months. Until the next time, take care of yourself and others!

Get your mac tuned up, and received a free specialty coffee while you wait.

Fresh Eyes: Meet the New Klondike Sun Office and Production Manager

Story by Dierdre Mulcahy

Alex Hallbom, the new Klondike Sun Production and Office Manager, has been training under Dan Davidson the past few issues, learning how to take on the reigns of production, and brings with him experience in graphic design, volunteer production experience with the Sun and a passion. for community media.

Alex hails from Vancouver and has spent most of his life in different parts of South-West BC. He first came to Dawson in the Summer of 2013, following in the footsteps of friends from BC who made the pilgrimage every year. Since then he has spent two summers and one winter in Dawson and is about to head into his second. He describes this town as "one of the most politically interesting jurisdictions in Canada [with a] very active and strong First Nation [community] and a lot of history" and he is glad it has "no McDonald's". From living here he has learned "that a lot of modern conveniences are pretty unnecessary" and he respects the diverse and off-grid life styles that he finds commonly embraced here.

When he returned to Dawson in March of 2016, he started volunteering for The Klondike Sun, as well as hosting a Canadian folk music radio show on CFYT every Sunday. "I like to be involved in community media projects. It's a fun way to spend time". When the office manager position became available he decided to step up to become more involved. "It's very impressive to have a volunteer run paper in town, as that doesn't exist really in very many places" and he views it as a potential hub for community engagement.

One opportunity he sees for the paper is to start collaborating with the radio to create "something of a media center". Another opportunity he sees is an educational one. He explains, "I'd like to see more people involved in writing, and the whole process. And I would like [The Sun] to be in the future a way that people can get more familiar with the process of writing, of interviewing, of doing design, of doing layout. It could be great if we are able to involve volunteers more at every step". His steady voice indicates the motivation behind this is not about division of labour, but a greater vision. "We are a literary society so I think we could produce more than just the paper. I think the town has a lot of creative output, and we are a part of that and I think we could be more a part of that". His idea would be to access grants through the government that could benefit those volunteering at the paper but also the community at large, that individuals in town might not be able to access on their

He holds weekly office hours where you can drop by with any questions. Alex welcomes anyone who has a hint of interest in writing for the paper or learning about how to get involved in making it happen to get in touch with him for a tea at the Klondike Sun office.
