Noah Richler talks about growing up with Mordecai and his Northern Connection

Story & Photo
By Dan Davidson

"The Yukon is very dear to me," Noah Richler told his audience at the Old Fire Hall on the evening of April 22. "I sort of came of age here one crazy summer, and that was all wrapped up in my father's visit here."

That would be explained later. "I spent time Whitehorse 10 years ago and 40 years ago, when the Capital was the booming spot and the boring jobs were working for government, and the town emptied out in summer when the bush camps filled."

Richler's experience of the North is so bonded with memories of his father that coming here could not help but make him a bit melancholy.

Richler senior died in July 2001, and Noah still finds himself missing the opportunities he felt he should have taken to ask his dad questions about his life and what he made of the world. He admits, though, that it might not have done much good, as Mordecai was not one to sit and commune with his children. Noah says he learned more listening to his father chatting with other writers and adults than he did from him directly.

Specific advice seemed to come in pithy remarks. Commenting on a relationship of Noah's that was souring, Mordecai told him that relationships required working on, and that he'd had to work to get Noah's mother; it hadn't been easy.

"It was my father who greased the way for my first visit here," he said, but went on to admit that it was basically a parental salvage operation.

Noah hadn't really taken well to moving back to Montreal after years spent growing up in London. The move was made because Mordecai felt he needed to get back to the place where his literary roots had received most of their nourishment. This is something Noah has found to be true of his own work, but at the time he had some adjustments to make.

Noah got into the Montreal drug culture, sampling widely and indiscriminately, and his father eventually became aware on it. Mordecai had watched members of his own generation – good friends – go down that road, and, after a father/son trip to New York, took advantage of his connections in the Yukon to get 15 year old Noah a job with a mining exploration crew in the Cassiar Mountains, well away from the influence of his Montreal friends.

"It was the summer than changed my life, really."

Mordecai had come to the Yukon earlier to write a book about Martin Hartwell, the bush pilot who was forced to survive a crash in the North by consuming the remains of one of his dead passengers. In preparation Mordecai travelled the North with Yukon court judge Hank Madison, and planned not only the book, but a slew of magazine articles. After much research and a meeting with the notorious pilot, he decided that there was no moral profit to be found in writing that book.

"No good will come of it," Noah recalls him saying.

Inspired by the North, however, finding in it the landscape and the themes that he prized, he ended up penning Solomon Gursky was Here some years later.

Noah still admires his father for turning away from writing the other book, which had had the gruesome working title "I Ate Nurse Judy", a private in-joke which Noah is pretty certain would never have seen print.

"My father liked originals and pithy characters who'd made a success of themselves against the odds," Noah said.

He quoted extensively from Gursky and from other works to paint a picture of his father's favorite sort of protagonist, the downtrodden man on the make. Mordecai wrote himself out of the circumstances in which he was raised and his central characters try – sometimes succeeding, sometimes failing – to overcome the accidents of birth and social standing one way or another.

Noah noted, during a previous interview, that he probably ended up being a writer because his father was. It does seem to have been the case with all his siblings as well. But he told his audience that he spent years trying to avoid it, and got very little advice from his dad.

On one occasion, there was a critique of a very steamy letter Noah had written to a girlfriend, which he had spilled something on and made the mistake of leaving on the kitchen table to dry overnight. His father appropriated the letter and quizzed his teenage son as to whether he had considered all the implications of letting that missive circulate. Socratic reasoning having failed, he advised him that a certain word had been overused in the writing, and that using it just once was stronger than using it four times.

The evening was promoted as "My Father, The Raven" and Noah spent some time establishing the trickster-like nature of his father's work, especially, but not only, as it appeared in Gursky, where the raven actually appears as a character.

The Solomon of the title displays "an unquenchable itch to meddle and provoke things, to play tricks on the world and its creatures", much like the trickster Raven and, as the book ends, its focal character, a down at the heels writer named Moses Berger, sees a raven sailing off into the sky.

There was a great deal more that was said during the 35 minute prepared talk that stretched out to 50 and then went on to a Q&A session, but Richler did ask those members of his audience who were obviously recording, to keep the evening to themselves, so this account of the event has merely skimmed the surface.

Improvements underway for Yukon tourism data collection

WHITEHORSE (May 9, 2016) —The Yukon government is reaching out to industry to review visitor tracking and seek advice on how to improve reporting of the number of visitors to the territory.

“The Yukon government recognizes the importance of visitor statistics for Yukon businesses and the need to present a full picture of visitation to Yukon,” Minister of Tourism and Culture Elaine Taylor said. “We also recognize that the best people to tell us what works and what can be improved are those in the tourism industry.”

The Yukon government will continue to collect and publish tourism indicators online throughout the engagement process.

“Overall, Yukon visitation is on the rise,” Tourism

Association of Yukon executive director Blake Rogers said. “Tourism Association of Yukon supports the Yukon government’s plan to move forward with a review of its data collection process. Gathering important and useful information is a priority of the business industry here and we look forward to seeing the improvements achieved.”

The tourism sector is critical to a strong and diverse Yukon economy. Yukon businesses attributed approximately $227 million in revenue to tourism in 2014, which is approximately 3.9 per cent of Yukon’s gross domestic product (GDP). There are approximately 3,000 jobs in Yukon’s tourism sector, representing 11 per cent of the total jobs in the territory.

“Industry needs reliable data to inform decisions,” commented Rich Thompson, chair of the Yukon Chamber of Commerce. “We will encourage our members to be an important and reliable part of the data collection process, and will look forward to continued improvement on reporting on the metrics for this important part of the Yukon economy.”

Tourism Yukon Begins Dawson Specific Visitor Survey

Story & Photo
By Dan Davidson

It’s not a secret that the tourism industry operators in Dawson City have spent some years being dissatisfied with the territorial visitor statistics produced by the Yukon’s Tourism Department.

Such numbers speak to the situation in the territory as a whole, but did not, it was felt, do enough to describe what is happening in the Klondike.

It addition to that, it’s been hard to come up with a way of combining the various numbers gathered at the hotels, the Visitor Information Centre, the Dawson City Museum, and the attractions run by both Parks Canada and the Klondike Visitors Association.

It was no surprise then, that a mid-April meeting called by Tourism Yukon to discuss the draft of a new, Klondike specific, Community Visitor Survey, drew a healthy lunch-time crowd of some two dozen to the KIAC Ballroom.

Research Analyst Colleen Madore and her assistant, Ceilidh Bailie, presented the group with a draft 21 item survey tool, developed with two objectives in mind: 1) to estimate the number of visitors that come to Dawson, and 2) to find out more about who they are.

Tourism and Culture will be working with Highways and Public Works on this project, setting up traffic counters at the area’s exit points on the North Klondike Highway and west on the Top of the World. In addition there will be surveyors posted intermittently along the routes to record the number of people in a vehicle, as well as the type and origin. There will also be an effort made to capture exit data from the Dawson Airport.

Visitors will be asked to respond to a series of questions asked orally and checked off by the surveyors, including questions about trip planning, where they are from, mode of travel, how they learned about the place, what they did (or wanted to do) while they were here and what type of accommodations they used while in the region.

Reception of the draft survey was fairly positive, although there were some concerns that it might be too long, and suggestions for shortening some areas while being more specific in others.

The presenters pledged to take these comments back to Whitehorse and work on modifications.

There wasn’t much time to do that. The surveys were due to begin on May 1, with the opening of the Visitor Information Centre and end on September 30, when the VIC closes.

The tourism industry reps in Dawson were very interested in the design of the proposed visitor survey.

Uffish Productions: Fighting Fires is for the Experts

By Dan Davidson

So, Prime Minister Trudeau visited Fort McMurray last Friday. In certain quarters people have been complaining that he hasn't been there ever since the fire began. It was a dereliction of duty. It was a clear sign that he hated Alberta, conveniently forgetting the fact that he had visited there just a week or so earlier and had had talks with Premier Rachel Notley.

Everyone on that side of the argument seemed to ignore the historical fact that the last couple of times that Prime Ministers of both Liberal and Conservative stripes have immediately visited disaster areas, it has been shown demonstratively that they were in the way, that all the security and protocol which goes with the office, no matter who is holding it, tends to disrupt normal operating procedures.

That's even worse when the procedures in place are for abnormal circumstances. I have participated as the press liaison in a number of tabletop EMS operations here, and it's pretty clear that the role of politicians in such cases is to back off and let the experts do their work.

Now that Justin Trudeau has done what so many angry voices on Facebook and Twitter said they wanted him to do – said repeatedly that it was his sacred duty to do - we can be certain that those same people will claim that it was just a publicity stunt and wax eloquently and bitterly about the number of selfies that will have been taken while he was there on Friday morning.

People seem to have forgotten that for most of the last term Prime Minister Harper traveled with a complete television production crew, tasked with shooting lots of video footage and assembling the whole thing into a weekly video blog entitled 24/7. Of course, so few people actually watched this broadcast that it is perhaps not surprising it has been forgotten. I happen to have been on the PMO's distribution list since Mr. Harper's visit to Dawson City some years ago, so I was sent the link regularly and did watch a few episodes just to see what it was all about.

It was about controlling the message (due to not trusting any of the networks to get it right) and burnishing the brand. All of this was done at taxpayers' expense. Had it been done at Conservative Party expense I would not have minded so much.

That's not to say the Mr. Trudeau isn't doing the same thing every time he poses with someone's cellphone, but it doesn't cost us a dime when he does it.

Back to Fort McMurray, however. The social media traffic on this has been horrendous. Premier Notley's budget forecast, which predicted a lower expenditure for firefighting in August this year (this is May, remember), has been blamed for the fire not being controlled. Prime Minister Trudeau's announcement that the federal government is matching donations to the Red Cross for Fort Mac relief has been interpreted to mean that this is all the Liberal government is doing, when that it clearly not the case.

Some postings have claimed that radical conservationists started the initial fires on purpose. Others have spun it as an attack by ISIS, and gone so far as to suggest it has something to do with the number of Syrian refugees we have recently let into the country.

Never mind that thousands of fires every year are started by careless campers and cigarettes thrown out of vehicular windows. In particular, people are forgetting that much of the boreal forest in the North is at that final stage where sap soaked evergreens are ripe for burning – and that this is part of the way that the forest renews itself.

The current rule is that we fight fires only when they threaten human habitation, businesses and what have been termed "values".

The reality is that when a fire gets as big as the one that has been called the Beast, it creates its own weather, and cannot be controlled or extinguished without the assistance of natural weather patterns containing lots of moisture and favorable winds.

The reality is that in such circumstances anyone other than the fire suppression experts and those needed to assist them are simply in the way and should keep away until things have calmed down a bit.

Otherwise they run the risk of being named "men in blue suits" and being accused of taking fighters off the line for photo opportunities and invitations to sing the national anthem for visiting officials. We've seen that before, and we don't need to see it again.

LETTER

May is Celiac Disease Awareness Month

I came to the Yukon in the spring of 2012. In August, I noticed a full page story. More Americans have gluten problems than once thought" in the Yukon News.

As a diagnosed Celiac of over 30 years, I was curious about the availability of support and reference material for celiacs in the Yukon. My findings left me with the realization that creating and administering CCA Yukon Satellite Group (supported and endorsed by the CCA Edmonton Chapter) would be beneficial for our territory. Newly diagnosed celiacs and those choosing to be gluten free can arrange to have a shopping tour, receive information helpful to living gluten free, and have a point of contact here in the Yukon to voice their questions or concerns. Fundraising has resulted in providing many new gluten free related books to the Yukon Library for information ease of access to all Yukon residents.

13 Things you need to know about Celiac Disease - Because Celiac Disease is not a Fad

1. Celiac Disease is an Autoimmune Disease (other examples of autoimmune diseases are type 1 diabetes, rheumatoid arthritis, and multiple sclerosis).

2. There are over 300 Known Symptoms of Celiac Disease. It can be difficult to diagnose because it affects people differently and some people with celiac disease show no symptoms.

3. Digestive Symptoms Are NOT the Only Symptoms of Celiac Disease, other symptoms include iron deficiency anemia, fatigue, bone or joint pain, seizures or migraines, depression, osteoporosis, and an itchy skin rash called dermatitis herpetiformis (DH).

4. More People Have Celiac Disease Than Crohns, Colitis, and Cystic Fibrosis Combined.

5. Celiac Disease is Hereditary - people with a first-degree relative with celiac disease (parent, child, sibling) have a 1 in 10 risk of developing celiac disease.

6. Left Untreated, Celiac Disease Can Lead to Additional Serious Health Problems - these include the development of other autoimmune diseases such as chronic gastrointestinal disorders.

7. Many People with Celiac Disease Report Having "Brain Fog" - problems with staying focused and paying attention, lapses in short term memory).

8. 1 in 100 People in Canada have Celiac Disease ñ on average in North America, it takes 10 years before a correct diagnosis is made.

9. The Later the Age of Diagnosis, the Greater the Chance of Developing Another Autoimmune Disorder.

10. It is Estimated That Up to 20% of People Diagnosed with Celiac Disease Have Persistent Symptoms While on a Gluten-Free Diet. There are several causes to poorly responsive celiac disease, including Small Intestinal Bacterial Overgrowth and Pancreatic Insufficiency.

11. Consuming the Smallest Amount of Gluten Can Make a Person with Celiac Disease very ill.

12. Commonly, People with Celiac Disease Experience Several Nutritional Deficiencies (such as iron, calcium, vitamin D, zinc, B6, B12, folate).

13. 15 to 25% of People with Celiac Disease Are Also Affected by Dermatitis Herpetiformis ñ this is a skin manifestation of celiac disease. Extremely itchy bumps or blisters appear on both sides of the body.

The availability of gluten free food in our grocery stores is great and the managers are always open to suggestions of bringing in more products that you identify for them.

My dining experiences in the Yukon have left me with a handful of restaurants that take the "diagnosed Celiac gluten free requirement of zero cross contamination" seriously. There are many restaurants that say they have gluten free options (example: quinoa, chicken wings, pizza crust) on the menu, but when challenged, I found that the products used were not gluten free certified, or the preparation was done in a gluten filled environment thus allowing for cross contamination which is toxic to a diagnosed celiac.

This month numerous events are being held across our country to promote awareness and education for celiacs who require a zero tolerance gluten free diet in order to live. The CCA Yukon Support Group will be available for you to drop-in at the Whitehorse Library Community Room on May 15, in Dawson at the front entrance to the hospital on May 21, and there will be a Celiac / Gluten Free information table staffed at the annual Diabetes Walk on May 29 in Whitehorse.

Check out the Events listing in your local newspaper closer to these dates for their location and times.

I hope to see you at one of them. Volunteer assistance is always appreciated

He Wants to Pick Your Bones

By Chris Collin

On Wednesday night, May 11th, Dr. Grant Zazula, a Paleontologist from the Yukon Government, gave a talk entitled: "Mammoths in the Klondike 'Gold Rush,' and Other Random Thoughts About Old Bones." He began by talking about how it was amazing that many people do not realize that dinosaurs were long gone by the time people first appeared on the planet. He likes to work on what he calls "sub-zero heroes" - mammoths, and creatures like that who lived in the Yukon thousands, but not millions of years ago, despite his eight year old son's fascination with dinosaurs.

He continued his talk with the ideas of climate change. For example, North, and South America were not connected at one time, and the Mediterranean area was an open waterway as well, two of many such waterways all over the world. This allowed warm water to flow freely around the Earth, and resulted in a very warm time of no ice at all. This affected what animals lived where. However, plate tectonics had the continents moving, and, as the open waterways were closed, the Earth began to cool, which happened about three million years ago. As this happened, animals changed. E.g., camels on Ellesmere island developed the split toe to walk on snow. Of course, this also helps them today to walk on sand, but, it was actually a cold weather adaptation.

As waters lowered, Yukon, and Alaska were connected to Siberia in a land mass called "Beringia," which was actually free of ice. All sorts of creatures crossed over in both directions. And, when the Gold Rush happened in 1898, so many fossils of these animals were discovered by the placer miners, that it prompted a "Fossil Rush," as universities, and museums from all over the world sent scientists to the Klondike, taking out some 40,000 bones of ancient animals. Placer miners to this day are a huge source of ancient fossils, and the paleontologists roam the goldfields to see what the miners have dug up.

A major collector in the Yukon from the 1960-90's was Dr. Richard Harington. He searched for animals that had been covered by "loess," the dust that blows around especially in dry areas, and eventually settles. Over thousands of years, it can reach 60m in thickness. There was a volcano in the Aleutian islands that emitted ash about 29,000 years ago, making the "Dawson Tephra." This averages 30cm thick, and is used as a time marker - fossils under it are older than 29,000 years, and above it are younger. Dr. Zazula also showed pictures of Permafrost that was 750,000 years old, and had survived previous global warming cycles. He noted that Climate Change deniers tried to use this information to prove that Climate Change today does not exist, and does not melt Permafrost, which Dr. Zazula stated was quite wrong.

In his work, he has collected about 25,000 specimens, notably woolly mammoths, steppe bison, and the Yukon horse, a 700,000 year old sample of which provided DNA for the oldest sequencing of a horse ever. However, he seemed particularly interested in the rarer animals, like the American mastodon, ground sloths, giant beavers, camels, and flat headed peccaries. These animals need a warmer climate, and while quite common in southern regions, they are much rarer in the Yukon. He feels that they came north during warmer times, and disappeared as it became colder. And, as it warmed, the Bering Strait re-appeared, preventing these animals from migrating to Asia.

He said that he feels that the woolly rhinoceros, which originated in the Tibet area, and moved north into Siberia should be found in North America, but, it never has been. He was no idea why, but, he would offer a lot to find one!

He finished with observations of our modern age, where warming is again happening. And, this is seen in more animal migration, as deer, cougars, and other animals have been arriving in Yukon for the last 50 years or so. And, skunks are now in northern BC, and may enter the Yukon soon. He answered a question from the audience about whether bison will be moving north as things warm. He says it will depend on rainfall. Bison thrive in certain conditions, and the amount of rain will influence their rate of success, but, he noted that they are doing very well at the moment, increasing in faster numbers than hunters can kill.

Overall, it was a very interesting talk, attended by a diverse group of Dawsonites. He noted that there were many placer miners in the audience, and he acknowledged they are known for how well they co-operate with the scientists for the betterment of scientific knowledge.

The First World War: Counting the Cost to the Yukon

Story & Photos
By Dan Davidson

The North and the First World War conference got under way on Monday evening, May 9, with a reception and gathering at the McBride Museum, including a couple of hours for people to get to know each other, and those new to the Yukon to have a tour of the Museum and participate in a historical treasure hunt.

Yukon Historical and Museums Association president, Sally Robinson welcomed everyone to the conference and predicted a productive and pleasant three more days.

Monday had already seen a full day workshop, held at the Yukon Transportation Museum, on the subject of Cultural Organizations and Traumatic Events, facilitated by New Zealand's Sarah Murray, the Curatorial Manager of the Canterbury Museum in Christchurch, where there was a major earthquake in 2011.

The academic meat of the conference, and most of the actual events, was to be found the next day at the Coast High Country Inn where conference co-chairs Dr. Brent Slobodin and Dr. Ken Coates outlined the purpose of the conference, which was to commemorate and stir up interest in a portion of Yukon, which they feel is very significant, but which has generally been ignored.

There is a tendency, in Yukon studies, to start with the Gold Rush and then jump straight to the building of the Alaska Highway. Coates is determined that a lot of significant things happened as the so-called Great War began and flowed from its aftermath.

The first speaker of the day, Dr. Tim Cook, was tasked with providing a national and international context for what would flow from the war. Anniversaries matter, he said, and we were never quite the same after the events of that war. It sowed the seeds of some current advances and a great man of our current world problems. We remember it, but we don't celebrate its importance.

"We mark the First World War for its terrible cost to our nation. We were a country of 8 million and we put more than 680,000 Canadians in uniform."

He spoke of different strands of memory, one being the strand of death and destruction, another strand being the realization that the war "pushed us towards full political autonomy."

Canada had no say in whether it went to war in 1914. That would not happen again.

Later in the morning, Dr. Ken Coates tackled the issue of the social revolution in the territory which was a result of changes caused by the war. Summed up briefly, Coates says that the Yukon's response to the war showed that it cared, that it wanted to be part of the Canadian experience. It raised soldiers and money in great amounts and lost both. Added together with the loss of 10% of Dawson's population when the Princess Sophia sank just before the end of the war, the territory was sadly depleted.

The national government responded by showing that it really didn't care. Gold prices were down, the population was down; the territory was likened to a boom town mining camp that was about to be shut down, and the federal government nearly did just that.

If the territory felt marginalized before the war, it felt more so after, and would continue in that state until the Second World War provided the stimulus of the Alaska Highway project.

There were 24 lecture presentations over the three days. Several later articles will cover some of the rest of them.

Modest affordable rental housing projects approved for Whitehorse and Dawson

Moint news release

WHITEHORSE (May 12, 2016) —Two Yukon developers have been awarded capital funding support for the construction and operation of affordable rental housing projects in Whitehorse and Dawson.

Chief Isaac Incorporated, the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in business arm, will receive $450,000 for a 14-unit development in Dawson. Nine of the 14 units will be allocated for affordable housing tenants. The total project cost is estimated at $3.97 million.

360° Design Build, owned by Antonio Zedda and Jack Kobayashi, will receive $500,000 to construct urban micro-apartments on Hawkins Street in Whitehorse. The four-story building will consist of furnished one-bedroom apartments. Ten of the 14 units will be allocated for affordable housing tenants. The total project cost is estimated to be $2.91 million.

"Our Government understands that all Canadians need and deserve housing that is safe, adequate and affordable," Yukon Member of Parliament Larry Bagnell said on behalf of the Minister responsible for Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation the Honourable Jean-Yves Duclos. "Through Budget 2016, we have doubled the investment in the Affordable Housing Initiative to help build stronger communities from coast-to-coast-to-coast, including here in Yukon."

Both of the successful projects will receive a capital funding contribution towards the construction of the affordable rental apartments. Funding support for the housing projects is provided through the Investment in Affordable Housing agreement between Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation and Yukon Housing Corporation.

"I would like to congratulate the developers for their innovative housing proposals," Minister responsible for the Yukon Housing Corporation the Honourable Stacey Hassard said. "Low- and moderate-income Yukoners will soon have more choice for affordable rental accommodations."

The Chief Isaac Group of Companies was established in 1984 to own and operate the business interests of the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in, a self-governing Yukon First Nation based in Dawson.

360° Design Build is a Yukon-based design, construction and development company located in Whitehorse. With more than 50 urban housing units completed since 2002, 360°

Design Build has taken a hands-on approach to design/build residential projects in Yukon.

Backgrounder: project descriptions Chief Isaac Incorporated housing proposal - Dawson

Location: The new building will be located in Dawson on the corner of Queen Street and Second Avenue. The old Cassiar building currently occupies the lot.

Description: The new building features design highlights that blend with Dawson's turn of the century ambience and building styles. The two-storey structure will blend in with existing properties and will not stand out as a modern structure among the neighbouring historic buildings. The building will meet the requirements of the Heritage Advisory Committee and their guidelines. Structure: Constructed of durable low-maintenance materials, the energy efficient building will accommodate rooftop gardening planters for tenants. A common roof-top patio will also be included. Each apartment will feature its own private balcony to provide natural light, fresh air and connection to the outdoors and the street ambience.

Apartments: The barrier-free building will incorporate 13 residential units and one commercial unit on the ground floor. The building will include nine affordable single-bedroom suites and four two-bedroom suites at market rents.

360° Design Build Urban Micro Apartments -Whitehorse

Location: The building will be constructed at 300 block Hawkins Street in Whitehorse.

Description: The building is designed to appeal to young single people by being centrally located in the downtown Whitehorse area, close to amenities and services. The design of the building will fit into the character of the neighbourhood, with the top floor setback from the building edge to provide a scaled transition fitting with the smaller scaled buildings in the area. As many new residents who move to Yukon have few possessions, these apartments will be partially furnished as a first stage for tenants seeking to transition to longer-term housing options.

Structure: The building will be four-stories constructed to energy-efficient standards. The ground floor will be commercial space with two single bedroom units, and the upper three floors will house 10 single bedrooms residential apartments. The top floor will also have two two-bedroom market rental units. All floors will be serviced with an elevator. A roof top deck will be available to all tenants. A bicycle storage area will be included on the ground floor. Apartments: The 10 furnished single bedroom affordable housing units will be approximately 360 square feet in size

Government of Canada Supports Sustainable Agriculture Business in Yukon

CanNor investments grow indigenous community garden and greenhouse projects

WHITEHORSE, YT, May 12, 2016 /CNW/ - Today, the Honourable Navdeep Bains, Minister of Innovation, Science and Economic Development and Minister responsible for CanNor, announced an investment of over $56,000 to support northern economic growth through self-sustainable agriculture projects in two indigenous communities in Yukon. These projects will also strengthen food security in these communities.

Both Little Salmon Carmacks First Nation and the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in First Nation have community greenhouses that have been providing fresh produce to local residents, tourists, and community members in need. As locally grown and high-quality food has become more available, the growing demand for fresh produce has surpassed the supply. This funding will support exploring the feasibility of expanding the existing community gardens and greenhouses in these two communities.

Quick Facts

To support Little Salmon

Carmacks First Nation community greenhouse project, CanNor is contributing $24,800, the First Nation is contributing $3,100, and the Government of Yukon is providing $3,100.

In addition to exploring expanding the greenhouse in Dawson City, an investment of $31,349 from CanNor, complimented by $13,120 from Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in

First Nation and $10,000 from the Government of Yukon will support the relocation and renovations of the community's organic greenhouse and community garden. The contribution will also support hiring a Coordinator to manage the site and to deliver educational workshops and food preservation programming.

Yukon MLAs urge Bank of Canada to ensure inclusion of northern women

Recommendation to include three Yukon women on new bank notes Motion receives unanimous support

WHITEHORSE (April 28, 2016) – A motion urging the Governor of the Bank of Canada to consider featuring a Yukon woman on a new Canadian bank note was passed unanimously yesterday in the Yukon Legislative Assembly.

The motion urges the governor to consider three notable Yukon women: Martha Louise Purdy Black, OBE, the second woman ever to be elected to the House of Common of Canada; Tagish storyteller Angela Sidney, CM; and Shaaw Tláa, also known as Kate Carmack, co-discoverer of gold in the Klondike.

The motion also asks the Bank of Canada to ensure that Canadian women will continue to be featured on future bank notes, in recognition of their many contributions to shaping history and life in Canada. Lastly, the motion encourages the Bank of Canada to include women from Yukon and the North on its Independent Bank Note Advisory Council.

“There are so many notable women in our history,” Watson Lake MLA Patti McLeod said. “We have Canadian women who were pioneers in their fields, in everything from medicine to politics to leadership.”

The Government of Canada announced on International Women’s Day in March that the Bank of Canada would undertake public consultation to select an iconic Canadian woman to be featured on the first bank note of its next series.

“This motion follows up on a letter that I sent to Governor Poloz earlier this spring,” Yukon Party Leader Darrell Pasloski said. “These three women made great contributions to life and history in the North, and their contributions to Yukon and Canada make them very suitable candidates to represent Canadian women on a bank note.”

Yukon investing in services to support families of children with disabilities

WHITEHORSE (May 11, 2016) —Based on demand and increasing needs, the Government of Yukon is investing $120,000 for speech and language services within the Family Supports for Children with Disabilities program.

“This investment will provide an additional option for children and families seeking speech and language services, and will complement existing contracted services,” Minister of Health and Social Services Mike Nixon said. “We would like to acknowledge and appreciate the important role played by the Disability Programs Advisory Committee in providing support and input into this initiative.”

The expansion of speech and language services is effective this spring. Services may include assessment, treatment, consultation and programming to address a child’s need in the home or community. Children with a broad range of physical, mental, social or emotional impairment or limitations will benefit from these services.

“It is important that all children receive the help they need to reach their full communicative potential,” Nixon added. “The referral to speech and language pathology services ensures early identification and management of both communication and swallowing disorders, which in turn enables maximal social, academic and vocational integration of our children.”

The Family Supports for Children with Disabilities program provides a range of supports to Yukon families to help them care for their child with a disability, to ensure they get the best possible start in life.

Health Investment Fund helps develop strong communities

WHITEHORSE (May 12, 2016) —The Arctic Institute of Community-Based Research and Yukon Circle of Change will share $18,850 through the Yukon government’s Health Investment Fund.

“We are pleased to support both organizations in their work promoting health and social change,” Minister of Health and Social Services Mike Nixon said. “The Health Investment Fund encourages projects that enable youth to thrive and individuals to work together towards wellness, and these initiatives further those goals.”

The Arctic Institute of Community-Based Research will deliver a Yukon Food Security Roundtable. Food security and food sovereignty are pressing issues throughout the North and have been identified as priority concerns for the health and well-being of all northern residents.

“Funding from the Health Investment Fund is contributing importantly to the upcoming Yukon Food Security Roundtable and related events,” Arctic Institute of Community-Based Research executive director Jody Butler Walker said. “Access to nutritious, affordable, culturally appropriate food is an important determinant of the health of Yukon residents, and we are grateful for the Health Investment Fund’s support to move towards a more food secure Yukon.”

The Yukon Circle of Change promotes social change through their Be the Change Movement, which provides support and training in resiliency building by taking negative peer pressure and turning it into positive peer support.

“We are so thrilled to be able to offer the Be the Change Movement from the schools out into the community at large,” Yukon Circle of Change president Christine Klaassen-St Pierre said.

Two levels of funding are offered through the Health Investment Fund. Groups can apply for contributions from $100 to $10,000. For projects over $500, the next application deadlines are May 20, September 20 and January 20. Applications for projects under $500 can be sent at any time.

Organizations are encouraged to contact the Health Investment Fund before the deadline for assistance with developing project ideas.

Anxious to get moving after the long winter?

With the arrival of Spring, you may be itching to get outside to jog a few miles, tee up for a round of golf or enjoy a long awaited hike. However before doing so, it's wise to prepare your body, especially if you were less active during the winter.

If you have not been active for a while, see your doctor before starting any new exercise program. After your doctor signs off on your health, begin with an easy walking regimen and a stretching routine, and then increase your time in small increments each week. This approach will help prepare you for most casual sports and activities. After a few weeks of conditioning you will build up flexibility and endurance to move forward with more intensity.

We at Victoria Gold encourage you to 'think safety' by remembering to condition your body gradually so that you may enjoy a long active season without injury.

Victoria Gold Corp. plans to construct, operate, and close the Eagle Gold Project located northeast of Mayo, in the Dublin Gulch claims region. New Grader Station will be big improvement

BY PALMA BERGER
Sun Staff

THE NEW GRADER STATION is located about 5 miles out of Dawson. Superintendent Duff Felker reports that the new building has much the same square footage that the three buildings in the old Compound had, with the added advantage of being a more efficient building out of which to work.

The new building has a wash bay for cleaning the vehicles. It will have all the run off water go through a filter system that eliminates all the oil from the water. Other new additions are a welding bay and a conference room where in-house meetings and training sessions can be held.

Another change is a very much improved air handling unit that exchanges the air in the shops thus eliminating noxious fumes from the air and helping to control the temperature in the office area and the building.

The building is heated with in-floor heating from fuel fired boilers that circulate a hot water and glycol mixture through a series of tubes in the cement slab. There are also unit heaters above the overhead doors that will act like a hot air curtain that will keep cold air out of the shop in the winter when the doors are opened.

But is this environmentally safe out there on the tailings? Duff explained that to meet the environmental standards as set out by Health Canada they had to import a fine sand from the Flat Creek gravel pit to make the septic system. To ensure that only clean water goes into the septic system all waste water from the shop is filtered through an oil separator filter system prior to going into the septic system.

They were required to make salt sand storage areas for the winter sanding material so that no chemicals leach into the tailings rock and then into the ground water. For their fuel and waste oil they are using double walled enviro-tanks.

The new facility was built by Ketza Construction out of Whitehorse. They used other companies as well for subtrades for heating, electrical, brick laying and duct work. The main steel structure was purchased from, and assembled by, a company from Vancouver.

There will be one more building moved out to Quigley. That is the old grader station from Boundary. It is a much better structure than the one left behind in Dawson. It will be taken apart, moved to the new shop site, and reassembled for cold storage.

With the new site, Duff explained they expect to have an even quicker response to airport and highway problems than from in town.

Dawsonites will have to get used to not seeing those big orange trucks turning left at the end of Fifth Ave. as they head out to the highway.

The crew from the highway compound take an uncharacteristically stationary pose next to the buidings they will soon be leaving.

The Yukon River Fools Everybody: No flood after all

BY DAN DAVIDSON
Sun Staff

WHILE THERE WERE MANY advance concerns expressed about conditions on the Yukon River this year - everything from careful concern by community authorities to near panic by Northern Affairs - the river has confounded predictions once again and has gone out peacefully.

The siren went off shortly after 1 PM on Monday, May 6, bringing the usual crowd of concerned river watchers to see what was happening. By the time they got to the dyke, there wasn't much to be seen.

The unofficial winner of the annual IODE Breakup Ice Pool is Kip Fisher from Whitehorse. IODE representative Joyce Caley didn't think that was likely to change, but the organization always waits about a week before making it official just in case something comes up.

Fisher will take home $2,799 for coming closest to the actual break-up time of 12:56 PM. The money for the prize was raised by selling 3,737 tickets at a cost of $1 each. What remains after the cost of promoting the contest is used by the organization to finance its

There wasn't a great deal of excitement when the siren went off, and those who got there after the ice pan shifted wouldn't have seen much. One eye witness described it by simply saying that the whole pan in front of town moved down river. Sure enough, later in the day you could see jumble ice where the IODE's tripod had been, and the tripod itself sitting upturned on the ice, about three or four hundred metres downstream from where it had been.

"No break-up is ever like any other one," said IODE member Myrna Butterworth. It would also seem that no break-up is very predictable either. Observers had felt that this was the year the dyke might be tested, but so far that hasn't been the case.

It wasn't over that night, though. The ice pan sat quiescent during the day. During the night the river rose and fell a number of times, shattering the pan and fragmenting it into chunks that were sailing off down the river the next morning at 8:30. Several times during May 7 the river rose and fell, causing people to wonder if earlier concerns about the dyke being tested might still be valid. By evening, however, the shore was littered with ice bergs and the river was flowing free.

The flush that finally broke up the Yukon was provided by floes moving down river from 40 kilometres away on May 5. Water had been low here, which is one reason why the Yukon River was so slow to move.

"We think it's bringing forward a fair wave of water, which is what we need here to break the ice, to flush it," Emergency Measures Coordinator Cayen said that evening.

The Sun obtained funding in late 2009 from the City of Dawson, YTG's Heritage Branch and the Community Development Fund to conserve and archive early issues and make them available once again in the public domain. This is a great resource for students, writers and historians, and also for prospective tourists with an interest in Dawson City's life. Each month, we are re-printing our front pages from 20 years ago as a souvenir of our lively history. If you want to see page 2 and beyond, check out our website. Past issues are available there for download. Go to <http://klondikesun.com>. More will be added periodically (heh) when we have time!

In 1996, we became a bi-weekly. Should 20 Years Ago be a feature of every issue of the Sun from now on? Let us know.

History Hunter: Words and music to go to war too

by Michael Gates

Yukon News, Friday April 15, 2016

Used with the author's permission

When hundreds of Yukon men went overseas to war, their spirits were lifted somewhat by the rousing poems and songs composed by their compatriots back home.

It's a long way to dear old Klondike,

It's a long way to go;

It's a long way to golden Yukon - To the homeland of the sourdough.

You may sing of Tipperary.

Strand and Leicester Square -

It's a longer mush to old Klondike.

But my heart's right there.

There is something about mustering for "King and Country" that stirs a nascent lyrical instinct of the heart in men and women when a nation goes to war.

The two stanzas above, which were sung to the tune of "It's a Long way to Tipperary," were composed a few weeks after war was declared by Canada, against Germany, in August, 1914. The words were penned by John Dines, who was referred to in the Dawson Daily News as Dawson's troubadour. When not working for the Dawson City Fire Department, he was a musician and band leader who performed and entertained for dances in Dawson.

The Boyle detachment was sponsored by mining millionaire Joe Boyle and was to be sent overseas as a unit to fight in a machine gun battery. The detachment already had a mascot, a shaggy-haired hound named Jack; now they had a rousing song to "sing with zest when they sit about the campfires on the way to Berlin."

The Great War had a catalytic effect upon the artistic endeavours of many Yukon poets and troubadours. These composers created lively pieces to perform at social events and fundraisers for the Patriotic Fund, the Yukon Comfort Fund, and various other charitable wartime causes.

In the fall of 1915, the Whitehorse chapter of the International Order, Daughters of the Empire (IODE), received a hundred copies of the words of a song written by George Warnicker of Vancouver. It was titled "Why Don't You Wear a Uniform?" and its obvious intent was to shame young fit men into volunteering in the Canadian Expeditionary Force. Its effect upon the ears of the Whitehorse men who read the words or heard the song is not known, but a hundred or so men from the southern Yukon eventually enlisted.

When the men of the George Black contingent were preparing to leave Dawson in October of 1916, a gathering was held in the Moose Hall the evening of October 7. Stirring patriotic songs were sung by the community; popular favourites at the time included "Oh Canada," "The Maple Leaf Forever," and "Rule Britannia." The latter song acknowledged that Canada was still considered to be part of the British Empire. But the hit of the evening, according to the newspaper, was little Gordon McKeen when he performed his own composition titled "The Yukon Boys Will Surely Win Where the English Channel Flows."

Jack Suttles, an American from the Klondike, had once been a member of a minstrel group, and had toured the continent before coming north. His name appears in the Dawson Daily News a number of times with reference to his musical and cinematographic creations. In May of 1916, he created the song titled "Life Along the Yukon," whose lyrics were enough to instill homesickness in the heartiest Yukon soldiers:

You may talk about your rivers, from the Volga to the Rhine.

But of all the pictured places, there is none of them like mine.

Where the mighty Yukon

River is flowing to the sea

Life along the Yukon is good enough for me.

The tune continues for several more verses, but you get the idea. In early December, 1916, Willie Chisholm, described as one of the Yukon's most noted poets, wrote a letter to the Dawson Daily News, portraying in verse the daily routine at the Willows Camp in Victoria. This was where the men were receiving training before heading overseas as an infantry company.

Marie Joussaye Fotheringham, whose husband, a former Mountie, had enlisted with the George Black contingent, compiled her own literary work into a small booklet of poems titled "Selections from Anglo Saxon Songs." The booklet sold for a dollar a copy, and half the proceeds were donated "to provide Field Comforts for our Yukon Soldiers at the Front." All of the men who enlisted were to receive a free copy from the

George Black fonds, 81/107 #3/Yukon Archives

Women's Protective League in Dawson.

Fotheringham was no novice to the literary establishment; she had already published a book of poems, including her most well-known work, Only a Working Girl. The Canadian Encyclopedia online describes her as Canada's first working-class poet. Among her Anglo Saxon verses was "Good Luck to the Yukon Contingent." She gathered over 200 four-leaf clovers from the parade grounds of Minto Park in Dawson. Each was carefully mounted on cards bearing the aforementioned poem, which included the following:

And so I am sending the token,

Rich with their magic charm,

Straight from the heart of the Yukon,

To guard you and keep you from harm.

We feel that your sturdy manhood,

Your courage tried and true,

With the luck of the British army

Will carry you safely through.

In January, 1917, Martha Black accompanied her husband overseas, serving as first-aid attendant to the men aboard the troop ship the S.S. Canada.

Charles Sedley Barwell, with the Yukon Infantry Company, created the following impromptu shanty, which was sung lustily on deck between dashes of salt-sea spray, demonstrating that the one and only lady voyager among the 1500 passengers was far from being an unwelcome mess mate or any damper on the soldiers' merriment:

We have stolen Mrs. Black and we will not bring her back,

'Till the Germans quit and when the Allies win

'Till we nail the Union Jack to the Kaiser's chimney stack,

And we toast the Yukon

Daughters in Berlin.

The only poet who did not contribute any verse that made reference to Dawson City or the Klondike was the world famous Bard of the Yukon, Robert W. Service, who served as a journalist, then as an ambulance driver during the war. The closest he came to mentioning the territory was in the poem "The Man From Athabasca." It was about a man from the Canadian north, who yearned for home, and charmed his fellow soldiers with stories of his life in the northland. Service's poems were published in Rhymes of a Red Cross Man. It became a best seller that topped the international book sales for many months.

We learned more about Robert Service and his wartime poetry at "The North and World War I" conference, which took place in Whitehorse and Dawson City May 9-15.

Michael Gates is a Yukon historian and sometimes adventurer based in Whitehorse. He is currently writing a book on the Yukon in World War I. Mike was one of the founders of this newspaper. You can contact him at msgates@northwestel.net
