In the Garden

By Grace Snider

For My Mom

It was in the garden where the girl first noticed the delicate nature of her mother's skin. This seemingly tough-skinned woman, how easily she burned, even though she carefully protected most of her surfaces from the sun's harsh rays. Her body was covered from head to toe in St. Paul's Thrift Store finds: worn-out denim sneakers, knee-high socks, long-legged pants, a long-sleeved shirt, her head topped with an ill-fitting, wide-brimmed hat. Nonetheless there remained fragile, exposed areas.

During Dawson's hot and endless summer days, the girl watched as her mother's uncovered skin turned angry and red. She carried the scent of her mother's burning flesh. Over days, the skin would eventually succumb, soothing itself into a calmer brown. A crescent shape, as if created by an artist's stencil, would form on her mother's low back - layered arcs of sun-painted skin. This a result of her tirelessly bending over for hours on end. Her mother's bared back uncomplaining, quietly labouring.

It seemed to the girl that her mother performed the weeding chore not as an act of necessity, but one from which she derived pleasure. Her mother's hands silently digging into the giving earth, rooting out the weeds, provided more nourishing space for the desirable plants. The garden was where her mother seemed most relaxed, a place where she was free to flourish; a place of rare solitude.

For as long as the girl had memory, her mother had spent a great deal of her summer days in the garden, weeding. Mid-May signalled the last frost, the rising of the full "Flower Moon". The garden was tilled, arranged in ragged furrowed rows, seeds planted by a then-enthusiastic family of farmers. As the moon waned, so did the family's eagerness. Yet the mother diligently carried on, would be the one to do the majority of the work, nurturing the plants to completion. The mother was well aware that this almost-one-acre of anticipated vegetables would provide months of nourishment for their family of eight, and often for others who gathered at their table, hungry. Any soul needing sustenance would be fed by this garden, by this woman.

Within the girl's family, it was an expectation to help tend the garden, something that all members did if they wanted to have food on the table, if they wanted to eat. The girl resented this work, wished instead to be away, to be playing with her friends. She asked herself what fate had brought such hardship into her life and not to the lives of her friends. They seemed free of such onerous family chores and obligations. Why was she born into a family that needed to grow their own food to make ends meet?

In her defiant teen years, the girl expressed her displeasure about working in the garden; vocal, complaining. The mother continued to toil, silently. And, in what seemed like an act of retaliation, for her "Sweet 16th" summer birthday, the girl was presented with a gift from her father - a garden hoe - its varnished wooden handle wound round with a silky pink ribbon, its gleaming blade topped with an extravagant pink bow. She recalled her father's sarcastic words, "A special birthday gift for my daughter who loves gardening!" The girl, speechless and red-faced with shame, received this gift without grace. She continued her weeding chore with humiliation uncovering an uneasy acceptance of her fate.

Although the girl had a tendency to focus on self-pity and the hardship of her life, the garden did provide her with hours of fun. The task of watering such a massive area created pools of delight - mud in which to get playfully stuck. And, garden runoff streamed into the Slough, a long-forgotten (except by children) tributary of the Klondike River. Siblings and friends constructed ragged rafts for floating adventures. Her mother would go into the house to make lunch and casually call over her weary shoulder, "Watch out for one another," as the children left the land, transforming into high seas sailors, for some reckless, unsupervised fun.

Each summer passed, and with it, through some magical arrangement, grew the abundance of the vegetable garden. Harvest was a time of excitement. In the autumn, the family would dig, gather, scrub, chop, steam, bag, freeze, and share the bounty grown under the midnight sun. Prize-winning ribbons were earned, displayed, eventually forgotten - weathered and worn - by the time the full "Harvest Moon" slid across the northern sky, bringing with it the frosts of fall.

It was in the garden where sacred seeds of life were sown. Germinating within the girl were the tender roots of family values: perseverance and sacrifice, gratitude and giving. And, as the years passed, she began to look forward to spending time in the garden. This was a place where she and her family worked together to achieve a common goal, growing the much-anticipated (and much-needed) supply of vegetables to see them through the winter. Eventually the girl uncovered some pride in the fact that she was the only family member who had their own gardening tool. She found herself enjoying the feel of the birthday hoe's smoothening handle and the way the still-sharp edge easily entered the waiting earth.

As the girl grew into a woman she became an avid gardener. She unearthed her "birthday hoe" and began to use it in the spirit with which it was given - lighthearted humour. In the garden, the woman found herself folded over, reminiscing, giggling; her wide-brimmed hat askew, the sun softly painting beautiful shapes upon her exposed skin.

Yukon government continues investment in Yukon Now tourism marketing program

WHITEHORSE (March 29, 2016) —Building on the momentum of the successful Yukon Now marketing campaign, the Government of Yukon is committing $2.7 million over the next three years to continue to promote Yukon as a year-round tourism destination.

The Yukon government will provide $900,000 annually for the next three years to continue Yukon Now, subject to legislative approval. It is also seeking a continued equal investment from the Canadian Northern Economic Development Agency (CanNor).

"The Yukon Now campaign has raised awareness of Yukon as a tourism destination like never before," Minister of Tourism and Culture Elaine Taylor said. "We are proud to continue this strategic investment, which is meeting the needs of our tourism industry partners, employing Yukoners and increasing opportunities for Yukon businesses."

In September 2014, the Government of Yukon and CanNor each invested $1.8 million over two years in an enhanced tourism marketing program, for a total of $3.6 million. The joint initiative marked the largest investment in tourism in the history of the Department of Tourism and Culture.

The program was initiated in response to a call from the Tourism Industry Association of the Yukon, the Yukon Chamber of Commerce and individual tourism operators to see greater investment in promoting the growing domestic market.

"Yukon Now has taken Yukon to a new level of promotion as a destination for Canadians," past Tourism Industry Association of the Yukon chair Neil Hartling said. "We are pleased that the Yukon government is continuing to invest in this precedent-setting marketing program for the benefit of the tourism industry and all Yukoners."

Yukon Chamber of Commerce chair Rich Thompson said: "This is great news for tourism businesses and for Yukon's economy. We believe that the enhanced funding has been important in supporting the tourism industry at a critical time for the Yukon economy and hope to see these levels of marketing support continue for many years to come."

The Yukon Now campaign was launched in February 2015 with two winter commercials, which were broadcast in key domestic markets.

This month, four summer commercials are airing nationally on 11 conventional channels including CTV, Global and CBC, and on 18 specialty channels including BBC Canada, the Discovery Channel and National Geographic Canada. To date the commercials have aired more than 1000 times with an estimated 100 million views.

The television commercials were integrated with other marketing platforms, including digital storytelling and user-generated content.

The Yukon Now program also included enhanced marketing activities in the U.S., Europe, Australia, China and Japan.

Yukon adopts new energy efficient building standards

WHITEHORSE (March 30, 2016)—New energy efficiency standards are now in effect for Yukon home builders.

"Implementing these standards for new home construction or renovation demonstrates the Yukon government's commitment to increasing our energy efficiency," Minister of Community Services Currie Dixon said. "The territory is now on par with the rest of the country when it comes to energy-efficient home construction."

The adoption of section 9.36 of Canada's National Building Code follows a thorough review by a special advisory committee on energy efficiency. The committee, which included members of the local building construction community, considered the territory's climate and geography and the types of construction preferred by Yukoners.

Committee members sought feedback from their respective building communities, spoke with energy efficiency code development experts in other Canadian jurisdictions and considered public comments. They recommended some Yukon-specific amendments to the new regulations, while still requiring builders to meet the overall Energuide rating of 78 out of 100 required by the National Building Code energy efficiency section.

The core requirements of the National Building Code include effective insulation levels in floors, walls and ceilings, minimum U-values for all doors and windows and minimum performance ratings for all furnaces and water heaters.

The changes have little effect on the City of Whitehorse building standards and generally exceed the requirements of the National Building Code.

Enumeration 2016 Recensement 2016

Enumerators will begin visiting homes across Yukon to collect the names of all eligible electors.

To be eligible, you must be:

- a Canadian citizen,
- at least 18 years old and,
- a resident in Yukon for the past 12 months.

Enumerators will be working in your community to include every eligible elector on the List of Electors. Adding your name to the list of eligible voters will make voting quicker and easier when the election of Members of the Legislative Assembly takes place later this year.

You will be asked for your full name and address, which will appear on the List of Electors. You will also be asked for your birth date and gender, which will not appear on the List. That information will be used by Elections Yukon to update the List in the future, with your consent. It may be shared with Elections Canada to help update federal Lists of Electors, too.

Please share the requested information when your neighbourhood enumerators visit — and please contain your dogs to provide them with a safe working environment.

Thank you — in advance — for your cooperation.

Les recenseurs commenceront bientôt à visiter les habitations du Yukon en vue d'établir la liste des électeurs admissibles.

Pour pouvoir voter, vous devez :

- avoir la citoyenneté canadienne;
- avoir au moins 18 ans;
- avoir résidé au Yukon au cours des 12 derniers mois.

Les recenseurs passeront dans votre voisinage afin d'inscrire tous les électeurs admissibles sur la liste électorale. Il sera plus facile et plus rapide de voter si votre nom est inscrit sur cette liste en vue des élections qui se tiendront plus tard cette année pour élire les membres de l'Assemblée législative.

On vous demandera de fournir votre nom complet et votre adresse, qui apparaîtront sur la liste des électeurs. On vous demandera également de fournir votre date de naissance et votre sexe (ces renseignements ne figureront pas sur la liste). Uffish Thoughts: Best Uses for Old Buildings

by Dan Davidson

Now that the new Alexander McDonald Lodge has been opened, the residents have been moved, and the old building has been vacated, it's time - past time, really - to give a second thought as to what might be done with the old building.

The present plan, according to everything I've been hearing, is to demolish it and make use of the prime real estate it sits on for some other purpose.

That this is a bad idea is something that you will find general agreement on in Dawson, where we do not make a habit of destroying any building which might possibly still have a use.

Examples abound. The former fire hall is now the Ray of Sunshine, which deals largely in those patent medicines and toiletries that are not the stock in trade of the pharmacy located in the Dawson City Hospital.

The former Odd Fellows Hall was completely restored and upgraded to become the cultural nerve centre that is the Klondike Institute of Art and Culture (KIAC).

The former Territorial Building and Liquor Store, condemned and slated for destruction, was reborn as the Yukon School of Visual Arts (YSOVA) and also became the anchor to which the Dawson Campus of Yukon College was eventually attached.

And that brings me to the first use that the old Lodge could ably fulfill. YSOVA has, since its inception, been limping along, suffering under a considerable handicap. It has no student residence. More than twice as many students from all over the country apply here than actually come. The list shrinks rapidly when they realize that, after passing the admission requirements, they will have to find their own accommodation, and perhaps perform that chore again part way through their academic year, as housing is tight here.

Where else in the nation does a college require its students to go to the local equivalent of craigslist.ca (Dawson City Town Crier an Buyer) to find a place to live? So far the appropriate authorities (being the Yukon Government and Yukon College) have failed to address this need, in spite of continual representations from the local board, the Dawson City Arts Society and other organizations.

A proposal to adapt the old Lodge building as a residence was put together, including input by the same person who masterminded the renovations that led to the fine buildings now housing KIAC and YSOVA, but this apparently met with a deaf ear.

The old Lodge is in far better shape than either of those buildings, and its interior could easily be adapted to residency requirements. It already has a kitchen, common room space and rooms that could become work space for arts college projects when homework needed to be done. If the powers that be (outside of Dawson, where this is a given) really want YSOVA to succeed, they need to deal with this problem.

If not, it will eventually be assumed, as it already is in some quarters, that dithering over changing the name of Yukon College to Yukon University is absorbing all the little grey cells that there are in the capital city at the moment.

A second problem that needs to be taken into consideration is just what will happen to the old Lodge if it is demolished. The City of Dawson, the Klondike Region, and YTG are already fretting over the fact that the Quigley Landfill is going to reach the end of its life span sooner than anticipated. Given that the government is in the habit of knocking down 14 unit apartment buildings, as it did in the case of the Korbo Apartments on 6th Avenue, and trucking the detritus out to the landfill, it is no wonder that this is happening.

The plain, simple fact is that we don't need another large building disposed of in that manner, hastening the day when another far less convenient disposal site will have to be developed. This, when it happens, will be the second relocation in less than 30 years. Anything that causes that to happen could not be said to be the result of good long-term planning.

THE NORTH
AND THE FIRST WORLD WAR

War is Coming to the Yukon

The North and World War I Conference is coming to the Yukon May 9-15

Very little is known about what happened to the Yukon a hundred years ago during the Great War of 1914-1918. "If you ask Northern Canadians about this time period, you find that very little is actually known," says historian Ken Coates.

The historical void is about to be filled by the conference that has been in the making now for two years. The event is the brainchild of the Yukon Historical and Museums Association, Yukon College and the International Centre for Northern Governance and Development at the University of Saskatchewan. Participants are expected to come from all over Canada and the United States.

Included in the program for the conference are a one day museum workshop, three days of speakers on various topics related to the north during the difficult years of World War I. International specialists are joining Yukon historians to paint a picture of the contributions of the North during the war. Special interest will be paid to the wartime activities of Joe Boyle, Martha Black, Robert Service and Sam Steele.

Capping off the conference will be a three-day study tour to Dawson City May 13-15.

The YukonArchives will be unveiling a new exhibit about the Yukon in World War I at the Roundhouse at 5:30 pm on May 10, and the Royal Canadian Legion will follow with a ceremony at the cenotaph at 7:00 pm to commemorate the Yukon fallen from the Great War.

Sarah Murray, from the Canterbury Museum, Christchurch, New Zealand, Tim Cook, head of research at the Canadian War Museum, and Ken Coates from the University of Saskatchewan are among the prominent speakers who will be attending. Local contributors include film maker Max Fraser, and author Michael Gates, whose book on the Yukon and World War I will be published next year.

Information about the conference can be obtained at: <http://heritageyukon.ca/north-and-first>

Not only did no one write in to suggest a real front page headline in place of the one I botched last issue, but no one that I talked to about it had actually noticed the mistake. I don't know whether to be relieved or worried. DD

Ice Bridge Closes Two weeks early this year

By Dan Davidson

The ice bridge across the Yukon River at Dawson has closed about two weeks early this year.

The Dept. of Highways issued a notice of a load reduction from 130,000 to 4500 kilograms on Wednesday afternoon (March 30).

"Due to unseasonably warm temperatures this winter, Highways and Public Works believes the ice bridge will close earlier than usual this year.

"As of Wednesday, March 30, 2016, we have reduced the weight on the ice crossing in Dawson to 4500 kgs. The ice bridge could be closed to all traffic as early as the weekend."

It was some weeks after the first traffic began to cross the bridge regularly in the middle of December before the department took down the "closed : sign and officially allowed regular traffic at the higher weight during the first week in January.

They've been regularly flooding one of the double wide lanes after the other to thicken the ice during the winter, though lately the north lane has been left smooth for people to skate on.

The winter has been warm, breaking all records according to a report broadcast on CBC-North on this same day. Ice bridge longevity as the sunny days lengthen depends on it still being below freezing at night. So far this week it has been raining at midnight.

"Safety is our top priority," says the warning notice.

"We want to ensure that the ice bridge is thick enough to safely use and that we don't put members of the community at risk."

Recipients were asked to spread the word as widely as possible, using email or social media.

It should be noted that this will mark the official closing of the ice bridge. It can be expected that residents in West Dawson and Sunnydale will begin to stock up for what may be a longer than usual wait for break-up, but it is likely that they will continue to use the ice bridge in increasingly lighter vehicles and finally, on foot, until it is no longer possible.

The actual closure came on Friday, April 1.

The RCMP Blotter

By Cst Katina Harnett

Hello Dawson!! Welcome to April and the wet, sloshy MUD. It's been a busy March for us with Thaw di Gras snowshoe baseball, bannock Wednesday with our elders, a snow machine ride with the RSS Grade 6 class, and that's just the beginning! So, I'm going to get right to it as I have a lot to cover!

On the topic of slush, I had the opportunity to chat with Ranger Sgt John Mitchell (who we all know and love as "Mitch") about safety related to the melting snow and ice. Here is some important information and a few tips and tricks that he asked me to pass along to you:

- We're now into spring and with the poor ice conditions we've had all year, the ice is deteriorating rapidly.
- The trails and paths that were safe are very quickly becoming unsafe.
- If you ran over something today, you could be swimming it tomorrow.
- Use extreme caution when travelling on any waterway, but especially the Klondike River.
- This is a community concern – educate your family/children/loved ones, but if you see somebody else that may be in a dangerous situation, be proactive in advising them of the safety issue and/or call the appropriate authority.

• Don't forget your furry friends – keep them on leash and don't allow them to wander where it may not be safe.

By following these simple tips, we can avoid putting our emergency responders' lives at risk and continue to safely enjoy the beautiful area we all have the opportunity to share!

Changing topics, but speaking of sharing, Cpl Myke and I recently had the opportunity to present an internet safety lecture to the Grade 6 to 9 RSS classes. The goal of the presentation was educate our youth on the dangers of online predators and how these individuals can manipulate their way into obtaining personal information and using it to their benefit when victimizing children. The presentation also involved a discussion on respectful communication online. We are in the process of planning a similar presentation for parents related to the dangers that online activity can present to their children, so stay tuned while we work out the fine details.

While on the topic of education, I would like to address every driver's favourite subject: SPEED. You may have recently noticed, if you were driving over the speed limit, that one of our Members may have given you a quick flash of their Police vehicle's emergency lights. No, this is not because we miss the sparkly lights of Christmas. This is because we have noticed a greater number of drivers travelling at faster speeds more frequently, and THIS IS YOUR WARNING that we will be stepping up our speed enforcement both in town and on the highway. Please remember that the speed limit within the Dawson City town area is 40 km/hr. When you travel southbound from town and pass the C4 subdivision turn-off, the speed increases to 70 km/hr. Once you are past the Bonanza Creek Rd turn-off, the speed increases to regular highway speeds of 90 km/hr.

I know I am stating the obvious when I say that Dawson City is full of outdoor enthusiasts, runners, walkers, doggies out for their exercise, tourists, and, of course, all the wild animals that call Dawson their home and often wander into our path on the road. We want to ensure everyone's safety (two-legged and four-legged!), and we would ask that you please slow down and abide by the speed limit. It may come as a surprise to some, but issuing violation tickets is not my favourite part of the job! You will see our Members out conducting more speed enforcement in the coming months, and we would appreciate your cooperation in keeping our paperwork to a minimum!

I'll close my article this week by including some stats from the previous month, for your information. During the month of March our Detachment took a total of 72 calls for service (up to the date of writing this article). The number of Criminal Code charges laid were:

- impaired driving - 2 ;
- failing to comply with conditions - 2;
- assault - 2;
- mischief - 1.

Take care of yourself and others, until next time, Dawson!

The 2016 DCSIFF wrapped up with another packed house which featured Part 2 of Dawson filmmaker Lulu Keating's Broke Down Dawson Town! After a weekend that featured 2 Yukon made longer pieces as our openers, and a schedule that featured the largest lineup of Yukon content to date, we handed out the much coveted MITY (Made In The Yukon Awards). Kudos to all the filmmakers that had a film in our festival.

The MITY Professional Award (sponsored by Gold Rush, the Screen Production Yukon Association and the NFB), went to locals Krista Davis and Cari Tangedal for their poetic film Take the Wild. The jury also made an honourable mention for the film Garbage Truck Santa by Brendan Preston from Whitehorse.

The MITY Emerging Artist Award (sponsored by Northern Superior Mechanical, the NFB and KIAC), went to Jun Chen of Dawson for her eerie, yet comical Zombie Me! An honourable mention Emerging Artist Award (sponsored by Hamilton-Mehta Productions) went to Georgette McLeod for her brave film Light on the Path.

The Youth Award (sponsored by David Curtis) went to Dawsonites Jack Amos and Kate Crocker for their film Frost Bite.

The Yukon Brewing Audience Favourite Award went to Assini by Gail Maurice of Ontario.

And the last award, The Lodestar, for best Canadian or International work went to Kajutaijuq: The Spirit That Comes directed by Scott Brachmayer, and produced in Nunavut by Nyla Innuksuk.

It was a weekend that featured great workshops by festival guests Mike Maryniuk, Brianne Nord-Stewart, and Brenda Matthews and presentations by KIAC artists in residence, Sam Decoste and Gail Noonan. We thrilled to have to have the Cold Cuts Video Festival (produced by Nicole Rayburn and curated by Corinna Ghaznavi) running concurrently with our festival. There was a Metropolis themed burlesque performance by Chevonne of the Yukon and an outdoor street party that featured plates of homemade perogies and live music by CORN!

A festival not soon to be forgotten. Thanks to all of our sponsors, all our visitors from near and far and to the amazing volunteers who gave up their long weekend to keep the machine running smoothly!

For Race number 40, having a Trail was a Challenge

By Dan Davidson

The biggest question haunting the 40th running of the Percy DeWolfe Mail Race this year was whether there would be trail enough to run it on. Unlike the Yukon Quest, which deked around the jumble ice and overflow to take a different route from Forty Mile to Dawson this year, the whole point of the 210 mile Percy is to follow the basic route used by the Iron Man Mail Carrier.

The committee, with the help of many volunteers, found a way to make it work, though parts of the trail had to be rebuilt several times and washed out and snow covered trail markers were being replaced the very morning of the race, in advance of the starting countdown at the corner of King Street and 3rd Avenue, outside Dawson's Old Post Office, at 10 a.m.

As usual the partial clearing of King and Front Streets had a City of Dawson loader patting down fresh snow on the remaining hard pack for the dogs and sleds just minutes before the Spirit of Percy, bib #1, hit the trail.

Then Postmaster Daniel Vigliotti and RCMP Constable Katrina Harnett handed the mail bag to the #2 musher, Victoria Hardwick. The crowd (with a strong contingent of school and daycare students) drew a joint breath for the first of eleven 10-9-8 countdowns, and the race was on.

After Hardwick, the mushers were Jen Peeks, Alexandra Rochat, Alexander Serdjukov, Kyla Boivin, Laura Neese, Gaetan Pierrard, Crispin Studer, Sam Christman, Gerry Willomitzer, Hans Gatt.

Once past the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre, veteran teams got confused on the dyke trail and wanted to take the usual route down to the river. It was steep and icy, and had led to some spills in the past, so the race committee had chosen a gentler descent a little farther north. Experienced dogs just knew where to go, and had to be persuaded to run past that old ramp.

Down on the river, the trail clung to the east bank for a bit, veered across to the west and settled into what is usually an average 12 hour run to Eagle for the faster teams.

It was a warm morning, probably about 10 degrees too warm to make it likely for any records to be set. The sun blazed over the hills behind downtown Dawson as the last teams left, and skies to the north were clear of clouds.

The trail, though cleared to the best of the makers' ability, in an effort that cost six times what trail making for this race usually cost (based on expenses only), was still eccentric in some places, and there were a few last minute changes due to overflow and moving ice even as the teams raced north.

By 3 that afternoon the main race was well under way and the five teams signed up for the Percy Junior (named after Percy DeWolfe Junior) – just half the distance to Forty Mile and back – were getting organized. The two lane ice bridge was glare ice in the north lane, and snow had been spread so that people, dogs, sleds and trucks could actually manage to get some traction.

As current race marshal Brent MacDonald would later complain, something always seems to delay the start of this race. Nine minutes was not long enough for the final dog hookups to be completed before former marshal John Borg, of Eagle, dropped the big Maple Leaf flag, and then waved it frantically to get the teams' attention. Four of the five teams set off, the fifth leaving a few minutes later.

The senior race has a mandatory six hour layover in Eagle, with another two hours either there or at Fortymile on the way back. The junior racers spend the night at Fortymile and usually arrive back in Dawson before noon the next day. The senior racers are generally back between mid-afternoon and late evening on Friday, but the Red Lantern last place finisher would not make it until after noon on Saturday.

The mushers in the Percy all had spot trackers on their sleds, and most of them worked most of the time, except for Hardwick's, so it was possible to follow the progress of the teams on a link from the race's website. Sadly, there were not enough working trackers to outfit the Junior Percy teams.

Kyla Boivin first ran this race at the age of 17 in 1999.

Former Race Marshall John Borg, of Eagle, got to drop the flag for the Junior Percy mass start on the ice bridge. It took the teams a few minutes to notice.

Crispin Studer holds the trophy with race committee president Anna Claxton.

These are POTENTIAL FOSTER HOMES

EMERGENCY FOSTER HOMES NEEDED

We can't always predict when children will need a safe place so Health and Social Services is seeking emergency foster homes.

These homes provide safe accommodations for children for periods of:

- ▶ A night or two;
- ▶ A weekend; or
- ▶ Up to 2 weeks.

You can be a renter or home owner — the important part is that you have a bedroom to spare. Just like long-term foster homes, emergency foster homes have to be approved.

Interesting in helping?

Whitehorse region, please call 667-8093 or 667-8079 to talk to a Foster Social Worker. Local communities, please contact your local Health and Social Services office.

Library Videos: Julie & Julia

Comedy, Drama, Food
Starring: Meryl Streep, Amy Adams

This movie opens in Paris, France in 1949, as Julia Child arrives with her husband, a diplomat at the US embassy there. She is absolutely delighted with the place they are to live, which is very elegant – rich even. The next scenes happen in 2001, and show Julie Powell, as she, and her husband move in to an apartment in Queens, New York, above a pizza shop. It is small, but, the 900 square feet is all theirs.

And, so the movie goes, paralleling the lives of the two principles, one a Julia, and the other a Julie. Julia is living at a time when few women worked, so, she has to find a way of keeping busy. The hat making class did not go so well, but, the classes at the Cordon Bleu cooking school were much more interesting for her. Meanwhile, we see that Julie is a civil servant, working to provide aid to people affected by the 9/11 attacks in New York City.

We also see in to the relationships they have with their husbands. Julia, and her husband seem to be very much in love, and in fact do not share a cross word with each other for the entire movie. The message is one of continuing love, and support going both ways. Julie, and her husband are also loving, but, the support is not quite the same, and we do see some of the difficulties.

After Julia completes the classes at the Cordon Bleu school, she works with some French ladies to produce a cookbook of French recipes, in English, for an American audience. This is a process that takes some time! In the modern time, Julie decides to write a blog, on the suggestion of her husband, as her friends are very successful, and one of them also has a blog. Julie decides to write about cooking – cooking all 524 recipes in Julia’s book, in a one year period, and then writing about it in a blog.

While the movie has food in it, it is not exactly a “foodie” movie, like “Eat Drink Man Woman,” or “Chef.” The food is certainly there, liberally drizzled with butter! But, it does not take centre stage. The movie is more about Julia’s life, and the tremendous influence her cookbook has on modern cooks, like Julie. We see Julie trying to learn French cooking, her failures, and, her successes. Julia’s life has difficulties as well. She had met her husband while working in China, and the McCarthy era meant close scrutiny by the then government, who were avidly looking for subversives. But, Julia seems so perfect, and Julie certainly thinks so. She finds the cookbook to be a tremendous inspiration in her own life, especially as her work is so dull, and stressful. Release comes from cooking.

This is something I really do not relate to very well! While I love to eat, I really do not like to cook. I get no joy out of it at all. But, the movie made it look delightful. It is funny, with some tense spots. It is not boring at all; the contrast between the two women, and their lives is portrayed very well indeed. They are actually remarkably similar in so many ways, and, different in others, which the movie displays very well.

The costuming, and sets are really good as well. There are quite a number of on location shots, and the ones in France are stunning in their beauty. Meryl Streep is amazing with accents and speech, and she does Julia with the full of fun but slightly irritating voice that the real Julia had.

In summary, this is definitely a feel good movie, based on a true story, and, about good food!

IMDB gives the movie 7.0 and I give it 4 stars out of 5.

Arctic Winter Games Memories

| Athlete | Describe a significant memory from your competition | Describe a significant memory from someone who you got to know | Describe a significant memory regarding people, geography, etc. |
|------------------|---|--|---|
| Sarah Nyland | I remember desperately sprinting for a runaway ball on the "break away". The actual goal was a blur...but I clearly remember turning, not really believing I had just scored a goal, to my yelling and cheering teammates | I once met a native Greenlander on the bus. She told me a bit about life in Nuuk and taught me "thank-you, goodbye" in her native language. | On the way to Nuuk, all of Team Yukon was stuck in an air force base called Kangerlussuaq. I was one of the few that was excited by the chance to see more of Greenland than originally planned, and too the chance to explore the surrounding mountains. |
| Sam Crocker | My most significant memory was when I made a come back against Alberta North in a super close game. | It was fun going to the dance with the Alaska Team. | In Kangerlussuaq, I ran across a frozen fjord. |
| Jack Amos | I remember running down the last 400 meters in the 2.5 K with no one in sight behind me and loud speaker blared "in first place, Yukon's Jack Amos!" | I got to meet two of my Alaskan competitors who definitely gave me a run for my money in races. They were also very nice and nominated me for the fair play award. | I remember running the 5K in a white out and my snowshoes coming off 3 times. By the time I crossed the finish line (and got bronze) my eyelids were frozen shut. |
| Kate Crocker | I distinctly remember playing mixed doubles against Greenland and blocking a full on loop, then winning the point. We lost the game but it was super fun. | I remember playing ninja with the table tennis Greenland girls and the security girls. | In Greenland when we first got there, these two boys carried our stuff to our room and showed us where to go. |
| Michael Betts | Beating Alaska in all of the badminton categories. | I got to know the Alberta North team well and I am friends with most of them on Facebook. | In Nuuk, my team and I got lost. We were wandering around looking for our school until we got saved by a few locals who led us home. |
| Ethan Gaw | As the underdogs, coming back and winning a close game against Nunavut in doubles with Sam. | It was fun to explore Nuuk, watch other sports and just hang out with new people from different places. | As soon as we started flying over Greenland and landing in Kangerlussuaq, everyone realized there are no trees. |
| Emily Gaw | Playing for bronze against Nunavut and losing the first two games then coming back to win the two games to winning the fifth game. I lost, but it was amazing to play a game so intense. | Eating ice cream and playing cards with Ava and Arin from Alaska when we were stuck in Kangerlussuaq. | At the food place the volunteers would start singing "we will we will rock you". |
| Zack Bartholomew | Getting the silver medal was a very good accomplishment for me. | | Hitch-hiking back to school after the closing ceremony when it was freezing cold and no bus ride |
| Joy Morin | I got a Fair Play award! | Upon arriving at the school, we were led to our room by a four year old First Nation girl from Iqaluit. She remained in our room for the next five hours and ate all my rice crispy squares! What a host! | All of our hockey games were held in Iqaluit Nunavut. It felt like we landed on the moon! The school we stayed in was such a strange design. It looked like a giant square marshmallow. |
| Emma Morin | I assisted my sister Joy's goal right off my faceoff. Then collided hard! | I think that being around each other for a week in Iqaluit caused me to get to know every girl on my hockey team, as well as myself, better than I had upon leaving Dawson. We spent our days not only playing hockey as a team, but also eating, exploring and making memories the whole week! I feel honored to have been a part of such a fun, supportive, and dedicated team to represent the Yukon. | We were anxious to do some sight seeing in the community of Iqaluit, but a blizzard shut down the whole town. The whiteout was so bad we couldn't leave our building. All eight games were cancelled that day. We played a lot of cards. |

Gould denied YOOP membership

BY TIMOTHY SAWA

SUPREME COURT DECISION / Madeleine Gould's final attempt to join the YOOP has failed.

IT WAS A BITTER MARCH MORNING when this 74-year-old great-grandmother sat down to confess her amazing tale of victories and defeats. Today is more than nine years after Madeleine Gould was denied membership to the male-only Yukon Order of Pioneers, which was followed by three failed appeals in three different levels of court. Now, her only satisfaction is that the whole affair is finally over.

"Can't they get it through their heads," said a frustrated Gould. "All I want is to be recognized as a pioneer in the Yukon Order of Pioneers."

In 1987, when Gould first applied for membership to the respected 100-year-old fraternal organization, she was denied simply because of her sex. Recently, seven out of nine justices at the Supreme Court Appeal agreed that Gould's gender would keep her from joining the YOOP and enjoying the recognition she feels she deserves.

"I still feel that women should be recognized along with the men," Gould told reporters moments after the Supreme Court decision was announced, "but I'm really just glad the whole thing is over. Now I can go back to a more normal life."

IN 1987, shortly after the YOOP denied

Gould, she fired a letter of complaint off to the Yukon Human Rights Commission. The commission's Board of Adjudication subsequently decided in Gould's favour, and ordered the YOOP to admit her. But the YOOP appealed to a higher court and won. The commission appealed back and lost and then back again and lost, until a small-town squabble transformed into a national Supreme Court affair with implications for women across Canada.

The supreme court battle, and preceding lower court scuffles, centered primarily on the technical argument of whether the YOOP and its functions are private or public in nature. If the YOOP — and its primary function of compiling Yukon and YOOP history — was public service, then, according to Human Rights legislation, Gould must be allowed to join. The courts, however, decided otherwise.

"To put the case in a nutshell," explained the YOOP's local legal eagle Richard Buchan, "the court found that the activity involving the collection of historical information, as opposed to the delivery of that historical information, is not an activity that falls within the sphere of what constitutes a service to the public."

ENVIRONMENTAL WORRIES / Dawson residents voice their fears over the new Brewery Creek project.

There's no bridge over the river that separates Julie Frisch and her family from the rest of the world. There are no power lines stretching across to her home either; no running water, no phone lines and certainly no sewage pipes.

But, after a short walk along a windswept path on the frozen river, and once inside the two story home that rises up from the middle of a thick grove of evergreen trees on the edge of the clear rushing water of the Klondike River, it's quite obvious that Frisch gets along just fine without the amenities most of us take for granted.

A solar powered radio phone sits in the corner of her comfortable wood heated home. Logan berry muffins rest on her counter, still warm from the propane powered oven out of which they were pulled only moments ago. And a pot of tea is steeping on the table which Frisch originally filled from the hand-pumped water faucet that protrudes from the wall over her sink.

"It's an environmental issue, where the environment is suffering because we think we need more," Frisch says, as she stirs a batch of homemade yogurt on her kitchen counter. "It seems to me so narrow minded. The environment is suffering and continues to suffer. It protects us and we're not going to have it."

History Hunter: Death toll rises with the approach of war's end

By Michael Gates, Yukon News, Friday March 11, 2016

Used with the Author's Permission

Yukon Commissioner George Black heard the call to duty and was determined to join his compatriots who were shipping overseas during World War I. The summer of 1916, he was joined by 225 patriotic Yukon volunteers, who, in several shiploads, over the course of the summer and fall, took passage on the steamers for Whitehorse, then on to Victoria, B.C. They were reunited there in October and on January 16, 1917, they departed Victoria for overseas as the Yukon Infantry Company.

Many of these men remained together for the duration of the war. They were stationed at Witley camp in southern England, where they were trained as a machine gun company. They were eager to see action, but they were not called up for active service until March of 1918. At that time, the German army was undertaking a major offensive which, if not stopped, threatened to capture Paris.

Members of the Yukon (Boyle) Machine Gun Battery, which had already been at the front for nearly two years, saw heavy action during the enemy operation as they were called to use their machine guns to slow down or stop the German advance. Young Lieutenant Lyman Black, the commissioner's step-son, distinguished himself in this battle, stopping an enemy advance by mowing them down as they attempted to move forward. Black was awarded the Military Cross for his actions. Lieutenant Black's comrade, Sergeant Anthony Blaikie, was shot through the stomach and died while they were withdrawing from a precarious position. Blaikie had already been awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal and the Military Medal for his courageous conduct.

By the end of this engagement, the Boyle recruits had been so depleted in numbers that they were amalgamated with the Black contingent, now called the 17th Machine Gun Company, to form part of the 2nd Canadian Motor Machine Gun Brigade. Together, in this unit, they fought the remainder of the war.

The German attempt to break through to Paris failed, and their army was much depleted by this campaign. The initiative in battle shifted to the Allies in early August when the Canadians, including the Yukon men, made a surprise assault on the German lines at Amiens. The Huns were caught unprepared by the Canadian attack and fell back in disarray. The nature of battle was now shifting from the trench warfare of the past three years, to open-field combat.

George Black was wounded on the second day of the Battle of Amiens, and several of his comrades-in-arms were killed. The day after Black was wounded, Charley O'Brien, son of the Klondike brewery king, and Angus McKellar, a Mountie at Forty Mile before the gold rush, were both killed when a shell struck their armoured car near Bouchoir, France. Three days later, in the last hours of the battle, Marko Milatovich was killed near Parvillers. Called "The Black Day for the German Army," Amiens heralded the beginning of the end for the Germans.

After this battle, the Yukon soldiers were quickly relocated north to the French City of Arras, where they formed part of the final advance that became known as "the hundred days."

Yukon Archives/George Black Fonds 81/107: 163: Armoured machine gun carriers going into action at the Battle of Amiens in August, 1918. Many Yukon volunteers served (and several died) serving in the 2nd Motor Machine Gun Brigade in the final months of World War I.

As part of a large Canadian battle force, they fought their way through a series of German defensive lines. First, there was the Hindenburg Line, then the Fresnes-Rouvroy Line, and last, the Drocourt-Queant Line. Behind these defences was the unfinished Canal du Nord, and farther east, the city of Cambrai, a key transportation hub for the Germans. The ultimate target for this attack: the defensive works behind the Drocourt-Queant Line and the town of Dury.

Four Yukoners fell on September 2. Lieutenant Robert Hartman, of the 102nd Battalion, was in charge of two Stokes trench mortars during an attack made on the enemy's position East of Dury. Sergeant John J. Melville, formerly of Atlin, had already been awarded the Military Medal for his bravery, but on this day he was killed during the attack south west of Dury.

Alfred Clinton Totty, son of an Anglican missionary and a First Nation mother, was with the 78th Battalion of the Canadian Infantry during the attack of the Drocourt-Queant switch when he was killed by a machine gun bullet to the throat September 2. Salletto Michunovich was a miner from the Yukon. Born in Montenegro, he volunteered as a member of the George Black Contingent and was later transferred to the 1st Canadian Motor Machine Gun Brigade. While acting as a gunner on armoured car No. 5792 he was killed when it was hit by a shell and blown to pieces.

James Bow Watters from Atlin fell on September 26. Marshall Stevens, Alfred Cronin and Patrick John Martin were killed on September 27, while George Crisfield and C.J.T. Stewart died the following day. Frank Slavin was lost on September 29 while George Davidson was killed October 3rd. Robert Morton, who was killed by an exploding shell, was the last Yukoner to be lost in battle in the military end game, just three weeks before the Armistice was declared.

The Canadians advanced through Cambrai, Valenciennes, and finally on the last day of the war, into Mons, Belgium. But it was a bitter joy for the Yukon men to be engulfed by the jubilant mobs of liberated Belgians when so many of their comrades had been lost capturing these places in the final days of the conflict. Today, their names are remembered only through bronze plaques in Dawson City and Whitehorse, and graves that dot the French and Belgian countryside.

Make note of this date: May 9-12, in Whitehorse, we will have an opportunity to once again remember and honour these gallant men during the conference: "The North and World War I." Scholars and local historians, collectors, guests and students from New Zealand, Romania, England, the United States and Canada will all be sharing a wealth of knowledge of how the Great War of 1914-1918 affected the Yukon.

Special events will be planned to commemorate the fallen; an exhibit about the Yukon during World War I will be unveiled by the Yukon Archives, and history-themed dinner-theatre and music will wrap up the events in Whitehorse. A study tour to Dawson will follow to explore the gold rush community and the impact of the war upon it.

Thaw di Gras brought a mixture of Snow and Sunshine

Story & Photos
By Dan Davidson

Who would have expected that Thaw di Gras Saturday would bring Dawson more snow than it has seen in the last 6 weeks? Or that it would be grey and miserable with a light, but biting, wind. Well, it was, but the snowshoe baseball and road hockey teams braved the weather and began their two-day tournaments anyway. In all there were 21 other events that day, most of them indoors, but some, like the Barry Fargey Sunnydale Classic dog team race and the evening's fireworks, out on the river. The night before, what some people described as the best adult lip sync ever took place at Diamond Tooth Gerties. The casino was packed, and there was a fair amount of moaning on Facebook by the people who could not get in after the building hit capacity and stayed there for hours. There were seven other events that evening, in five other places. Happily the sun came out and the breeze died down for Sunday so the tournaments could continue and the twelve afternoon events in the Gertie's parking lot could draw a huge crowd and be such fun for everyone. The empty lots on Second Ave. were home to the Chili Cookoff and the dog pulling contest. The loonie and candy in a haystack contest was a major fun event outside Gerties. There were three contests for kids and one, featuring Gerties drink tickets, for adults. Those families will be washing hay and dust out of their snow gear for the rest of the week.

Inspired Living

with Mo Caley
Greetings!

Life has many little ironies! For instance this month as I considered my topic for this news article I've had plenty of opportunities to tune into my own emotional responses to situations. Some have been more favourable than others. However, even when my emotions hijack me, I am quickly aware of what's happening and can consciously turn my attention to more innovative, creative and effective responses. This is extremely significant and can have a great influence in the satisfaction of our relationships and work environments. I hope you have a little fun as you go through today's article to see how you manage emotional reactions at work (let me know if you'd like help modifying this to your personal situation).

This Month's cool resource:
<http://www.freemindfulness.org/download>
Thanks to my friend Val for sharing this helpful resource for helping to build our response muscle.

Mo's Message:
How Well Do You Manage Your Emotional Reactions at Work?

Automatic, negative responses to people or events often indicate a hypersensitivity that's often referred to as "getting your buttons pushed." At work, these emotional reactions can limit productivity, your career advancement and cap the level of success you might achieve. This is because when we are feeling threatened in some way we just can't think! We automatically lean toward protection. This is helpful when our lives are in danger, however, in this day and age, this is rarely an issue. Often these sensitivities have their origins in hurtful childhood experiences, such as repeatedly being criticized, rejected or controlled. Because we're all human, we sometimes take them into the workplace with us. When we become more aware of our habitual thoughts and reactive patterns we begin to build our capacity to rewire our brains by creating a new connection between the conscious and unconscious mind. Take a moment now and answer the following two sets of questions, true or false, to discover how well you manage your emotional reactions at work.

- Set 1
- 1. When anyone critiques my work—constructively or not—I tend to shut down and withdraw or feel ashamed.
 - 2. When someone hurts me—for instance, if they fail to acknowledge my contribution—I lash out at them or blame myself.
 - 3. I hate it when colleagues tell me I'm "too sensitive."
 - 4. When a colleague says or does something that makes me mad, it takes me a long time to let go of it. I often carry a resentment.
 - 5. Sometimes I have no idea why I respond to coworkers the way that I do—I just can't control myself.

- Set 2
- 1. If I feel inordinately upset or angered by something at work, rather than blaming someone for making me feel what I'm feeling, I take a deep breath, and then take an honest look at myself to see what I can learn from the situation.
 - 2. When I feel "triggered," I know it often has nothing to do with the person who pushed my buttons.
 - 3. If after I have calmed down and returned to a professional state of mind, I find that a current situation needs to be addressed, I do so in a constructive manner.
 - 4. I'm familiar with the situations to which I am most likely to overreact. More quickly now I recognize when my buttons have been pushed, and I am less reactive.
 - 5. When my buttons do get pushed now, I am able to see any unresolved personal issues needing my attention. I can then return my focus to my work.

If you answered true more often in Set 1 and false more often in Set 2, you may wish to learn how to deal more effectively with your emotional responses in the workplace (or in your personal life). Your success depends on it. Please don't hesitate to call or email me if you'd like to explore this issue further or if you'd like to share your experience with the questions.

New McDonald Lodge Opens to much Applause

Story & Photos
By Dan Davidson

The new Alexander McDonald Lodge was packed on March 18 as the community turned out to see the new continuing care facility. Staff and residents actually moved in a couple of weeks ago, and the place is starting to take on that lived-in look.

The new lodge, located at the corner of Church St. and 6th Avenue, replaces the original building, which was located half a block away on 5th Avenue and dated from 1970.

There have been discussions about replacing the facility for nearly 20 years, but the final announcement was made in 2013 and construction began not long after the completion of the Dawson City Community Hospital. Final construction costs are not yet in, but are estimated to be $11.9 million.

The new lodge can accommodate 15 residents, up from the 11 in the old building. Seniors come here from Mayo, Old Crow and Pelly Crossing, as well as Dawson residents.

The hospital was built to replace the aging Community Health Centre, and the new Lodge has used the space vacated by that building after it was torn down.

The two new facilities are linked by a connecting corridor, which allows the two buildings to share some infrastructure. The lodge was already providing food services for the hospital, and that will be far more convenient now. The hospital provides back-up generating capacity for the lodge. (also heating???)

Formalities began with a prayer by Doris Roberts and several songs performed by the Hän Singers, followed by speeches.

"I'm excited to be here today for the opening of the new McDonald Lodge," said Premier Darrell Pasloski. "For more than 40 years, the first McDonald Lodge served as a warm and welcoming home for seniors and for other people who required that assistance with their daily lives."

Dawsonites knew that it needed to be replaced, and the Premier acknowledged the role of former MLA Steven Nordick in listening to his constituents and working to make that happen.

"The Yukon Party committed

to this beautiful building during the last election in 2011 and I'm so proud to be here to day to celebrate this new McDonald Lodge and what has been the fulfillment of another campaign promise that we made to the community of Dawson."

The Premier recalled the times when voices were raised in opposition to both the new hospital and the new lodge.

"These projects stand to benefit this community for many, many decades to come. I think you'd be hard pressed to find anyone today who isn't proud or pleased with having these great facilities both operating here."

Home care is still a preferred option for the government, he said, and it has tripled the budget for that, from $2 million to $6 million, but facilities such as this are needed for individuals requiring a higher level of daily care than can be provided for in their home.

This, he explained, is the reasoning for building the proposed facility in Whistlebend and the newly opened smaller facility on 6th Avenue in Whitehorse.

"This tells a story about who we are as a government, and who we are working to serve – and that's all of you."

Minister of Health and Social Services Mike Nixon wasn't left with a lot to say after the Premier's speech, but made a good effort.

"In many cases, seniors have lived most of their lives in Yukon and have made great and valuable contributions to the economic and cultural fabric of our territory. Ensuring that seniors and other Yukoners requiring a higher level of care have access to the services that they require is something that our government strives to do."

Dining area and crowd

"(The) collaborative arrangement with the Yukon Hospital Corporation is a great example of Yukoners working together to provide a high level of service in a fiscally responsible manner."

The building was, he said, constructed to be more than a care centre; it is the home of its residents.

Chief Roberta Joseph spoke of the importance of elders to the fabric of a community.

"A community without elders is unbalanced," she said. "The construction of this building means that our elders can age in a place and remain as vital individuals in our community."

She thanked the government for making this facility a priority and recalled the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in council urging the building of new facilities during her time on an earlier TH council.

"This is a big step towards making sure that our elders in our community are being taken care of and their housing needs are being met."

Mayor Wayne Potoroka asked that people pause to reflect on the long road between initial proposals for health related projects in this area of town, how things were proposed, planned, discussed and planned again and finally constructed.

Projects like these take time, he noted, and do not happen overnight.

"Now their work has transformed this corner of our community. I want you to know that we are benefitting from your labour and vision. It's a wonderful addition to our heritage town and we think it looks great.

"to value the significance of elders and recognize how the lives we live are possible because of how they prepared us for the world, and also how they prepared the world for us. Elders are a vital part of our community. They are our storytellers and teachers, and we are pleased that they now have a beautiful home that is nothing less than they deserve, in our town, with us, where they belong."

Speeches were followed by the unveiling of the dedication plaque, which will have to be replaced due to a spelling error in the engraving ("Heath" instead of "Health"), and cutting of the ribbon.

This was followed by a buffet luncheon of snacks, fruit and cakes and by tours of the facility, with one unoccupied room available for display.

Enumeration 2016 begins next month!

Enumerators will begin visiting homes across Yukon on Friday, April 15 – except in West Dawson and Sunnyside, where enumerators will begin work early to accommodate weather conditions. They'll be working to collect information from every elector in the territory, so all electors can be included on the List of Electors and get the information they need at election time.

For the first time, the enumeration is scheduled to take place outside of the election period. The general election of Members of the Legislative Assembly of Yukon will take place in 2016 - no date has been set at this time.

Enumerators play a very important role in our communities. "Their efforts make voting easy and accessible for everyone", said Lori McKee, Chief Electoral Officer. Eligible electors are encouraged to contact Elections Yukon if they would like to serve their communities and earn extra income by joining the enumeration team.

Yukoners are asked for their cooperation when local enumerators visit. Sharing the requested information, and providing a safe environment by containing dogs, will ensure this important initiative is completed effectively and safely.

Changes to the Elections Act allow for the creation of a Permanent List of Electors. The Permanent List will contain electors' full names, along with residential and mailing addresses. This will allow Elections Yukon to provide accurate information to electors on where to vote at election time and ensure election readiness for future electoral events.

Enumerators will collect birth dates and genders when they visit. Birth dates and genders do not appear on the Lists of Electors used by election workers, political parties or candidates. Access to that information is restricted to Elections Yukon and Elections Canada, for use in updating the Permanent List as electors move and change their names.

Elections Canada has supported the territorial enumeration and, through a partnership agreement, will share elector information to improve the quality of both federal and territorial Lists of Electors. The Elections Act allows for similar partnerships with municipal election offices, once agreements are in place. This sharing will improve service at election time and save taxpayers money.

Please welcome your local enumerator and help build a better List of Electors!

Meet the Chess Club

by Chris Collin

The general looks intently at the field in front of him, noticing the cavalry attack from the right, and the amassing of foot soldiers on the left. He realizes that his position is in some danger, with the king soon to be under threat. As he ponders what to do next, his thinking is interrupted with, "would you like more hot water for your tea?"

Eh, what?

Oh yes! This is a Chess Club game, currently held in the Chinese restaurant on Sunday afternoons, beginning about 2 p.m. The Dawson City Chess Club is not a formal organization at all. Very loosely led by Ben Rudis, it is a time for men, women, and children who meet to play chess. They used to meet in the Alchemy cafe, but, have moved around since the (temporary!) closure of that restaurant. They currently meet at the Chinese Restaurant, most getting there between 1 and 2 p.m.

The games are at all levels. Ben, in particular, likes to teach others how to play, and some of the more advanced players will discuss different possibilities, replaying parts of games using ideas found in chess manuals. Some of the players are really quite good, although none has an official chess "rating." Others play only for fun, and are happiest just playing, not worrying about winning.

Of course, like many groups in Dawson, more people would be great! There are no membership fees, nor anything like that. The club is more of an opportunity to play chess, while enjoying good food, and good company. So, come on out, and give chess a try!

Now, back to the game ...

Ted Harrison remembered in 91 images

Ted Harrison Collected Introduction by Robert Budd Douglas & McIntyre 112 pages $19.95

"We should all try to spread a little happiness wherever we may be," is one of several quotations from Ted Harrison that help to enliven the eight page essay with which Robert Budd introduces this colourful, signature bound, glossy paper, trade paperback edition based on the ninety-one prints in the serigraph collection which Harrison and his print making collaborator, Michael DeCoursey, produced during the period from 1980 to 2010.

Budd discusses Harrison's philosophy of art and a bit of his transformation from English style monotone landscapes to the high energy, brilliantly coloured work that has so influenced other Yukon artists and, I am sure, some of the colour choices on a number of public buildings in my town of Dawson.

Harrison's website (<http://www.tedharrison.com>), still maintained since his passing last year, expresses more of the artist's feeling about life and his artistic choices.

"Life is a rainbow road, multicoloured with the most brilliant hues and contrasting with the darkest tones. It is illuminated by the light of success, and rutted by the tracks of failure. Tears of sadness and joy wash its surface while the clouds of doubt and insecurity dapple its course. As we traverse this highway we can reach the highest pinnacles or descend to the darkest valleys.

"Finally, when the end of the road is in sight, we may cast our eyes to the distant horizon where everything began; and say with conviction,

"That sure was one hell of a journey."

Budd comments on some of the choices that influenced certain of the serigraphs, with easy reference to the page numbers on which they are found, and writes about Harrison's relationship to animals and birds, especially the ravens that are so prominent in his work.

"Ravens are very meaningful to the Yukon," Harrison said. "They are a friendly bird to me. They like people. They represent the Yukon."

The artist's decision to leave most of the people in his Yukon work faceless was because "I like to feel that people can imagine a face in. You know, they can pop their grandmother's face in."

All of those people are outside, walking, seeming to enjoy the outdoors, looking around at the multi-coloured buildings, the sky, the mountains, watching other people doing the same things but in different ways.

There is some discussion of the creation process for the serigraphs, though you can find a lot more detail about that on the website.

The book is available in both printed and e-book versions, though I really can't imagine why anyone would want to enjoy these pictures on anything other than high quality paper.

Council Chambers packed to hear answers to questions about popular fire chief's termination

Story & Photo
By Dan Davidson

Council meetings in Dawson City generally begin with the approval of, or additions and deletions to, the agenda. This one was a little different.

The Dawson City Town Crier & Buyer Facebook page has been abuzz since late last week with the news that the town's well-respected fire chief, Jim Regimbal (actually titled the Protective Services Manager) had been terminated from his employment with the town.

A sample of the less virulent postings on the site included the following questions:

- Why was the Chief let go with no explanation to the taxpayers who pay for that salary and that service?
- How does the lack of a Fire Chief affect fire protection services in the Dawson City area?
- Is the City phasing out the position or will another Fire Chief be hired?
- Does the lack of a person in the Fire Chief position affect the ongoing move towards having the 911 emergency call system in place in Dawson?

In email exchanges Regimbal indicated that he was not yet prepared to discuss the matter, though he did tell a Klondike Sun board member that he was handed his termination letter last Wednesday.

The town's chief administrative officer, André Larabie, responded that he was unable to discuss the matter due to the Privacy Act and Confidentiality issues.

A number of people indicated that they planned to attend the March 29 regular council meeting and ask for some answers.

An audio recording of the meeting indicates that the room was full at 7 o'clock when the meeting was due to begin.

Councillor Bill Kendrick, who was phoning into this meeting, was annoyed when Mayor Potoroka wouldn't follow the usual practice and tell him who was in the room, but the Mayor said there were too many people for that, and people in the gallery declined to shout out their names.

"I see a number of people here," said Potoroka. "We know that some people are likely here for other reasons (than the zoning amendments at the top of the agenda), a human resources matter that has been running around social media and the news as of late.

"We appreciate that some people are here wanting to ask some questions. Rather than have you sit through the entire meeting for question period at which point we'll tell you that we can't answer any questions about it, we would kick off by just having Andre say something about the matter.

"I just want to say," he continued, "that we all appreciate and understand the concerns that people have. Of course, last Wednesday the council was informed by the CAO that Jim was no longer employed by the city. We hope that you can appreciate and understand that this is a confidential and active human resources matter being handled by our CAO. It is a private matter and, out of respect for Jim's privacy, it's not something that council can discuss. Thank you very much for your understanding. We know that there are other questions that Andre will answer right now."

Picking up that cue, Larabie began.

"As the mayor mentioned, Jim is no longer employed by the city as the Protective Services Manager, effective March 23. The city has ensured that the necessary fire services are in place to protect its residents. I have confirmed with the territorial Fire Marshal's office that the city has adequate services in place to respond to a fire and/or other emergencies, and that the Fire Marshal's office will provide any assistance that may be required.

"I've also had discussions with the Deputy Fire Chief and the Senior Captain, last Friday, that the service has 24/7 coverage and will not change. The city is currently evaluating the Protective Service Manager's position and once completed, we will be planning to hire a replacement.

"Due to the Privacy Law and the general duty to respect Jim's privacy, the City cannot discuss Jim's employment with the city and the termination of his employment. Human resources issues are difficult issues, and to protect Jim's privacy we are not able to state any further at this moment.

"I would hope that everyone would understand and provide the same respect to Mr. Regimbal. Thank you."

Regimbal, Potoroka and Larabie launched Civic Addressing last October.

Yukon government to expand access to eServices

WHITEHORSE (March 31, 2016)—The Government of Yukon will expand access to Department of Environment eServices in 2016/17.

"This government is committed to developing and improving online permitting and licensing options," Minister of Environment Wade Istchenko said. "We recognize that many Yukoners prefer to obtain services online because it is fast and convenient. These new investments in eServices will help meet that need."

As part of the Environment eServices 2016/17 investment, the Government of Yukon will:

- launch a campaign encouraging Yukoners to purchase their angling licence and annual camping permit online;
- enable external vendors, such as territorial agents and businesses, to begin selling electronic angling licences and resident annual campground permits instead of the current paper licences; and
- initiate work to make electronic hunting licences and seals available online.

The funding for this initiative is subject to legislative approval.

Earlier this year, Yukon government cabinet ministers hosted meetings throughout the territory to gather input from First Nation and municipal governments, as well as the general public, on their priorities for the 2016/17 budget. Yukoners expressed support for expanded online services during the tour.

The online purchasing service for angling licences and campground permits was introduced in 2015. The Department of Environment estimates more than 17,000 Yukon angling licences and 2,000 camping permits will be sold in the year ahead.

Yukon government and YuWIN discuss proposed funding agreement

WHITEHORSE (March 31, 2016)—The Government of Yukon and the Yukon Work Information Network (YuWIN) are discussing a proposed funding agreement that would allow YuWIN to continue to support Yukon job seekers and the business community.

"Over the years, YuWIN has provided significant benefits to Yukon employers and job seekers," Minister of Education Doug Graham said. "We are pleased to move ahead in our partnership and find new ways for the organization to continue to add value to the territory's job market."

The focus of YuWIN would evolve to that of service provider with an aim to strengthen relationships among small and medium businesses, the Department of Education and the Yukon labour market.

YuWIN would liaise with the Yukon business community to increase understanding of and access to programs and services designed to meet stakeholder needs.

Additionally, YuWIN would work to familiarize Yukon employers with the Canada Job Bank. In partnership with the Department of Education, YuWIN would advise businesses on how to register with the Canada Job Bank, host information sessions and promote the federal job service to Yukon employers. The YuWIN job board would continue to be funded by the Yukon government until March 31, 2017 to allow for time for employers to transition to the Canada Job Bank.

"This recognition of the valuable work YuWIN does for Yukon employers is very satisfying," YuWIN board chair Bruno Bourdache said. "We look forward to working with the Department and the Canada Job Bank for the benefit of Yukon businesses."

Further details of the agreement will be provided once it has been finalized.

Ed. Note: This is a reversal of a January decision for the government to cease funding YuWin, an announcement that was roundly criticized by the opposition parties, and the Yukon Chamber of Commerce.

This shallow lake at the corner of Queen Street and Fifth Avenue was just one of the larger examples of the rapid melting that hit Dawson last week. Just days ago these streets were still blanketed in newly fallen snow from the previous weekend. Now the city crews are scrambling to steam clear the storm drains that will carry the water down to the river. It's a struggle for the workers to keep up, but this one was drained quite quickly.

Back lanes are full of slushy ruts that are refreezing at night and making access there a bit tricky. A section of the street outside the new MacDonald Lodge, where the road was dug up and refilled while it was frozen last fall, has subsided as the ground thaws, leaving a temporary trench in the middle of Church Street.
