An Ode to Jessie James

By Edith Nelson

Some lines of poetry you suggest
A tribute to a special nurse,
But Jessie James is far too great
For me to put her life in verse.
If Service was around today
And Pauline lingered by the sea,
Those gifted poets may compose
A monument for Jessie.

But I am like a little bird;
I fear I will but fail
My wings untried to soar so high,
The inspiration pale.
My education sadly lacks
Those lilting tones the mind must see.
My sombre palette much too drab
To best portray our Jessie.

The Jessie James of olden days,
With knowledge not of right or wrong,
Has found a place in history
With Robin Hood and Little John.
Florence Nightingale and Nurse Cavell
Were women strong and brave.
May I but try to build an ode
To Jessie's nursing days.

Our Jessie was an outlaw too,
At war with germs of pox and flu;
Vaccine and serum given young
Prevention far outweighing cure.
The needle, stethoscope and pill
And wonder drugs all mattered much,
Thermometers to verify
The fever told by gentle touch.

In Tulsequah some years ago
Our first aid came by air.
If storms would rage or clouds hang low
And sickness brewed, no help was there.
But if the signals could be read
And God would let it be,
With Atlin on the airways then
Advice could come from Jessie.

When duty called no thought of self;
It did not matter when or where.
If pain and fever raged within
You need but ask and she was there.
No double time on Sundays then;
Eight hour days could never be.
From dusk 'til dawn and through the day
We could rely on Jessie.

By foot, by dog team, motor boat,
By helicopter, truck or plane,
She travelled every known way
To get to and to ease the pain.
No ambulance with precious blood,
Nor oxygen to be.
No doctor's consultation near
To take the load from Jessie.

My wish for Jessie now would be Let golden years stretch on;
A garden edged with flowers bright
To sit in summer's sun.
Her lake and mountains framed in glass
When winter's cold winds blow;
A rocking chair beside the hearth
And comfort for her now.

With friends and family dropping in
To chat and have some tea.
The pitter pat of little feet
To climb up on her knee.
May her gentle laugh at some old tale
Of comedy flow free.
And may there always be good health
In twilight years for Jessie.

When heaven's gates swing open wide
And golden stairs touch down,
Her Saviour waiting at her side
To take her gently home.
With friends and loved ones gone before
A welcome there will be.
Florence Nightingale and Nurse Cavell
Would curtsey low to Jessie.

Weekend Tournament Featured Fast Paced and Talented Hockey

By Paul Robitaille Photo by Dan Davidson

Aklavik Kings handily won the Weldy Young Cup at the 2016 Dawson City Rec Hockey Tournament.

Seven teams battled it out in the double knockout event which saw teams from throughout the Yukon and western Northwest Territories represented: Murphy Built (Whitehorse), Yukon Brewing (Whitehorse), DC Killer B's (Dawson City), Tatra Ventures (Dawson City), Selkirk Bears (Pelly Crossing), Aklavik (Aklavik) and LJ's Sabres (Fort Mcpherson-Inuvik).

The stands were filled all weekend and were particularly boisterous when Dawson City teams took to the ice. Fans were treated to some fast paced and talented hockey.

"This was the most skilled group of guys we've seen for years" said Dawson City Hockey Association representative Thomas McCabe.

A banquet was held at Diamond Tooth Gerties Saturday night, where individual players were awarded gaming chips.

Jimmy Gattie (DC Killer B's) took home the "Stood on his head" award, Clint Teichroeb (Selkirk Bears) won the "Dangles but don't shoot" award and Matt Dickson (Murphy Built) won the "Snipe of the night" prize.

Sunday action saw Dawson City's Tatra Ventures lose a heartbreaker to LJ's Sabres 4 to 1 after losing star forward Steve Laszlo to a broken wrist.

This was followed by the final between LJ's Sabres and Aklavik Kings, which Aklavik won 9-2. This was an interesting matchup, as LJ's Sabres featured 4 players from Aklavik's winning team in 2015. This was a back to back tournament victory for Aklavik, who never trailed through the weekend, and won each of their games by 5 or more goals.

The Return of the RCMP Police Blotter

by Cst Katrina Harnett

Good day Dawsonites! It has been a long time since the Dawson RCMP contributed an article to the Klondike Sun, but we are back in action!!

I would like to begin by introducing our newest additions to the Dawson Detachment.

Corporal Jeff Myke has recently arrived from his former posting in Whitehorse, YT. Cpl Myke brings with him a wealth of knowledge and experience from his previous postings. More to follow on Cpl Myke! Constable Logan Boehmer has also been with the Detachment for almost 6 months. This is Cst Boehmer's first posting with the RCMP from Depot Division, with a short detour to Parliament Hill in Ottawa. You may have seen Logan running through town on occasion and, in the near future, we hope to have a gaggle of teens running along with him. Logan has been working with RSS and Run Dawson with the goal of starting a run club for our younger Dawsonites. Stay tuned for more!!

Most of you know the remaining Members of our Detachment, which include Sgt David Morin, Constables Jason Bundt, Eric Robson, Mike Nakonechny, myself (Katrina Harnett) and our star Detachment administrator, Andrea Magee. We all do the best we can for this town, and I hope that each of you feel that you can approach us at any time with your questions, comments, concerns, and of course doughnuts!

On a more serious note, we have just come through the Christmas / New Year season, and the Dawson 2016 winter calendar of events is upon us and full of exciting activities. We hope that everyone can enjoy these events in a safe and responsible manner. Our Members will be out during these weekends conducting road checks for alcohol and speed, both in cars and on snow machines. As a reminder, the current legislation in the Yukon Territory requires that any vour best option is to call our local cab or a sober friend so you can make it home safe and sound. While safety is our priority, the consequences of being charged with impaired driving also carry some major personal inconveniences!! Potential penalties can include having your car/snow machine impounded and having your driver's license revoked or snow machine being operated on a maintaineu roau must be licensed and insured. Anyone operating a snow machine on a maintained road must also hold a valid driver's license. And finally, anyone operating or riding a snow machine on a maintained road must be securely wearing their helmet!

Speaking of snowmobiles, Sgt Morin, Cst Boehmer and I had the opportunity to assist Cst Robson with the presentation of a skidoo safety course

I will wrap up by encouraging you all to head out and catch the Yukon Quest events in the coming weeks. I am fairly confident that we may see a musher or two in spring attire with all the balmy weather we've been having! Does anyone know if Canada Goose makes a parka-bikini? Would that be a park-ini? Until next time, take care of yourselves and others!

OPINION

Uffish Thoughts: The Leadership Question Haunts Us Still

By Dan Davidson

I responded to one of those Data Path surveys in early December, and it's been bugging me ever since. Much of it was pretty much what I would have expected if I had written it myself (my first degree was a BA in Sociology), given that it has not been that long since the federal election. It was about time to see if that first, fine, careless rapture (not mine, I assure you – I wanted a minority government) had worn off the electorate or if folks had begun to regret the Danny Williams inspired ABC (Anyone But Conservative) wave that swept the nation.

(As an aside, that wave has now taken out Mr. Williams' former party in his home province of Newfoundland and Labrador, so he may be having second thoughts.)

So – how are we feeling? What do we think are the most important issues? How does all of this reflect on the state of the territory? Are we better off/worse off/about the same as a year ago?

Along the way was the pair of questions that bugged me. The issue they identify bugged me all during the election, continues to bug me now, and will continue to, on into the future.

The first part of the question asked whose policies you found yourself most sympathetic to during the election. That, I suppose, is the fair part of the question. The next one, however, asked which of those individuals, meaning the leaders, you voted for.

The correct answer, of course, is none of them.

I tackled this issue back in July, just before the writ dropped, when it had long been clear how the campaigns were going to run.

In spite of election signs and television ads that seemed to focus to a large extent on Nineteen Eightyfourish (because that book's title is properly written in words, not in numbers) Big Brother sized heads of the party leaders, most Canadians did not vote for any of them.

It's just wrong to run the campaigns or deconstruct them in this manner.

The only people who actually got to vote for Stephen Harper live in his riding in Calgary Southwest. They like him. He's still their MP.

As it developed over time, the campaign focus on Harper as leader turned out to be a major handicap for the Conservative Party of Canada. All the major pundits began writing his political obituary some time before the campaign was over.

Justin Trudeau was only on the ballot in Papineau.

It does seem, however, that the leader focus worked for the Liberals.

Thomas Mulcair could only be elected in Outremont.

Probably Angry Tom would have been a better selling point than Tom Lite.

Elizabeth May's home riding continues to be Saanich-Gulf Islands.

She does seem to be the only consistently electable candidate for the Greens.

Gilles Duceppe just wasn't an issue out here – or in Quebec, as it turned out.

In the Yukon we were asked to choose one person from a list comprised of Melissa Atkinson (NDP), Larry Bagnell (Liberal), Frank De Jong (Green) and Ryan Leef (Conservative).

It seems to me you can either follow up the preference question by asking which of these folks you voted for, or by asking which political party you voted for.

To my way of thinking, however, it does seem that a plurality more than 10 times greater than the winning margin in the previous contest rather speaks for itself and may not have much to do with party affiliation. That the victory came as a result of one of the higher voter turnouts in the country (76.03%, according to Global News) also says a lot.

Perhaps a follow-up question might ask if anything has happened since (nanny-gate, for instance) to make the respondent have a change of mind.

If our new Prime Minister is correct, and if we are seeing a return to government by cabinet as opposed to government by the PMO, maybe the next election will also feature an emphasis on platforms and teams rather than personalities. That would be a nice change.

Paving the Dawson Airport runway could be just the beginning

The possibility that upgrading the Dawson Airport might amount to more than paving the runway probably should not have come as a surprise to anyone with a knowledge of the history of complaints about the facility.

When former MP Ryan Leef announced $30 million in airport spending as a campaign promise just a a few days before the federal election, he was in some ways, echoing a concern that dates back to when he was a young boy going to school in Dawson City.

Airport upgrades were regularly on the campaign platforms of territorial and municipal candidates long before the federal government turned the facility over to the Yukon and anything could actually have been done about

There were discussions about airport relocation for a number of years, but these were tied to the building of a long debated, sometimes promised, but still not built, bridge across the Yukon River at Dawson.

Discussions included the length of the runway, the need for pavement and the cramped conditions at the terminal building itself.

Until Air North started bringing in daily flights of Holland-America tourists two summers ago, Canada Customs was relegated to an oversized utility room. It now occupies a spacious modular building added to the terminal area to accommodate those jets full of visitors.

So it wasn't really a surprise to hear that the Yukon government was going to need to do some "functional planning" in order to decide how to spend the money that the Conservatives in Ottawa - no longer the government could no longer supply after the election result.

Still, the January 24 announcement from YTG was as positive as it could be.

"We have heard from the business community that there is a strong case to be made for making major improvements to the Dawson airport," Minister of Highways and Public Works Scott Kent said. "This is an important project for the community of Dawson and for north Yukon. As a staging ground for mineral development and exploration opportunities, it will benefit the resource sector and therefore all Yukoners."

Air North had made the case repeatedly at meetings of the Dawson and Yukon Chambers of Commerce, as well as at annual gatherings of the Tourism Industry Association of the Yukon. Holland-America had lobbied. Kaminak had made the decision to have its land staging area for the Coffee Gold project be Dawson City, with strong indications that they could base their workers' commutes from here by air as well, if only the runway was up to the traffic.

A week later, Kent was clear about how the possible project had begun to grow in peoples' thinking.

"What we heard from people, originally, was 'pave the runway'," he said in an interview later that week. "But it quickly emerged in some of the discussions that we might want to take a broader look at the entire airport as far as development.

"The Wildland Fire (base) was rebuilt a couple of years ago, across the runway, so we wanted to look at not only paving by itself, but also to look at some different options for the terminal and any other designs around there."

He said the planning exercise will identify more precisely the costs of such an upgrade.

"We'll have a better idea of what it's going to take and what the timing is.

"The priority that has been identified by tourism and mining and others is to pave the has been carried out in recent runway. That's what we'll focus on initially, but then the broader plan - how long that will take to redevelop the whole airport will come from that."

"Functional planning" is a term used to describe a method of getting cost estimates and potential designs all in one package.

"It's a high level planning exercise," Kent explained. "Another big part of it will be to engage the community and the users of the airport. When we're paving the runway there will be some service interruptions that we'll have to deal with, so another portion of this will be public and business engagement on what this is going to look like."

He estimates this part alone could cost $300 to $400 thousand, but sees it as essential to planning the project.

Geotech work on the site years, and the Dawson City Chamber produced a business case study that should be of use in making some decisions.

Kent said that earlier estimates put the cost of paving at around $11 million, but those would be preliminary numbers and probably out of date by

Additional costs could be up to $5 or $6 million in new equipment to maintain a new

The planning exercise is budgeted for the 2016/17 year and Kent would like to see some results by the end of 2016 to help advance the actual work in the 2017/18 year.

This project, he said, is a key piece in ensuring that Dawson becomes a more important hub and more effective in serving tourism and mining as well as the local population.

Yukon government provides assistance to the placer mining industry

WHITEHORSE (January 26, 2016)—The Government of Yukon is taking steps to help ensure placer miners have the best possible season in 2016.

The Yukon government is committed to ensuring seasonally maintained roads in the Klondike goldfields region are open for use as early in the spring as possible. Contingent upon conditions, crews will start road openings in February and the roads could be open to traffic by mid-March.

"In addition to the early openings, the upgrading of resource access roads is a high priority," Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources Scott Kent said. "We are working closely with the Klondike Placer Miners' Association to identify critical upgrades required in the goldfields.'

Additionally, the Klondike Placer Miners' Association and the Yukon government are working together to finalize a wetland reclamation guide for the placer mining industry. The guide will recommend techniques that will lead to a re-establishment of wetlands in placer-mined wetland areas.

"The guide will provide for a clearer and more consistent approach for regulators, assessors and industry," Kent added. "It will be finalized and made publicly available in time for the upcoming min-

The Yukon government continues to assist the mineral exploration industry by maintaining the funding commitment of $1.4 million for the Yukon Mineral Exploration Program, which is the oldest prospectors' assistance program in Canada. In 2015/16, the program supported 62 placer and hard rock exploration projects and leveraged an estimated $4.2 million in industry investment in Yukon.

Yukon government and First Nations working together to improve clarity and management of mining in Yukon

VANCOUVER (January 26, 2016) —The Government of Yukon and self-governing Yukon First Nations have developed a government-to-government protocol, established a regular working group, and drafted a work plan to guide discussions on mining-related matters and shared priorities.

"This protocol can lead us to a new and more productive way of engaging on mining-related initiatives," Premier Darrell Pasloski said. "Our governments are working together to improve the clarity and management of mining activity in Yukon. We are also ensuring that Yukon's mining regime is consistent with the Final and Self-Government Agreements and respects Aboriginal and treaty rights and interests."

The protocol provides a basis for government-to-government discussions," Council of Yukon First Nations Grand Chief Ruth Massie said. "We haven't had this kind of focused engagement on management of mining for a long time, so it's a good opportunity for First Nations and Yukon to work together and find solutions to issues that affect all Yukoners."

The governments are working cooperatively to modernize various aspects of Yukon's mining regime, including matters related to mine licensing and mining activity on settlement land and within First Nation Traditional Territories.

"First Nations have long supported responsible mining," Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in Chief Roberta Joseph said, "And this means having a strong regulatory system that makes sure projects are carried out in a responsible and respectful way."

"Our governments agree that Yukon needs a mining regime that protects the environment, provides socio-economic benefits, and respects First Nations rights and interests," Pasloski added.

The working group has been discussing potential improvements to Yukon's mine licensing and exploration regime. The Yukon government expects to consult industry on some of the potential changes before the 2016 exploration season.

Clara's Big Ride Returned to Dawson to Continue the Conversation about Mental Health

The Bell: Let's Talk initiative is a program intended to break down some of the stigma attached to depression and various types of emotional and mental illness by opening up the conversation and getting people to talk about it.

One major promotional thrust of this program was Clara's Big Ride, a 12,000 kilometre bicycle trek all around Canada – from sea to sea to sea – that brought Olympian Clara Hughes to Dawson City in May 2014.

The Dawson portion of the ride, along with an extensive interview with local artist Sally DeMerchant, became part of the documentary film, "Clara's Big Ride" which has been shown all over Canada, on the CTV network and at special events during Bell's annual "Let's Talk" days since then.

DeMerchant and Katrina

Diles, who both have extensive experience with depression, hosted a Let's Talk event at the Dänojà Zho Cultural Centre on January 27.

DeMerchant suffered from depression as a teenager and Diles lost both a father and a husband to depression related suicide.

A screening of "Clara's Big Ride" was the major feature of the evening, which included Bell's pledge to contribute a second pledge of $100 million over another five year period to work on projects related to mental health.

During Let's Talk events, Bell donates money to these causes, as DeMerchant explained to her audience.

"Everyone who has NorthwesTel or Bell cellphones, if you talk, tweet, text, or Facebook share, Bell will donate five cents for every one of those things that you do."

This program ran over about a 30 hour period beginning on January 26 and ending on midnight the next day. According to a report on the CTV network, this year's campaign raised $6,295,764.75 generated by 125,915,295 calls, texts, tweets and shares.

For the Dawson crowd, DeMerchant had a special message from Clara Hughes.

"She has a soft spot for Dawson, as this is actually where she (and Peter) spent (their) honeymoon," DeMerchant explained. "She rode the Dempster on her honeymoon and then she came back for Bell: Let's Talk and did it again. So this is from Clara."

"It is so special," Hughes wrote, "to know that the community of Dawson is gathered and talking about mental health. I will never forget riding the Dempster Highway during the Big Ride and being utterly exhausted. We spent 13 hours a day riding the road. (It was) so grueling, yet we were surrounded by the natural beauty only the North – the true North – offers. As physically exhausting as this was, it was like fuel for the soul, fuel for the spirit.

Sally DeMerchant & Katrina Diles are doing what they can to promote mental health and reduce stigma related to mental health issues in Dawson.

"We did our best to arrive in Dawson City in time for the barbecue, and failed to make it. It was just too far and too hard in too short a time. But when we arrived I saw people who were just leaving the barbecue. I saw them smiling, a positive feeling in their eyes.

"The party went on without me, as it should have. I felt so good, knowing this community did not need me to bring this conversation to life. This is what the ride was all about, and this is what Bell: Let's Talk is all about: activating individuals of all ages by storytelling, sharing, learning and listening. It's about a conversation opening up and voices being heard. So I feel grateful to know that this Wednesday Dawson is going to keep this conversation going."

Yukoners Voting Strategy – A Post Election Survey

(January 25, 2016) In the most recent federal election, Yukoners reversed their conservative voting behavior and choose instead to return to electing a Liberal Member of Parliament. In 2011 Conservative Ryan Leaf scratched out a close victory over Liberal Larry Bagnell with 34% of the vote vs. Bagnall at 33%. In 2008 Bagnall had won the seat with 46% of the vote. This past election saw Bagnall return as MP with a majority of 54% of the vote (with the Conservative candidate at 24% and the NDP at 19%). DataPath Systems polled 359 Yukoners, in a representative online panel survey in December of 2015, following the election. One goal of the study was to understand the level of strategic voting in the Yukon and examine the impact it might have played on the final tally.

One tracking question asked was what the primary reason they voted for the candidate that they chose. Among voters, 55% reported that they chose their candidate based on what that "Party envisions or can do for Canada". Another 31% reported that it was based on what that "Party envisions or can do for the Yukon", and 14% reported it was a "vote against another Party".

In past Yukon polls, the percentage voting for a candidate based on what they can do for Canada was unchanged. In eight other polls since 2009, this percent has remained around 54-55% with only minor exceptions. Past polls did not give the option of voting against a Party as a primary reason, but clearly that option resonated with nearly 3 in every 20 votes this election. This was slightly lower among those living in the communities (10%).

Another measurement of strategic voting was timing. Among Yukon voters, 35% said they decided who to vote for immediately when the election was called. Approximately another third (29% and 28% respectively) decided once they know who all the Yukon candidates were or waited until all the debates were over. However, 8% of Yukoners waited until they were sure who to vote for strategically to defeat one of the other candidates. (This percentage was similar in and out of Whitehorse and between men and women).

Vote Switching

But did this impact the results? Two more questions were asked to determine the impact of the strategic or switched voting. First, Yukoners were asked who they had preferred to be Prime Minister of Canada, and then asked which Party they actually voted for. Overall, 25% of Yukon voters switched their vote from the

Burns and Service Celebrated at the Library this year

The Dawson Community
Library continued its 17 years tradition of combining the birthday celebrations for Robert Burns and Robert Service in the annual Double Bob Bash, held on January 23. The two poets may share a familial connection(Service thought they did) but they do for certain share the same month for birthdays, even if they were 114 years apart in time.

This year was the largest gathering in a number of years, with two dozen poetry lovers arriving at the library at the appointed time to share an evening's potluck dinner and a love of verse. This is the first time the event has been held in the library, but the setting was congenial and worked very well, so this moveable feast may have found a permanent home.

After marching the haggis around the long table, kilted public librarian and author Dan Dowhal waved a dagger over the "great chieftain o the puddin' race" and spilled its "gushing entrails bright" into the pot where it lay, while reciting Burns' 'Address to a Haggis".

The Gaelic version of the grace ends, "Weel are ye worthy o' a grace / As lang's my arm" which is more easily translated into English than most of the other lines.

Much of the fare at the Bash is far from Scots, but the meal is a good one, topped off with group readings of several poems by both authors and individual readings and recitals of some favorites by a number of the folk gathered round the long table.

Dowhal probably topped the evening with a poem that Service wrote about a Burns' Night celebration set in the midst of World War One battle. It's called "The Haggis Of Private Mcphee", and is part of his collection, Rhymes of a Red Cross Man.

The evening ended with the singing of "Auld Land Syne", which turned out to have a lot more verses than anyone in the room was familiar with.

Yukon Government releases action plan to shape the future of sport in the territory

WHITEHORSE (February 4, 2016) —The Government of Yukon released a Sport Action Plan today to improve sport and recreation opportunities for all Yukoners.

"The Yukon Sport Action Plan sets out our government's goals for sport in the territory for the next seven years,"
Minister of Community Services Currie Dixon said.
"We are committed to making sport and healthy living more accessible for all Yukoners and to increasing support for our high-performing athletes and coaches."

The plan's priorities also include enhancing community sport skills and knowledge and strengthening coaching and leadership through infrastructure investment.

"The Yukon Sport Action Plan was developed in consideration of the entire sport community, including athletes, coaches, officials, board members, volunteers and parents," Cross Country Yukon head coach Alain Masson said. "The plan provides important direction for Yukon's sport community and will help all Yukoners become healthier and more active."

The Yukon government also released the Community Recreation Planning Toolkit, which supports the Sport Action Plan. The toolkit will help communities create recreation plans that meet their unique needs.

The Yukon Sport Action Plan and Yukon Community Recreation Planning Toolkit were developed by the Department of Community Services' Sport and Recreation branch in partnership with territorial sport organizations and the Recreation and Parks Association of the Yukon.

Yukon Sport Action Plan

Six guiding principles establish the basis of how the Yukon Sport Action Plan will develop, deliver and pursue excellence in sport:

- Sport promotes ethical behavior and the values of respect, fair play and fun.
- Sport for Life, based on the Long Term Athlete Development Framework, promotes opportunities for people to participate, perform and excel in sport from childhood to adulthood, whether in the playground, the podium or the park.

- Inclusion, equitable access and sport development in Yukon's rural and remote communities are essential elements of Yukon's sport system.
- Partnerships and collaboration within the sport system strengthen capacity and impact sport delivery and success.
- Quality sport requires capacity and training for athletes, coaches, officials and volunteers.
- Sustainability of our sport system demands accountability, monitoring and evaluation.

Yukoners Voting Strategy

candidate they most preferred, to a different Party that they actually voted for. Interestingly while 48% of those who switched Parties switched to Liberal, another 29% switched to the NDP. If there was not any strategic voting, the Liberal Party may have lost up to 15% of their votes. Considering that they won with a 30 point advantage, that 15% would have only reduced that to a 22 point lead (or 46% of the total vote count).

So, while 14% of Yukoners reported that they voted to prevent a party from winning, and 25% actually changed their vote away from their preferred Party, the impact of that strategy would have had no impact on the final outcome of the election.

The survey was conducted by DataPath Systems; an independent Yukon based market research company. 359 Webbased surveys were conducted with 265 Whitehorse residents and 94 non-Whitehorse residents between November 29 and December 15, 2015. The data is weighted to accurately represent Yukoners based on the community they live in, their age and gender. If this study had been conducted only by a true probability sample process, percentages would be statistically valid to +/- 5.0%, 19 times out of 20 (95% confidence). This was a non-commissioned study, paid for by DataPath Systems.

Gideon's Sword By Douglas Preston and Lincoln Child Orion Books 356 pages Kindle Edition $7.99

Douglas Preston and Lincoln Child are that rare thing, a really successful writing team. They also write solo works, but they are undoubtedly best known for their series about the iconoclastic FBI Agent Pendergast. Those books are somewhat cerebral exercises in the thriller genre; they ring the changes on a lot of conventions, and may involve everything from monsters to serial killers, psychopaths and warmed over Nazi plotters.

With the book at hand, they have set off in a new direction, offering somewhat lighter fare. I expect the freedom to invent a new character, try out some different plots and not be tied to a fairly hefty load of past continuity may have been part of the motivation.

Speaking of which, Gideon Crew's motivation is pretty much classic. At the age of 12, he watched his father, a world-class mathematician, be accused of treason and gunned down by the authorities. It wasn't until 12 years later that his mother, with pretty much her dying breath, let him in on the truth, that his father had been framed and murdered to silence him from uncovering a bungled government operation.

She asked her son to avenge

Gideon set about doing that, using skills he had begun to develop to amass a considerable war chest based on the acquisition of stolen art, much of it taken from people who shouldn't have had it in the first place. We don't read much about that, but we become aware that he's done it

In his early forties he is ready, and the first section of this book is about the very satisfactory way in which he ruins the lives of the people responsible for his father's death. It's a vengeance worthy of the Count of Monte Cristo.

But it impresses some people who think they have a use for someone with his skill set, and through a combination of coercion and allurement, they recruit him to work for a very "black bag" agency connected invisibly to the American intelligence establishment. He both does and doesn't want to do the work and this emotional and intellectual push-pull is reflected in much of the rest of the adventure.

As this is the first book in a series, it was intended to whet the appetite for more to come, and it does that. My wife was absolutely grabbed by this book while we were travelling last fall, but after the first section, she was able to put it down for long periods of time, until she finally finished it. I read it out of curiosity and think I see why she reacted that way.

The book's opening segment promises more than the rest of it delivers. Though the remainder is enough to make a decent story, it's a bit of a let-down after that dazzling opening.

One wants to know more about Gideon, aside from just watching him in action. There is lots of that and it's a decent page turner; it's just that I've read better by this pair of writers. Once Gid pair of writers. Once Gideon's initial motivation is satisfied, there doesn't seem to be the kind of depth to him that can carry a series.

That said, I intend to read at least one more of these (there are two more now, with a third due this coming May) to see if the authors develop Gideon more fully, and get beyond that introduction . My experience with Pendergast, who began as an elusive supporting character in someone else's main story, suggests that they can.

News and Happenings from the Dawson City Community Library

February Offerings

The 34th Yukon Quest 1000-Mile International Sled Dog Race kicked off last weekend in Fairbanks, Alaska, and the competing mushers will be arriving over the next few days at the Dawson City checkpoint – the midway point of the race, and start of a mandatory 36-hour layover. The event generates a lot of interest and excitement locally so, to help celebrate, the Library has put up a special Yukon Quest display of books and videos. It includes stories of the Quest and its sister race, the Iditarod, biographies of legendary mushers, dog driving videos, and children's books with tales of outstanding canine courage by husky heroes. Come get in the spirit of this unique Yukon celebration.

We're not ones to kiss and tell, but it's no secret that Valentine's Day will be soon upon us. The special day is particularly popular with kids, so we've put up a holiday display of children's books. From Amelia Bedelia's First Valentine to The Valentine That Ate My Teacher you're sure to find a story to delight and titillate your tot.

If you're a fan of classic science fiction, then you'll appreciate our newest acquisitions in that genre. Thanks to a generous out-of-town donor, we now boast what's probably the Yukon's most extensive collection of novels and short-story anthologies by Isaac Asimov. From the classic Foundation series to his robot novels, there are more than two dozen different works by the Sci Fi master available.

* * * *

Speaking of masters, we have also recently acquired numerous new volumes of Mark Twain's books. Young readers will especially appreciate the imagination and wit of this literary giant, while adults should also check out his travelogues and commentaries.

Kim Fu found Dawson Very Seductive

"I thought Dawson would be a time in a different context," said Vancouver raised Kim Fu as she approached the end of her time at Berton House. While currently living in Seattle, where her partner has a job, she says she'd always had a yen to get a look at the north.

"I saw it as a chance to get outside of my life and all the usual responsibilities and really just focus on the writing."

Like a number of other writers, being here had an impact on her plans

"I came to work on a specific project, and I did some work on it, but I ended up doing an entirely new project as well."

The plan was to work on her second novel, following the success of For Today I Am a Boy in 2014. That had been her first foray into long form fiction, which she writes in addition to poetry, essays and long-form journalism.

The novel actually gained her runner-up status for the Hemingway Foundation/PEN Award, which will give her a month long Ucross Residency Fellowship at the Ucross Foundation in Wyoming later this year. That residency takes place with nine residents of various disciplines on a 22,000 acre ranch near Ucross.

Being here inspired her to begin work on a new book of poems.

"I think it was just how different the pace of my life is here. I was alone a lot and there was a lot of time to contemplate. I was out on the trails a lot and it just went very naturally into poetry, I think."

While the poems have images from here, they are not specifically about the Klondike experience.

"I'm a slow processor," she said, indicating that it usually takes some time for her to work her experiences into her writing. "Years later things will come back to me and that's how they'll feed into the work."

She also started to keep a journal again while she was here. It was something she had done compulsively from the time she was a child until she was about 20.

"When I look back at them now I can't even understand how I had the time. How could I have lived that life and then recorded it in such intricate detail?

"I'm not doing it at that level of detail here, but I am journalling, more than I have in many years."

Her journalling is done on Word file, but she's not posting the entries in a blog or on Facebook. Her favorite social media preference is Twitter, where it's nice to connect with people or post a comment about a favorite book or event.

Her Dawson experience has been enhanced by people who took her places. There were a couple of trips up the Dempster Highway, which were "just incredible."

"That's like nothing else I've ever seen in my life. There's nothing to compare it to."

Kim Fu in front of the Berton Bookcase at Berton House.

She's participated in the semi-regular meetings of the informal writers' group in town; taken part in the short film screenings as part of the process of getting ready for the annual Dawson City Short Film Festival; spent time with the shorter term visitors of the ODD Gallery's artist in residence program.

"I've loved just walking by myself, up to Crocus Bluff and along the river. It was amazing watching the river freeze where I was walking by it every day, and it was like a different creature every day."

She took a lot of comparison pictures at specific places for days on end and found it unbelievable how quickly things changed.

The arts community here came as a surprise to her.

"I didn't know there would be so much art – the artist's lectures and so many films at KIAC all the time. It's great."

Looking back at the experience, she says she probably had unrealistic expectations about how much she could actually accomplish in the three months, and yet she says she's quite sure that she's seldom got this much done in a comparable length of time

Closing out her time here, she thought it fair to warn other residents about the place.

"I would say there's a serious risk of staying forever. It's something to be conscious of when you're here. It's definitely seductive in that way. I totally got that very quickly after I arrived.

"Nature here is so dynamic. The seasons change and you want to see what it's going to do tomorrow. You want to see every moment in the cycle.

"It's also that people are just so welcoming that you feel like you're folded in very quickly."

There are places, she said, and Seattle has been one of them for her, where you have to work really hard to build a life. Dawson, for her, was very easy to fit into.

The Power of a Thought

Have you ever noticed how one little thought can take up so much of your time and energy? I sure can... For example, I've been zooming around this last month trying to balance a brief vacation, work and everyday living. In short order, I'd begun to feel depleted and anxious, particularly when I looked at my calendar and saw that this was just the beginning of an 8 week stint of weekly travelling for work.

My mind was also very busy and was having a hay day with creative story telling....and not necessarily in a supportive way. It was suggesting all sorts of unhelpful ideas that were influencing my energy. Here's a sampling of the thought trailer:

- "this is crazy
- who do you think you are to be gone so much
- you're letting your team down (I've joined a curling league this year and it's so much fun!)
 - · you're going to be exhausted"

The old me would have fallen prey to these unhelpful thoughts. Now, instead of letting mind chatter take control I was able to draw upon the mindfulness practice of reminding myself that these were just thoughts and then implemented compassionate inquiry to help me gain perspective....I used these two questions as a guide.

- "How true are these thoughts?"
- "What do I really need?"

We all have negative voices in our head. For some they are subtle, passive, and even deceive us into thinking they are there to protect us and keep us safe. For others, they are much more aggressive, and downright mean.

Sometimes we are aware of their words and influence. Much of the time however, we are oblivious to their destructive messages, and they impact our beliefs, sense of self, motivation, and happiness. So many areas of our life begin to suffer.

One of the best ways to become savvy to the negative inner voices in your head is to practice mindfulness. To be more mindful means to be more aware of your thoughts, feelings and actions in the present moment. One of the keys to the success of this practice is "noticing without judgment." In order to do this we need to begin the process of rewiring our brain!

HOT TIP! Try this simple exercise:

Paying Attention to Your Thoughts

- 1. Get yourself a notebook or a piece of paper.
- 2. For the next week, twice a day: Ask "what was I just thinking?"
- 3. Write down your thoughts (for just one minute) without judgement....simply noticing. This might be a little tricky, so hang in there!
- 4. These are just thoughts. One thing I have found super helpful is to give myself a little message "it's just a thought" acknowledging the thought and just allowing it to pass by. Some people prefer imagery, so you might like to imagine your thoughts on a "thought cloud" and allow them to float by in the big sky.

This is such simple stuff - yet can be so darned difficult to implement into our busy lives. That's why I like to take things slowly, one tiny step at a time--it's much easier this way!

When you start to pay attention to your thoughts through mindfulness--with gentle curiosity and no judgment--you can observe your thinking more objectively.

After you've practiced paying attention to your thoughts for a week or so, feel free to try the next step of assessing them for truth by tuning in and asking: "How true is this, really?" then either accept or reframe them more positively.

This is a powerful tool.

Imagine catching even a fraction of your negative, draining thoughts, allowing them to "be" or assessing them for truth and then reframing them in a more supportive way. Hmm.....What would be different in your work and your personal life?

As always, I'd love to hear from you!

A Bad Idea

by Ionathan Pollard

"Time changes all things; there is no reason why language should escape this universal law."

- Ferdinand de Saussure, Swiss linguist

One word tends to exhibit shady, quasi-fraudulent nitwit tendencies, one's a newly diagnosed bi-polar, while the last word is – to put it delicately – continually on a fruitless quest to love herself for who she really is (or thinks she is, whatever that means). Together, this band of ubiquitous drifters should be the first to go. A no-brainer, really. Want proof? According to a joint Harvard/Google study, the English language contains over one million words and this number is expected to climb at the rate of 8,500 per year. Utterly ridiculous, this reproducing verbiage. Clearly, to preserve future freedom of linguistic space, a handful of words should be retired at regular intervals, no matter their popular standing. For various valid reasons, checked off at the front of the line should be a few traditionally overhyped heavyweights: expert, bad, and beauty.

Let's begin with a sinking fastball: what does being an 'expert' really entail? Does it accrue through education, experience in a given field, age, originality? The way this word is so casually tossed about, like baby powder on a windy day, it's as if it floats high up in some mystical aura, its authenticity left unquestioned. As for schooling, after which level can this tag legitimately be applied - university undergrad, masters, PhD? What about informal training - parental advice, trial and error, big brother beat-downs, and the like? Then there's the experience factor: the more practice accumulated, the more an 'expert' one may become in ... failing drug tests, eating too much, or any other misadventure hardly the intended boilerplate for expertise. Doctors don't "practice medicine" by mistake. Then there's this: Does one automatically become a life expert after a certain age? Likely, no. Just ask Nick Nolte. And what about the selfproclaimed experts? The local Walmart whippersnapper clerk-entrepreneur, for example, who whispers at the checkout that she's an 'expert' on the use of profanity - even has her own website, The Expletive Expert. Hey, Profanity sells – She's the expert! Ah yes, some expert advice here: this word is misleading at best, and should be flushed away with the rest of the dirties.

Next up we have the unpredictable alley cat-of-a-word, bad – a fighting, bruising, clawing and brawling word if there ever is one. One minute it's negative – I had a bad tummy ache after eating those brownies – and the next, it's reeking of envy – Yo dude, those are some bad-looking Air Jordan's you're sportin'! Totally erratic. The word 'hot' is similar, but it falls below this threshold because – unlike hot – the word 'bad' has evolved to infer polar opposite definitions dependant on situational factors, thus creating a basis for confusion. What's more, this one-syllabler can actually take on these extreme personalities in the same G%$#@ sentence – Listen, smokin' the rope-a-dope is bad, son! No wonder society is teetering on the edge, toes dangling. All extremist-leaning, dualmeaning words should be dumped in a landfill somewhere, and since this word seems to be the simplest, shortest, and most troublesome, it should actually volunteer to be the first to jump the linguistic ship.

Finally, we have the controversial 'beautiful' – granted, a beauty of a word – but that's just the point. What is beauty? For starters, the word itself is too commercialized, subjective, melodramatic, and even, it could be argued, a tad judgemental. Advertisers absolutely fawn over this word, and why wouldn't they? And if you adore something, what do you do? You share it – you might even push it into the subconscious of others and force them to inhale it. What a beautiful day – (Now, go out and enjoy it!) The burlap cloth feed sack flowery quilts on display are beautiful, and would make a really pretty ... umm, beautiful ... baby shower gift! (It's implied that if you don't pony up, you're somehow an insensitive, frugal spreader of misery who couldn't give a rat's ass about what others think.)

The word itself is also very subjective, and even disproving. Home furnishing boutiques and clothing outlets are particularly addicted to the 'beautiful' allure. Hey, buy this beautifully matching sofa and love seat combo – what you have now is obviously crap and not beautiful at all. There's also this trend in business of 'redefining' what beauty is. Cosmetic marketers do this, as do automobile designers.

Expert opinion: If the stated definition of a word changes – that is, if it's redefined – it stands to reason that maybe it's not that good a word to begin with. Maybe the word itself should undergo a thorough psychological assessment and perhaps, take a sabbatical. Excluding scientific terms, the English language contains approximately 500,000 words. Use some imagination. Bon voyage, beauty!

Now admittedly, the latter two choices are controversial. The word 'bad' has always been wildly popular, and 'beauty' can be tremendously sentimental and priceless. It would pull at the heartstrings to pull this particularly attractive adjective – even temporarily – from the English lexicon. But think about the fine art of naming babies for a moment, and how specific names tend to rise and fall in terms of generational popularity. Names like Mildred and Gertrude – nothing wrong with these beauties – waned in popularity following the Roaring Twenties, only to be revived, and appreciated, decades later. And if it's true that absence makes the heart grow fonder, perhaps some kind of hiatus would, upon their return, make our collective hearts beat all that more stronger.

And before you dismiss this notion as mere battery acid for the brain, a precedent has been set. Certain racial slurs have rightfully been banned from mainstream Western media, and while this is a much more serious and passionate case, it does raise the question as to whether, as managers, our media could – in an effort to consistently field a fresh line-up – lead the charge in rotating certain fraudulent, disturbed, or hysterical words in and out of our linguistic roster.

Note: Mr. Pollard is not a local, but he spotted us online and started sending free stuff a month or so ago. Wombania and Roache material come to us the same way.

Dawson (S)hivers in mid-Winter

Story & Photos By Dan Davidson

While this hasn't exactly been a winter to make a person shiver too much, it was the right time for the second (S)hiver Winter Arts Festival to take place on January 30 and 31. As it happened, the temperature did drop 10 or 15 degrees at the end of the week, moving into minus double digits for the first time in quite a while, but it was still warm enough for several events to take place outside.

Alchemy Café is closed for the winter, but the owners have allowed the Amos family to continue working on their rope and aerial work under its high, vaulted ceiling, and so this was where Jack Amos put on an impressive display of rope acrobatics for the nearly 60 folk who squeezed into the dining room just after 5 o'clock.

Amos was preceded by the music of Derrick Hastings and his daughters, who presented a set of gospel, social activist and kids tunes. Local artist John Lodder also had some paintings on display.

Community justice?

ANGRY PARENTS / John Nichol is appalled by the recent community meeting.

BY TIMOTHY SAWA

Sun Stoff

John Nichol likes to compare himself to a mother bear that's been forced into protecting her cubs. And he promises that anyone interfering with his family will hear his roar and feel the razor edges of his claws.

What do you think's going to happen when you walk into a mother bear's den?" he asks.

"She's going to get angry."

That's exactly what happened at last Monday's municipal council meeting - he got angry.

He unleashed his rage at the four councillors and mayor - with at least 25 curious spectators packing the soom — ever what he considers to be a mockery of the justice system and direct violation of his rights. as a Canadian citizen.

He is, of course, referring to last

MIXED REVIEWS / Although the meeting was not well organized, it got people talking.

BY DAN DAVIDGOS

Sum Stroff

Dawson's community circle meeting on January 26 may receive mixed reviews as the days go by, but one thing can be said about it for sure: it got people talking.

Much to the surprise of the organizers and no doubt to the teens whose actions had triggered the meeting. over 70 people crowded into the Youth Centre that night. Most of them didn't know the background to the event or what the circle was supposed to accomplish. As a result, the two hour meeting was not as productive as it might have been, but it was also far short of being a failure.

Briefly, on the evening of December 23, five local boys and one local girl, along with another girl from out of town, were found in the Youth Centre after hours in the

The Sun obtained funding in late 2009 from the City of Dawson, YTG's Heritage Branch and the Community Development Fund to conserve and archive early issues and make them available once again in the public domain. This is a great resource for students, writers and historians, and also for prospective tourists with an interest in Dawson City's life. Each month, we are re-printing our front pages from 20 years ago as a souvenir of our lively history. If you want to see page 2 and beyond, check out our website. Past issues are available there for download. Go to http://klondikesun.com. More will be added periodically (heh) when we have time! In 1996, we became a bi-weekly. History Hunter: New book charts history of Yukon River steamers

By Michael Gates Yukon News, Friday January 15, 2016 Used with the author's permission

I am still digesting the historical feast that I received at Christmas. This year, old photographs replaced socks under the Christmas tree. I also received a number of historical books to read and enjoy; there is one in particular I would like to share with you.

This book, issued in 2015, is titled The Klondike Gold Rush Steamers: A History of Yukon River Steam Navigation, by acclaimed historian and author Robert D. Turner, published in British Columbia by Sono Nis Press. The title is actually a bit of a misnomer as this volume covers more than the Gold Rush.

I met the author Bob and his wife Nancy when they were guests at Berton House, the writers' retreat in Dawson City. That was back in 2009, and he was gathering material for this book at that time. Bob is a retired consultant and curator emeritus at the Royal B.C. Museum, in Victoria, where he was the chief of historical collections for a number of years. His accomplishments are impressive. This is his 18th book, and he has written hundreds of articles and reviews.

Among Turner's varied interests are Yukon River steamers, and this book is the distillation of many years of study on the subject. The Klondike Gold Rush Steamers is 352 pages jam-packed with details of the history of Yukon River navigation that span the period from the arrival of the first steam powered river boat in 1865 to the present day.

In its seven chapters, The Klondike Gold Rush Steamers covers, chronologically, the era before the gold rush, then the routes to the Klondike, and the building of the fleet of steamers that serviced the gold rush trade, followed by a chapter on the armada of riverboats that descended upon the Klondike during the height of the gold rush (Chapter three is the longest). This is followed by the consolidation of the control of river transportation on the upper Yukon River by the White Pass and Yukon Route and its subsidiary river transportation division.

The fifth chapter covers the period up to 1920, and includes the gold rush to Fairbanks. This book has a lot to say about transportation on the Lower Yukon as well. The sixth chapter describes river transportation during the 1920s, and a final chapter takes the reader through to the conclusion of steam river travel, and beyond.

Turner wraps everything up nicely in his epilogue, which is followed by several appendices on specific aspects of Yukon River steamers. The first of these is a detailed description of how the riverboats operated. Included in Appendix 1 are several excellent photographs, with important structural features labelled, that serve as a crash course for those who are not familiar with the anatomy of sternwheel riverboats.

Turner included nine pages of source notes and a five page bibliography at the end of the book. The index includes a special section to all the vessels referred to in this book. That list includes 361 riverboats.

The wow factor in this book comes from the 650 photos and illustrations, both historical photos, and contemporary pictures taken by the author, as well as insertions of ephemera. The captions accompanying the photos are detailed and informative. The photos are of excellent quality, rendered on glossy paper. I found them one of the book's best features. The reader will enjoy examining the photos and reading the captions.

There are 15 maps scattered through the book. All are reproductions of historical maps from the period. One that appealed to me, on page 110, was a simple line drawing showing the route of the three trams that hauled freight around Miles Canyon and the Whitehorse Rapids.

Numerous sidebars are found throughout; they feature passages from books of the era, and quotes from people interviewed, including Dawson resident Joe Braga, former Whitehorse resident Rob McCandless (who sailed on the last voyage of the Keno) and former purser Ron Finlayson. Tables scattered through the text also reveal interesting details - one states the distances between each stop on the way from Skagway to Dawson. Another provides information about the fleet of river steamers built by the Moran Brothers for river trade during the gold rush.

This is a book to read and digest over months rather than in one sitting. I found that I could pick and choose what I wanted to read in the chronologically arranged chapters, and by referring to the index. One could use this as a reference book on any of a number of topics. I note, for instance, that biographical detail is provided about some of the early riverboat men, including, as examples, Captains John Irving and Syd Barrington, as well as entrepreneurs Francis Rattenbury and Pat Galvin.

The content is encyclopedic, and I think that the reader will find it to be a valuable reference. I have read a number of books on Yukon riverboats, but in my opinion, none has been as detailed, comprehensive and as complete as this one. This book will find a prominent place in my library so that I can reach for it at a moment's notice.

The print size bothered me. With my aging eyes, I found the point size of the type too small for easy reading. The type in the side bars and photo captions was even smaller. Another annoying problem was the number of grammatical flaws that should have been weeded out during the editing

Circle City, Alaska, is identified as part of the Yukon Territory on page 41, and Rink Rapid is described as being located near Mayo, rather than Minto on page

306. Although Sam Steele is incorrectly identified on page 82 as the first commissioner of the Yukon, preceding William Ogilvie, there is no doubt he would have been a better man for the job than former Mountie James M. Walsh. While Turner's knowledge of the general history and geography of the Yukon may occasionally miss the mark, his knowledge of the riverboats and their history is authoritative.

Despite these issues, this is a great book that contains almost everything you will want to know about Yukon

River steamers. I will return to it again and again, and will enjoy every reading. The Klondike Gold Rush Steamers: A History of Yukon River Steam Navigation, by Robert D. Turner is a book on Yukon history that I would heartily recommend.
